— The Republicans of Allen county have nominated L. C. Bard, Esq., for Representative.

— Hon. Geo. E. Pugh, U. S. Senator, and Gen. Jos. Geiger, will address the people of Clinton Co., at Wilmington, Saturday, the 20th inst.

— A young lad, about years of old, named Bushwick, fell into an 800 barrel vat of boiling slop, at the Unionville Distillery on Friday, scalding him to death. So we learn from the Portsmouth Tribune.

— Thomas Young was drowned below Batavia, in the Ohio river, on Saturday last. It is supposed he had a fit and fell into the water.

— The Piqua Enquirer says, Mr. T. Ree, an old resident of Roseville, opposite that city, was, a few days ago, completely riddled by rifle balls, shot by a party of men. He was alive at last accounts, but the doctor thinks another cause that would have ended his existence. Mere sport was the cause of this outrage.

— A large sale of blooded stock came off on Wednesday last at the residence of Jesse Pierce, near South Charleston, Clark county. The head sold comprised 34 cows, 12 bulls and 3 calves, and the aggregate sum realized amounted to $4,247 50. The prices were low and unremunerative.

— At Piqua, Miami county, on Monday, as a little child, just beginning to walk, was playing in front of its mother's residence, a large hog rushed at the child and seizing it by the shoulder started off at a rapid pace. Fortunately, however, the infant was rescued from being, doubtless, eaten by the beast. With the exception of a few scratches the child was uninjured. So says the Enquirer.

— The saw mill and steam grist mill, known as the Spring Valley Mills, about five miles east of this place, in Oxford township, was destroyed by fire on yesterday morning. The mill was owned by Mr. Thomas Wood, of this place. The loss by the fire is about $5,000, some $1,500 of which falls on William and John Harvey. It is not known how the fire originated.—Madison County Democrat, Aug. 11.

— We learn from the Ashland Times that two young students, named Kelsey and Beer, at the Vermilion Institute, while at breakfast on the morning of the 9th, got into an altercation. Kelsey arose, drew a stone from his pocket, and struck young Beer behind the ear, fracturing his skull so badly as to render his recovery doubtful.

— The Cardington Herald of Thursday says: A large oak tree, standing on the farm of Mr. Robt. Maxwell, near this place, was recently cut down by Mr. Edward Lamberton, for the purpose of making rails, and, upon being opened, was found to contain, embedded in the solid wood, in the center of the tree, with no any possible access to the outer surface, at a distance of thirty feet from the stump, a live snake, of the adder species, measuring over three feet in length. The question is how did it get there? The wood could not have been very solid or there would have been an inconveniently small space for his snakeship.

— The Democracy of Vinton county have changed the programme. Instead of a popular vote, they now announce that there will be a delegate Convention on the 22nd day of August. Wonder if the committee were not afraid to trust the people? So says the M'Arthur Journal.

— At an early hour on Tuesday, the store-room of Messrs. Kby and Stockslager, at Union, Montgomery county, was robbed of cash and goods to a large amount. The burglars, not satisfied with their robbery, afterward set fire to the building. The books and valuable papers of the firm were saved. The loss is estimated at about $6,600, which is partly insured. A reward of $200 is offered for the arrest of the parties and the recovery of the property.

— The last Ashland Union announces the death of Wm. Willington, Esq., of that place, in his 60th year. An esteemed citizen has been gathered to his father.

— Three milch cows, the property of John W. Moore, of Moorefield township, Harrison county, were struck dead by lightning on Tuesday, August 2d, 1859. They were in a pasture field at the time.

— A little cripple, Edward Wood, was drowned yesterday in the Miami Canal at Cincinnati. He was thirteen years old, and it is thought he slipped into the canal while fishing.

—Josephine Burker, once an attache of a traveling circus, but down, down much lower now, attempted to commit suicide in Cincinnati lock-up yesterday morning, by hanging herself with strips of her vestments.

— A burglary was committed at Lynchburg Highland county, on the 1st inst., the tailor shop of Mr. Peter Brown being despoiled of $150 worth of goods. The rogue did not evidently know the name of the place, and was a stranger to such designs.

— A foreman in a manufacturing establishment at Lancaster, Fairfield County, was recently suspected of robbing his employer. When accused of the theft he reluctantly confessed that he had only stolen five dollars, and finally acknowledged that he had taken two or three thousand in small amounts, during the past seven years. The name of the thief is not given, but the Eagle says he is a well known and heretofore respected citizen, also a member of the English Lutheran Church.

— We learn from the Coshocton Democrat that on Tuesday, as Mr. William Briggs, an elderly man, in the employ of Mr. Geo. Factor, of that place, was driving along the Walhonding river, the bank gave way, precipitating himself, two other gentlemen, a lady, and the horses and wagon into the river. The two gentlemen swam with the lady to the shore, and then endeavored to assist the driver, but he, having fallen under the wagon, was unable to extricate himself, and when found life was extinct. The horses, as soon as they were released from the wagon, started towards the opposite shore, but one of them was drowned before reaching it. The other was rescued unhurt, after being in the water for nearly two hours.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK, August 14.—The steamship Vanderbilt, from Southampton on the 3d inst., arrived last night.

ENGLAND.—The Queen and the Royal family sailed round the squadron and review at Spithead, on Saturday, July 30th. Royal salutes were fired, and the Russian squadron joined in the demonstration of respect.

The London Herald has the following: We have reason to believe Mr. Dallas has recently placed in the hands of Lord John Russell a dispatch from Washington, in which it is stated that the United States Government have resolved to abandon privateering, and thus to accept the declaration respecting this portion of the maritime law agreed upon at the Congress at Paris in 1856.

GERMANY.—The National Zeitung states in a letter from Frankfort-on-the-Main, that Count de Chambord has arrived there from the Hague, and it is said to hold a conference of the legitimists at Wiesbaden, during the month of August.

The London Post says that Garibaldi has sent a circular to all the free States of Italy declaring his army to be ready at any moment to continue the Italian war of Independence.

The Grand Duchess Marie of Russia had arrived at Dover after a rough passage.

In the House of Lords on the 1st, Lord Stanley called the attention of the Government to the admission of British salt into China—that the supply of salt to a population of three millions had been hitherto a monopoly in the hands of the Chinese. He concluded by asking what steps had been taken to introduce it.

Lord Elgin could not answer the question, as the correspondence had not been made public.

In the House of Commons on the 1st, a resolution enabling the government to raise in the United Kingdom for government of the Indies £500,000 to meet the demands of the present year, was agreed to.

The amount of the debt of India on the 1st of May, 1858, is returned at the sum of £60,704,084, of which £53,163,600 was registered debt, and the rest floating.

FRANCE.—The Times' correspondent says the Count de Persigny had left Paris on his return to London.

The Minister of War had addressed an order to all the colonels of regiments to send home all soldiers whose absence had been recalled, after the declaration of war against Austria, and likewise all those who are entitled by their services to leave of absence for six months, that they may be at the disposal of the farmers who may require them for getting in the harvest.

No change is to be noticed in the commercial situation of France. The accounts from the agricultural districts are not unfavorable. The wheat crop has not sustained much injury. The harvest altogether will exceed that of a good ordinary year, and there will be an overplus for exportation.

AUSTRIA.—A letter to the London Post, from Vienna, states that Count Colloredo, the Austrian Ambassador to Rome, was expected at Vienna, whence he will proceed to Zurich.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times says, although Count Colloredo had an audience with the Emperor on the 28th of July; and was long closeted with the Minister of Foreign Affairs, he is not likely to leave for Zurich until the beginning of the coming week.

The same correspondent says for a time a very unfriendly feeling toward England prevailed here, but the wrath of the Austrians is rapidly subsiding.

The promise of the Emperor of the French to put his army on a peace footing has made a great impression on the Austrian financial world.

SPAIN.—The Madrid journals state that a number of deputies in Legranada would visit the Queen to congratulate her on her pregnancy. It is said that the government had resolved on establishing a municipal system in Cuba.

Garibaldi has issued the following order, dated

LEVERE, July 19.—However political affairs may go in the present circumstances, it is the duty of Italians, not only not to lay down their arms and manifest discouragement, but to swell their ranks and show to Europe, that, guided by the heroic Victor Emanuel, they are ready again to confront the vicissitudes of war, in whatever form they may present themselves.

THE PAPAL STATES.—The Times' correspondent from Rome says there is great dissatisfaction here, and I have no hesitation in saying that the French soldiers alone keep down a general outbreak. The Jesuits have been driven out of Zolena, Perril and Ferrara.

The Bologna Gazette publishes a declaration that the provinces of Romagna have shaken off the Papal yoke, never to return again.

TURIN, July 29.—The Dictator of Modena has convoked the popular assemblies. All persons competent to read and write, and whose age is not less than 21, will be entitled to vote. Perfect order prevails.

INDIA.—The dates are to July 17th. The disaffection among the late companies of European troops is increasing. At Beerhampore they are in open mutiny, and have entrenched themselves in barracks and elected officers to command them. The fusiliers have followed the example of the Bengal troops.

Central India is quiet. A Calcutta correspondent says the Oude police and Europeans have withdrawn under cover. The rebels were still 6,000 strong, but were in terrible distress.

CHINA.—The United States steamer Powhatan had got on shore near Woosung, and it was expected that she would be got off uninjured, —Intelligence from Cochin China tells of losses, and says great sickness prevail there. The natives fight bravely, and it was said that the French admiral had applied for reinforcements.

PARIS, Wednesday.—The Moniteur announces the dissolution of the army of the Rhine, though the companies Colonel and [illegible] remain [illegible].

LONDON, Wednesday.—The Times' Paris correspondent says the Emperor is very anxious to satisfy the European powers of his pacific intentions, and before many days the European powers will be invited to a Congress, where a solution of the Italian difficulty will be proposed which will deserve support for its liberal character.

Prince Napoleon is said to be indefatigable in his efforts for an amicable settlement of all difficulties among the European powers. Orders have been given for the disarming of all the ships at Brest, and for the French admiral to haul down his flag. Indeed, what was called the Ocean squadron has ceased to exist.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The Interior Department has received dispatches from the Commissioner of the United States and Texas boundary survey. A trip was made up the Pecos river until Capt Whipple's trail was struck. Much has been added materially to the geographical knowledge of a region heretofore but little known. The practicability of a good wagon road, where it was before reported impossible to take a wagon, has been demonstrated.

Such information has been received at the Indian Bureau as leads to the belief that the Indians who were lately on the Reserves at the Brazos agency, have, by this time, been removed beyond the limits of Texas, and that the difficulties between them and the citizens of that State are quieted.

The Creeks and Cherokees, between whom a general war was anticipated, are again at peace.

The Southern Railroad Convention, among their business, resolved to run a double daily train from New York to New Orleans from Thursday next.

BOSTON, August 13.—A fire at Lawrence yesterday afternoon destroyed the United States Hotel building, the Central Congregational Church, new Court House and one or two small wooden buildings. At the same time a fire broke out in the Unitarian Church, some distance from the hotel, which was partially consumed. The falling walls of the hotel killed three men, named Stanley, a printer, Henry, an auctioneer, and Leighton, a wool sorter, in the employ of the Washington Mills. The total loss by fire is estimated at $150,000.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 13.—The Santa Fe mails, with dates to the 28th ult., have arrived at Independence.

Another treaty has been concluded with the Navajoes.

Heavy rains had fallen throughout New Mexico.

Large numbers of Indians were sent on the plains, all friendly.

The troops at Pawnee Fork are all well.

The mail met a company of U. S. troops on Arkansas river, en route for New Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—The National Teachers' Association, now in session here, have elected J. W. Berkley, of Brooklyn, N.Y., as President for the ensuing year, and decided to publish a monthly periodical in the furtherance of the cause of education. This p. m. they are visiting President Buchanan.

The name of the U. S. steamer Meta Comet, now on the Brazil station, has been changed to Pulaski.

The delegates representing the Railroads on the southwestern or middle route between Washington and New Orleans, commenced their session here to-day. Their business is with reference to the transportation of the mail from Portland, Me., to New Orleans and to agree upon a joint bid for the performance of the service, as the Orange and Alexandria Railroad to Lynchburg, and the remaining part of the Mississippi Central Railroad will be finished by the first of January, at which time the new contract is to take effect. These delegates confidently say that they will be able to carry the mail between New Orleans and New York in three and a half days.

WASHINGTON, August 13.—The Southern R. R. Convention adjourned to-day. The proposition for an arrangement of freight charges was withdrawn. A committee was appointed to correspond with the Railroad Company between Portland and Washington, with the view of binding in conjunction with themselves for the conveyance of the great mail from Portland and New Orleans.

NEW YORK, August 13.—The Evening Post says it is understood that upon certain conditions, which have been duly considered by personal friends, Sickles will voluntarily surrender his claims to represent the 3d Congressional District. The plan is to hold a special election, the contracting parties agreeing that the nominee shall be anti-Lecompton Democrat.

CINCINNATI, August 14.—Three games of billiards, 250 points each, were played last night, between Michael Phelan and Philip Tieman of Cincinnati, and Mr. Bird, of Philadelphia. The first game, between Tieman and Bird, was won by Tieman, Bird, and Phelan, was won by Tieman, Phelan scoring 136. The third, between Phelan and Bird, was won by Phelan, Bird scoring 186. No stakes up.

ST. LOUIS, August 14.—The steamer Spread Eagle, with 75 United States Soldiers from Fort Randall, arrived at St Joseph on Friday evening, from a point eight hundred and fifty miles above the mouth of the Yellowstone, and reports a sanguinary battle between the Sioux and the Arekores, on 23d of July, which resulted in a loss of twenty-eight of the former and sixteen of the latter. Another battle was anticipated, which would result in the extinction of the weaker party.

The Spread Eagle went fifty miles higher up the Missouri than any boat before.

NEW YORK, August 11.—The Atlantic Telegraph Company have decided to make the contour of the next cable consist of six wires, twisted about six times the size of the old cable. There will be no outside covering of iron wire, except a few hundred miles on each end. The new cable is to be laid down, guaranteed in all respects, and expected to be in order for business early next summer.

Cyrus W. Field, Esq., occupies two columns of some of the New York evening papers with a full statement of the affairs of the Company. We understand the American public will have an opportunity to subscribe to the new stock, which is guaranteed by the British government.

CINCINNATI, August—11 P. M.—The following are the losses by the fire this morning: Boyle & Co., $150,000, insured for $75,000; Crane, Breed & Co., and Burston, Breed, & Co., $70,000, fully insured; G. Henshaw, furniture manufacturer, $10,000, fully insured; Rectifying House of S. N. Pike almost wholly destroyed, $30,000, insured probably for $10,000. Several firemen were injured by falling walls during the fire. The water in the cisterns was exhausted, or the destruction of property would have been less. The whole steam fire department was on duty, and water had to be conveyed half a mile. The origin of the fire is unknown.

THE SCANDINAVIAN PILLS AND PURIFIER.—CINCINNATI, July 1, 1858.—DR. C. W. ROBACK.—Dear Sir:—In reply to inquiries made of me, it gives me pleasure to say, that Mrs. N. AYLER, of the Society of Friends, and widow of the late Dr. AYLER of Cincinnati, previous to her going East, expressed her confidence in the efficacy of your Scandinavian Remedies, and the benefit she derived from using them. She had been suffering from general prostration at times, being over seventy-six years of age, and epthelmia and inflammation of the face. Various remedies were resorted to without relief, when some friends recommended a course of your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills. They had the desired effect, and she was considered as restored to health.

I know many who have used your medicines, and speak decidedly of the benefits derived, thus testifying of their renovating influence in purifying the blood and giving vigor and energy to the system. They have my cordial approbation. Very respectfully your obedient servant, S. J. BROWNE.

Rev. Samuel J. Browne has been a devoted laborer in the cause of Christianity, in Cincinnati, for more than thirty years, as almost every old Cincinnatian knows. Such testimony, from such a source, is not to be passed over lightly. No other Proprietary Remedies ever presented to the public, ever received a tithe of the commendation from MEN OF STANDING, in every walk of life, that mine have done.—[See advertisement.

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE,
June 23, 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your's surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

N. SHAFFER,

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on:
Give me excess of it."

The charms of MUSIC have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

☞ E. F. JENNISON, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in this city, and his segars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the corks fly.—Morgan deserves the liberal custom he has.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our poetical friend J. M. Denig on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the [illegible] Block!

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. CRITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

☞ SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co's. celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, unequaled.

☞ Dr. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

☞ Bal[illegible] of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at [illegible] if you want a superior article.

☞ FASSIGS' Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made cues for the last two or three years.

☞ RIGGINS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "JOHN" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

☞ CHARLEY BRETTONGLE is sending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring style for summer wear should look in.

☞ FRANK HERITAGE, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

THE AMERICAN FLAG.

BY JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE.

When Freedom, from her mountain height,
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars of glory there.
She mingled with its gorgeous dyes
The milky baldric of the skies,
And striped its pure, celestial white,
With streakings of the morning light;
Then from his mansion in the sun
She called her eagle bearer down,
And gave into his mighty hand
The symbol of her chosen land.

Majestic monarch of the cloud!
Who rear'st aloft thy regal form,
To hear the tempest trumpings loud,
And see the lightning lances driven,
When strive the warriors of the storm,
And rolls the thunder-drum of heaven,
Child of the sun! to thee 'tis given
To guard the banner of the free,
To hover in the sulphur smoke,
To ward away the battle stroke,
And bid its blendings shine afar,
Like rainbows on the cloud of war,
The harbingers of victory!

Flag of the brave! thy folds shall fly,
The sign of hope and triumph high,
When speaks the signal trumpet tone,
And the long line comes gleaming on,
Ere yet the life-blood, warm and wet,
Has dimmed the glistening bayonet,
Each soldier's eye shall brightly turn
To where thy meteor glories burn,
And as his springing steps advance,
Catch war and vengeance from the glance;
And when the cannon-mouthings loud,
Heave in wild wreaths the battle shroud,
And gory sabres rise and fall,
Like shoots of flame on midnight's pall,
There shall thy victor glances glow,
And cowering foes shall sink below
Each gallant arm that strikes beneath
That awful messenger of death.

Flag of the seas! on ocean's wave,
Thy stars shall glitter o'er the brave,
When death, careering on the gale,
Sweeps darkly round the bellied sail,
And frighted waves rush wildly back,
Before the broadside's reeling rack,
Each dying wanderer of the sea
Shall look at once to heaven and thee,
And smile to see thy splendors fly,
In triumph o'er his closing eye.

Flag of the free heart's only home!
By angel hands to valor given,
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.
Forever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe but falls before us,
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner waving o'er us!

[From the Atlantic Monthly for August.]

THE RING FETTER.

(CONCLUDED.)

"Only you now!" whispered Hitty to her child, as Keery's peaceful, shrouded face was hidden under the coffin-lid and carried away to Greenfield Hill. Pitiful whisper! happily all-unmeaning to the child, but full of desolation to the mother, floating with but one tiny plank amid the wild wreck of a midnight ocean, and clinging as only the desperate can cling to this vague chance of life.

A tough, half-crazed girl brought from the alms-house, now did the drudgery of the family. Abner Dimock had grown penurious, and not one cent of money was given for comfort in that house, scarce for need. The girl was stupid and rude, but she worked for her board,—recommendation enough in Mr. Dimock's eyes; and so her stupidity added to the other burdens loaded upon his silent wife. And soon came another, all-mysterious, but from its very mystery a deeper fear. Abner Dimock began to stay at home, to be visited at late hours by one or two men whose faces were full of evil and daring; and when, in the dead of the long nights, Hitty woke from her broken and feverish sleep, it was to hear muffled sounds from the cellar below, never heard there before; and once, wrapping a shawl about her, she stole down the stairways with bare feet, and saw streams of red light through the chinks of the cellar-door, and heard the ring of metal, and muttered oaths, all carefully dulled by such devices as kept the sounds from chance passers in the street, though vain as far as the inhabitants of the house itself were concerned. Trembling and cold, she stole back to her bed, full of doubts and fears, neither of which she dared whisper to any one, or would have dared, had she possessed a single friend to whom she could speak. Troubles thickened fast over Hitty; her husband was always at home now, and rarely sober; the relief his absences had been was denied her entirely; and in some sunny corner of the uninhabited rooms up-stairs she spent her days, toiling at such sewing as was needful, and silent as the dead, save as her life appealed to God from the ground, and called down the curse of Cain upon a head she would have shielded from evil with her own life.

Keen human legislation! sightless justice of man!—one drunken wretch smites another in a midnight brawl, and sends a soul to its account with one sharp shudder of passion and despair, and the maddened creature that remains on earth suffers the penalty of the law. Every sense sobered from its reeling fury, weeks of terrible expectation heaped upon the cringing soul, and, in full consciousness, that murderer is strangled before men and angels, because he was drunk!—necessary enough, one perceives, to the good of society, which thereby loses two worse than useless members; but what, in the name of God's justice, should His vicegerent, law, visit upon the man who wrings another life away by slow tortures, and torments heart and soul and flesh for lingering years, where the victim is passive and tenacious, and dies only after long-drawn anguish that might fill the cup of a hundred sudden deaths? Yet what escapes the vicegerent shall the King himself visit and judge. "For He cometh! He cometh to judge the earth; with righteousness shall He judge the world, and the people with equity."

Six months passed after Keery's death, and now from the heights of Greenfield and her sunny window Hitty Dimock's white face looked out upon a landscape of sudden glory; for October, the gold-bringer, had come, pouring splendor over the earth; and far and wide the forests blazed; scarlet and green maples, with erect heads, sentinelled the street, gay lifeguards of autumn; through dark green cedars the crimson creeper threaded its sprays of blood-red; birches, gilded to their tops, swayed to every wind, and drooped their graceful boughs earthward to shower the mossy sward with glittering leaves; heavy oaks turned purple-crimson through their wide-spread boughs; and the stately chestnuts, with foliage of tawny yellow, opened wide their stinging husks to let the nuts fall for squirrel and blue jay. Splendid sadness clothed all the world, opal hued mists wandered up and down the valleys or lingered about the undefined horizon, and the leaf-scented south wind sighed in the still noon with foreboding gentleness.

One day, Abner Dimock was gone, and Hitty stole down to the garden-door with her little child, now just trying to walk, that he might have a little play on the green turf, and she cool her hot eyes and lips in the air. As she sat there watching the pretty clumsiness of her boy, and springing forward to intercept his falls, the influence of sun and air, the playful joy of the child, the soothing stillness of all Nature, stole into her heart till it dreamed a dream of hope. Perhaps the budding blossom of promise might become floral and fruitful; perhaps her child might yet atone for the agony of the past;—a time might come when she should sit in that door, white-haired and trembling with age, but as peaceful as the autumn day, watching the sports of his children, while his strong arm sustained her into the valley of shadow, and his tender eyes lit the way.

As she sat dreaming, suddenly a figure intercepted the sunshine, and, looking up, she saw Abner Dimock's father, the elder Abner, entering the little wicket-gate of the garden. A strange, tottering old figure, his nose and chin grimacing at each other, his bleared eyes telling unmistakable truths of cider brandy and New England rum, his scant locks of white lying in confusion over his wrinkled forehead and cheeks, his whole air squalid, hopeless, and degraded,—not so much by the poverty of vice as by its demoralizing stamp penetrating from the inner to the outer man, and levelling it even below the plane of brutes that perish.

"Good day! good-day!" said he to his son's wife, in a squeaking, tremulous tone, that drove the child to his mother's arms.—"Abner to home?"

"No, Sir," said Hitty, with an involuntary shudder, that did not escape the bleared blue eye that fixed its watery gaze upon her.

"Cold, a'n't ye? Better go in, better go in! Come, come along! How d'e do, little feller? don't know yer grandpar, hey?"

The child met his advances with an ominous scream, and Hitty hurried into the house to give him to the servant's charge, while she returned to the sitting-room, where the old man had seated himself in the rocking-chair, and was taking a mental inventory of the goods and chattels with a momentary keenness in his look that no way reassured Hitty's apprehensive heart.

"So, Abner a'n't to home?"

"No, Sir."

"Don't know where he's gone, do ye?"

"No, Sir."

"Don't never know where he goes, I expect?"

"No, Sir."

"Well, when he comes home,—know when he's a-comin' home?

"No, Sir."

"Well, when he does, you tell him 't some folks come to the tavern last night, 'n' talked pretty loud, 'n' I heerd —— Guess 'ta'n't best, though, to tell what I heerd. Only you tell Abner 't I come here, and I said he'd better be a-joggin'. He'll know, he'll know,—h'm, yes," said the old man, passing his hand across his thin blue lips, as if to drive away other words better left unsaid,—and then rising from his seat, by the aid of either arm, gained his balance, and went on, while he fumbled for his stick:—

"I'd ha' writ, but black and white's a hangin' matter sometimes, 'n' words a'n't; 'n' I hadn't nobody to send, so I crawled along. Don't ye forget now! don't ye! It's a pretty consider'ble piece o' business; 'n' you'll be dreffully sorry ef you do forget. Now don't ye forget!"

"No, I won't," said Hitty, trembling as she spoke; for the old man's words had showed her a depth of dreadful possibility, and an old acquaintance with crime and manoeuvres, that chilled the blood in her veins. She watched him out of the gate with a sickening sense of terror at her heart, and turned slowly to the house, revolving all kinds of plans in her head for her husband's escape, which her fears prove true. Of herself she did not think; no law could harm her child; but, even after years of brutality and neglect, her faithful affection turned with all its provident thoughtfulness and care at once to her husband; all her wrongs were forgotten, all her sorrows obliterated by this one fear! Well did St. Augustine say, "God is patient because He is eternal;" but better and truer would the saying have been, had it run, "God is patient because He is love:" a gospel that He publishes in the lives of saints on earth, in their daily and hourly "anguish of patience," preaching to the fearful souls that dare not trust His long suffering by the tenacious love of those who bear His image, saying, in resistless human tones, "Shall one creature endure and love and continually forgive another, and shall I, who am not loving, but Love, be weary of thy transgressions, O sinner?" And so does the silent and despairing life of many a woman weave unconsciously its golden garland of reward in the heavens above, and do the Lord's work in a strange land where it cannot sing His songs.

The day crept toward sunset, and Hitty sat with her wan face pressed to the window-pane, hushing her child in his cradle with one of those low, monotoned murmurs that mothers know; but still her husband did not come. The level sun-rays pierced the woods into more vivid splendor, burnished gold fringed the heavy purple clouds in the west, and warm crimson light turned the purple into more triumphant glory; the sun set, unstained with mist or tempest, behind those blue and lonely hills that guard old Berkshire with their rolling summits, and night came fast, steel-blue and thick with stars; but yet he did not come, the untouched meal on the table was untouched still. Hour after hour of starry darkness crept by, and she sat watching at the window-pane; overhead, constellations marched across the heavens in relentless splendor, careless of man or sorrow; Orion glittered in the east, and climbed toward the zenith; the Pleiades clustered and sparkled as if they missed their lost sister no more; the Hyades marked the celestial pastures of Taurus, and Lyra strung her chords with fire. Hitty rested her weary head against the window frame and sent her wearier thoughts upward to the stars; there were the points of light that the Chaldeans watched upon their plains by night, and named with mystic syllables of their weird Oriental tongue,—names that in her girlhood she had delighted to learn, charmed by that nameless spell that language holds, wherewith it plants itself ineradicably in the human mind, and binds it with fetters of vague association that time and chance are all-powerless to break,—Zubeneschamali and Zubenelgunebi, Bellatrix and Betelguese, sonorous of Rome and Asia both, full of old echoes and the dry resonant air of Eastern plains,—names wherein sounded the clash of Bellona's armor, and the harsh stir of palm-boughs rustled by a hot wind of the desert, and vibrant with the dying clangor of gongs, and shouts of worshipping crowds reverberating through horrid temples of grinning and ghastly idols, wet with children's blood.

Far, far away, the heavenly procession and their well-remembered names had led poor Hitty's thoughts; worn out with anxiety, and faint for want of the food she had forgotten to take, sleep crept upon her, and her first consciousness of its presence was the awakening grasp of a rough hand and the hoarse whisper of her husband.

"Get up!" said he. "Pick up your brat, get your shawl, and come!"

Hitty rose quickly to her feet. One faculty wretchedness gives, the power of sudden self-possession,—and Hitty was broad awake in the very instant she was called. Her husband stood beside her, holding a lantern; her boy slept in the cradle at her feet.

"Have you seen your father?" said she, with quick instinct.

"Yes, d—n you, be quick! do you want to hang me?"

Quick as a spirit Hitty snatched her child, and wrapped him in the blanket where he lay; her shawl was on the chair she had slept in, her hood upon a nail by the door, and flinging both on, with the child in her arms, she followed her husband down stairs, across the back-yard, hitting her feet against stones and logs in the darkness, stumbling often, but never falling, till the shadows of the trees was past, and the starlight showed her that they were traversing the open fields, now crisp with frost, but even to the tread,—over two or three of these, through a pine-wood that was a landmark to Hitty, for she well knew that it lay between the turnpike-road and another, less frequented, that by various windings went toward the Connecticut line,—then over a tiny brook on its unsteady bridge of logs, and out into a lane, where a rough-spoken man was waiting for them, at the head of a strong horse harnessed to one of those wagons without springs that New Englanders like to make themselves uncomfortable in. Her husband turned to her abruptly.

"Get in," said he; "get in behind; there's hay enough; and don't breathe loud, or I'll murder you!"

She clambered into the wagon and seated herself on the hay, hushing her child, who nestled and moaned in her arms, though she had carried him with all possible care. A sharp cut of the whip sent the powerful horse off at full speed, and soon this ill-matched party were fast traversing the narrow road that wound about the country for the use of every farm within a mile of its necessary course, a course tending toward the Connecticut.

Hour after hour crept by. Worn out with fatigue, poor Hitty dozed and fell back on the soft hay; her child slept, too, and all her troubles faded away in heavy unconsciousness, till she was again awakened by her husband's grasp, to find that dawn was gathering its light roseate fleeces in the east, and that their flight was for the present stayed at the door of a tavern, lonely and rude enough, but welcome to Hitty as a place of rest, if only for a moment. The sullen mistress of the house asked no questions and offered no courtesy, but, after her guests had eat on their breakfast, rapidly prepared, she led the way to a bedroom in the loft, where Abner Dimock flung himself down upon the straw bed and fell sound asleep, leaving Hitty to the undisturbed care of her child. And occupation enough that proved; for the little fellow was fretful and excited, so that no hour for thought was left to his anxious and timid mother till the dinner-bell awoke her husband and took him down stairs. She could not eat, but, begging some milk for her boy, tended, and fed, and sang to him, till he slept; and then all the horrors of the present and future thronged upon her, till her heart seemed to die in her breast, and her limbs failed to support her when she would have dragged herself out of doors for one breath of fresh air, one refreshing look at a world untroubled and serene.

So the afternoon crept away, and as soon as night drew on the journey was resumed. But this night was chill with the breath of a sobbing east wind, and the dim stars foreboded rain. Hitty shivered with bitter cold, and the boy began to cry. With a fierce curse Abner bade her stop his disturbance, and again the poor mother had hands and heart full to silence the still recurring sobs of the child. At last, after the midnight cocks had ceased to send their challenges from farm to farm, after some remote church-clocks had clanged one stroke on the damp wind, they began to pass through a large village; no light burned in the windows, but white fences gleamed through the darkness, and sharp gable ends loomed up against the dull sky, one after another, and the horse's hoofs flashed sparks from the paved street before the church, that showed its white spire, spectre-like, directly in their path. Here, by some evil chance, the child awoke, and, between cold and hunger and fear, began one of those long and loud shrieks that no power can stop this side of strangulation. In vain Hitty kissed, and coaxed, and half-choked her boy, in hope to stop the uproar; still he screamed more and more loudly. Abner turned round on his seat with an oath, snatched the child from its mother's arms, and rolled it closely in the blanket.

"Hold on a minute, Ben!" said he to his companion; "this yelp must be stopped;" and stepping over to the back of the wagon, he grasped his wife tightly with one arm, and with the other dropped his child into the street. "Now drive, Ben," said he, in the same hoarse whisper,—"drive like the Devil!"—for, as her child fell, Hitty shrieked with such a cry as only the heart of a mother could send out over a newly-murdered infant.—Shriek on shriek, fast and loud and long, broke the slumbers of the village; nothing Abner could do, neither threat nor force, short of absolute murder, would avail,—and there was too much real estate remaining of the Hyde property for Abner Dimock to spare his wife yet.—Ben drove fiend-fashion; but before they passed the last house in the village, lights were glancing and windows grating as they were opened. Years after, I heard the story of such a midnight cry borne past sleeping houses with the quick rattle of wheels; but no one who heard it could give the right clue to its explanation, and it dried into a legend.

Now Hitty Dimock became careless of good or evil, except one absorbing desire to get away from her husband,—to search for her child, to know if it had lived or died. For four nights more that journey was pursued at the height of their horse's speed; every day they stopped to rest, and every day Hitty's half-delirious brain laid plans of escape, only to be balked by Abner Dimock's vigilance; for if he slept, it was with both arms round her, and the slightest stir awoke him,—and while he woke, not one propitious moment freed her from his watch. Her brain began to reel with disappointment and anguish; she began to hate her husband; a band of iron seemed strained about her forehead, and a ringing sound filled her ears; her lips grew parched, and her eye glittered; the last night of their journey Abner Dimock lifted her into the wagon, and she fainted on the hay.

"What in hell did you bring her for, Dimock?" growled his companion; "women are d—d plagues always."

"She'll get up in a minute," coolly returned the husband; "can't afford to leave a goose that lays golden eggs behind; hold on till I lift her up. Here, Hitty! drink, I tell you! drink!"

A swallow of raw spirit certainly drove away the faintness, but it brought fresh fire to the fever that burned in her veins, and she was muttering in delirium before the end of that night's journey brought them to a small village just above the old house on the river that figured in the beginning of this history, and which we trust the patient reader has not forgotten. Abner Dimock left his wife in charge of the old woman who kept the hovel of a tavern where they stopped, and, giving Ben the horse to dispose of to some safe purchaser, after he had driven him down to the old house, returned at night in the boat that belonged to his negro tenant, and, taking his unconscious wife from her bed, rowed down the river and landed her safely, to be carried from the skiff into an upper chamber of the old house, where Jake's wife, Aunt Judy, as Mr. Dimock styled her, nursed the wretched woman through three weeks of fever, and "doctored" her with herbs and roots.

The tenacious Hyde constitution, that was a proverb in Greenfield, conquered at last, and Hitty became conscious, to find herself in a chamber whose plastered walls were crumbling away with dampness and festooned with cobwebs, while the uncarpeted floor was checkered with green stains of mildew, and the very old four-post bedstead on which she lay was fringed around the rickety tester with rags of green moreen, mould-rotted.

Hitty sank back on her pillow with a sigh; she did not even question the old negress who sat crooning over the fire, as to where she was, or what had befallen her; but accepted this new place as only another misty delirium, and in her secret heart prayed, for the hundredth time, to die.

Slowly she recovered; for prayers to die are the last prayers ever answered; we live against our will, and tempt living deaths year after year, when soul and body cry out for the grave's repose, and beat themselves against the inscrutable will of God only to fall down before it in bruised and bleeding acquiescence. So she lived to find herself immured in this damp and crumbling house, with no society but a drinking and crime-haunted husband, and the ignorant negroes who served him,—society varied now and then by one or two men revolting enough in speech and aspect to drive Hitty to her own room, where, in a creaking chair, she rocked monotonously back and forth, watching the snapping fire, and dreaming dreams of a past that seemed now but a visionary paradise.

For now it was winter, and the heavy drifts of snow that lay on Dimock's meadow forbade any explorations which the one idea of finding her child might have driven her to make; and the frozen surface of the river no white-sailed ship could traverse now, nor the hissing paddle-wheels of a steamer break the silence with intimations of life, active and salient, far beyond the lonely precinct of Abner Dimock's home.

So the winter passed by. The noises and lights that had awoke Hitty at midnight in the house at Greenfield had become so far an institution in this lonely dwelling that now they disturbed her sleep no more; for it was a received custom, that, whenever Abner Dimock's two visitors should appear, the cellar should resound all night with heavy blows and clinking of metal, and the red light as from a forge streamed up through the door-way; but it disturbed Hitty no more; apathy settled down in black mist on her soul, and she seemed to think, to care, for nothing.

But spring awoke the dead earth, and sleeping roots aroused with fresh forces from their torpor, and sent up green signals to the birds above. A spark of light awoke in Hitty's eye; she planned to get away, to steal the boat from its hidden cove in the bushes and push off down the friendly current of the river,—anywhere away from him! anywhere! though it should be to wreck on the great ocean, but still away from him! Night after night she rose from her bed to hazard the attempt, but her heart failed, and her trembling limbs refused their aid. At length moonlight came to her aid, and when all the house slept she stole downstairs with bare, noiseless feet, and sped like a ghost across the meadow to the river-bank. Poor weak hands! vainly they fumbled with the knotted rope that bound the skiff to a crooked elm overhanging the water,—all in vain for many lingering minutes; but presently the obdurate knot gave way, and, turning to gather up her shawl, there, close behind her, so close that his hot breath seemed to sear her cheek, stood her husband, clear in the moonlight, with a sneer on his face, and the lurid glow of drunkenness, that made a savage brute of a bad man, gleaming in his deep-set eyes. Hitty neither shrieked nor ran; despair nerved her,—despair turned her rigid before his face.

"Well," said he, "where are you going?"

"I am going away,—away from you,—anywhere in the world away from you!" answered she, with the boldness of desperation.

"Ha, ha! going away from me!—that's a d—d good joke, a'n't it? Away from your husband! You fool! you can't get away from me! you're mine, soul and body,—this world and the next! Don't you know that? Where's your promise, eh?—'for better, for worse?'—and a'n't I worse, you cursed fool, you? You did'nt put on the handcuffs for nothing; heaven and hell can't get you away from me as long as you've got on that little shiny fetter on your finger,—don't you know that?"

The maddened woman made a quick wrench to pull away from him her left hand, which he held in his, taunting her with the ring that symbolized their eternal bonds; but he was too quick for her.

"Hollo!" laughed he; "want to get rid of it, don't you? No, no! that won't do,—that won't do! I'll make it safe!"

And lifting her like a child in his arms he carried her across the meadow, back to the house, and down a flight of crazy steps in the cellar, where a little forge was all ablaze with white-hot coal, and the two ill-visaged men she well knew by sight were busy with sets of odd tools and fragments of metal, while on a bench near by, and in the seat of an old chair, lay piles of fresh coin. They were a gang of counterfeiters.

Abner Dimock thrust his wife into the chair, sweeping the gilt eagles to the floor as one of the men angrily started up, demanding, with an oath, what he brought that woman there for to hang them all.

"Be quiet, Bill, can't you!" interposed the other man. "Don't you see he's drunk? you'll have the Devil to pay, if you cross a drunk Dimock!"

But Abner had not heard the first speaker; he was too much occupied with tying his wife's arms to the chair,—a proceeding she could nowise interfere with, since his heavy foot was set upon her dress so as to hold her own feet in helpless fixedness. He proceeded to take the ring from her finger, and, searching through a box of various content, that stood in one corner, extracted from it a delicate steel chain, finely wrought, but strong as steel can be; then, as the forge with sundry tools, carefully chosen and skilfully used, he soldered one end of the chain to the ring, and, returning to his wife, placed it again upon her finger.

"Here, Bill," growled he, "where's that padlock off the tool-chest, eh? give it here! This woman's a fool,—ha, ha, ha!—she wanted to get away from me, and she's my wife!"

Another peal of dissonant laughter interrupted the words.

"What a d—d good joke! I swear I haven't laughed before, this dog's age! And then she was goin' to rid herself of the ring! as if that would help it! Why, there's the promise in black and white,—'love, honor, and obey,'—'I take thee, Abner,'—ha, ha! that's good! But fast bind, fast find; she ain't going to get rid of the ring. I'll make it as tight as the promise; both of 'em'll last to doomsday. Give me the padlock, you scoundrel!"

Bill, the man he addressed, knew too much to hesitate after the savage look that sent home the last words,—and, drawing from a bag of tools and dies a tiny padlock and key, he handed them to Dimock, who passed the chain about Hitty's thin white wrist, and, fastening it with the padlock, turned the key, and, withdrawing it from the lock, dropped it into the silvery heat of the forge, and burst into a fit of laughter, so savage and so inhuman that the bearded lips of his two comrades grew white with horror to hear the devil within so exult in his possession of a man.

Hitty sat, statue-like, in her chair; stooping, the man unbound her, and she rose slowly and steadily to her feet, looking him in the face.

"Look!" said she, raising her shackled arm high in air,—"I shall carry it to God!"—and so fled, up the broken stairway, out into the moonlight, across the meadow,—the three men following fast,—over the fallen boughs that winter had strewn along the shore, out under the crooked elm, swift as light, poising on the stern of the boat, that had swung out toward the channel,—and once more lifting her hand high into the white light, with one spring she dropped into the river, and its black waters rolled down to the sea.

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

MEADOW-SWEET.

BY EDWIN ARNOLD.

The creamy banks of meadow sweet
Along the mill stream's margin grow,
Where honey-bees, with pollened feet,
Hum softly to and fro.

The sound is sweet, the fragrance fair,
As summer breezes float along:
Around me, all the summer air
Is rife with scent and song.

O, what to me are wealth and rank?
O, what are men, and their deceit,
While I lie here, on the still stream's bank,
Among the meadow-sweet?

GLANDERS—Is the worst and most loathsome form of disease to which the horse is subject; and man himself does not enjoy immunity from it. In the mother country, in France, and in the German confederacies, glanders has appeared in isolated cases among men, and even whole families have been swept away, as by the blast of a tornado, dying the most horrid deaths. A man or horse once inoculated with the true virus of glanders, is doomed to destruction; there appears to be no help for him.

The exciting causes of spontaneous glanders, are excessive work, faulty nutrition and bad stable management, both as regards diet and ventilation.

The next cause assigned for the presence of glanders, is contagion. I use the term in its ordinary acceptation, which signifies contact or touch; the glandered virus being applied or received on an abraded or highly vascular surface, is taken up by the absorbent vessels, enters the circulation, and after a while, appears as "inoculated glanders."

The third cause of glanders is infection. The term infection means to corrupt or vitiate. The atmosphere which pervades a down-cellar, unventilated stable location, is infected or tainted with odoriferous gases arising from filth and animal excretions. Here the virus of glanders can be concocted and the disease reign triumphant. The vitiated atmosphere prevailing in such locations, finds an easy introduction into the horse's system, through pulmonary respiration. And no doubt many other diseases, hitherto considered as contagious, have had the same pulmonic origin. Therefore, the exciting cause of infectious glanders is the poison or miasm generated in a confined atmosphere, concocted out of the exhalations from the breath, fæces, urine and perspiration of horses pent up in it. It will be perceived from what I have said, that spontaneous glanders is the result of an infected atmosphere, so that in reality there may be but two exciting or direct causes for glanders, viz: contagion and infection.

Treatment—The only remedies that are likely to prove beneficial in the treatment of this malady, are, cod liver oil, phosphate of lime, vegetable tonics, and blood root; these may be given in the ordinary doses, as recommended for other diseases; at the same time, I should give thirty drops per day of oil of sassafras; and occasionally inject the nasal cavities with diluted pyroligneous acid.—Am. Vet. Journal.

THE PEACH BORER, (ÆGERIA EXITIOSA.)—But for the peach borer, we would have plenty of delicious fruit. The frost is an enemy, but not so great as the worm. The eggs are now being deposited on the bark, near the ground. The insect, when of full maturity, resembles a wasp in size or shape, but is of a deep Prussian blue color—has four wings, and the female (as far as I have observed,) is larger than the male, and has a bright orange stripe round its body. They lay their eggs from July to October; these eggs soon hatch out into little white worms, which eat into the tree and sometimes grow an inch and a half in length. These generally stay in the tree over winter—the next summer they come out a little below the surface of the ground and then make themselves a cocoon. This is done by cementing their own chips together and making it smoothe inside just to completely cover their bodies. In this state they stay a month or two, then eat a hole in one end of the cocoon and crawl out. They are now still covered with a chrysalis, which they soon leave as they did the cocoon. The chrysalis is a thin semi-transparent substance the shape of a locust but smaller. The insect is now complete and will soon begin to lay eggs for another crop.

As to the remedy, I have but little to say. I have no confidence in any plan I have yet seen, not even coal tar, unless put on very often; ashes, lime or tansy can do no good. I have seen them laying eggs right over where coal tar had been put this spring—not a continuous coat however, but almost. I also saw where the young worms were working right under the tar.

I think that strong lye, applied five or six times during the summer, might kill the eggs. Heretofore the remedy has been the knife, but with great care, I have not been able to keep them out of a few trees in my garden with a knife, and how would an orchard be kept clear. This especially applies of a wet season.

HORSE TABLETS.—An ingenious invention has just been adopted by the French Minister of War, for the better feeding of cavalry horses when on the march. Mr. Naudin, veterinary surgeon of the Imperial Guard, has succeeded in compressing the food for the journey into small tablets like those already in use, composed of vegetable food, for the army. M. Naudin has given publicity to his process, and it is destined, no doubt, to render immense services to the commissariat departments in every country. The hay and straw are chopped fine, the oats and corn crushed, and then mixed in proportion to the nutritive qualities afforded by each. Upon the mixture is poured a mucilaginous residue of linseed, and the whole is pressed and comes out in a hard cake, only requiring to be dried in the oven.—Although invented for the emergencies of war, this method for preserving fodder may be found most valuable in reducing the space occupied by the food of cattle on board ship, in distant encampments, or in the long marches of emigration parties. At any rate, the method is a valuable extension of Chollet's invention and has been eagerly adopted for the provender of the French cavalry of the army of Italy.

THE LARGEST HARVEST ON RECORD—The Philadelphia Ledger, a paper well informed, and certainly not given to exaggerated forms of speech, designates the wheat harvest of this year as "the largest wheat harvest, probably, that was ever produced on this earth." The season has been unusually early; the insects and the rust have not been able to extort from the farmers their usual groans and growlings, and with the exception of a single night of frost injuring the crop in a few counties of Western Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio, the ground sown in wheat has yielded most abundantly. There has been a greater breadth of wheat laid out than ever before; from New York to Arkansas and Alabama, and from California through to the Atlantic, more land, by far, it is said, has been thus cultivated than at any former time. Whilst the extent and success of the wheat crop in the United States are unprecedented, the same is true of Canada, and in all the old countries of Europe the promise of the harvest at the last accounts was extraordinarily good.

TO MAKE SEALING WAX.—Take 4 lbs. of Shellac, 1½ lb. of Venice Turpentine, 3 lbs. of finest Cinnabar, and add 4 oz. of Vermillion. Mix the whole well together, and melt over a very slow fire.—Pour it into metal or glass moulds of the usual size.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

RELATIVE TO AN AMENDMENT TO THE Constitution, providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly.

Resolved, by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, Three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein, that it be and is hereby proposed to the electors of the State to vote at the next annual October election, upon the approval or rejection of the following amendment as a substitute for the first clause of the twenty-fifth section of the second article of the Constitution of the state, to wit: "All regular sessions of the General Assembly shall commence on the first Monday in January, annually."

WM. B. WOODS, Speaker of the House of Representatives.
MARTIN WELKER, President of the Senate.

April 5, 1859.

SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE, Columbus O., April 7, 1859.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution, "Relative to an amendment to the Constitution providing for Annual sessions of the General Assembly," is a true copy from the original rolls on file in this office.

A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO. Columbus April 12, 1859.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION, PHILADELPHIA,

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidney and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope), FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Address, for Reports or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

DR. STEWART

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT and CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. He past success in curing many of them at hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States and Canada, where he has practiced. [illegible]

Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest countries of the world, and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered. [illegible]

Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. [illegible]

Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.

DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and affections of the Eye.

CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable caustic.

CORRESPONDENCE solicited. He will forfeit $500 for any of the following he cannot cure: Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (to persons under 30,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.

A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

Office hours 9 a. m., to 6 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.

☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.

DR. HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS, AND DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. Jackson will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and Ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which some are themselves

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other remedies have proved useless, they relieve and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. That

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual Debilities are removed by their use [illegible] that they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been tried with and old and that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the poison of disease in the blood, they

Cause sores to Heal,

and discharge from the system every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

Dear Reader that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the [illegible]. They hunt disease through every avenue and organ of the system, and expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notice, and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed. We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!

A Democratic Newspaper,

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O.,

By J. Birney Marshall,

At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that to the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the details of political, telegraphic news and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor in every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic truths, and its columns shall be characterized by frankness and honesty; its statement relied on for their unvarying veracity. Nor shall it be used for cliques or factions, and constantly pursue the object for which it is established, that of preventing the misdirection of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the union of the Democratic Party, and make every effort to heal schism, or dissension, which will support every Democratic measure with all the ability it can bring to the duty, [illegible] the Democracy and not a false one, [illegible] which it will support the present Administration, in all that is good. [illegible] In the party, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will be the best interests of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as the presents the name of the Presidency in 1860, and have every first choice of the Democrats, as the Party and the consistent with duty to the Democratic Party and the country to promote his nomination and election.

This Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on the Democracy of Ohio, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of persons in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, nor in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences, and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor," included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799; that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union;

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue, and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850, confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future American State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and, by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendency in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain [illegible] nent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large. [illegible]

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 6th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in the Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the resumption of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States finally established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States by a constant increase of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretensions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of a confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizens a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, [illegible] right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability, and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; declaring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to the masses of voters at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order, to unite with us in rebuking the wasteful, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what must otherwise inevitably) conflict of [illegible] violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State, a conflict of the most disastrous character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calamitous, in all events, to bring the name of [illegible]

The Philadelphia Pennsylvanian, in speaking of the popularity of Mr. Douglas, says:

"In Maine and Vermont, although the doctrines of his letter were partially recognised, the Convention failed to elect Douglas men to the Charleston Convention. He has no party in New York, is weak in Ohio, and doubtless could not carry his own State of Illinois in a Presidential campaign."

The Cincinnati [illegible], a paper utterly opposed to Douglas and in favor of a Slave code, says the delegates from Vermont and Maine are favorable to Douglas. Such is undoubtedly the fact. The Pennsylvanian admits that the "doctrines of his letter were partially recognized." This is but half the truth. They were entirely recognised. It will be news in Ohio that Mr Douglas is "weak in this State." He is overwhelmingly strong with the Democratic masses. But little is said of any other Presidential candidate in Ohio. His nomination is looked upon as a fixed fact.

As to Illinois, after his re-election to the Senate last year, it is useless to talk about his being unpopular there, for nobody will believe it. He will carry Illinois for President by twenty thousand majority.—Cin. Enq.

PRESIDENT BUCHANAN AND THE MARRIAGE OF HIS NEPHEW.—JAMES BUCHANAN HENRY, Esq., whose marriage with the daughter of Col. Ni[illegible] [illegible] we announced [illegible] is a native of Pennsylvania, [illegible] surviving [illegible] of a sister of Mr. Buchanan. "Occasional," of Forney's Press, in [illegible]

This is an affair of the [illegible]. The lady is beautiful and accomplished, though not reputed to be wealthy, which latter fact, it is whispered, has aroused the opposition of the uncle (J. B.) who, it is reported, will not therefore be present at the nuptial ceremony. If the whole truth were fully disclosed, it would show that it was the independence of character displayed by Mr. Henry, in reference to this and other matters, that prompted him to abandon the post of private secretary of the President, and commence the practice of his profession in New York. It is notorious that the tyranny and [illegible] of Mr. Buchanan to members of his Cabinet, have become well nigh insupportable.

The London Illustrated Times says that on Monday, July 25, Judge Haliburton made his maiden speech in Parliament. When he arose, the house was hushed to silence in a moment; but his speech was not a success, and it is clear now that Mr. Haliburton, [illegible] writer as he is, is no orator.

Mr. Luce, one of the family of vocalists, while on his way to Bloomfield, Ontario county, N. Y., to arrange for a concert, was forcibly ejected from a car of the Morris and Essex Railroad company at the Jersey City Station. He has just prosecuted the company.

The Wabash, (Ind.) Intelligencer says there will be more wheat to sell in that county this year than ever before, and full as much corn as in any former year. The wheat will average, taking the whole county together, some fifteen bushels to the acre, and there is no "green work" in the statement.

Judge Daly, of New York, in the course of his decision "in the matter of John Snook for a change of name," remarked that the name of Washington was originally "Wessyngton," which signifies "a person dwelling on the meadow land which is washed by the sea."

Lieutenant Stanford, whose death on board the United States revenue cutter Harriet Lane, was mentioned a few days ago, is now believed to have fallen a victim to the culpability of a dentist filling his teeth with an arsenic preparation for the purpose of killing the nerve. A rigid investigation it is said will be had.

An accident occurred at New London, Conn., on Saturday, at the performance of Dan Rice's famous company. The vast tent was crowded, a portion of the seats, occupied by about six thousand persons, gave way and fell with a crash to the ground. Fortunately, no one was injured but a little boy, who had his leg broken. Dan immediately presented the boy's parents with fifty dollars.

Several druggists in Richmond, Ind., have been fined for violating the liquor law, where they had sold small quantities of brandy in vials, only for medical purposes, as they supposed. The law, it is said, makes no provision for such cases, and unless a prescription accompanies each order, the druggist lays himself liable to the "pains and penalties" prescribed for offenders.

It appears that the Reform School at Westboro, Mass., which was destroyed by fire on Saturday, was kindled by some of the boys of the institution. A boy named Daniel Creedan, who has been arrested, has made a confession, which implicates himself and others.

One lady is reported to have given a dinner at Saratoga, to twenty friends, which cost $400, and a New York banker paid $760 for twenty-eight persons. A southerner, however, surpassed that, he having paid $1,400 for one dinner—the largest private dinner ever given at that fashionable resort.

At Boston, on Tuesday, a respectable young woman was brutally outraged on Haverhill street, by J. A. Hamilton, the keeper of a saloon. Her screams brought the police to the spot, the door was broken open, and Hamilton arrested, with two of his associates. The woman was nearly killed.

A letter from Honolulu of June 17th, says the eruption of the volcano is still active. A party who left San Francisco touched the lava streams at several points, roasting their pigs and chickens over its glowing fissures. They speak of one cataract of lava as indescribably beautiful and grand. It was sixty feet high, and about the same in width.

David Nuckolls, of Tuskegee, Ala., died from the effects of a pistol shot received while arguing politics. The affair created intense excitement, involving [illegible] party feelings.

A Paris correspondent says of Napoleon, that he is by race an Italian, by birth a Dutchman, by school education a German, by military education a Swiss, by political studies an Englishman, and by his crown he is a Frenchman.

During a late debate in the House of Commons, Mr. Bright incidentally mentioned the fact that, sometime since he and Mr. Cobden had each a legacy of £1,500 left by a person they had never seen, as some compensation for their efforts to [illegible]

Two Indians were recently arrested at Yreka, California, for attempting an outrage on Miss McEwen. A party of men released them from jail and conducted them to the outskirts of the village, where a volley of bullets was fired upon them. One fell dead on the spot. The other ran off, mortally wounded, and his body was found the next day.

The Illinois Central Committee, charged with the investigation of the frauds upon the State Treasury, reported progress. Their labors have not been completed, owing to the difficulty of attaining definite evidence. The history of the canal fraud remains in the dark, and the theft of papers from Gov. Matteson's box is unexplained.

The annual muster of New England firemen is to take place the present year at Manchester, N. H., on the 14th, 15th, and 16th of September. The first two days will be devoted exclusively to companies from abroad for the trial for prizes, which amount to $900. The prizes are five in number, and are as follows: First prize, $400; second, $200; third, $150; fourth, $100; fifth, $50. On the last day horse companies will contend for prizes, and at the close there will be horse trotting and pacing for purses. It is also in contemplation to offer a handsome reward to the best steam fire engine whose merits shall be determined by trial.

The Hudson River Railroad Company has added six more coal burning locomotives to the road during the last four months. The whole number now in use on this road is thirty-one. The burning of coal reduces the current expenses of a locomotive forty-four per cent.—an item that adds largely to the profits.

There died recently at Guanabacoa, Cuba, a wealthy Creole planter named Francisco de la O'Garcia, who is said to have left about $4,000,000. He was the intimate friend of Narciso Lopez, and was arrested during the Pinto troubles. He gave freely of his wealth to aid the cause of Cuban independence, and has bequeathed $100,000 to establish schools at Matanzas, and for other charities.

A dispatch from La Crosse, Wis., of the 10th, says "Yesterday, Postmaster Wm. Dennison, one of our leading citizens, in company with a friend, were out fishing, 20 miles from the city, when they were attacked by a party of Germans, and so badly beaten that Dennison's recovery is doubtful. The trouble arose from the Germans disputing their right to fish in that vicinity. The citizens were much excited and threatened to lynch the Germans."

The city of Columbia, South Carolina, recently passed an ordinance in regard to bread. The bakers did not relish it, and so resolved to nullify it, by stopping the supply of that staff of life. But, as flour is cheap in South Carolina, the people threw themselves on their reserved rights, and brought into fashion the old family ovens. The result is, the bakers are defeated and left without customers.

We reported by telegraph the discovery of attempts at forging quartermaster's checks in Salt Lake City. The intention was to send a Mormon named Brewer to California with half a million dollars in checks, there to put them into circulation. Brewer is in the hands of the United States Marshal.

A letter from [illegible], states that a young lady said to have been enticed into a Toronto nunnery, declares that she entered the Convent of her own free will, intending to take the veil, but having become disgusted with life in a nunnery, left the premises. She is now at Saratoga, whence she writes this letter, addressed to her father.

There was quite an interesting family gathering at Easton, Conn., on the 15th August, to celebrate the one hundredth birth-day of Mr. Nehemiah W. Lyon. The venerable centenarian is a revolutionary pensioner, and notwithstanding his extreme old age, seems to enjoy good health. He was married at the age of seventeen, and has a son living who has reached the age of eighty-one.

A wedding took place at [illegible] Hotel in Washington, on Monday, August 15, where the groom was a wealthy widower, with six children, and the bride a pretty miss of some eighteen, who had just completed a term as governess in the house of the groom, and was on her way to join her relatives in the Green Mountain country in company with him, when on reaching Washington they concluded to get married. Having arrived here on Saturday night late, no license could be obtained until Monday, when the legal forms were gone through with as above stated.

The Pittsburg Post, which a short time since denounced "Old Buck" for a second heat for the Presidential stakes in 1860, is now in favor of the Little Giant. The Post of Saturday says:

We understand the friends of Stephen A. Douglas intend organizing a club to further the expression of public opinion in behalf of their favorite. This is all commendable and praiseworthy. The "little giant" has hosts of warm friends in this region, who will devote their best energies to secure his nomination. We are not fully posted as to the details of this movement, but if the men whom we know to be friends of Senator Douglas take hold of the movement, there can be no such word as fail.

A MIDNIGHT FUNERAL.—One of the most solemn sights for a person to witness, says the Boston Herald, is a funeral at midnight. On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Daniel H. Haine, a member of the Chelsea City Council, died at his residence on Central avenue. The disease which caused his death was of such a nature that his body had to be interred at midnight. While the clock was striking the hour of twelve, and the people had retired to their rest from the labors of the day, with everything still and calm beneath the broad canopy of heaven, two persons entered the house of mourning and removed the remains of a brother to its final resting place in the cemetery. It was a sad and mournful sight for the widow and children of the deceased, as no friends, relations or neighbors could be present to condole with them in their hour of affliction.

NEBRASKA.—A correspondent writing from Omaha City, N. T., July 30, says, the sales of public lands are now progressing at the United States Land Office at this place. But little choice lands have as yet been bought by speculators. The claims of settlers are generally respected. Thousands of excellent lands are still in market.

The wheat crop of the territory looks very well, and corn promises a fair yield. Emigration to and from Pike's Peak still continues. A few days since, amongst a crowd of returning miners, one was pointed out to me as the man who carried the "dust" from diggings to diggings, "salting" them for Greeley's inspection.

A DEMOCRATIC JOE.—A Boston correspondent of a Republican paper, himself an intense Republican, speaking of the next Presidential nomination, says: "The very delicate job of constructing a platform for the republican party, which shall accommodate John Bell and Wm. H. Seward, Carl Schurz and Gov. Banks, Tom Corwin and Charles Sumner, Eli Thayer and Joshua R. Giddings, will require great attention."

Joseph [illegible], an old citizen of Wooster, died a few days since. He was one of the first sheriffs of Wayne county.

The Republicans of Knox co. have nominated for Representative Mr. Wm. R. Cox, and in the same district, for Senator, Mr. William Bonar, of Knox.

The barn of Mr. James [illegible], within two miles and a half of Bellefontaine, Logan county, with its contents, a large lot of wheat threshed and ready for market, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday of last week—loss, $1,400.

The Findlay Jeffersonian says, that two gentlemen found an infant child dead and partially devoured by hogs, near the line of Hancock and Wyandott counties, on Thursday of last week. When discovered, a hog had the child in its mouth, and had already eaten off one hand.

Deputy Marshal Hackett, of Ravenna, arrested two men on Friday in Steubenville for making bogus coin. Over half a peck of bogus half dollars were found in their possession, as well as a quantity of counterfeiting implements. The coin is described as being very nearly perfect in appearance and weight.—Cleveland [illegible]

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FATHER POINT, Aug. 18.—The steamship Asia, from Liverpool on the 6th inst., passed here bound for New York. Her advices are two days later.

The Peace Conference at Zurich is to resume the 8th inst.

The following are the details of the Asia's advices:

In Parliament a bill creating a naval reserve of 20,000 men was progressing.

Count Callaredo, the Austrian, M. De [illegible], the Sardinian, and De Bourgeney, the French representatives to the Peace Conference, had either reached Zurich or were en route for the meeting on the eighth.

The English Parliament had passed all navy and army estimates and were expected to adjourn on the 13th.

Volunteers for the 30,000 naval reserve are to enter for five years and will be to the navy what militia are to the army.

The steamer Great Eastern will be delivered up by the contractors in complete condition on the 8th August.

The bank of France has reduced its rate of discount from 4 to 3½ per cent.

The disarming of the French navy was progressing. The 160,000,000 francs unexpended of the late loan is to be devoted to internal improvements.

The Paris Bourse was firm and rentes had advanced to 69f 95c.

ITALY.—It is reported that an attempt had been made to poison Garibaldi.

It was said that France is intriguing to restore the Grand Dukes.

Naples has decided to admit breadstuffs free of duty.

AUSTRIA.—It was reported that Baron De Bach, the Austrian minister of the Interior, had tendered his resignation, the acceptance of which was refused by the Emperor.

INDIA.—The Calcutta mail of the 5th of July had been telegraphed. The European troops were accepting their discharges in large numbers.

The mutineers at Berhampore had returned to duty except 40 of the leaders who will be court martialed.

The papers received by the steamer furnish the following details of news:

ENGLAND.—In the House of Lords, on the 5th inst., the Marquis of Normanby gave notice of his intention to put a question as to the terms of peace which were under discussion prior to the treaty of Villa Franca.

The Earl of Granville announced that the Government intended to adhere to the principles on which the national system of education in Ireland had hitherto been conducted.

The threatening strike in the building trade in London daily becomes more serious, and it was feared that on the day the Asia sailed there would be 40,000 operatives in the trade unemployed. A great number of meetings had been held in Hyde Park, and a determination evinced to abide by the nine hour movement. The employers had likewise held a meeting, and resolved to resist the demands.

FRANCE.—It is stated that the French Government had definitely resolved to employ in works of public utility, the one hundred and fifty millions francs which remains unexpended of the late loan.

The Paris Bourse had been generally firm and animated. On the 5th there was considerable buoyancy and the market closed at an advance of ⅛.

AUSTRIA.—A ministerial crisis is said to have been impending owing to conflicting opinions on the question of reform.

A denial is given to the statement in Le Nord of the pretended interview between the Emperor of Austria and the King of Sardinia at Villa Franca.

The Vienna Gazette contains the ordinance revoking the restrictions which were imposed on commerce on account of the war, the introduction to the export of horses and mules is however maintained.

STATE OF TRADE.

The Manchester advices are favorable, the market for goods closing quiet but steady.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 5.—Richardson & Spence quote weather favorable for the crops and the market closes with a declining tendency. Flour dull but steady. Wheat very dull.

LIVERPOOL, Saturday, Aug. 6th—Noon.—Breadstuffs close dull. Provisions are also dull. Wheat has declined 2@3d. Corn is easier, but quotations unchanged for European; mixed and yellow at 5s 6d@6s 1d. White 7s @7s 6d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET, Aug. 5.—The market is dull. Beef heavy, but there is an improved feeling, and holders are pressing on the market; quotations are 2s 6d lower. Pork dull and quotations nominal; bacon dull but steady. Lard steady and [illegible]; sales at 54s@55s.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET.—Potashes steady at 27@27s 6d pearls steady at 29s 6d. Sugar dull. Coffee quiet.

LONDON MARKET.—Messrs. Baring quote breadstuffs very dull and quotations barely maintained. Welsh iron rails steady at £6 5s. Sugar heavy. Rice quiet. American securities are unchanged. State stocks in good demand.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, August 5.—The money market is decidedly stringent but closes active. Consols closed 95½. The bullion in the bank of England has decreased £132,000.

FRANCE.—PARIS, Friday morning.—The Moniteur of this morning contains the following: A deputation of Venetians presented an address to the French Minister at Turin, intended for the Emperor, and in which was contained a protestation on the part of the provinces of Venetia, against the direct and indirect domination of Austria in that part of Italy. The Minister, we are informed, accepted the document, but said not a word in reply.

The Patrie says, according to a letter from Florence, it is supposed that Garibaldi would take command of the Tuscan army. The same journal further states the Emperor Napoleon will visit the camp at Chalons.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says it is expected that the Moniteur will, in a day or two, publish a note in reference to the French conference which will confirm [illegible] pacific disposition of the Government.

SARDINIA.—M. De [illegible], of Piedmont, has arrived at Zurich. The official journal of Lombardy denies the report published by certain papers as to the object of the mission of Count Reiset, and states that the French diplomatic agent has received such instructions from his government as are favorable to the wishes of Italy.

The [illegible] have not been of a political character. In the Duchy of Modena the great concourse of electors have inscribed their votes.

AUSTRIA AND ROME.—The Daily News publishes, for the first time, a translation of the convention concluded between the Papal Government and Austrian General commanding the army of occupation at Bologna, in 1850. The army maintenance of the Pope's authority was not only committed to the Austrian Generals, but the highest judicial powers were attributed to him. To the tender mercies of the Haynaus were left the trial and sentence of men charged with political offences of every degree.

Farini, the dictator of Modena, in a second proclamation, says, "Let the conjured followers of the foreigners menace us, and I shall resolutely employ all the means at my disposal to defend the national defense."

The presidency of the proposed conference is a fruitful topic of discussion in the continental journals. The Siecle declares itself opposed to the assumption of that office by the Pope. Nothing, it thinks, can be gained by according any advantage of elevation or dignity to the papal power.

A correspondent to the Chronicle gives the following as the substance of the answer of his Holiness to the Emperor Napoleon's proposition:

"Pius IX. thanks the Emperor of the French for the interest which he unceasingly displays for the Holy See, and the person of the Pope. He regards it as an instance of the Emperor's filial devotion to the proposition relative to the honorable presidency of a confederation or Italian league, and he would not refuse that post without having the most ample information respecting the engagements which would result from it, and the relations which would exist between the various Italian Sovereigns. When he has procured such information he will be able to see whether Catholic interests permit him to accept it, and in that case the pacification of Italy and the return of its rebellious provinces will naturally have to precede the establishment of that confederation and of the honorary presidency."

The Austrian Gazette states that Cardinal Antonelli has presented a scheme of an Italian confederation, consisting of a sort of Mutual Assurance Association of the Italian Governments, destined to replace the Austrian protectorate. The object of the confederation is declared to be to control revolution, wherever it may show itself, and to fortify the Governments in such a way that they may annihilate all revolutionary proceedings.

It is proposed that each State taking part in the confederation shall have a representative at Rome deputed to the Holy Father, and all the envoys united shall form the Federal Diet, which shall be charged to watch over the security of the territory of the Confederation, by fixing the military contingent and the forces of the garrisons of the federal fortresses, and which shall also discuss the territorial changes and treaties which may be concluded between the members of the confederation in so far as these treaties shall concern the general interest.

The Pope has condemned to death seven of the inhabitants of Perugia, for participation in the disorders which took place in that city on the 14th of June. The accused, however, have been judged by default, and it is most unlikely they will be found when wanting.

There is, it appears, to be a French occupation of Italy, temporary according to present declarations, but the fortunes of war may transform it to permanency.

The Belgian Independent says that besides the troops of the division Trochel, charged with the occupation of Parma and Modena, the division [illegible] is to proceed to Rome, and division Ulrich to Milan. France is thus to keep 50,000 men in the Peninsula. Austria on its side appears disposed to maintain its army on a respectable footing in Venetia.

The Journal De Frankfort affirms that in consequence of the complications which prevail in Italy the Emperor has resolved only to withdraw from Venetia the fourth battalion of 33 regiments of infantry, so that the forces assembled in that country will be diminished by only 25,000 men.

The Liverpool Times says: A very remarkable circumstance is now exciting some attention in Germany, and it will shortly excite a still greater amount of interest in the United States. Every one knows the immense number of German emigrants who find their way to the Union. Most of them, it is needless to state, in a condition far removed from affluence; but however poor they may be when they leave home, they generally return to their native country in after years in very comfortable circumstances.

As their lot is cast amongst Republicans, and as they wish to have a voice in the making of the laws which govern them, these German emigrants become in the majority of cases naturalized Americans. It seems that a native of Hanover, who stands in this position, has recently returned to the country of his birth, was draughted into the militia and compelled to do military service. He refused, pleaded the laws of his adopted country, and applied for protection to the American consul. The American Government has taken up the subject warmly, and has peremptorily demanded his release. It has done more than this. It has caused similar requisitions to be made upon the other German Governments, who are made to understand that American citizens cannot be called upon to submit to the dictates of arbitrary rule.

The German powers, however distasteful as it may be to them, will give way, and they will respect the rights of those German-Americans who return from the far west with a handsome amount of dollars, with which to pass the evening of their days in their native country. It is a remarkable fact that there is no great power in the world with so small an army and navy as the United States, and yet which makes itself more feared and respected abroad.

There is no prospect of a settlement of the differences between the builders and their men. Above 300 of the largest builders have joined the Defence Association, and probably the 40,000 men they employ will be discharged on Saturday, unless they agree to the conditions now laid down. Both parties are confident of victory. The masters anticipate abundant labor from the provinces, which the men say they cannot get.

The operatives, on the other hand, expect general support from all the trades throughout the Kingdom, and boast that they can remain on strikes for six weeks upon their own resources, without calling for assistance from their own or from other societies. The Gas companies' strike has ceased.

INDIA.—The French Consul at Aden has been murdered, while transacting business on the opposite coast.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

NEW YORK, August 15.—The steamship City of Baltimore, from Liverpool, on the 3d inst., and Queenstown on the 4th, arrived at this port at 6 o'clock this evening, too late to dispatch her mails and newspaper packages to the South.

A brief summary of her advices has been already published, having been obtained off Cape Race.

The following dispatch, which was received at Queenstown on the moment of her departure, furnishes advices one day later than those brought by the Vanderbilt.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Telegrams from Paris say the French Adriatic squadron had returned to Toulon. Troops from Italy were arriving at Marseilles. The funeral rites over the French and Sardinian soldiers who fell in the cause of Italy were performed at Turin on the 3d.

A dispatch from Bologna says, the Sardinian Commissioner, the Marquis D. Azeglio, had issued a proclamation announcing his recall, and recommending the people to remain tranquil, and promising, in the name of Victor Emanuel, to endeavor to obtain the concurrence of the European governments for accomplishing their just and reasonable wishes.

The minister had convoked the National Assembly. Perfect order prevails.

The threatened strike in the building trade at London was becoming serious. A meeting of several thousand workmen was held at Hyde Park, and speeches were made of an uncompromising character.

NEW YORK, August 15.—A. Titus, wholesale grocer, has absconded. His liabilities amount to $100,000.

The steamers Arizona and Indianola, from Brazos have arrived, with $900,000 in specie, and advices from Brownsville to the 4th inst. An epidemic fever was prevailing. Troops were organizing in northern Mexico.

ST. LOUIS, August 15.—Leavenworth City voted to-day to loan its credit for $100,000 for a railroad to Fort Riley, if sufficient subscriptions are guaranteed to justify the immediate prosecution of the work.

WASHINGTON, August 16.—The extensive machine, blacksmiths and sawing shops of the Capital Extension Works were destroyed by a fire which commenced about half past three o'clock this morning. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained, but it is supposed to have been accidental. The buildings were comparatively of little value, but the machinery contained in them were very expensive, including the lathe for turning the immense stone columns for the public building, powerful engines and tools. A large quantity of costly marble, finished and unfinished, has also been destroyed. The loss is variously estimated at from [illegible] to $60,000. There was no insurance upon any portion of it.

ST. LOUIS, August 16.—Leavenworth dates by the Denver City Express to the 8th inst. arrived this morning. A nugget weighing fifty six pennyweights was taken from the Nevada gulch. Rich diggings were discovered at the head waters of the Bayou Salado. Extravagant reports continued from Colorado. A newspaper issued in Mountain city, states that the convention sitting at Auraria had adjourned, having formed a state constitution; the features are not given. The boundaries are in the latitude of 37° to 43° longitude. The vote on the division stood one hundred and two to ten. As to the propriety of the State organization the convention voted to submit the question of territorial or state organization at the same time.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The agents of the four trunk lines have agreed upon an advanced freight schedule to take effect to-day. The advance is on 1st and 2nd class western bound freight, on a basis of $1 26 to Cincinnati and $1 80 to St. Louis, for first class. We hear that a convention is to be held at Niagara some time this week or next, for the purpose of establishing a permanent arrangement, when the present preliminary schedule will be continued, if not further advanced.

NEW YORK, August 16.—The Herald to-day published a list in detail of all messages sent over the Atlantic Cable during the few weeks it was in working order. The list fills seven columns. That journal foots up as follows, four hundred messages, containing forty-three hundred and fifty-nine words, or 23,220 letters.

WASHINGTON, August 16.—Letters from Juarez, for the Constitutional government, just received here, allude with great satisfaction to the favor with which the decree for the nationalization of Church property was everywhere received, even in the city of Mexico.

The visit of Capt. Oldham, commander of her Majesty's naval forces, to the President, is mentioned with gratification, as on that occasion he took pleasure in announcing that by order of the British Government he would not enforce the measures heretofore contemplated for the redress of complaints, nor do anything to embarrass the administration.

Gen. De Vollado, at San Luis Potosi, has, it is supposed, about 5,000 troops under his command, preparing to march on the city of Mexico. Arms and ammunition are constantly being received by the Liberals.

Senor Mata, who had just returned from New York, has concluded a contract for munitions of war, which will, without unnecessary delay, be forwarded to Mexico.

Mr. Whitehead, who was banished from Mexico, where he resided for many years, will soon return to England in behalf of the British bondholders, and will exert himself to satisfy all their claims, the Church property being the basis for the transaction, and by which it is thought millions of dollars will be [illegible] the benefit of the Constitutional Government.

It is not expected that Lerdo will make any pecuniary engagements in New York, but will merely take preliminary steps to [illegible] be submitted to his government for consideration.

His contemplated visit to [illegible] and Secretary Cass, with a view to have a full and free talk on Mexican affairs, will doubtless have the effect of facilitating the negotiations of a treaty satisfactory to both governments. Otway, the British Minister, was at the last accounts in Mexico, the dispatches for his recall, not having been received. There is [illegible] information in this city as justifies the assertion that the vacancy thus occasioned will be filled by a successor friendly to the Juarez government.

NEW YORK, August 16.—The statement of Mr. Seward as published in to-day's Herald contains an interesting fact connected with the working of the Atlantic Cable. It appears that the sum of $250,000 was saved by the British Government by being able to inform the Canadian authorities that two regiments of Canadian troops which had been ordered to England, were not needed. The expenses attending their shipment were thus saved. This fact [illegible] be sufficient to [illegible] the doubts of skeptics.

[illegible], Aug. 16.—The grand military encampment at [illegible], excites unusual interest. Fourteen volunteer companies from this and adjoining counties are in camp. [illegible] The encampment is under the command of Brigadier Gen. Wegley. It will continue till Friday.

LOUISVILLE, August 16.—The Memphis overland mail of the 13th has arrived. A [illegible] occurred at [illegible] City. Loss [illegible].

OSWEGO, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The Ontario grain elevator owned by Fred'k D. [illegible], was entirely destroyed by fire this morning, with the exception of the engine building. The warehouse contained 36,000 bushels of Chicago spring wheat and corn. The loss is estimated at $130,000, which is insured mostly in New York Insurance Companies. A Canadian schooner, the Mary, which was lying at the warehouse wharf, was also badly damaged.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—A one-mile race in harness between Flora Temple and Princess for a purse of $1,000, which came off yesterday over the Empire course, the former won two straight heats. Time, [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Secretary [illegible] on appeal to him has decided that under the tariff of 1857, [illegible] are liable to a duty of 15 per cent. [illegible]

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17.—The barque Tho. Dallett, which sailed from Porto Cabello on the 1st inst., brings letters and papers of that date, from which we learn that Gen. Falcon, heading the revolutionary party, was a few miles below Porto Cabello with [illegible] men and having joined with the forces of General [illegible], was preparing to make an assault upon the place, which is well barricaded and supported by 900 government troops and the national [illegible]. The two main streets of the city are protected by six pieces of artillery, and [illegible] the revolutionary party should succeed [illegible] be after some hard fighting. The government vessels never started out to prevent his landing until after he was safe ashore. One of Falcon's vessels was taken, and the other was beaten to pieces. Since landing, General Falcon has had free communication with his friends in Porto Bello. A plan for his entrance had been fixed, but the arrest of some of his accomplices prevented the treachery from being carried out.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16.—Advices from Leavenworth state that the Democratic territorial convention at Topeka, yesterday, nominated G. W. Johnson for Congress.

The sales of the Government mules at Utah was completed. They brought very high prices.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16.—A dispatch to the Republican says that the Salt Lake mail reached Atchison yesterday.

Captain Hooper, formerly Secretary of the territory, was nominated for Congress, also Bernhisel.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 16.—Hon. Daniel E. Sickles and lady are at present stopping at Saving Rock watering place near New Haven.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 16.—Mons. Blondin crossed the river on his rope yesterday with a man on his back. During the performance a row occurred and a man 60 years of age was thrown over the river bank and killed. The deceased's name was Caldwell.

MR. BUCHANAN AND THE NEXT PRESIDENCY.—Since the published declaration of Mr. Buchanan that he is not in the field for the next Presidency, the editor of the Buffalo Republic says: "The denial is true in one sense. Mr. Buchanan is not a candidate, but expects to get the nomination," and within ten days he is said, adding: "The Democratic party is lost, unless it nominates me at Charleston, for no other man can be elected but me." The editor says that if any office holder wishes to test the fact, let him make himself very busy, for about three days, in favor of any other man. This is a simple experiment, will not some of our own federal officials, for the sake of settling a great public question just try it?

A DISTINGUISHED EDITOR AT WASHINGTON.—A special Washington dispatch, August 17, to the New York Herald, says:

Banks, of Virginia, formerly of the South Side Democrat, but now editing the Cincinnati Enquirer, is here, rapidly electioneering for Douglas, and for printing jobbery in general, under the next administration. He is an accomplished button-hole bargainer for government pickings, a veteran lobbyer, though but a boy in appearance, and derives some consideration from his association with [illegible] to oust Wendell during the last session of Congress.

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE, author of "Home, Sweet Home," is buried at Tunis. The following lines are inscribed on his tomb:

Sure when thy gentle spirit fled
To realms beyond the azure dome,
With arms outstretched, God's angels said,
"Welcome to Heaven's Home, Sweet Home."

The deaf-mutes of Boston and vicinity are moving for an application to the Massachusetts Legislature for the establishment of a Deaf and Dumb Asylum in that state. The only institution of the kind now available for the deaf mutes of New England is the Asylum at Hartford.

Wesley E. Fisher, who was to be executed at Ottawa, Illinois, on the 17th inst., has been granted a respite of four weeks by the Governor, at the request of Judge Caton. The case was before the Judge on appeal and he desired longer time to investigate it.

"Joe, why were you out so late last night?"

"It wasn't so very late—only a quarter of twelve."

"How dare you sit there and tell me that lie? I was awake when you came, and looked at my watch—it was three o'clock."

"Well, isn't three a quarter of 12?"

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this Union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of persons in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850; "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799; that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union—

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion: The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it should be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain [illegible] nent protection the great outlet through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1858.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 6th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and one union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those scenes which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant source of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretensions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, [illegible] of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the faithful execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; declaring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in State Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well tried principles, nevertheless appeal to the people of this State at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union, according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of [illegible].

The Philadelphia Pennsylvanian, in speaking of the popularity of Mr. Douglas, says:

"In Maine and Vermont, although the doctrines of his letter were partially recognized, the Convention failed to elect Douglas men to the Charleston Convention. He has no party in New York, is weak in Ohio, and doubtless could not carry his own State of Illinois in a Presidential campaign."

The Commercial (of Ill.) Statesman, a paper utterly opposed to Douglas and in favor of a Slave code, says the delegates from Vermont and Maine are favorable to Douglas. Such is undoubtedly the fact. The Pennsylvanian admits that the "doctrines of his letter were partially recognized." This is not half the truth. They were entirely recognized. It will be news in Ohio that Mr. Douglas is "weak in this State." He is overwhelmingly strong with the Democratic masses. But little is said of any other Presidential candidate in Ohio. His nomination is looked upon as a fixed fact.

As to Illinois, after his re-election to the Senate last year, it is useless to talk about his being unpopular there, for nobody will believe it. He will carry Illinois for President by twenty thousand majority.—Cin. Enq.

PRESIDENT BUCHANAN AND THE MARRIAGE OF HIS NEPHEW.—James Buchanan Henry, Esq., whose marriage with the daughter of Col. N[illegible], of Annapolis, Md., we announced last week, is a native of Pennsylvania, and the only surviving descendant of a sister of Mr. Buchanan. "Occasional," of Forney's Press, in [illegible]

This is a point of the heart. The lady is beautiful and accomplished, though not reputed to be wealthy; which latter fact, it is whispered, has excited the opposition of the uncle (J. B.) who, it is reported, will not therefore be present at the nuptial ceremony. If the whole truth were fully known, it would show that it was the independence of character displayed by Mr. Henry, in reference to this and other matters, that prompted him to abandon the post of private secretary of the President, and commence the practice of his profession in New York. It is notorious that the tyranny and hauteur of Mr. Buchanan to members of his Cabinet, have become well nigh insupportable.

The London Illustrated Times says that on Monday, July 25, Judge Haliburton made his maiden speech in Parliament. When he arose, the house was hushed to silence in a moment; but his speech was not a success, and it is clear now that Mr. Haliburton, racy writer as he is, is no orator.

A dispatch from La Crosse, Wis., of the 10th, says: "Yesterday, Postmaster Wm. Dennison, one of our leading citizens, in company with a friend, were trout fishing, 12 miles from the city, when they were attacked by a party of Germans, and so badly beaten that Dennison's recovery is doubtful. The trouble arose from the Germans disputing their right to fish in that vicinity. The citizens were much excited and threatened to lynch the Germans."

The city of Columbia, South Carolina, recently passed an ordinance in regard to bread. The bakers did not relish it, and so resolved on nullifying it, by stopping the supply of that staff of life. But, as flour is cheap in South Carolina, the people threw themselves on their reserved rights, and brought into fashion the old family ovens. The result is, the bakers are defeated and left without customers.

We reported by telegraph the discovery of attempts at forging quartermaster's checks in Salt Lake City. The intention was to send a Mormon named Brewer to California with half a million dollars in checks, there to put them into circulation. Brewer is in the hands of the United States Marshal.

A letter from Miss Elizabeth Starr, the young lady said to have been enticed into a Toronto nunnery, declares that she entered the Convent of her own free will, intending to take the veil, but having become disgusted with life in a nunnery, left the premises. She is now at Saratoga, whence she writes this letter, addressed to her father.

There was quite an interesting family gathering at Easton, Conn., on the 15th August, to celebrate the one hundredth birthday of Mr. Nehemiah W. Lyon. The venerable centenarian is a revolutionary pensioner, and notwithstanding his extreme old age, seems to enjoy good health. He was married at the age of seventeen, and has a son living who has reached the age of eighty-one.

A wedding took place at Brown's Hotel in Washington, on Monday, August 16, where the groom was a wealthy widower, with six children, and the bride a pretty miss of sweet eighteen, who had just completed a term as governess in the house of the groom, and was on her way to join her relatives in the Green Mountain country in company with him, when on reaching Washington they concluded to get married. As they arrived here on Saturday night late, no license could be obtained until Monday, when the legal forms were gone through with as above stated.

The Pittsburg Post, which a short time since nominated "Old Buck" for a second heat for the Presidential stakes in 1860, is now in favor of the Little Giant. The Post is [illegible].

We understand the friends of Stephen A. Douglas intend organizing a club to further the expression of public opinion in behalf of their favorite. This is all commendable and praiseworthy. The "little giant" has hosts of warm friends in this region, who will devote their best energies to secure his nomination. We are not fully posted as to the details of this movement, but if the men whom we know to be friends of Senator Douglas take hold of the movement, there can be no such word as fail.

A MIDNIGHT FUNERAL.—One of the most solemn sights for a person to witness, says the Boston Herald, is a funeral at midnight. On Sunday afternoon, Mr. Daniel H. Maine, a member of the Chelsea City Council, died at his residence on Central avenue. The disease which caused his death was of such a nature that his body had to be interred at midnight. While the clock was striking the hour of twelve, and the people had retired to their rest from the labors of the day, with everything still and calm beneath the starry canopy of heaven, two persons entered the house of mourning and removed the remains of a brother to its final resting place in the cemetery. It was a sad and mournful sight for the widow and children of the deceased, as no friends, relations or neighbors could be present to condole with them in their hour of affliction.

NEBRASKA.—A correspondent writing from Omaha City, N. T., July 30, says, the sales of public lands are now progressing at the United States Land Office at this place. But little choice lands have as yet been bought by speculators. The claims of settlers are generally respected. Thousands of excellent lands are still in market.

The wheat crop of the territory looks very well, and corn promises a fair yield. Emigration to and from Pike's Peak still continues. A few days since, amongst a crowd of returning miners, one was pointed out to me as the man who carried the dust from diggings to diggings, "salting" them for Greeley's inspection.

A DESPERATE JOB.—A Boston correspondent of a Republican paper, himself an intense Republican, speaking of the next Presidential nomination, says: "The very delicate job of constructing a platform for the republican party, which shall accommodate John Bell and Wm. H. Seward, Carl Schurz and Gov. Banks, Tom Corwin and Charles Sumner, Eli Thayer and Joshua R. Giddings, will require great attention."

A Pleasant [illegible] Would:

[illegible]

[illegible] BOY.—The evening train east from Chicago on Tuesday evening last, while stopping at [illegible], discovered a lad about eight years old sitting quietly on the brakes, under the cars, where he had rode twenty-five miles, between wheels, without harm. He said his father lived near there, and it was the only chance he had getting home. While everybody was in wonder at the exploit, which equalled Blondin, the boy came up smiling.—Valparaiso, Ind., Republican.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

—It is estimated that about 10,000 persons visited a camp meeting in the neighborhood of Winchester, Preble county, on Sunday last.

—Mr. F. Cooper, of Bronson, Huron Co., and a Miss Place, were thrown from a wagon on the 11th, and badly injured. The horses ran away, and the wagon struck a telegraph pole, and made a perfect wreck.

—Joseph Reikdell, an old citizen of Wooster, died a few days since. He was one of the first sheriffs of Wayne county.

—The Republicans of Knox co. have nominated for Representative Mr. Wm. B. Cox; and in the same district, for Senator, Mr. William [illegible], of Knox.

—The barn of Mr. [illegible], within two miles and a half of Bellefontaine, Logan county, with its contents, a large lot of wheat threshed and ready for market, was destroyed by fire on Wednesday of last week—loss, $1,600.

—The Findlay Jeffersonian says, that two gentlemen found an infant child dead and partially devoured by hogs, near the line of Hancock and Wyandot counties, on Thursday of last week. When discovered, a hog had the hand in his mouth, and had already eaten off one hand.

—Deputy Marshal Hackett, of Ravenna, arrested two men on Friday in Steubenville for making bogus coin. Over half a peck of bogus half dollars were found in their possession, as well as a quantity of counterfeiting implements. The coin is described as being very nearly perfect in appearance and weight.—Cleveland Herald.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FATHER POINT, Aug. 18.—The steamship Asia, from Liverpool on the 6th inst., passed here bound for New York. Her advices are two days later.

The Peace Conference at Zurich is to meet on the 8th inst.

The following are the details of the Asia's advices:

In Parliament a bill creating a naval reserve of 30,000 men was progressing.

Count Collaredo, the Austrian, M. De Lambura(?), the Sardinian, and De Bourqueney, the French representatives to the Peace Conference, had either reached Zurich or were en route for the meeting on the eighth.

The English Parliament had passed all navy and army estimates and was expected to adjourn on the 13th.

Volunteers for the 30,000 naval reserve are to enter for five years and will be to the navy what militia are to the army.

The steamer Great Eastern will be delivered up by the contractors in complete condition on the 8th August.

The bank of France has reduced its rate of discount from 4 to 3½ per cent.

The disarming of the French navy was progressing. The 160,000,000 francs unexpended of the late loan is to be devoted to internal improvements.

The Paris Bourse was firm and rentes had advanced to 69f90c.

ITALY.—It is reported that an attempt had been made to poison Garibaldi.

It was said that France is intriguing to restore the Grand Dukes.

Naples has decided to abide [illegible].

AUSTRIA.—It was reported that Baron De Bach, the Austrian minister of the Interior, had tendered his resignation, the acceptance of which was refused by the Emperor.

INDIA.—The Calcutta mail of the 5th of July had been telegraphed. The European troops were accepting their discharges in large numbers.

The mutineers at [illegible] had returned to duty except 40 of the leaders who will be court martialed.

The papers received by the Asia contain the following details of news:

ENGLAND.—In the House of Lords, on the 5th inst., the Marquis of Normanby gave notice of his intention to put a question as to the terms of peace which were under discussion prior to the treaty of Villa Franca.

The Earl of Granville announced that the Government intended to adhere to the principle on which the national system of education in Ireland had hitherto been conducted.

The threatening strike in the building trade in London daily becomes more serious, and it was found that on the day the Asia sailed there would be 40,000 operatives in the trade unemployed. A great number of meetings had been held in Hyde Park, and a determination evinced to abide by the nine hour movement. The employers had likewise held a meeting, and resolved to resist the demands.

FRANCE.—It is stated that the French Government had definitely resolved to employ in works of public utility, the one hundred and fifty millions francs which remains unexpended of the late loan.

The Paris Bourse had been generally firm and animated. On the 5th there was considerable buoyancy and the market closed at an advance of ½.

AUSTRIA.—A ministerial crisis is said to have been impending owing to conflicting opinions on the question of reform.

A denial is given to the statement in Le Nord of the pretended interview between the Emperor of Austria and the King of Sardinia at Villa Franca.

The Vienna Gazette contains the ordinances revoking the restrictions which were imposed on commerce on account of the war, the interdiction to the export of horses and mules is however maintained.

STATE OF TRADE.

The Manchester advices are favorable, the market for goods closing quiet but steady.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 5.—Richardson & Spence quote weather favorable for the crops and the market closes with a declining tendency. Flour dull but steady. Wheat very dull.

LIVERPOOL, Saturday, Aug. 6th—Noon.—Breadstuffs close dull. Provisions are also dull. Wheat has declined 3@3d. Corn is easier, but quotations unchanged for European; mixed and yellow at 5s 6d@6s 1d. White 7s @7s 6d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET, Aug. 5.—The market is dull. Beef heavy, but there is an improved feeling, and holders are pressing on the market; quotations are 2s 6d lower. Pork dull and quotations nominal; bacon dull but steady. Lard steady and in more demand; sales at 54s@56s.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET.—Potashes steady at 27@27s 6d pearls steady at 28s 6d. Sugar dull. Coffee quiet.

LONDON MARKET.—Messrs. Baring quote breadstuffs very dull and quotations barely maintained. Welsh iron rails steady at £6 5s. Sugar heavy. Rice quiet. American securities are unchanged. State stocks in good demand.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, August 6.—The money market is decidedly stringent but closes active. Consols closed 95½. The bullion in the bank of England has decreased £132,000.

FRANCE.—PARIS, Friday morning.—The Moniteur of this morning contains the following: A deputation of Venetians presented an address to the French Minister at Turin, intended for the Emperor, and in which was contained a protestation on the part of the provinces of Venetia, against the direct and indirect domination of Austria in that part of Italy. The Minister, we are informed, accepted the document, but said not a word in reply.

The Patrie says, according to a letter from Florence, it is supposed that Garibaldi would take command of the Tuscan army. The same journal further states the Emperor Napoleon will visit the camp at Chalons.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says it is expected that the Moniteur will, in a day or two, publish a note in reference to the French conference which will confirm assurance of pacific disposition of the Government.

SARDINIA.—M. De Simbrois, of Piedmont, has arrived at Zurich. The official journal of Lombardy denies the report published by certain papers as to the object of the mission of Count Reiset, and states that the French diplomatic agent has received such instructions from his government as are favorable to the wishes of Italy.

The disturbances at Cremona have not been of a political character. In the Duchy of Modena the great concourse of electors have inscribed their votes.

AUSTRIA AND ROME.—The Daily News publishes, for the first time, a translation of the convention concluded between the Papal Government and Austrian General commanding the army of occupation at Bologna, in 1850. The army maintenance of the Pope's authority was not only committed to the Austrian Generals, but the highest judicial powers were attributed to him. To the tender mercies of the Haynaus were left the trial and sentence of men charged with political offenses of every degree.

Farina, the dictator of Modena, in a second proclamation, says, "Let the confused followers of the foreigners menace us, and I shall resolutely employ all the means at my disposal to defend the national defense."

The presidency of the proposed conference is a fruitful topic of discussion in the continental journals. The Suisse declares itself opposed to the assumption of that office by the Pope. Nothing, it thinks, can be gained by accepting any advantage of elevation or dignity to the papal power.

A correspondent to the Univers gives the following as the substance of the answer of his Holiness to the Emperor Napoleon's proposition:

"Pius IX. thanks the Emperor of the French for the interest which he unceasingly displays for the Holy See, and the person of the Pope. He regards it as an instance of the Emperor's filial devotion to the proposition relative to the honorable presidency of a confederation or Italian league, and he would not refuse that post without having the most ample information respecting the engagements which would result from it, and the relations which would exist between the various Italian Sovereigns. When he has procured such information he will be able to see whether Catholic interests permit him to accept it; and in that case the pacification of Italy and the return of its rebellious provinces will naturally have to precede the establishment of that confederation and of the honorary presidency."

The Austrian Gazette states that Cardinal Antonelli has presented a scheme of an Italian confederation, consisting of a sort of Mutual Assurance Association of the Italian Governments, destined to replace the Austrian protectorate. The object of the confederation is declared to be to control revolution wherever it may show itself, and to fortify the Governments in such a way that they may annihilate all revolutionary proceedings.

It is proposed that each State taking part in the confederation shall have a representative at Rome deputed to the Holy Father, and all the envoys united shall form the Federal Diet, which shall be charged to watch over the security of the territory of the Confederation, by fixing the military contingent and the force of the garrisons of the federal fortresses, and which shall also discuss the territorial changes and treaties which may be concluded between the members of the confederation in so far as these treaties shall concern the general interest.

The Pope has condemned to death seven of the inhabitants of Perugia, for participation in the disorders which took place in that city on the 14th of June. The accused, however, have been judged by default, and it is most unlikely they will be found when wanting.

There is, it appears, to be a French occupation of Italy, temporary according to present declarations, but the fortunes of war may transform it to permanency.

The Belgian Independent says that besides the troops of the division Trochel, charged with the occupation of Parma and Modena, the division [illegible] is to proceed to Rome, and division Uhrich to Milan. France is thus to keep 50,000 men in the Peninsula. Austria on its side appears disposed to maintain its army on a respectable footing in Venetia.

The Journal De Frankfort affirms that in consequence of the complications which prevail in Italy the Emperor has resolved only to withdraw from Venetia the fourth battalion of 22 regiments of infantry, so that the forces assembled in that country will be diminished by only 25,000 men.

The Liverpool Times says: A very remarkable circumstance is now exciting some emotion in Germany, and it will shortly excite a still greater amount of interest in the United States. Every one knows the immense number of German emigrants who find their way to the Union. Most of them, it is needless to state, in a condition far removed from affluence; but however poor they may be when they leave home, they generally return to their native country in after years in very comfortable circumstances.

As their lot is cast amongst Republicans, and as they wish to have a voice in the making of the laws which govern them, these German emigrants become in the majority of cases naturalized Americans. It seems that a native of Hanover, who stands in this position, has recently returned to the country of his birth, was draughted into the militia and compelled to do military service. He refused, pleaded the terms of his adopted country, and applied for protection to the American consul. The American Government has taken up the subject warmly, and has peremptorily demanded his release. It has done more than this. It has caused similar requisitions to be made upon the other German Governments, who are made to understand that American citizens cannot be called upon to submit to the dictates of arbitrary rule.

The German powers, however distasteful as it may be to them, will give way, and they will respect the rights of those German-Americans who return from the far west with a handsome amount of dollars, with which to pass the evening of their days in their native country. It is a remarkable that there is no great power in the world with so small an army and navy as the United States, and yet which makes itself more feared and respected abroad.

There is no prospect of a settlement of the differences between the builders and their men. About 200 of the largest builders have joined the Defense Association, and probably the 40,000 men they employ will be discharged on Saturday, unless they agree to the conditions now laid down. Both parties are confident of victory. The masters anticipate abundant labor from the provinces, which the men say they cannot get.

The operatives, on the other hand, expect general support from all the trades throughout the Kingdom, and boast that they can remain on strikes for six weeks upon their own resources, without calling for assistance from their own or from other societies. The Gas companies' strike has ceased.

INDIA.—The French Consul at Aden has been murdered, while transacting business on the opposite coast.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

NEW YORK, August 15.—The steamship City of Baltimore, from Liverpool, on the 3d inst., and Queenstown on the 4th, arrived at this port at 6 o'clock this evening, too late to dispatch her mails and newspaper packages to the South.

A brief summary of her advices has been already published, having been obtained off Cape Race.

The following dispatch, which was received at Queenstown on the moment of her departure, furnishes advices one day later than those brought by the Vanderbilt.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—Telegrams from Paris say the French Adriatic squadron had returned to Toulon. Troops from Italy were arriving at Marseilles. The funeral rites over the French and Sardinian soldiers who fell in the cause of Italy were performed at Turin on the 3d.

A dispatch from Bologna says, the Sardinian Commissioner, the Marquis D. Azeglio, had issued a proclamation announcing his recall, and recommending the people to remain tranquil, and promising, in the name of Victor Emanuel, to endeavor to obtain the concurrence of the European governments for accomplishing their just and reasonable wishes.

The minister had convoked the National Assembly. Perfect order prevails.

The threatened strike in the building trade at London was becoming serious. A meeting of several thousand workmen was held at Hyde Park, and speeches were made of an uncompromising character.

NEW YORK, August 15.—A. Titus, wholesale grocer, has absconded. His liabilities amount to $100,000.

The steamers Arizona and Indianola, from Brazos have arrived, with $500,000 in specie, and advices from Brownsville to the 4th inst. An epidemic fever was prevailing. Troops were organizing in northern Mexico.

ST. LOUIS, August 15.—Leavenworth City voted to-day to loan its credit for $100,000 for a railroad to Fort Riley, if sufficient subscriptions are guaranteed to justify the immediate prosecution of the work.

WASHINGTON, August 16.—The extensive machine, blacksmiths and sawing shops of the Capitol Extension Works were destroyed by a fire which commenced about half past three o'clock this morning. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained, but it is supposed to have been accidental. The buildings were comparatively of little value, but the machinery contained in them were very expensive, including the lathe for turning the immense stone columns for the public building, powerful engines and tools. A large quantity of costly marble, finished and unfinished, has also been destroyed. The loss is variously estimated at from 30 to $40,000. There was no insurance upon any portion of it.

ST. LOUIS, August 16.—Leavenworth dates by the Denver City Express to the 9th inst. arrived this morning. A nugget weighing fifty six pennyweights was taken from the Nevada gulch. Rich diggings were discovered at the head waters of the Bayou Salado. Extravagant reports continued from Colorado. A new paper issued in Mountain city, states that the convention sitting at Auroria had adjourned, having framed a state constitution; the features are not given. The boundaries are in the latitude of 37° to 43° longitude. The vote on the division stood one hundred and two to ten. As to the propriety of the State organization the convention voted to submit the question of territorial or state organization at the same time.

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—The agents of the four trunk lines have agreed upon an advanced freight schedule to take effect to-day. The advance is on 1st and 2nd class western bound freight, on a basis of $1 35 to Cincinnati and $1 60 to St. Louis, for first class. We hear that a convention is to be held at Niagara some time this week or next, for the purpose of establishing a permanent arrangement, when the present preliminary schedule will be confirmed, if not further advanced.

NEW YORK, August 16.—The Herald to-day published a list in detail of all messages sent over the Atlantic Cable during the few weeks it was in working order. The list fills seven columns. That journal foots up as follows, four hundred messages, containing forty-three hundred and fifty-nine words, or 23,220 letters.

WASHINGTON, August 16.—Letters from Juarez, for the Constitutional government, just received here, allude with great satisfaction to the favor with which the decree for the nationalization of Church property was everywhere received, even in the city of Mexico.

The visit of Capt. Oldham, commander of her Majesty's naval forces, to the President, is mentioned with gratification, as on that occasion he took pleasure in announcing that by order of the British Government he would not enforce the measures heretofore contemplated for the redress of complaints, nor do anything to embarrass the administration.

Gen. De Folledo, at San Luis Potosi, has, it is supposed, about 9,000 troops under his command, preparing to march on the city of Mexico. Arms and ammunition are constantly being received by the Liberals.

Senor Mata, who had just returned from New York, has concluded a contract for munitions of war, which will, without unnecessary delay, be forwarded to Mexico.

Mr. Whitehead, who was banished from Mexico, where he resided for many years, will soon return to England in behalf of the British bondholders, and will exert himself to satisfy all their claims, the Church property being the basis for the transaction, and by which it is thought millions of dollars will be secured for the benefit of the Constitutional Government. It is not expected that Lerdo will make any pecuniary engagements in New York, [illegible] merely take preliminary steps to that end to be submitted to his government for consideration.

His contemplated visit to President Buchanan and Secretary Cass, with a view to have a full and free talk on Mexican affairs, will doubtless have the effect of facilitating the negotiations of a treaty satisfactory to both governments. Otway, the British Minister, was at the last accounts in Mexico, the dispatches for his recall not having been received. There is [illegible] information in this city to justify the assertion that the vacancy thus occasioned will be filled by a successor friendly to the Juarez government.

NEW YORK, August 16.—The statement of Mr. Seward as published in to-day's Herald contains an interesting fact connected with the working of the Atlantic Cable. It appears that the sum of $236,000 was saved by the British Government by being able to inform the Canadian authorities that two regiments of Canadian troops which had been ordered to England were not needed. The expenses attending their shipment were thus saved. This fact should be sufficient to set at rest the doubts of skeptics.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 16.—The grand military encampment at East Liberty, near Pittsburgh excites general interest. Fourteen volunteer companies from this and adjoining counties are in camp. Others are expected. The encampment is under the command of Brigadier Gen. Wagley. It will continue till Friday.

LOUISVILLE, August 16.—The Memphis overland mail [illegible] has arrived. [illegible]

OSWEGO, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The [illegible] grain elevator owned by Fitch & Carrington, was entirely destroyed by fire [illegible] with the exception of the engine building. The warehouse contained 130,000 bushels of Chicago spring wheat and corn. The loss is estimated at $150,000, which is insured mainly in New York insurance Companies. A Canadian schooner, the Mary, which was lying at the warehouse wharf, was also badly damaged.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—A two-mile race in harness between Flora Temple and Princess for a purse of $1,000, came off yesterday over the Union course, the former won two straight heats. Time, 4 min. 50½ seconds, 5 min 5 seconds.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—[illegible] the duty of the Department to adopt such measures as the law may suggest to put an end to this practice.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17.—The barque [illegible], which sailed from Porto Cabello on the 1st inst., brings letters and papers of that date, from which we learn that Gen. Falcon, heading the revolutionary party, was a few miles below Porto Cabello with [illegible] men and having joined with the forces of [illegible], was preparing to make an attack upon the place, which is well barricaded and supported by 200 government troops and the national militia. The two main streets of the city are protected by six pieces of artillery, and it is said if the revolutionary party should succeed it will be after some hard fighting. The government vessels never started out to prevent his landing until after he was safe ashore. One of Falcon's vessels was taken, and the other one broken to pieces. Since landing, General Falcon had had free communication with his friends in Porto Bello. A plan for his assistance had been fixed, but the arrest of some of his accomplices prevented the treachery from being carried out.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 18.—Advices from Leavenworth state that the Democratic territorial convention at Topeka, yesterday, nominated S. W. Johnson for Congress.

The sales of the Government mules at Utah was completed. They brought very high prices.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 18.—A despatch to the Republican says that the Salt Lake mail reached Atchison yesterday.

Captain Hooper, formerly Secretary of the territory, was nominated for Congress, [illegible].

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 18.—Mons. Blondin crossed the river on his rope yesterday with a man on his back. During the performance a row occurred and a man 60 years of age was thrown over the river bank and killed. The deceased's name was Caldwell.

MR. BUCHANAN AND THE NEXT PRESIDENCY.—Since the published declaration of Mr. Buchanan that he is not in the field for the next Presidency, the editor of the Buffalo Republic says: "The denial is true in one sense. Mr. Buchanan is not a candidate, but expects to get the nomination," and within ten days he so said, adding: "The Democratic party is lost, unless it nominate me at Charleston, for no other man can be elected but me." The editor says that if any office holder wishes to test the fact, let him make himself very busy, for about three days, in favor of any candidate. This is a simple experiment; will not some of our own federal officials, for the sake of settling a great public question just try it?

A CINCINNATI EDITOR AT WASHINGTON.—A special Washington dispatch, August 17, to the New York Herald, says:

Banks, of Virginia, formerly of the [illegible] Democrat, but now editing the Cincinnati Enquirer, is here, rapidly electioneering for Douglas, and for printing jobbery in general, under the next administration. He is an accomplished button-hole bargainer for government pickings, a veteran lobbyer, though but a boy in appearance, and derives some consideration from his association with [illegible] Wendell during the last session of Congress.

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE, author of "Home, Sweet Home," is buried at Tunis. The following lines are inscribed on his tomb:

Sure when thy gentle spirit fled
To realms beyond the azure dome,
With arms outstretched, God's angels said,
"Welcome to Heaven's Home, Sweet Home."

The deaf-mutes of Boston and vicinity are moving for an application to the Massachusetts Legislature for the establishment of a Deaf and Dumb Asylum in that state. The only institution of the kind now available for the deaf mutes of New England is the Asylum at Hartford.

Wesley B. Fisher, who was to be executed at Ottawa, Illinois, on the 17th inst., has been granted a respite of four weeks by the Governor, at the request of Judge Caton. The case was before the Judge on appeal and he desired longer time to investigate it.

"Joe, why were you out so late last night?"

"It wasn't so very late—only a quarter of twelve."

"How dare you sit there and tell me that lie? I was awake when you came, and looked at my watch—it was three o'clock."

"Well, isn't three a quarter of 12?"

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
THURSDAY, AUGUST 25, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES W. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

Lease of the Public Works.

The Ohio State "Journal" of the 19th says:

"The State made a water-haul yesterday. The notice was given in the time prescribed, but no bids were made and no securities deposited for bidders. Several canal men were here, anxiously met to consult on the feasibility of taking a lease, but the result shows that they decided that a lease under the law was impracticable. The alternative, proposed by our neighbor, of offering a bid on personal security, and then asking the Court for a mandamus ordering the Board to let on that security, was not adopted, simply, we presume, because no responsible men could afford to take the canals on the terms specified, even without security. Thus endeth all the labors of the extra session."

The "Statesman" claims that the Board of Public Works is responsible for the failure to lease. In hunting for excuses for coming out of the little end of the horn it [illegible] ing expectations, the "Statesman" ridiculously charges that the Canal Board imposed other conditions than those of the law touching bids, and therefore the canal men would not bite.

Because the canals remain the charge of the State authorities, the Ohio "Statesman" hints at a special session of the Legislature, a calamity from which Heaven forefend the people of Ohio. A third dose of the same democratic [illegible] would finish the awfully bored and bled Buckeye State.—[Cleveland Leader.

We reproduce the above as furnishing several suggestions which should claim the attention of the community.

Even at this distant time, the traps are being laid for disposing of the Public Works. We believe they should continue in the hands of the State, and should be kept in thorough repair; for, to be useful, temporary and [illegible] with [illegible]. The idea of deriving a revenue from the canals should be abandoned. We might as well calculate on revenues from our streets and public wells. They were constructed for the benefit of the people, who had no natural avenue to commerce and trade, and [illegible] to [illegible] the most genial soil, or mines of wealth to be digged from the bowels of the earth. They have paid back their original cost more than ten fold—they still add to the revenue incidentally, and to fill them up and dispense with them altogether would be found a serious inconvenience by those who have planted their farms upon the margins and avail themselves of the constant flow of waters for all farm purposes.

They should be managed with strict economy, and in time the hostile feeling, of which demagogues have taken advantage, will wear away. In good seasons they will pay, but revenue is not to be expected, when there is nothing to ship and business of every description languishes. But surely it is not important to the State, what we have [illegible] repeated, that a private company [illegible] them and conduct them profitably. No matter what might be their mode of operation, it should not be so much a secret as to [illegible] concealed from the knowledge of those whose public duty it is to conduct the public works to the best advantage for the interests of the State.

We did not [illegible] much to inquire about the proposed leasing. We were long [illegible] the "Statesman," [illegible] which passed the Legislature, did not suit the canal contractors, who were to become the lessees and again have the public works under their control. Suppose they did not make money out of the canals themselves, is [illegible] controlling the Legislature, they might from other [illegible] make up whatever deficiency might arise from leases sustained in this. Besides, could not a convenient and willing Legislature make good such losses by freely contributing from the public revenue? It would be but fair reciprocity, for would not the Legislature themselves, or a majority of them, be indebted to this private company for their seats? We know how some young and thoughtless Democrats were caught by the glare of the false light held out, that to dispose of the canals as desired, whether by contract or lease, would inure to the lasting benefit of the Democratic party. Large promises were made of immediate benefits to accrue. Hamilton county was to be redeemed, and placed once more in her good old Democratic mother's arms and a great deal more of such nonsense was pledged. The "Statesman" was both urgent and clamorous that it was a Democratic measure to restore the contracts, though clearly shown to be inexpedient, if not unconstitutional. Prominent Democrats were abused and read out of the party, because they would not see with the eyes of interested newspapers and politicians. The contracts were not renewed. We had been opposed to their renewal in the first place, but when they had been decided unconstitutional, we were clearly of opinion that it would be fatal to the Democratic party to restore them, no matter what bargain was to be made or what great benefit was promised. Inventions return sometimes "to plague the inventors," and our Democracy could not bring itself to any such compact. Although we are partisans enough to use every legitimate appliance to secure or carry an election, we were not willing to build up in this State a third power to be [illegible] for good or bad, which might by [illegible] laborers on the canals, control the election in every uncertain county on the lines. We are opposed to secret combinations in any and every shape—they are inimical to the nature and genius of our government, and though they [illegible] the present, who can divine where they may be in the future?

Our Townstreet cotemporary, the "State Journal," which acquitted a good deal at the [illegible], and annoyed the intent and urgent "Statesman" (which did not know exactly how to take its [illegible] agile ally, who kept skipping about like a French dancing master, until the other gave up [illegible] and ill humor [illegible]) concludes its [illegible] paragraph by saying, "thus endeth all the labors of the extra session." Passing by the inelegance of the expression, whose want of grammatical symmetry would have appeared more natural in the "Statesman," we challenge its correctness in other respects. "All the labors of the extra session" were not confined to that single act, although during the session there was a respectable number of lobbyers, who were intent on getting possession of the Public Works. There were two or three other important measures proposed, and, if we mistake not, were put through. One of them deserves to be remembered. It was known as the Nigger Law, and carried out the provision of the Constitution that the elective franchise shall only be exercised by a white male citizen of the United States. We showed, in a former article, that every Republican member of the House, except Williams, of Warren, and every Republican member of the Senate, without exception, voted against the bill, which was sustained and passed by Democratic votes, not one Democrat being found against it. This law has been decided unconstitutional by two Republican Judges—Foote of Cuyahoga, and Carpenter of Lorain, and will probably come before Judges Brinkerhoff and Sutliff for ratification. So this is one of "the labors of the extra session" that is not at an end.

There were several others to which we might call the attention of the "State Journal," and may on some other occasion, but we have extended this article sufficiently already. Besides, there is a remark by the "Leader" which [illegible] the suggestion that an extra session of the Legislature may be necessary. We do not think it at all probable. When the Treasury was depleted by unscrupulous scoundrels, and the private securities placed in the public treasury as the basis of banking, had been not only tampered with, but removed,—when every indication of the Constitution pointed his duty to Gov. Chase to call an extra session of a Republican Legislature, he would not do it. About half of the July instalment on the public debt had to be provided for, and the Legislature is the only authority to make provision therefor by special appropriation. Yet Gov. Chase undertook the labors of the Legislature, and received the approbation of his party. His usurpation of powers not conferred by the Constitution was compared to some of the resolute performances of General Jackson, and he was lauded for taking the responsibility.

Since that time, however, a new lesson has been instituted, and the law known as the Sub Treasury law, upon which a good deal of labor was performed during the extra session, now withholds the power from either Governor or any other officer of State of applying any moneys to any purpose to which they shall not have been specifically appropriated. A great deal of effort was made by the Republican members to procure a quietus for some $16,000 so applied without law, and some Democrats were clearly of opinion that it ought to have been granted; but the stand was made for the purpose of putting a stop to the application of moneys without appropriation which led to the Treasury disaster from which Ohio will not with all her recuperative energy, entirely recover in many years.

Well, the only demand for an extra session, is the fact that an error was made in copying the appropriation bill for the Public Works, by which but $1,000 was allowed for one of the sub-divisions, when it should have been $41,000. Now whether the Governor thinks that the Board and the Treasurer of State can get over this clerical error, without the intervention of the Legislature, or not, he has not vouchsafed to inform us. Perhaps he will let that go with the $16,000 expended in a similar way, to be quieted by a Republican Legislature, if the State should be so unfortunate as to have one. This will be an incentive too to the Republicans to be up and doing "all along the line" for otherwise by the construction of the sub treasury law, if any of this $40,000 should be paid out, even for necessary expenditures on the public Works, it is rendered obligatory upon Democrats to hold that such payment is without law or authority and that the Treasurer of State and his sureties are personally liable. We believe from all the facts, that there will be no extra session; but if we had a Governor more scrupulously exact in going in conformity to law, we should doubtless have one.

Explanation.

The name of Stephen A. Douglas has been printed in the "Watchman" for some months as the choice of its editor for President in 1860.—Mr. Douglas was our first choice for President in 1856, and the course since that time has serv'd to enlist our sympathies still more warmly in his favor, but we cannot conceive that we should contribute anything to his nomination by the mere act of keeping his name at the head of our paper as a candidate. Besides, we expect to turn our attention more particularly, for some time, to the canvass now going on in Ohio, at the close of which we hope to celebrate a glorious victory over the common enemy. We shall then be prepared to labor with our own friends for the nomination of Stephen A. Douglas, and that secured; we shall certainly celebrate the still more glorious event of wiping from the face of the earth the last vestige of Black Republicanism!—[Circleville Watchman.

We congratulate friend Kees on the decided improvement he has made in the "Watchman," which displays both tact and talent, except in hauling down the colors in the very battle-tide, which this certainly is. It is vain to talk about putting off the "labor with our own friends for the nomination of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS" until after the present canvass is over. To be sure we know Kees to be unequivocally and irrevocably "a Douglas man" until the "Little Giant" shall be President, but what time so propitious as the present to speak in unmistakable language the voice of Ohio for STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS! His name is one to kindle enthusiasm. It awakens the responsive chord. It is associated with too many Democratic memories ever to fail as a watchword. When all the elements of opposition are combining here as elsewhere, against him, as the most formidable candidate for the Presidency,—in fact as the only Democratic candidate who can be elected; is it not a time to declare in his favor? Say that "his name is never heard," while this canvass progresses, except connected with obloquy and reproach; have you no word to spare in his behalf? What if every Democratic press in Ohio were to follow your example, would that improve the chances of Douglas after this canvass is over—would it improve the chances of the State ticket in this canvass itself? Let it be imagined that any combination could prevent Douglas from getting the vote of Ohio in Convention, and what would become of the State ticket? Come, be frank, and open and manly like Douglas himself. Do not fall into the miserable policy of the "Statesman" which did manage to publish Douglas's letter to Peyton, but without a word of approbation, or indeed any indication one way or another. Call you that backing your friends? You know it has been claimed, by some of the "editors" that the "Statesman" men are the best friends Douglas has in the State, and this they do not deny. Silence is said to give consent. Now, we hold that it is impossible to support Buchanan in his hostility to Douglas, or even to wink at it, and be a warm friend of Douglas. We may yield our assent to all the good we find in his administration, and touch as lightly as possible on mistakes, but for one, we cannot and will not fold our arms and see the energies of an administration which for its very existence, owes more to Mr. Douglas than to any other man living or dead, employed ruthlessly and unsparingly for his destruction.

We say that it is important to the Democracy of Ohio to sustain Mr. Douglas—to sustain him now. The fuss made by Wise shows the elements at work to defeat him. It is not so all-important that Mr. Douglas should be elected as it is that he should be the candidate of the Democratic party, because he is the only Democrat who can be elected, and if nominated he will be elected. But he stands by Democratic principles. He is not carried away after false gods. He stands in one place so that he may be counted. This it is which renders it important he should be the nominee. He stands by the platform which we all endorsed. Tear that up, and what becomes of our party? Broken and discomfited and scattered, without a head. It would sink like other factions, to be gathered no more under the same old, time-worn glorious banner which witnessed Democratic triumphs under Jefferson and Jackson. This is no time to be misled by a subtile and wily policy to hold still our voices for STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS—that it would be dangerous now. No, rather let us say to Douglas:

KENTUCKY ONCE MORE.—It is said that in the Fourth District, Chrisman's majority is 13 which, gives the Democrats 5, and the opposition 5 members of Congress.

Magoffin's majority is 9,169, all official but two counties, reliably reported.

In the Senate, Democrats 24; opposition 14; Democratic majority, 10. In the House, Democrats 59; opposition 41; Democratic majority, 18; being 28 majority on joint ballot.

The Statesman and County Commissioner.

The Statesman has with the most determined [illegible] and hostility, pursued Mr. SPARROW, (indulging in every species of vituperation and abuse,) since his appointment as Commissioner of Franklin County. It has resorted to all the artifice of which it is capable, to misrepresent him, and to place him in a false position. With one breath, it calls upon the Democracy of other counties to be harmonious, to be cordial to each other, to permit no personal differences to interfere with the "great cause," and attempts to produce division, dissatisfaction and dissention in the party in this county. Not confining itself to the truth, it resorts to every species of low and malignant cunning to subserve its purpose. The hostility to Mr. SPARROW is deep seated. It springs from hate—black, malignant hate, such as a man like MILLER can entertain. Mr. SPARROW was Postmaster, and MILLER wanted the Post-office. Through COX's aid and art he obtained it. COX was pretending all the time to be Mr. SPARROW's friend, and giving him assurances that no change would be made in the Post-office, here, when at the same time he was imploring the President to make it. Here commenced the hate entertained for Mr. SPARROW. They hate him as the vicious and depraved always hate the virtuous and elevated. They hate him because he is respected in the community for his integrity and honor. And this is the reason the Statesman pursues him with so much rancor, and is brought to confess that "under no circumstances could we (the Statesman,) have defended the appointment of Mr. SPARROW." Strong language that, after admitting his qualifications!

After using its skill in efforts to disparage Mr. SPARROW, the Statesman charged that he was canvassing for Commissioner on the grounds that he would use his place to increase the tax on the country property in order to diminish the tax on city property—a more paltry fabrication could not have been devised. But the Statesman says the idea originated in the People's Press, in which was given as a reason for Mr. SPARROW's appointment as Commissioner, that it was desirable to have a Commissioner from the city, that the city interests might be more carefully attended to, and the equalization of taxation be adjusted with scrupulous fairness. This paper certainly held out no such idea as that Mr. SPARROW would impose an unequal burden on country property that the city property might be comparatively exempt; it merely approved of the appointment of Mr. SPARROW, and expressed the confidence entertained that he would do exact justice in discharging the duties of his office. The county could not ask for more—the city could not with propriety yield any more. The ears of the editor of the Statesman must have tingled, and his face crimsoned, if there be the remnant of a blush left, when, the following note was handed him:

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OHIO STATESMAN:—In your paper of this morning a person signing himself "A Democratic Farmer," says:

"That Mr. Sparrow was specially selected to take care of the interest of the City, and to equalize the assessment of real estate, by increasing the value on the farms, and reducing it on the city property, and that he is also a candidate for nomination urging his claims on that ground."

I am authorized by Judge Albery, Auditor Phillips and Recorder Cole to say that they appointed me, to the vacancy in the office of County Commissioner, for no such purpose as is alleged by your correspondent. That no such motive or consideration influenced them in making the appointment. That they would not have appointed me had they supposed me capable of any such act of official injustice.

As a member of a Board of five persons, three of whom reside in the country, it will be my duty, on the 6th of next month, to assist in equalizing the valuation of the real estate of the county, made by the different Township and City Assessors.

The law requires each member of the County Board of Equalization to take an oath "fairly and impartially to equalize" the value of the real estate of the county. In the discharge of my duties as a member of that Board I shall indeavor to represent the whole county. The Democratic principle is equal and exact justice to all men.

The assertion that I am "urging my claims" to a nomination on the ground that I will increase the valuation of the country property and reduce it on the city property is a very great mistake. I have never urged my claims on any such grounds.

The equalization of the property of the county will be completed some time before the October election. It will be subject to public inspection. I could hardly urge my claims to an election, if I should show any partiality in the discharge of my duties.

Respectfully,
August 20. THOMAS SPARROW.

☞ The Lima (Ohio) "Democrat" has an article expressing its preference for Vice-President Breckinridge as the next Democratic Presidential candidate. It thinks the nomination ought to go to the South, both as a matter of justice and policy.—[Frankfort Yeoman.

We laid aside the liberal Democratic article of friend M'Kenzie of the Lima, "National," (not Democrat,) with the intention of expressing our own views. It was entitled to a respectful consideration, as a contingency might render the nomination of Mr. BRECKINRIDGE desirable, but in the present aspect of political affairs it is not a probable event. Mr. BRECKINRIDGE is a prudent, accomplished, eloquent statesman, and most amiable gentleman,—he is a friend of Mr. DOUGLAS, and maintains the same national policy, and would be no more acceptable to the extreme Southern, than Mr. DOUGLAS himself. But would he be as acceptable to the North? If the political parties were governed by justice alone, and there were an understanding that the North and South should alternately be entitled to the chief executive officer, we know no man in the South whom we should prefer to Mr. BRECKINRIDGE. But our convictions are that no man, North or South, has at this present time the hold on the affections of the people of all sections, possessed by Mr. DOUGLAS. He is identified with the great political issues subscribed to and sustained by the Democratic party. His nomination would be tantamount to an election; and his election would secure a vigorous, intelligent and patriotic administration, and peace, quiet and security to the country.

☞ Edward Foster, Esq., of Williams county, has been nominated for Senator in the 32d Senatorial District, consisting of Allen, Auglaize, Defiance, Mercer, Paulding, Van Wert and Williams.

The Cincinnati "Gazette," in an article upon "Mexico—[illegible] social state alien to slavery without intervention," has the following striking passage:

"The revolutions or political disturbances in Mexico are—whether avowedly so or not—wars of caste. They grow out of conflicting social and civil ideas, which are the effect of the intermixture and partial amalgamation of people of different races upon the same soil—aggravated by the state of nominal political equality which obtains in that country. The most important practical question to be solved, is when they are to cease—and the most difficult also; for, numerous as they have been, it is not easy to discover that any advance has been made toward a state of permanent quietude through their assistance. During the last thirty years the Republic has enjoyed the service of presidents at the rate of something more than one per annum; without having any who was able to keep his place, much less distinguish himself by a vigorous and capable administration.

To those who have been accustomed only to witness the phenomena of societies composed of homogeneous materials, and working under the constraining influence of a stable government and a regular administration, it is difficult to conceive a state of anarchy such as exists in a country whose people are drawn from races differing widely in character, temperament and appearance, and still more widely, if possible, in their respective degrees of civilization. The representatives of cultivation and barbarism not only placed in juxtaposition, but in a condition of constrained political, and, in some sense, social equality, present contrasts of feeling, and opinion and conduct, so palpably inimical to established order upon the basis of principle, that any hope of the creation of permanent institutions, would seem to be totally out of the question."

This brings home to the Republican party the great object of their organization—the equality of the races—their natural enjoyment of political rights, and as a natural consequence their occupying the same social level.

Look at the christian(?) Anti-slavery Convention that assembled here last week, and examine the tenets it sought to inculcate. The slave-holder was denounced as worse than a murderer. The equality of human rights was distinctly asserted. The negro was held to be entitled to an equal participation in the government. It was not set forth there that the negro and white race were not homogeneous; and being incongruous, the distinction between the races should be observed. The argument of the Cincinnati "Gazette" goes to show most conclusively that Mexico is involved in inextricable difficulty, because, the proper regard was not had for caste, and the imbecility and inferior population was produced by a similar amalgamation to that which is inculcated by Republicanism. That which has given us stability as a government, and won the admiration of "the rest of mankind," has been the reluctance of the Anglo-Saxon to mingle with an inferior race, and the distinction of caste which has been so resolutely preserved.

Who would reduce this country, prospering and progressing under the blessings of its philosophical government, to the status of Mexico, divided and distracted by the conglomeration of castes, admitted by the "Gazette" to be the cause of all the commotions and dissentions which have rendered what might be one of the fairest lands on earth, a scene of anarchy and discord, of cowardly ruffianism and murder—its fields scantly cultivated—its homes without their angels—its cities the constant scenes of military despotism, of riot, of vice and debauchery?

We ask the sensible and unimpassioned, the contemplative and serious of the Gazette's party, to ponder well what it says of the difficulties of reducing to social equality of position, and to a political level, those who are not homogeneous, but differ as widely "in temperament, in character and appearance" as the white man and negro. It is time the inculcation of equality in the races had ceased; and we call upon the Gazette to put its shoulder to the wheel and turn back its own party from attempting to precipitate such a catastrophe. Just as sure as there can be no hope of 'permanent institutions' in Mexico, there can be no hope of permanent institutions, of progress and prosperity in this country, if the Republican party should prevail and their undenied effort to secure negro equality is carried out.

SCANDAL-OUS.—A depraved woman, or "one more unfortunate," who was supposed to be reputable, and whose husband is in easy circumstances in this county, was last week ascertained to have been guilty of numerous amours; and the fact was announced to the public for the gratification of that morbid appetite for scandal so prevalent here as elsewhere. One who should have more closely observed the precepts of his divine Master, employed his knowledge of the circumstances, to contribute to the newspaper readers sundry hints and insinuations calculated to throw suspicion on certain individuals, as having had some connection with the scandal. Not content with a single communication, he multiplied his hypocritical cant about public morals, while he was contributing his utmost to their injury. Did he covet to create difficulties in families, and bring misery and sorrow upon the innocent? Like many another vain fool, he flies to the newspaper to propagate scandal, and express his holy horror at the proclivity of man to sin. As a clergyman, it was his duty, if he became aware of a vicious course being carried on by acquaintances, to give information in the proper quarter, and not fly to the newspaper, which too often lends itself to those "sensation" articles, which must disgust the sensible and refined, however they may stimulate the grosser taste of the vicious and vulgar.

Since the foregoing was written and in type, we have conversed with Dr. ——, who was an attending physician of the unfortunate female, and he assured us that there was no question of her periodical, if not confirmed insanity, which explains much that would otherwise appear very mysterious in her conduct. This of itself should stay the assassin-hands that would strike dagger after dagger into reputation, and keep society on the rack.

☞ Our agreeable and observant St. Louis correspondent again jots down current events in the Mound City. How can one forego the gratification of being a guest at that magnificent "Fair," which will surpass in splendor everything of the kind that has been yet invented!

Who are Democrats?

The people of Franklin county have more than once asked themselves, "Have we a Democratic organ among us?" The impossibility of the reconcilement of its [illegible], in crookeding or straightening to the line of the Statesman, has been, time after time, made apparent. The antecedents of the proprietors and editors are well known,—their selfishness and easy political virtue properly appreciated; but it was supposed that, placed in a high and responsible station, such as conductors of the central organ of a great party, they would sink a part of that narrow, grasping consideration of self, in the endeavor to advance especially the interest of the party. But it was a slender thread to lean on. Experience has proved the folly of any such reliance. The Statesman, [illegible] ed with a thousand Democratic memories, and that has crowed over almost countless Democratic victories, is found, like Saturn, gorging its own children. While it is urging concert, conciliation, unity of purpose and action in the rest of the State, and saying a great many soft and sweet things of those engaged in the same cause, it has, here at home, under the supercilious noses of its dignified editor, and his unscrupulous proprietor, done all it was possible in a newspaper to do, to stir up strife and contention and disaffection in, if not for the defeat and disgrace of the Democratic party.

A few weeks since, the law having constituted it their duty, the Auditor, Mr. Phillips, the Probate Judge, Judge Albery, and the Recorder, Mr. Cole, appointed Thomas Sparrow, Esq., County Commissioner, to fill the unexpired term of D. L. Holton, Esq., who had resigned. Since that time, Mr. Sparrow has been wantonly and most unjustifiably assailed by the Statesman and its clique, (Tom Miller, Manypenny & Co.,) not that it was not admitted that he was qualified, but that he was not the beloved of Sam Cox and Tom Miller, who owed him a deadly, lasting and eternal hatred—perhaps because the community knew Mr. Sparrow to be a man of integrity, and could not say, and did not believe as much of either of the others.

Since the appointment of Mr. Sparrow as County Commissioner, a position which it is universally accorded he is qualified to occupy with advantage to the community, not only has he been made the subject of attack and vituperation, but the Auditor of the county, one of the Board appointed by law to select some suitable person to fill the vacancy, has also been made the object of the most determined and malignant hatred.

One might well pause here and ask, should the people, (which they are likely to do) nominate Thomas Sparrow for Commissioner, and John Phillips for Auditor, how would the Statesman find itself as a Democratic organ?

The Democracy of Mr. Sparrow is represented by the Statesman, as tainted, because, when appointed to a place of trust he discharged his duty, and did not, as Sam Cox or Tom Miller would have done, use the position he occupied to advance himself or his party at the expense of truth and history. He was governed, as all gentlemen are, and should be, by his obligation to truth, and honesty, and that he did not sacrifice these, he has won the unmitigated, inmitigable hatred of the precious duumvirate, Miller and Cox.

We are astonished that the late Auditor of State should see anything marvellous in that, after the pretty sentiment of Kotzebue or Sheridan, we know not which, (not being familiar with the original German.)

"On [illegible] horse, the blood-stained vulture cleaves the storm, yet in the plumage closest to her breast, soft as the cygnet's down, nor does the murmuring ring-dove o'er her unshelled brood, sit more gently."

We presume it was not long before "the kittens were removed from the premises," else step-dame Partlet would have found it a difficult matter to appease their ravenous hunger with a simple cluck or scratching in the straw. The mystery disappears when it is related that a hen hard-pushed for a nest, "squatted" upon territory that had been previously appropriated by a cat, and in the discharge of her ovarian duty, hovered over the unconscious progeny of the cat, herself unaware of her vicarious performance.

☞ One of the Cincinnati delegation, who procured the nomination of Judge Gholson, writes to the Commercial that, in urging his nomination and effecting it, assurances were given that the votes of the Hamilton county delegation of thirty-one, would be given to Judge Gholson or to Judge Swan! And the writer denies that it was pledged that Gholson is an Abolitionist, at the same time declaring that "it makes but little difference to the Republicans of Ohio what Joshua R. Giddings thinks was the prevailing motive in the nomination for Judgeship." What does Joshua think now? And what do the Western Reserves think of the Judge who did not manumit his negroes that he might become a citizen of a free State with a clear conscience?

KANSAS.—This unfortunate Territory is still before the people, but fortunately for its own population, it is not so wild as in former days. The late constitution of Kansas does not even suit Republicans. Mr. Thomas Ewing, jr., in a speech made at Lawrence, came out strongly against the new constitution. He said he favored the annexation of Southern Nebraska, and opposed the scheme of curtailing the western boundary. He also expressed his dissatisfaction with the apportionment; he thought the grouping together of counties was unfair and unjust. There is a pretty little fight in Kansas as it stands.

☞ Peter Finefrock, residing a mile and a half from Williamsport, Morrow Co., Ohio, shot himself deliberately on the 11th inst., after having written a letter in which he speaks in the most affectionate terms of his wife, and commending her to the care of his friends. The letter was found in his hat.

Christian Anti-Slavery Convention.

We do not know that the motley assembly that convened at the Congregational Church in this city during the week before last will have any very powerful influence in shaping the politics of the nation. They seem to have been brought together for a common object, which was very apparent in their proceedings,—an earnest and determined effort to render themselves supremely ridiculous. Their appeals to Heaven to soften and subdue the hearts of those who hold their fellow men in iron fetters, partook largely of the blasphemous, and appeared very much like dictating to God Almighty, who generally takes His own time to carry out His plans, nor is hastened nor delayed by the dictation or appeals of the straight-haired and saintly, no matter with what solemnity and hollow mockery the voice may be lifted in prayer and exhortation.

We remember the description "Old Bob Collins," a very eccentric Kentuckian, once gave of faith. There was a split in the Baptist Church of which his wife and daughter were members, and a good quarrel arose, when Bob entered the house of worship and led out his wife and daughter, for which he was presented by the Grand Jury for interrupting the church. He defended his own cause, and explained that "when he got down thar, they were pitching about faith like a town-ball. There was that fellow, (pointing to a very indolent and pious character,) talking about faith moving mountains.—Why didn't he get faith to move his log-gum, which he has wanted to move to the other part of the yard for five years, but was too lazy to do it, and there it is yet right in the way." Bob thought it was no place for his wife and daughter, where they were quarreling and fighting over their peculiar tenets, and moved them home. The Court thought he was right, and absolved him from intentional disrespect to the house of worship. The efficacy of prayer among the anti-slavery fanatics reminds us of 'that feller's' faith that couldn't move a log-gum, much less mountains. Why not tell God to change the seasons and the temperature of the zones? Why not tell Him to dry up as with a whirl-wind, and convert into an arid desert those luxuriant and fertile fields where the sugar and cotton and coffee form the staple productions? Why do they wear cotton on their backs, produced by the labor of slave hands? Why partake of coffee and sugar, both produced by slave labor? Why not "go the whole hog" at once, and not be content with empty declarations and sounding resolutions. We will take it for granted that in their proceedings these people were sincere, but it shows into what folly madness may precipitate men. What could be more untrue and unnatural than the second resolution:

2. Resolved, That to enslave innocent men and women, paralyzing their moral faculties, shutting out the light of truth from their understanding and compelling them to drag out an earthly existence amidst the gloom and darkness of moral death, constitutes the most aggravated violation of God's will, the most momentous crime presented to human consideration.

We say, what can be more untrue than this resolution as applied to domestic slavery in the Southern States?

It is not necessary to deprecate such demonstrations as that at the Congregational Church. They fall by their own weight, and do not disturb the equilibrium of the body politic. The intention, however, is wicked, under the show of sanctity and the observance of Christian duty.

☞ The deceptive and unscrupulous efforts of the Statesman were never more manifest than in this morning's issue, in which it attempts to produce the impression that the appointment of Mr. SPARROW was made for the purpose of decreasing the taxes of city property at the expense of the country. No such idea was contemplated; none such inculcated. It is a fabrication of the Statesman, and its correspondent "a Democratic Farmer," who is believed to be no more or less than a fat Post Office clerk. The motives which actuated him are transparent. He executed an office for his master, which the other could not do himself—at least while he could use a cat's paw. The appointment of Mr. SPARROW could not effect the rates of taxation, but as an honest, independent man, he could see that the assessments had been properly made, and that the property of one farmer or one citizen was not taxed beyond the value of that of his neighbor. What the Statesman and its correspondent suggest, belongs to the State Board of Equalization, and not to the County Board, who have no power in the premises. The latter is constituted to examine the assessment of taxes and correct errors in which the assessors may have fallen through ignorance, or preference or prejudice. Mr. SPARROW, as an eminently just and fair man, and of indefatigable industry, was regarded by all outside a certain upstart influence, as a most excellent and satisfactory appointment. The effort to array the country against the city is a lame and malicious attempt of the Statesman. We have too much respect for the people to suppose they can be misled by any such miserable subterfuge. It is an insult to their good sense.—[Post.

KANSAS AT THE SOUTH.—The Southern Guardian, published at the capital of South Carolina, informs its readers that Kansas "has omitted to take a census, that she has ignored the Fugitive-slave bill, and that, if admitted, she will carry out her doctrine of not recognizing property in slaves. The Guardian "hopes the South will be firm and united in opposition to her admission." The Guardian should remember that Oregon was admitted without a census, and Congress can dispense with a count in the case of Kansas. There is no likelihood that the South will make any serious opposition to her admission next winter, if she should ask for it, as she doubtless will.

DEATH OF HON. JOHN W. DAVIS.—The telegraph reports the death of the Hon. JOHN W. DAVIS, of Indiana. Mr. DAVIS was Speaker of the House of Representatives which convened at Washington in 1845.

☞ Speculations are yet rife as to the mode by which the letter of Mr. Wise got to the public, but as yet amount to nothing. Cassidy, Donnelly, Cagger and Comstock have it among them.

☞ O. Jennings Wise and Mr. Ould had a bloodless duel, which was adjusted after 36 hours negotiation.

Douglas and the Presidency.

Amid the reckless assertions of the ultra-extremist of the Southern press, there comes the staid and manly voice of the Louisville Democrat, which with a long-established Democratic reputation, maintains its consistency, and upholds the opinions which has given strength and vigor to the party in its past career. We copy from the last number received, the following article which may be read with profit by some of our politicians:

The Douglas phobia will be the death of a long list of politicians, we apprehend. It has become chronic, and is, perhaps, incurable. The public are beginning to understand the malady. Douglas is prominent for the office of President in 1860; that is his misfortune. If he were not the choice of such masses of his party, and were it not for his overshadowing position and talents, he would be an excellent Democrat. He is just what he has been for the last fifteen years. He preaches no new doctrine. We have showed, and no one has dared to deny it, that his doctrine on our territorial policy has been practically proclaimed by Democrats of both sections of the Union. It was the doctrine preached during the whole canvass of 1856, and everywhere approved. No one pretends that it is not the doctrine held and published by Douglas at that time and ever since. It is now held and proclaimed by the whole Democratic party of the North. The opposition to Douglas, then, is not owing to the doctrine held by him. It is not because he opposed Lecompton. In that he was consistent and correct. He could not support it without misrepresenting his State and his party, and stultifying himself. But Southern men, even the supporters of the Lecompton movement, have said worse of Lecompton than ever Douglas said. It is not, then, on account of Lecompton that Douglas is abused. Unsuspicious people may imagine that there is some real sincerity in all this outcry against Douglas. They don't know politicians well enough yet. Jackson was once a worse man than Douglas; so reputed by factions of Democrats. They thought they had disposed of Jackson frequently, but some of them lived to see their mistake. It is a misfortune that Douglas is not one of the obscure politicians the country generally has only heard of, and that might be used to advantage by spoils-hunters. It is a misfortune that the millions look to Douglas as the bold, fearless, independent statesman whom it is safe to trust and wise to make President. If he could step out of their way, he would be let alone. His enemies even complain that his friends defend him; every defence is set down to an effort to make him President; and that is the trouble. If he is ever President, he will have but little use for these trading politicians. The tribe of wire-pulling gentry can make but little out of him.—Supported by the people, he will have little need of what these politicians have to give. It is well known that he can't be coaxed, scared or bought; and what do mercenary politicians want with such a President as that? To put him out of the way, then, is the chief end of man. It has employed all the skill and all the energy of an entire school of politicians since the commencement of this Administration. It matters little with them what may be accomplished, if they fail in this. Policy, foreign and domestic, counts nothing, if Douglas can't be killed. The whole Democratic party, it seems, elected a President in 1856, merely to prevent Douglas from being President in 1860. The South can't forgive Douglas because he supported the annexation of Texas; because he aided, with all his talents, the defeat of the Wilmot proviso; because he repealed the Missouri Compromise; because he was burned in effigy by the Abolitionists; because he always has been, and is now, the man most dreaded by the negro-worshipers of the North.

As to who shall be the nominee for President in 1860, that is quite another question. The convention at Charleston can best judge as to who is available; and it is likely they will judge wisely. If they take the counsel of this faction howling after the heels of Douglas, they will elect nobody; that is plain enough now. If they shift positions on this question of slavery in the Territories, they must have a patent invention for getting votes—If they succeed—that we know nothing about. These, however, are contingencies that we do not take into the account.—They are like other contingencies and emergencies talked about lately—they are not coming. These factions may prepare for disappointment at Charleston; for disappointment awaits them.

One of Miller's Men—The Sheriff.

When S. W. PARK, through the contrivance of TOM MILLER, was nominated for Sheriff two years ago, to the disgust of every honorable Democrat, he became very anxious to display his liberality and estimable social qualities. He was a frequent visitor at the "St. Nicholas" where, VOLNEY SHAW had the creature comforts in profuse abundance; and while entertaining and regaling his friends upon the "fat of the vine," took occasion to run up a snug little bill, which having escaped his memory after his election, was a short time since brought to his recollection by a constabulary visit. "The law's delay" having run out, and the Sheriff not appearing to answer, judgment was given. And again "time" was called, when an appeal was taken—where the case now stands. PARK could eat and drink and take credit for liberality in a public house, but the idea of "footing the bill" found his head impenetrably thick. Is it at all singular that one who would refuse to discharge honest liabilities, who had obtained his nomination by a miserable MILLER fraud, should have been found during his term, trying to cheat the county? We ask the Democratic voters of Franklin if they will aid TOM MILLER again to cheat the tax-payers and litigants of Franklin, by placing in nomination such a small specimen of humanity, as the "One-Eyed Man of Destiny?"

HAVERSACK.

HANDSOME CLUBS.—We must return thanks to our friends of Logan, Hocking county, and Hamilton, Butler county, for the large clubs respectively forwarded for the PRESS during the campaign. In the former were forty-one names, and the latter had nearly as many. We should like to receive similar favors from other sections where a little exertion among our friends would secure as large lists. The PEOPLE'S PRESS will be always found reliable; and no effort will be spared to render it acceptable. Remember it is only Twenty-Five Cents for the Campaign!—Send in your names without delay.

A MALTESE CARMEN.—We have not read Michelet's "France," but are glad to know we have friends who have got that far along. We have hearkened to their "neigh" most affirmatively. Perhaps we might thrid the labyrinthine entanglement of their puzzle, but who wants an interpreter, where all is so plain? The [illegible] would have dwindled into common place, the thread of Ariadne would have been more slender than the gossamer's. Jupiter's thunder would have created no more dread than a child's torpedo, if like some wonderful panorama, there was always somebody in front of the curtain to explain. With the free translation and this prolegomena we leave this interesting passage of history to the reader:

The Feast of Asses.

MR. EDITOR:—We copy an account of the above Feast from a note to Michelet's History of France—first volume. As it may be interesting to some of your readers we send it to you.

At Beauvais, Autun and other places, they celebrated the Feast of the Ass, which was done in this manner—"at the end of the Mass the Priest, turning to the people with the words, "Ite, missa est" (you may depart, church is over) shall neigh thrice, and thus the people, with the formula Deo Gratias, (thanks to God,) shall thrice answer Hi Haw, Hi Haw, Hi Haw." Then the following Anthem was sung in Latin and French:

The Rights of Naturalized Citizens, No. 2.

The Washington City "States," says: On one question connected with the naturalization of foreigners, and their rights in the United States, Governor Wise raises a point which will attract some attention. It is, whether, since Congress alone has the power to naturalize foreigners and to make them citizens; and individual States can abridge those rights, as has been done by Massachusetts, by denying them the same rights of suffrage with native citizens—In other words, whether since under the Constitution of the United States, "the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States," a naturalized citizen of Virginia or New York "who is also a citizen of the United States," is not by virtue of the clause we have quoted, entitled to all the rights of a native born citizen of either of those States, should he migrate to Massachusetts? The Constitution of Massachusetts gives native born citizens of New York emigrating to that State, may vote after one year's residence, but a naturalized citizen of New York, migrating to Massachusetts can only gain a voting residence by remaining two years. But the Constitution of the United States says "the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States." A [illegible] may be a citizen of a State, endowed with all the privileges and immunities of the State, without being a citizen of the United States—therefore a citizen of a State migrating to another State might acquire greater privileges than he was entitled to in his own State. The intention of the clause was to confer a general citizenship—connected with the exclusive power of naturalization in the general government. American citizenship is a generic and comprehensive term and much more so than the term "subject under a monarchial form of government." The term of "a citizen of the United States" therefore includes "men, women and children"—every one in short, who can demand the official protection of the federal government. But the voting privilege is an attribute of sovereignty, which the Constitution of the United States has left to be enjoyed by the individual members of the Union, therefore a citizen of a State is one having the qualifications which enable him to vote for rulers, and to purchase and hold real estate, and a citizen of the United States is a native and naturalized person and may never acquire the qualifications of a citizen of a State. But furthermore, if a literal construction were to be given to the clause ["the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States,"] it would destroy State sovereignty and break down all distinction between the citizens of the several States. The citizens of Virginia and the other States would have the same privileges in Ohio, that her own citizens now enjoy. This certainly is not the meaning to be given to the clause, and no reasonable construction can be had which will take away from the States the authority to fix the qualification of voters—this is a right which belongs to them.

HAMILTON COUNTY.

☞ On Friday, the 18th, in Winnebago co., Wis., while the Deputy Sheriff and Albert Tucker were securing some grain upon which an attachment had been issued, Tucker was stabbed in the breast by the owner, Mr. Rogers, who came up behind him, with a butcher knife concealed in his sleeve, struck him from behind, the blade penetrating his lungs. The Deputy Sheriff escaped with a slight cut on the arm. Mr. Tucker was not expected to live. Considerable excitement prevailed among the citizens, a party of whom went in pursuit of Rogers, who had not been taken up to Saturday evening.

WOOL.—The returns show that in the whole country some 60,000,000 pounds of wool are produced annually, while the annual consumption in the United States is rather above than below 100,000,000 pounds, and is steadily increasing. More than 50,000,000 pounds of wool are imported every year into this country, which the country is abundantly able to produce within its own borders.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 25, 1859.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE.

Please announce BENJ. L. REES, of Hamilton township, a candidate for the next General Assembly, subject to the decision of the people at the Democratic Primary Election.

WM. R. RANKIN, the able and efficient representative in the last Legislature, will be supported for re-election, by the "unterrified DEMOCRATS" OF FRANKLIN.

FOR AUDITOR.

JOHN PHILLIPS, the present Auditor, are commended for re-election by Democratic voters of every ward of Columbus and every township in the County of Franklin, as a faithful and efficient officer, and entitled to the suffrages of the people.

FOR SHERIFF.

GEORGE W. HUFFMAN will be supported for Sheriff of Franklin County, by MANY VOTERS.

Board of Equalization.

Without respect to party, or [illegible] any other motive or consideration, except the general benefit, we respectfully request that [illegible] KELLY will allow us to present his name for member of the Board of Equalization. We regard the office as of the greatest importance, and wish to have his experience, judgment, clear discrimination and knowledge of values, in the place. If his health and time and other engagements will permit; and we, therefore, respectfully nominate him through the columns of the PEOPLE'S PRESS. WE THE PEOPLE.

CIGARS.—Messrs. NEIL and PIKE, on the corner of Broad and Gay streets, have some of the choicest brands to be found in the city.

☞ Last week Mr. John Wilkins, of Falls township, Muskingum county, was drowned by falling in his well, which he was descending to adjust the bucket.

SAD ACCIDENT.—On Monday of last week, a little son of G. W. Meirs, of Findlay, Hancock county, fell into the cellar-way in front of the Schwab House, and was so injured as to cause his death.

☞ If a superb sewing instrument is wanted, look in at the elegant room of Mr. GRAHAM, Agent, on State street. He has Singer's instruments of every style and variety. The superiority of this patent is attested by its popularity, which is unequaled by any other. Mr. GRAHAM will take pleasure in exhibiting the various instruments, and pointing out their peculiar merits.

FRANK LESLIE FOR SEPTEMBER.—Through the politeness of Mr. KENNEDY, State street, we have this interesting periodical in advance of all others. The fashion plate is very elegant, and its illustrations generally excellent. The Magazine of Fashion is incorporated with this meritorious literary periodical, and, blended, the combined work furnishes pastime, entertainment and useful information for all persons, but is particularly interesting to ladies.

☞ Our attentive and earnest correspondent, "Hamilton County," has another number in the PRESS of this week. He urges the doctrine with serious and striking energy that it is the true Democratic principle, and one which Ohio should conform to, to remove the disqualification of foreign-born citizens in the exercise of the elective franchise. It is beyond question that Ohio in its State Sovereignty can establish the basis of suffrage, with which the Federal Government has nothing to do; but it requires a change in its own organic rule, or Constitution, which "Hamilton County" urgently argues. His articles will be found to embody some serviceable information, as well as promoting the subject in hand in a strong and favorable light.

THE WAY IT WAS DONE.—Mr. BROWN, [illegible] Ohio, corroborates the statement that GREELEY was fooled at the Pike's Peak Gold Diggings. Gregory told Greeley to dig up a shovel full of dirt, and he would wash it out in his presence, and show him his diggings were no humbug. Greeley did as directed. Gregory then washed it out, having in the meantime gold dust deposited in his sleeve, which he let drop into the pan. Greeley was of course astonished at the richness of the diggings—published a statement—the people having confidence in him, flocked to Gregory's diggings, and Gregory sold his claims at a big figure.

We have continued our readers from the first against the deceptive stories about the richness of the mines, and more than suspected that Mr. GREELEY had, himself, been deceived. Such turns out to be the fact.

THE LAST RACE BETWEEN FLORA TEMPLE AND PRINCESS.—The race on Tuesday last, over Eclipse Course, between Flora Temple and Princess, is the subject of much debate among sporting men east. Porter's Spirit of the Times, referring to it, says:

"The manner in which Princess was originally brought into the field against Flora Temple, the false way in which she was driven at her debut, and the scandalous spectacle of those two great amateurs being but up so too ostensibly for a purse, when no purse, in fact, existed, is a scandal upon trotting and trotting operations, which will recoil heavily into the successful glow with which the season opened. We feel it to be our duty also to say, however, that those experienced trotting men, who grumble loudest at the fact that Mr. Hoff was not ruled off the course for his false driving in the [illegible] heats, were themselves [illegible] to blame as he was in not appearing, at the invitation of the Jockey Club, to testify against him. It is not too late yet, however, to mend the matter; and we hope, if the transaction on the Union track, on Tuesday, can be made a subject of adjudication, that our track will be free from Mr. Hoff in future, and that there will not be found, on Long Island at least, another course that will follow the example of the managers of the Eclipse, by misleading the public to bet its money under the pretence that they are beating theirs."

SWIMMING FEAT EXTRAORDINARY.—An exchange tells us of a most extraordinary race which took place in a fashionable ladies' seminary school in the Thiergarten, Berlin, where thirty-three young ladies contested for the championship in swimming. The winner, who is nineteen years of age and very handsome, is said to have proved that she might as well challenge the other sex as her own. The race was followed by an elegant luncheon, only ladies being present, and the promenaders in the neighborhood listened with astonishment to the lusty cheers that followed the toasts. We hardly know how to regard it, as a thing to praise or blame.

St. Louis Correspondence—No. 17.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 18th, 1859.

DEAR MARSHALL:—Owing to a country excursion after election, I find that upwards of three weeks have elapsed since the date of my last communication. Meantime, there has been little to notice, except what is public, of the election, &c. The Democracy kept well together on the 1st, and five of our nominees were elected. The Free-Soilers made every exertion to secure the American vote, without much effect, except in alienating the Germans from the Know Nothing nominees on the mongrel Black Republican ticket. The Americans selected a ticket from both the others, and most of those so chosen are successful. Indeed the conservative Americans hold the balance of power here, as elsewhere, and, in a national contest such as next year must bring, cannot but naturally incline to [illegible] with us rather than with the radical Black Republican faction. I think these last may find themselves mistaken in calculating on St. Louis as one of their fortresses of the "quadrilateral." "Mantua," we miscere nimium vicina Cremonae!" [illegible] Avail events the electoral vote of Missouri is sure for the Charleston nominee, but we are anxious to see our city also in harmony with our State.

It is recorded in the Ballad of Chevy Chase (a good [illegible] Presidential election) that when word was brought to his king

"That brave Earl Douglas suddenly
Was with an arrow slain."

thereupon, King James pathetically lamented that

"He had not any captain more
Of such account as he!"

The circumstances of the ancient chronicle are somewhat reversed in the present instance. The dart that was to have killed Douglas, viz: his letter about platforms, has fallen harmless, while King Henry himself is slain, like the eagle, by an arrow feathered from his own breast. Well,

"I trust we have within our realm,
Five hundred good as he."

To return to local politics, we appear to have lost nothing during the last year. The aggregate vote of this county is smaller, but that of the party duly distinguished, is larger than that of last August; both absolutely and relatively. I present some figures, taking no account of the April election which was confined to the city, and when the Americans, though they had nominated a good man for Mayor, bolted in large numbers to the Blacks. No one ever claimed that as a party triumph. In August, 1858, voting stood as follows, in the county at large, for Representative in Congress: Barret, Dem., 7057; Blair, Rep., 6631; Breckinridge, Am., 5668; total, 19,356. In the recent election the vote for Dr. J. Addison Barret, Dem., for Representative in General Assembly, affords a fair test of Democratic strength, as his name was placed upon none of the side tickets; he received 7397 votes, being an increase of 340 over "Missouri Dick;" yet Dr. Barret was unsuccessful, the Americans having placed upon their ticket Messrs. Drake, Dem., who received 8505, and Moore, Rep., who took 9488 votes. Mitchell, the renegade K. N. Editor of the "Evening News," who was nominated by the Blacks with Moore, was left far behind, obtaining but 6763. This election did not bring out the full strength of the people, the vote being little over 18,000. An immensity of scratching was done, and, moreover, there were half a dozen "independent" tickets out. We placed Breckinridge Circuit Judge without opposition. He is well qualified for the Bench; also Ewing, now Attorney General, in the Supreme Bench, a sound Democrat, not that he is elected on any party grounds. God forbid!

Nobody supposes Frank Blair is going to maintain his pretence of contesting Barret's election to Congress. It is a legend of the past, and I learn that some Republican members of the House have so expressed themselves. The city census, taken surreptitiously, after election at the behest of Blair, and under the control of his satellites, showed upwards of 24,000 votes. The talk about corruption or fraud has been quite abandoned by his party, and the true causes of his defeat are well known here; first, personal unpopularity, in comparison with Barret; secondly, the established position of the latter as always a consistent representative of the principles maintained by Thos. H. Benton, throughout a life-time, at the close of which the old champion, so dear to our citizens, denounced Blair and his associates as having "betrayed him and thwarted the policy of his whole life," by their pernicious agitation on slavery.

One result of our election is a quiet Sunday, or, as the Puritans miscall it, the "Sabbath." There is some agitation against the prohibition of sale of "refreshments." There was plenty of law already on the subject; but the Sabbatarians wished to "spite the Dutch." I prefer neither, and can always get as much as is good for me, even on election day.

Our next great event will be the Fair, September 26th. Spacious as are the beautifully ornamental grounds and accommodations, late applicants may be hard put to it to obtain room for exhibition, especially for articles of manufacture. Entry books are filling up with great rapidity, keeping officers very busy. A number of owners in most distant States have secured stalls for stock, attracted by the splendid premiums open to universal competition, without entry fee. But you are already posted. We shall have at least one railroad to the Fair grounds, and our streets are being intersected by a net work of these convenient tracks in every direction. The Terre Haute, Alton and St. Louis Railroad regularly delivers New York papers here within forty-eight hours from publication. This places that line so far ahead of all competition. Faithfully, W. O.

Fashions for August.

[From Godey's Magazine, August.]

Our principal modistes seem determined to make every style fashionable, so that the casaque and basque are worn as well as the pointed or round bodice.

The round waisted [illegible] (basque) seem to threaten us as leading on to the short waists worn by our ancestors. At present they reach quite to the hips, and only appear short by the suppression of the basque; but the eye, which has so much difficulty in accommodating itself to this change, will become accustomed to it, and, little by little, the waists will be shortened in the same proportion as they have been lengthened. We cannot help expressing the hope that good taste will preserve us from the ridiculous short waists of the first empire. As to the full skirts, the war that has been waged and the anathemas that have been pronounced against them, all seem to have been in vain; they brave all, nay, they even increase; and if they are to be suppressed, it will require a coup d'etat to accomplish it.

The Zouave jacket is so greatly in favor that it is made of almost every material. That most in favor just now is muslin, either plain or figured, made without a seam at the back, split up under the arms, and rounded at the opening. The front is fastened at the throat with a button or bow of ribbon, rounded at the waist, and left quite open. Under this is worn a muslin chemisette, like those worn by little boys. The sleeve is cut square, opening to the top of the arm, with an undersleeve made with one large puff, or the Medicis, formed with five small puffs, and a narrow wristband of embroidered muslin. The whole of the jacket is trimmed round with a double bouillonne of muslin, under which is placed a ribbon. Over a muslin skirt, with the ribbon to match, they form a very graceful negligee. They are also pretty when made of white quilting or braided silk. We have seen two elegant dresses ready to be forwarded to a chateau de la Touraine. They were of Chambery gauze. The first white, with very narrow stripes of mauve satin, forming three skirts or wide flounces, edged with a fold of silk the color of the stripe. Low body, with a guipure cape, square behind and pointed in front, falling a little below the top of the body, fastened with two rosettes of ribbon. The pelerine to be worn with the second dress of black guipure; the dress of pink gauze, made with a single skirt, covered with eighteen flounces, edged with very narrow black velvet. The head dress for the first toilet [illegible] of pinked mauve silk, formed into rosettes at the side, and fastened behind with a bow and long ends; and for the other a barbe of black lace into a fine bow at the summit of the head, the ends falling, at the sides over bunches of roses without leaves, mixed with ends of black velvet.

DEMOCRATIC SONG.

Tune—"Auld Lang Syne."

For Douglas rise, lift up your heads—
Your glorious course pursue;
For liberty and equal rights
Let ev'ry heart be true.

CHORUS—From East to West, from North to South,
From river, lake and shore,
Let ev'ry man go heart and hand
For Douglas and [illegible].

Let all the interests of our land
Be thoroughly sustained;
Let capital and industry
Divide the profits gained.

CHORUS—From East to West, &c.

The action of our Convention
Will surely be correct;
For Douglas is the very man
Whom we can now elect.

CHORUS—From East to West, &c.

Of our candidates we ask no pledge—
It is no guarantee:
An honest man is always safe—
A rogue can never be.

CHORUS—From East to West, &c.

And when the great election comes
Be sure it proves no farce—
Let Douglas have his pattern full,—
The remnants give to grass.

CHORUS—From East to West, &c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

☞ Dr. F. B. Bower, the owner of the field on which the surrender of Cornwallis took place, has granted its use for a military encampment.

☞ It is beyond doubt that Gov. Banks will again be the Republican nominee for Governor, and it appears very probable Gen. Benj. B. F. Butler will be his competitor.

☞ Mr. Richard O'Gorman, who played a very conspicuous part in the Irish rebellion of 1848, and who was compelled to make his way to the United States, is now on a visit to Dublin.

☞ The "milk sickness" is raging fearfully in the western part of Indiana; and many persons who have eaten the flesh of cattle who were under the influence of the disease, have died.

☞ A State Convention of colored men will meet at Troy, N. Y., on Tuesday, 13th of September, for a session of two days or more, at which the suffrage question is to be canvassed.

☞ Caleb Wilder, of Hingham, and a Mr. Gideon, of Boston, were drowned in Hingham harbor this afternoon, by the upsetting of a sail-boat. J. A. Fletcher, also in the boat, swam ashore.

☞ At a Democratic Convention held at Piqua, Miami county, on Friday, Eben Baker, of Darke county, was nominated for Senator, and James Sims, of Miami county, for Member of the State Board of Equalization.

☞ The Democracy of Lowell, Mass., have elected popular sovereignty delegates to the Worcester Convention, and have instructed them to insist upon the nomination of Gen. B. F. Butler for Governor. If nominated, Gen. Butler intends to stump the State himself.

☞ The Buffalo Courier says that the Niagara Suspension Bridge Co. have perpetually enjoined Blondin from crossing the Niagara on the rope. The Republic says, the injunction simply restrains him from carrying passengers, and thus interfering with their business.

☞ The Fort Smith California Times of the 11th inst. states that John Ross, who is now over sixty years of age, has been re-elected as Principal Chief of the Cherokee Nation. He was the first chief elected, under their first Constitution, in the Fall of 1828, in Georgia, and has been regularly re-elected every four years since.

☞ The most elegant suite of rooms in the world is at the Hotel de Ville in Paris. They form a circuit of about half a mile, and require for their complete illumination nine thousand seven hundred and fourteen taper and two thousand three hundred and eighty-seven gas burners. Seven thousand visitors can be accommodated at once.

☞ The Waterford Mail, an Irish paper, makes the following remarks: "A rather curious idea has taken possession of many of the Irish people, who think the Emperor made peace in order that Louis Napoleon might take possession of Ireland—many of them express themselves favorable to such an acquisition, while others prefer the English sway to that of France."

DISSENSIONS AMONG THE QUAKERS.—The Friends' Review, of Philadelphia, gives a melancholy view of the ecclesiastical disturbances in that order, among the friends of George Fox and William Penn. It says:

"It is probably known to most of our readers that a few years since some of the members of the New York Yearly Meeting, feeling dissatisfied with the continuance of religious fellowship between that meeting and the Yearly Meeting of New England, and desiring to connect themselves with the seceding body at Newport, withdrew from the several meetings to which they belonged principally within the Quarterly Meetings of Scipio, Ferrisburg and Farmington, and opened a small meeting with the title of New York Yearly Meeting of Friends, held at Poplar Ridge, Cayuga county, N. Y. They have been in unity and correspondence with the separate Yearly Meetings at Newport, (Rhode Island,) and Nottingham, (Maryland,) and also with a small number of persons in Iowa, who have seceded from the Society there, but, we believe, have not attempted to organise a Yearly Meeting.

"The Poplar Ridge Meeting has also repeatedly addressed epistles to Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, and to the 'Movie Meeting' in Ohio; but they have not been received, although portions of the members of these meetings have earnestly desired to enter into a correspondence, ad strenuously advocated it, particularly in Ohio, where there has been great danger of a division on this question.

"For several months past there have been rumors of dissension among the members of the Monthly Meeting at Scipio, and it now appears that divisions have occurred in the Monthly and Quarterly Meetings at that place, and that the Yearly Meeting at Poplar Ridge separated in the fifth month last, in two bodies, each claiming to be New York Yearly Meeting. One of these bodies issued an address to its own members, and to friends wherever situated; and the meeting for sufferings representing the other body, has published an 'answer;' each party professing to give an account of the origin and progress of [illegible] resulted in separation.

"Both parties freely indulge in crimination and recrimination; charges are made of manifesting 'a spirit of usurpation and misrule,' 'a disorganizing spirit,' 'making the discipline, which is designed for the purification and preservation of the Church, an instrument of oppression,' encouraging 'a forward and unsanctified ministry,' assuming the whole 'control in the Church disregarding the expressions of others, and refusing their names on appointments.' Many of those occupying high stations in the Society as members of the Select Meetings, say our party 'did not bow to the Lord, and suffer Him to rule and reign; but for the most part, introduced into that meeting those who were not qualified for such stations, keeping out those whom the Lord had appointed and appointed for them, and this state of things has been cause of sorrow to the truly exercised ones.'

"It is not strange that such elders, as above alluded to, not being able to recognise the life in messages delivered by a living Gospel minister, should judge of the words according to their own apprehension, and call them unsound; this was actually done, and the exceptions sent up in the answers to the queries of the select meeting, on account of the alleged unsoundness.

"Painful as it is thus to expose the workings of a 'disorganizing spirit' amongst those in any way connected with our religious society, and from the exercise of true Christian charity in humility and love. Earnestly do we desire the restoration of those who have been drawn away, and also of such amongst us as are standing opposed to the unity and harmony of the several branches of our society."

☞ A self-constituted committee of gentlemen in Baltimore has just collected a purse of $710 for the relief of the family of Mr. Geo. H. Hall and his son, who, a few days since, were killed by lightning, leaving their family in destitute circumstances.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FARTHER POINT, BELOW QUEBEC, August 20.—The steamer Hungarian has passed this point, bound to Quebec, where she will be due to-night. Her dates are to Wednesday, the 10th inst., four days later than previous advices. The Liverpool cotton market is without change. Breadstuffs and provisions are dull. Consols were quoted on the 9th at 95¼.

The subscription to the new stock of the Atlantic Telegraph Company is progressing very favorably. Among the long list of the takers of this stock appear the names of Barring Bros. & Co., George Peabody, of the firm of George Peabody & Co., R. Hath & Co. Samuel Gurney, of the firm of Overine Gurney & Co., N. Rothschild & Co., Hanky & Co., Barclay, Beaver & Co., J. H. Schroder of the firm of John Henry Schroder & Co., O. N. Lampon, Thos. Brassey and Wm. Brown.

The steamer Hungarian passed here this morning and will be due at Quebec in the course of to-night. The mails and passengers will reach Montreal to-morrow some time before noon.

The general news brought is interesting but possesses nothing of striking importance.

Sardinia was represented in the Conference.

The Emperor Napoleon was on a visit to Camp Chalons, witnessing the manoeuvres of the troops.

The Peace Conference met at Zurich, on Monday, the 8th inst, according to previous announcement. Nothing had transpired regarding the proceedings thus far.

FARTHER POINT, August 22.—The conference was constituted as follows:

Austria.—Count Colorado and Barons Meisenberg and Bourqainey and the Marquis Boorsevilie.

Sardinia.—Chevalier D'Ambrosy and Jocosan.

The government of Zurich had welcomed the Ambassador and were to give them a public reception on the 11th.

The first formal sitting of the Congress took place on the 8th, at which the Sardinian Representatives assisted. The second sitting was held on the 9th, but nothing transpired as to the proceedings.

GREAT BRITAIN.—On the 8th the affairs of Italy were delegated in both Houses of Parliament.

In the House of Lords the Marquis of Normandy inquired if there was any objection to produce the papers relative to the projects of peace transmitted to Austria before the treaty of Villa Franca. He denounced the conduct of the government as one sided and evincing no desire to maintain neutrality.

Lord Woodhouse, in reply, reiterated the statement that England sent terms of peace to Austria at the request of France, but without giving any advice or expressing an opinion on the subject. He said it would be most inconvenient to produce the documents in the present state of the negotiations.

The Earl of Granville acknowledged the act of Lord John Russell as the united act of the Cabinet.

In the House of Commons Lord Elcho moved an address to the Queen declaring that it would be inconsistent with the honor and dignity of England, after having preserved a strict neutrality, to take part in any Conference for settling the details of the peace preliminaries which have already been arranged between the Emperors of France and Austria.

Lord Elcho praised the neutral cause of the late government and censured the Anti-Austrian feeling evinced by the present Cabinet.

Mr. Kinglake moved the previous question, feeling it would be unwise to bind the government to any line of policy regardless of changes which might take place at any hour.

Mr. Gladstone said the electors' [illegible] not relevant to the present position of affairs. The government had no intention of taking part in settling the details of peace on the basis of the Villa Franca treaty. The belligerents themselves would settle those details, and what would remain to be settled would be the great question of European policy, in which he thought England should play her troublesome part. He defended the government and called for a decisive vote against the resolution.

Mr. S. Fitzgerald said the object of the resolution was to restrain the government from carrying out its personal sympathies, which were inconsistent with the treaty obligations of the country. Parliament ought not to sanction the government joining in the Congress without being informed of what the great powers had agreed upon in regard to the subject.

Mr. Sidney Herbert argued that the neutrality expired with the war, and that he saw no reason why England could not consistently join in the Congress.

Mr. Horsman and Mr. Whiteside spoke in favor of the resolution and denounced the foreign policy of the government.

Lord John Russell again proclaimed that the government had not the slightest intention to go into a European Congress to settle the details of the peace of Villa Franca; nobody ever invited them to do so. He admitted that there were difficulties in the way of the government entering into the Congress, and matters were in that state that no determination had been come to. He appealed to the House to leave the question in the hands of the ministers, who would decide when the whole facts of the case were before them.

Mr. D'Israeli warned the government of the dangers to be incurred by entering the Congress, but stated his objection to the House coming to a decision after a hasty deliberation, and hoped Lord Elcho would not press his motion to a division. After some remarks from Lord Palmerston in defense of his course and in denunciation of the resolution, Lord Elcho said he was satisfied with the admissions made by the government and the result of the debate, and would not press his motion.

In the House of Lords on the 9th, the subject of the national defenses were referred to. Lord Kingsdown, contended that the army and navy would never be on a satisfactory footing till the government had the power of compulsory service.

The Earl of Ripon thought it would be most injudicious to resort to compulsory power, and pledged every effort of the government to make the defenses secure.

In the House of Commons the East India loan bill was passed.

The completion of the steamship Great Eastern was formally celebrated on the 8th, by a banquet given on board, which was attended by many members of both Houses of Parliament and a number of scientific men. The engines, both screw and paddle, were set in motion for the first time. The result was satisfactory in the very highest degree and far beyond expectation.

Lord Stanley proposed the toast of success to the Great Eastern, and painted in glowing terms the marvellous success she will accomplish.

Mr. Brunell, the engineer, and Mr. Scott, the builder, were toasted, but the owner was absent from ill health. The ship presented a beautiful and finished aspect, being almost ready for sea.

The city article in the London Times says, in regard to the stipulations of the treaty alleged to have been arranged between Minister M'Lane and Juarez at Vera Cruz, that Mexico from the moment the treaty is ratified, will virtually pass under American sway. It then adds that the result will be advantageous to Mexico and the world, but thinks the extent to which private rights will be respected or jeopardized are anxious questions.

The American Government is urged at every step to protect the interests of foreign bondholders.

The Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, travelling under the private title of Admiral Romanoff, had arrived at Spithead in the frigate Swetland, and took up his residence at Ride, Isle of Wight.

The strike among the building trade had assumed formidable dimensions. Estimates of the men unemployed range from 20 to 40,000. The master builders had sought the intervention of the government, but the Home Secretary said he did not see how he could interfere.

LONDON.—In the money market, the demand for money at the commencement of the week sensibly abated, but the market was again active at the close. The funds had been firm and consols closed at a slight advance. Railway and other securities had participated in the upward tendency.

Messrs. De Matrino & Sons, Greek merchants, mostly in the grain trade, have suspended with liabilities.

An impression prevailed that the Bank of England would advance its rates of discount on the 11th inst.

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH.

LONDON, Wednesday 10.—Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, Liberal, was yesterday elected Member of Parliament for Davenport.

The Daily News' city article, dated Tuesday evening, says: The funds to-day were slightly prejudiced by the news of a partial re-action in the Paris Bourse, combined with the dullness of business. Consols finally closed about ⅛ per cent. lower. Before operating with confidence, speculators apparently wish to see the result of the pending Conferences on the Italian question. In most of the other departments of the stock exchange prices were quoted rather lower. There was a renewed demand for money to-day, the idea being entertained in some quarters that an advance in the minimum rate of discount to 3 per cent will be made by the bank on Thursday. There were no bullion operations at the bank to-day. Continental exchanges this afternoon experienced a fresh improvement. An East India merchant suspended to-day, but it is thought his liabilities are not over £10,000.

The Daily News gives the provisions of Sidney Herbert's new bill providing for a military reserve force. It authorises the enrollment and maintenance of a reserve force of 20,000 men, consisting of soldiers who have previously served. This force is to be called out twelve days each year and permanently in case of invasion.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post telegraphs the result of the Tuscan elections, they took place with great order and give a majority to men of moderate liberalism, but quite opposed to the restoration of the old dynasty. The advices from Odessa report great activity and improved prices in the grain trade.

The Times' city article of Tuesday, says the English funds experienced fluctuations to-day to the extent of a half per cent, but were chiefly consequently upon the supply or scarcity of seekers and not upon foreign news.

Prince Albert visited the grand Duke Constantine at Ryde yesterday.

The government had decided on disbanding the medical corps which was raised during the Crimean war, and constituting an entirely new branch of service to be called the Army Hospital Corps.

FRANCE.—The Emperor Napoleon went on the 7th to Chalons to remain there several days. It was asserted that Prince Munich would remain at Paris as Austrian Minister.

The Paris correspondent of the London Star gives a report that the Emperor had declared for free trade, but it lacks confirmation.

The Moniteur publishes a long official report by Vice Admiral Romain regarding the operations in the Adriatic. The Moniteur also publishes a document clearing General Canrobert from any relations which General Neil's report of the battle of Solferino had cast upon him.

The number of troops from Italy, to march through Paris on the 14th is 70,000. The procession will last seven hours.

The Times' Paris correspondent says that the report was still current that measures would shortly be officially announced confirmatory to the hopes entertained of the maintenance of peace, and calculated at the same time to give a great impetus to commercial affairs. One of them it is said will be a reduction of the present expensive duties on articles of necessity. The completion of the railroad is to be accelerated and industrious works in general are to be encouraged.

A sham fight is to be executed by forty thousand men at the camp of Chalons under the Emperor's orders, illustrative of the episodes at Solferino. The Emperor returns to the camp in September, to take command of the manoeuvres.

It was reported that Gen. Fleury was to be raised to a General of division.

The Paris Constitutionnel ascribes the proposed fortification of Antwerp to the influence of England was foreseeing war with France, wishes to provide herself with an entrenched camp in Belgium.

ITALY.—Early on Monday morning, the 7th, the King of Sardinia entered Milan, accompanied by his ministers, members of parliament, and the municipal bodies of Turin and Genoa. His Majesty passed through Corso on horseback, amidst enthusiastic acclamations. A Te Deum was performed, at which the King was present; he afterwards received the authorities of the city. In the evening a general illumination took place. The aspect of Milan during the fete was imposing.

The Sardinian government have recalled the Sardinian Commissioners at Parma and Palacenza.

PRUSSIA.—The news of the dissolution of the French army of observation on the Rhine had produced a very favorable effect in Berlin, and Prussia would at once countermand the concentrating troops on the Rhine. Russia is about to send two vessels of war to Japan to open commercial communication.

The Emperor of Russia will visit Berlin in Sept.

The elections for national assembly of Tuscany passed off harmoniously. All ministers who were elected are friends of independent Tuscany.

The opinion of Turin says that 50,000 French troops will remain in Italy provisionally.

Owing to the dangerous state of some provinces the Sardinian Commissioner at Parma in notifying the municipality of his departure, said he left his Secretary charged with the sovereign powers of the government in the name of the people. This produced a very bad [illegible].

GERMANY.—The relations between Austria and Prussia almost assume the dimensions of regular rupture and were regarded as dangerous to the small German States which were already looking towards France for protection.

The King of Bavaria apologized for the passage of troops through his territory.

RUSSIA.—The construction of a Railway of the length of seven hundred versts between Moscow and Saratow has been authorised. The capital of the company will be 45 millions roubles with a government guarantee for eighty years at four and a half per cent.

TURKEY.—The Sultan arrived at Salowith on the 26th July.

INDIA AND CHINA.—Calcutta mails of July 24, Hong Kong, June 23th, reached Trieste and will arrive in London on the 11th inst.

A considerable reduction of native troops had been ordered in India. The imports at Calcutta were dull and exports flat. Freights were firmer. Exchange one shilling 11¾d@[illegible] 1d.

The representatives of England, France, and American Governments go from Shanghai to Pekin. The tea market was quiet. Silk in moderate demand. There were large tea settlements at [illegible].

AFRICA.—African dates are from Coast Castle to July 14th and from Sierra Leon to July 15. Cotton was being collected in the eastern districts of the Gold Coast, and a considerable quantity was expected to be shipped to England. The natives were being taught its value, and the exports were expected to increase. Palm oil had largely advanced at Accra.

LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKET.—The sales of cotton in market for three days add up 20,000 bales, of which 1,400 bales were to speculators and 2,000 bales to exporters. Market closed dull, some authorities say easier, but not quotably lower prices; holders offered freely but showed no disposition to press sales; the quotation for middling Orleans was 1 3-16 and for middling uplands 6½d.

The advices from Manchester were favorable. The market for export goods was buoyant but rather dull, though firm for home and India trade.

LIVERPOOL.—Richardson, Spence & Co quote the market generally very dull; flour steady at 10s@12s 3d. Wheat very dull and the quotations were barely maintained; Western red 7s 6d@9s, white 9s@9s 6d. A small parcel of new Southern white brought 11s@11s 6d. Corn dull; mixed and yellow 6s 6d@6s, white 7s@7s 3d. Provisions—Beef dull, but steady; pork dull; bacon dull, but steady. Lard dull, sales unimportant. Tallow inactive and unchanged in price. Produce—Ashes quiet; linseed oil 29s; rosin steady at 3s 8d@3s 9d for common; turpentine steady.

LONDON.—Breadstuffs dull; wheat declined slightly on new. Sugar steady. Tea firm. Tallow firm at 55s. Linseed oil firm at 28s 9d @29s 6d.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.—Consols closed on Tuesday at 95¼ for money, and 95⅜@95½ for account.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

BOSTON, Aug. 22.—Yesterday morning a fire broke out in the City Hospital building on Deer Island, which led to a general fire alarm in the city, and several engine companies were dispatched to the Island, but the fire fortunately was confined to the east wing and the main building escaped damage. The upper part of the east wing, used as a house of reformation for juvenile offenders, was destroyed. The loss is estimated at from $19,000 to $20,000. Three boys—Wm. Coughlin, Thos. Gordon and J. Riley—confessed to setting it on fire by placing combustibles in the ventilator. It was intended to set it on fire at midnight, but Coughlin, who applied the match, overslept that time. Riley was formerly an inmate of the Refuge School, and has twice attempted its burning.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—The Los Angelos Star says, an outbreak occurred among the Mojave Indians on the 31st of July. Two hundred Indians attacked a party of whites at Beale's Crossing, and carried off a number of mules and a large quantity of provisions belonging to the Stockton Kansas City Mail Company. Major Armistead, with a company of troops, left Mojave for Mojave Valley, intending to chastise the Indians—in their absence to burn their huts and destroy their crops.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 22.—Messrs. Dawson and Holmes, stockbrokers, on Third street, have suspended. Their liabilities are not stated.

NEW YORK, August 22.—The steamship Bremen, from Southampton, on the 9th inst., arrived here this morning. Her advices are not so late as those furnished by the steamer Hungarian.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 19.—A fire broke out this evening at the corner of Fifth and Albany Sts., destroying the upper portion of six buildings, three fronting on Albany and three on Fifth St. Loss estimated at $15,000. The Union House was in great danger, but escaped damage.

WASHINGTON, August 20.—Major Edmund French, pay clerk of the Bureau of Construction of the Treasury Department, was arrested yesterday for falsely making and forging certificates and receipts for the purpose of obtaining money from the United States. His arrest was not made until after consultation between the Secretary and the Solicitor of the Treasury, District Attorney Ould and Maj. Bowman, and giving the accused an opportunity to explain. The affair creates much gossip here. The extent of the alleged defalcation has not been ascertained.

FRANKLIN, N. H., August 19.—Mrs. Betsey Danforth, who mysteriously disappeared on the 24th of July, was found to-day reduced almost to a skeleton, in a slough hole, a mile from the house where she lived. She says that the only sustenance she has had for the last 26 days was water. Mrs. Danforth is seventy-four years of age, and is partially insane. She was unsuccessfully searched for by parties of our citizens for two weeks after her disappearance, when all hopes of finding her was abandoned.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 20.—The steamship Baltimore, from Havana on the 12th, arrived here this morning. The Havana money market was stringent, and owing to the excessive tightness bonds signed by several of the leading houses, to the extent of ten millions of dollars, and bearing 8 per cent. interest, are to be issued by the Spanish Bank at Havana.

Sugars were heavy, except for Muscovados, which were firm, owing to small stock. The quotations were however unchanged. In molasses there was nothing doing. Exchanges had advanced on New York to 4 and 5 per cent. premium on 60 day bills, and on London to 14 and 16 per cent. premium.

WASHINGTON, August 20.—Mr. O. Jennings Wise, of the Richmond Enquirer, and Mr. Ould, of the Richmond Examiner, eluded the vigilance of the police, and early this morning left Washington for Maryland to settle a newspaper quarrel by a duel. The parties returned between 12 and 1 o'clock this afternoon having exchanged two shots, neither were hurt, and the matter here rests for the present.

PHILADELPHIA, August 20.—The celebrated sewing machine manufactory of Geo. B. Sloat & Co. was burned to the ground this morning. It is supposed to be the work of an incendiary. The business of the house, which extended over the whole country, will not be disturbed by the occurrence. There is an insurance of $30,000 on the property destroyed.

WASHINGTON, August 20.—Certified copies of the approved lists of the land granted to Michigan for Railroad purposes under the act of June, 1856, embracing nearly 614,000 acres, have been transmitted to the Governor of that State.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—About 500 illegal squatters are on the lands belonging to the New Indians in Kansas. The subject of prevailing intrusions of this character, which extensively prevails, occupies the attention of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, who contemplates the initiation of such measures as will at least lessen if not altogether remove these abuses, so dangerous to peaceful relations with the Indians, and from which the United States are bound to protect them under existing treaties.

Senor Serdo, accompanied by Senor Mata, has had a full and free conversation with the President on the subject of Mexican Affairs. It is represented that the interview was mutually gratifying and instructive. Serdo will remain in this country for several weeks.

TOLEDO, O., August 19.—The first train over the Dayton and Michigan Railroad arrived here at seven, this P. M., bringing a number of passengers from Cincinnati and Dayton.

LANCASTER, PA., August 19.—Lewis Seiter who has been twice tried and acquitted by the District Court of Philadelphia, for passing counterfeit coin, was convicted this evening by our Court of Quarter Sessions for passing counterfeit bank notes. He has not yet been sentenced.

WASHINGTON, August 18.—The President has recognized Franz August Hirsch as Consul at Boston, and Frederic Wilhelm Keutzer as Consul at New York, both for the free city of Bremen.

Ex-Minister Forsyth is among the recent arrivals at the National Hotel.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 19.—The Washington correspondent of the New York Herald says—Serious charges against Collector Shoemaker, of Detroit, are under consideration at the Treasury, and it is said he must follow in the footsteps of Mr. O'Fline.

Mr. Shallcross, Special Agent of the Post-office department, has returned from Chicago, having again investigated the affairs of Postmaster Cook.

The Postmaster General has not yet considered his report. Mr. Hall will not leave for Kentucky at present.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—The burning of G. B. Sloat & Co.'s extensive sewing machine manufactory and planing mills has thrown nearly seven hundred hands out of employment, but we learn that through the interprise of Messrs. S. & Co., their operatives will at once re-commence in commodious quarters, to be occupied until their new factory is finished.

THE SCANDINAVIAN PILLS AND PURIFIER.—CINCINNATI, July 1, 1858.—Dr. C. W. ROBACK.—Dear Sir:—In reply to inquiries made of me, it gives me pleasure to say, that Mrs. N. AYLER, of the Society of Friends, and widow of the late Dr. AYLER of Cincinnati, previous to her going East, expressed her confidence in the efficacy of your Scandinavian Remedies, and the benefit she derived from using them. She had been suffering from general prostration at times, being over seventy-six years of age, and opthalmia and inflammation of the face. Various remedies were resorted to without relief, when some friends recommended a course of your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills. They had the desired effect, and she was considered as restored to health.

I know many who have used your medicines, and speak decidedly of the benefits derived, thus testifying of their renovating influence in purifying the blood and giving vigor and energy to the system. They have my cordial approbation. Very respectfully your obedient servant, S. J. BROWNE.

Rev. Samuel J. BROWNE has been a devoted laborer in the cause of Christianity, in Cincinnati, for more than thirty years, as almost every old Cincinnatian knows. Such testimony, from such a source, is not to be passed over lightly. No other Proprietary Remedies ever presented to the public, ever received a tithe of the commendation from MEN OF STANDING, in every walk of life, that mine have done.—[See advertisement.

THE SEVENTH WONDER.

Of the wonders, world famous,
We, throughout our land, have seen
[illegible]
Best than SINGER'S Famed Machine,
Great success and universal,
Those who've tried them years have shown;
[illegible]
One should be in every home.

Thousands who, sad vigils keeping,
Oft in sorrows' night repine.
Hail with joy the dawn that's peeping—
[illegible]
'Tis they gladly hail and welcome
This great marvel of our day;
Wives and sisters, mothers, children—
All, their joyful tribute pay.

Thirty thousand now are using
These Machines throughout our land;
Stitching, felling, hemming, gathering,
[illegible] the aid of hand.
Tens of thousands have intention—
And are using every means—
Soon to buy this great invention.
SINGER'S world-renowned MACHINES!

Stitching linen, cloth or leather,
On each side the work's the same;
More employed than any other.
Wonderful, indeed, their fame.
Lower [illegible], with guides and hemmers,
[illegible]
Also, made in handsome cases.
SINGER'S NOW IS THE MACHINE! [illegible]

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of popularity is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your's surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think [illegible] in the State. As to the penmanship department, you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

E. SHAFFER.

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever penned a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

☞ R. F. ARMSTRONG, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the cues fly.—MCGRAW observes the liberal custom he has.

☞ Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at BUDDELL'S if you want a superior article.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our portland friend J. M. DENIG on Town street, is [illegible] this sparkling beverage in [illegible], and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. G. Osterman on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city, and the prices such as will suit the times.

☞ SHATTUCK & WASSON are the agents of Knabe & Co's. celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world as unsurpassed, unequaled.

☞ Dr. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

☞ CHARLEY BRETTOPLE is sending out some of the handsomest suits we have seen. There is want of the Spring style for summer wear should [illegible].

☞ FRANK HERITAGE, at Winchester's Conversation Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

☞ KENNEDY has the latest periodicals.

AFTER THE BATTLE.

The drums are all muffled; the bugles are still;
There's a pause in the valley—a halt on the hill;
And bearers of standards swerve back with a thrill;
Where sheaves of the dead bar the way;
For a great field is reaped Heaven's garners to fill,
And stern Death holds his harvest to-day.

There's a voice on the winds like a spirit's low cry—
'Tis the muster-roll sounding—and who shall reply?
Not those whose wan faces glare white to the sky,
With eyes fixed so steadfast and dimly,
As they wait that last trump which they may not defy,
Whose hands clutch the sword hilt so grimly.

The brave heads, late lifted, are solemnly bowed,
And the riderless chargers stand quivering and cowed,
As the burial requiem is chanted aloud,
The groans of the death-stricken drowning;
While Victory looks on like a queen, pale and proud,
Who waits till to-morrow her crowning.

There is no mocking blazon, as clay sinks to clay;
The vain pomps of peace-time are all swept away
In the terrible face of the dread battle-day;
Nor coffins nor shroudings are here;
Only that which lay where was thickest the fray—
A rent casque and a headless spear.

Far away, tramp on tramp, peals the march of the foe,
Like a storm-wave's retreating—spent, fitful and slow,
With sounds like their spirits that faint as they go,
By yon red-glowing river, whose waters
Shall darken with sorrow the land where they flow
To the eyes of her desolate daughters.

They are fled—they are gone; but oh! not as they came,
In the pride of those numbers they staked on the game,
Never more shall they stand in the vanguard of fame,
Never lift the stained sword which they drew;
Never more shall they boast of a glorious name,
Never march with the leal and the true.

Where the wreck of our legions lay stranded and torn,
They stole on our ranks in the mists of the morn;
Like the giant of those their strength it was shorn
Ere those mists had rolled up to the sky;
From the flash of our steel a new day-break seemed born
As we sprang up—to conquer or die.

The tumult is silenced; the death lots are cast;
And the heroes of battle are slumbering their last;
Do you dream of yon pale form that rode on the blast?
Would ye free it once more, O ye brave?
Yes! the broad road to Honor is red where ye passed,
And of glory ye asked but—a grave!

What a Blind Man Can Do.

The Springfield Republican gives the annexed interesting account of the remarkable achievements of a blind genius now living in Ludlow:

He is a young man, twenty-four years of age, who has been blind since he was two years old, and who does not remember that he ever saw. The circumstances which attended the loss of his vision are almost too horrible for belief, yet we have no reason to doubt them as they have been related to us. His widowed mother married a drunkard, and this stepfather, conceiving a spite against the child, undertook, when intoxicated, to put his eyes out. Going further in his diabolical purpose, he was about to thrust a red hot poker down his throat, when the frightened but desperate mother interfered and prevented it. The child was then thrown down a cellar, where he lay all night, taking a cold which so far aggravated the preceding inflammation of the eyes, that the sclerotic coat of each was burst. Of all this he has no memory, and a blessed thing it is for him. At nine years of age he lost his mother, and in that loss became perfectly friendless. From that day to this, he has mainly taken care of himself, and now, although cheated by rascally agents and laboring under every possible disadvantage, has money at interest.

Now let us see what this man has done. He is a mechanic, and knows every part of a steam engine, as well as if he could see. He is an engineer, and has not only had charge of a stationary engine, but has run as an engineer on the Mad River Railroad in Ohio. Of course he ran with a look-out, and between this look-out and himself he had arranged a series of abbreviations of language, so that he could learn from him the position of any object on the track instantaneously. He was engineer, let it be remembered, of a passenger train! What is more remarkable than all, is that he has made a beautiful little steam engine with his own hands, so small that he can carry the whole of it in his pocket, and get up steam at pleasure. This might well be considered accomplishment enough for one blind man, but this is but a beginning.

He has a great genius for music, and possesses a voice which, in many characteristics, is without doubt the most wonderful voice in the world. On Tuesday evening of the present week he was invited to a private house in this city to give an exhibition of his musical abilities, and a few musical men and women were invited to hear him, all of whom will bear testimony to their astonishment and delight. We suppose that all musical people will shrug their shoulders with incredulity when we tell them that his voice has the compass of five octaves, yet such is the fact that he demonstrated to this company. Of course, the lowest notes are guttural, and the highest are falsetto; but the falsetto notes are pleasant and good, and the gutturals true tones, and as musical as such tones can be. We are not sufficiently versed in musical terms to tell what his lowest note is, but it is the lowest note in the piano, arranged upon the usual scale—or triple C, as he calls it. His chest tones are excellent, and although Carl Formes may have more power, his quality is no better, while in his lower notes he goes down "out of sight" of Carl Formes altogether. We can give no idea of this voice by any comparison, for we have never heard a voice with which to compare it.

Of course, with such a voice as this, the owner is tempted to try tricks. The most interesting of these was the application of it to seven purposes. He began by singing, in a delicate soprano the first lines of "Oft in the stilly night;" then, as he proceeded, he slid into the alto, then into the tenor, then into the bass, and then into the 'double bass,' and octave below. This finished the tune, when he rose, and turning his back to the audience, executed some most excellent feats of ventriloquism, and wound up by imitating an old fashioned spinning wheel so perfectly that the assembly was thrown into roars of laughter. He usually accompanies himself with a melodeon, to which he has added a swell of his own invention that produces all the effect of the swell in the organ.

One of the most delightful of his performances was a solo on the cornet, he playing it with one hand, and accompanying himself on the piano with the other. Upon this instrument, and in this way, he played a few airs with great sweetness and taste, and executed some very difficult variations. The instrument itself has been the subject of his improving hand, but in what respect we do not know.—Added to all this, he plays the guitar and other instruments, and is a leader and teacher of bands. He seemed to take a great deal of interest in explaining his steam engine to the company, and to be thoroughly versed in mechanical matters.

This man's name is W. A. Carns. He was born, we think, in one of the Western States, and has lived where he could get a chance. He's of medium height, thickset, modest in demeanor, interesting in conversation, and has received an education in some asylum for the blind, for which he appears unboundedly grateful. He is now engaged in the invention of some means by which the blind may be enabled to have their regular newspapers, and if anybody can accomplish so benevolent a result he will do it.

The Tuscarawas Valley.

[From the Iron Valley Times.]

Reader, have you ever ascended to the top of one of the gigantic hills which form the western bank of the Tuscarawas? If you have not, do so, and deny your eye no longer one of the richest treats scenery can give. In regard to the picturesque beauty there presented there can be but one opinion—it is unrivalled.

You may read, with wonder and admiration, the picture which the poetic and philosophical traveler has drawn of Italy's classic plains and of the wild mountain scenery of Switzerland, or your eye may contemplate with rapture the artist's pictured semblance of history's most famous landscape, yet you can discover, if you will but look, beauty in the scenery which surrounds your own home almost equal to the most celebrated which other lands afford. It cannot, at least, but command the admiration of any person possessing a capacity for the appreciation of the beautiful.

It would indeed be difficult to conceive a prospect more supremely lovely than is unwrapt to the eye of him who scales our towering hills. As a map, before him is stretched the valley—beautiful as Bulwer's Ideal Como! The wild and magnificent grandeur of uncultivated nature—her tall trees waving their long branches to the passing breeze, her rude cliffs and dense underbrush around him, combining as lovely mountain scenery as the imagination would desire to conceive.—Before, in beautiful contrast, extends the valley. Two towns, with their busy multitudes engaged in the various avocations of civilized life—huge factories, smoking foundries, quiet churches, magnificent school houses, all enter into and make up a complete picture of refined and civilized life. The iron-nerved engine, racing with lighting speed over the quiet plain, and the antiquated canal, like some relic of an olden day, wiring through the grassy fields, exhibit the more gigantic works of man, and show the onward march of improvement.

The rich grain-fields, in harvest time, tossing their golden heads in compliment to the cooling breeze, the groves of fruit and ornamental trees, melodious with the sweet notes of nature's own untutored songsters, tell the fertility of the soil.

The murmuring river, dragging, "like a wounded serpent, its slow length along," mingles with much of the beautiful a bit of the truly sublime. The whole presenting in one grand panoramic view, the magnificence and grandeur of nature where it is unharmed by the woodman's ax and untouched by civilization's transforming hand, together with the refinement, advancement and beauty of art and cultivated taste.

But our valley is not alone rich in poetic scenery and agricultural productions. Its mineral resources are just beginning to attract attention. Its coal and iron ore are perhaps unsurpassed by any section in the State. Scarcely a hill which contains not a wealth of one or the other. Yearly these interests are increasing in importance, and it is fair to presume that ere long they will constitute our chief element of wealth. It is indeed to be wondered that men have not before been awakened to a consciousness of the fact, but content with the agricultural product of the earth's surface, were willing to permit the world of wealth in its bowels to slumber undisturbed. It is now, however, arresting the attention of eastern capitalists, as well as arousing the energies of our own citizens. It is to be hoped, and it is but a reasonable presumption, that soon furnaces and various iron works will be erected in every portion of our valley.

All we need is enterprise. Enterprise is the touchstone of every success, and let but a sufficient interest be once aroused, and the Tuscarawas Valley will stand without a rival in the West.

The Ill Treatment and Beasts of Burden.

A merciful man is merciful to animals. To such, therefore, no admonition is necessary. There are others, however, to whom this benevolent quality seems greatly wanting, whilst manifestations of its opposite, whether intentional, or through thoughtlessness, frequently are displayed towards dumb beasts, especially in hot weather. "We have," says the Philadelphia Bulletin, "a word to whisper in the ears of our drivers of horses and mules.—We would not speak it in any spirit of fault-finding or dictation, but in a simple, honest, earnest pity for the poor dumb brutes, which do our work for us in all seasons, patiently and faithfully, but which have no tongue to tell us when they are sick, or weak, or overworked, nor to appeal to us against our abuse or cruelty.—There is something in this defenceless and forced silence of the poor animal that is toiling in our service, which touches our better sensibilities keenly whenever we see him overtasked, or otherwise maltreated. None of us know, because the silent submissive sufferer cannot tell us, how often we drive him beyond his powers when he is out of health, or beat him inhumanly about the head or flanks for some little awkwardness which he cannot avoid, or some occasional baulking or sluggishness, which may arise from weariness or distress. We have seen rough, coarse, heartless men jerk, and swear at, and batter with the butt end of their whips, or with any club they could, in their passion, snatch up, a poor mule or horse, which had failed in some effort too great for its strength, or exhibited some trifling and natural sulkiness into which it had been vexed and irritated by the atrocious brutality of a stupid and bad-tempered driver. Scenes of this kind, which may be almost daily witnessed in our streets, are enough to make one's very heart bleed. We beg those who are entrusted with the care and use of our draft animals, in this oppressive summer heat, to be forbearing and patient and kind towards them—to remember that they have feelings to be hurt; strength to be exhausted by overwork in the hot sun; but no freedom to rest when they are tired, and no speech to implore consideration for their weakness or their wants."

We cordially agree with our contemporary in its just and timely remarks upon the subject, proper attention to which may not only save much pain—perhaps the lives—of many faithful animals. An unfeeling driver, or one who wantonly inflicts cruelty upon defenseless brutes, must be destitute of proper human feeling and the nobler elements of our better nature.

NO DANGER.—"There must be no Douglas issues in the next State convention," exclaim three or four Democratic editors in this State, and if we really supposed that they were sincere in expressing any such fears we would endeavor to console them by proving beyond all question that there is not the least probability of any division of the party upon the propriety of sustaining Senator Douglas. We must find some Democrats who are opposed to Senator Douglas, before we can get up an issue on him.—Milwaukee News.

☞ The Petersburg (Va.) Express says that a showman pitched his tent in that town, Thursday, and absorbed some ten cent pieces in showing a zebra, which proved to be a mule painted. Under threats of lynch law, the zebra man left, protesting, however, that he had been deceived in the purchase.

That the air we breathe teems with myriads of living creatures may be easily shown.

If a stream of air is carried through distilled water (which is of course absolutely pure,) and the vessel containing the water is immediately corked and allowed to remain for a few months at a moderate summer temperature and is then opened, the water will emit the disagreeable odor of animal putrefaction. The same phenomenon will be noticed if snow be gathered, melted, and placed in a bottle. That the odor is not due to the presence of ammonia washed from the atmosphere, is proved by the fact that this odor cannot be detected emanating from the water within the first few days, whatever the temperature may be; but when some time has elapsed—sufficient for the development and death of the animated beings in it—the odor of putrefaction is perceived.

Then again, according to Dr. Riddell, if a drop of distilled water, treated as above mentioned, is evaporated on a clean watch glass, a light colored stain will be seen. If the glass be now heated short of redness, the stain is blackened. If heated to redness in contact with the air, the stain entirely disappears, except a mere trace of ash; thus showing that the material observed is some form of organised being. If a glass vessel containing ice is suspended over moist alluvial land, and the dew that gathers upon its exterior is collected, it will appear at first like pure clean water; but soon, according to Moscati, an Italian savan, little flakes appear possessed of properties peculiar to animalized matter, and finally, at the end of some days, the liquid will putrify completely.

It is impossible to determine the forms or habits of these invisible creatures; but their existence is demonstrated by the foregoing observations. Microscopists have suspected the existence of such beings from observing the movements of the smallest of the visible tribes of the animalcules. These may be seen darting here and there in a drop of water, when no other variety is visible, evidently in pursuit of some sort of prey. A single one will be seen still for a moment; then it darts forward rapidly, and stops, its body writhing, as if in a struggle with its prey.

If the observer will take a solution of meat, and heat it in a closed vessel to a degree a little above the boiling point, which destroys all animal germs, and close the vessel tight, no animals can be seen on it and no putrefaction will occur, no matter how long it is kept. But if the cork be withdrawn, it is straightway peopled with varied forms of living creatures. If, on the other hand, the vessel is covered with an animal membrane, then all the usual chemical changes take place, but no living things are developed.

These facts are of great importance, as taken in connection with the belief growing in the minds of medical men, that animal, or even vegetable spores, suspended in the air, carried in ships or wafted by winds, are reproduced in countless millions wherever they go, and finding the conditions necessary for their development, may be after all the mysterious causes of desolating epidemics.

A STRANGE FISH.—A new and strange species of fish, for our waters, was captured in the Great Ogeechee river, Georgia, a few days ago, at a place near the mouth of Harvey's Cut, just below Genesis Point. It was taken in a net set for sturgeon, and measured six feet one inch in length.—Its head was put in brine to preserve it, and it takes a large sized butter keg to accommodate it. Its scales measured not less than one and a half inches in diameter, and are of the most beautifully burnished silver color. The head is very massive, supplied with six rows of small dull teeth on either side, projecting at an angle of about forty-five degrees from a very heavy and powerful lower jaw-bone, which has only a muscular connection with the outer walls of the head, and seems to be the posterior portion of the tongue. There are but two rows of teeth on either side of the upper jaw. The gills are massive, and arranged in layers eight on either side. Eyes very large and projecting, and situated near the mouth. The latter is small, with lower lip projecting some inches beyond the upper, and not unlike that of a horse, though sharper. As a whole, the fish is a most beautiful specimen of its tribe.—The gentleman who captured it, tried a steak from its body, and says the meat is of a dark color, but quite delicate, and free from the strong taste of the "drum" or "bass." Quite a school of them were noticed about the spot, where this was taken, skimming the surface of the water, and a party of gentlemen are intending to make an effort to get one with a hook and line.

IMPORTANT TO ENDORSERS.—At the last session of the Court of Appeals, at Utica, N. Y., a case was decided which is of much importance to the business community. The points made on the trial can be gathered from the following notice of the trial: The defendant became the second endorser of a promissory note, made for the purpose of taking up three notes of the same maker, (who was insolvent,) but endorsed by other parties, who had been charged by notice of non-payment—such notes being then held and owned by a bank which has discounted them. The note was delivered for that purpose to the plaintiff, who was an endorser upon the protested notes, and who gave no present consideration for it. Held, that the obligation of the maker to pay the prior note was sufficient consideration as to him, and supported the undertaking of the defendant as an accommodation endorser. The holder, under such circumstances, can recover upon the note without having taken upon the note hold by the bank. The plaintiff, at the maturity of the note, directed a notary public to give notice of the non-payment to the defendants, and to omit giving notice to a prior endorser. Held, that evidence was inadmissible that such prior endorser would have been charged but for that direction. It belongs to each endorser to see for himself that prior endorsers are charged, and the holder owes no duty to them in that respect.

STEEPLE MATCHED BY A BARBER.—The London Morning Star publishes a letter describing the feat of a barber on the spire of Salisbury Cathedral, the tallest in England, being 400 feet in height, which may be fairly set off against M. Blondin's dancing over the Falls:

SIR: Having observed in your impression of to-day a paragraph, headed "Daring Feat," recounting the ascent of Salisbury spire recently made by James Matthews, for the purpose of oiling the vane at the top of it, perhaps it may not be uninteresting to your readers to be informed that this is, and has been, a not unfrequent proceeding as long as my memory, extending over more than thirty years, serves me; and further, that some few years ago, I think in 1850, eight persons ascended to the spire, accompanied by a hairdresser of the city, and seating themselves allowed their heads to be there and then partially deprived of nature's covering through his agency.

"My mother," said a dandy, "was renowned for her beauty. She was certainly the handsomest woman I had ever seen." "Ah," said Talleyrand, taking his measure at once, "it was your father, then, who was not good looking?"

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

BUDDING.—The present is the proper season for budding cherries, apples and pears. When the stocks suffer from drought the bark will not part from the wood, and the operation of budding cannot be performed successfully. We worked cherries two weeks ago, and then the bark peeled readily, but was scarcely ripe enough. In former numbers of the Farmer, the manner of operating was fully described. All that is necessary, however, is a good sharp budding knife, and little strips of bass matting for tying. Select good ripe buds from a healthy tree, and always work of thrifty stocks. Never use poor, sickly plants for buds or stocks, as the product will be diseased and short lived. Peaches need not be budded until the end of August, or beginning of September.

Cherries on Mazzard stocks should be worked close to the ground; on the Morello, they may be worked high, especially if they grow in a region where the trees are apt to be injured by the cold of winter. The Mahaleb, or perfumed cherry, is used for dwarfs; they are also worked low.

Apples, pears and peaches should all be worked close to the ground. Care should be taken to loosen the tying as the limb swells. If removed too soon, the bud will be likely to die. If too late, the bark may be cut through, and the bud be destroyed from this cause. Care and attention are very necessary in successful budding.—Ohio Farmer, July 23.

FRENCH ROLLS.—Two pounds of flour, two ounces of butter, two eggs, one teacupful of yeast, a saltspoonful salt; milk sufficient to make a dough. Rub the butter and flour together; then whisk the eggs, and add with the salt yeast, and as much milk as will make a nice dough. Knead well and replace it in the pan to rise. When light, knead it lightly; make them out into cakes as large round as a very small tea cup, and about a quarter of an inch in thickness. Place them on slightly buttered tins; cover with a clean towel, and set them in a warm, elevated place, to rise. When light, bake in a quick oven. If for breakfast, set them to rise the evening previous; make them out the first thing in the morning; place them in the oven to rise, and by the time the oven is hot, they will be sufficiently light to bake. If wanted for tea, make them immediately after breakfast, as above directed.

GARDEN WORK.—As soon as your roses are done blooming, if you wish to increase them, take the young shoots, and about eight inches from the top, cut, below an eye, half through, and then slit upward an inch or two through the pith; put a bit of chip in to keep the slit open; bend down the branch, and cover the portion thus operated on with an inch or two of earth, and put a brick upon it. It will soon send out roots, and by October may be separated from the parent plant. Quinces, gooseberries, and almost all shrubs which branch near the ground, may be propagated in this way. Still keep down weeds. Sow successive crops of corn, peas and salads, for fall use. Begin to gather such seeds as ripen early. Take up tulips, hyacinths, &c., as soon as the tops ripen.

POTATO ROLLS.—One pound potatoes, two ounces butter, one teaspoonful salt, one teacupful yeast, two pounds flour, milk to make a soft dough. Boil and mash the potatoes while warm with the butter, a little salt, and milk sufficient to make them as soft as a batter. When cool add the flour, and mix into a light dough; if necessary, more milk may be added. Knead well; return it to the pan in which it was mixed, and let it rise; when light, knead it over again; then make it into small cakes, place them on slightly buttered tins, and put them in a warm place to rise. When light, bake in a quick oven. When done, wash the tops lightly with a little water, and cover them with a clean towel, to make them soft.

LADY CAKE.—Three-quarters of a pound of butter, three-quarters of a pound of sugar, one pound of flour, the whites of sixteen eggs, half an ounce of bitter almonds, two table spoonfuls of rose-water. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream; pour boiling water over the almonds, let them stand a little time, blanch them, pound them in a mortar, adding but a few at a time, with a little rose-water, to prevent them from getting oily, add to them the remainder of the rose-water, then stir the almonds into the butter and sugar. Whisk the whites very dry, and stir them gradually into the butter and sugar with the flour. Butter your pans, and bake them in a moderate oven. It may be baked in one large cake.

DECLINE OF WHEAT GROWING.—At a late meeting of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Society, Dr. Alwin called attention to the interesting fact that there was a decline in the yield of wheat, to the acre, in the grain States. In Ohio, a State but little over fifty years old, the crop had fallen off from forty bushels to the acre to about sixteen; while in the best portions of New York, where thirty bushels used to be considered a fair crop only twelve bushels are now raised. The falling off in other States has been equally marked; but while this was the fact with the wheat crops, he was glad to know that the amount of corn produced to the acre, had largely increased, and was still increasing enormously.

A POULTICE FOR FELONS, &C.—Take Castile soap and scrape a large or small quantity, according to the amount wanted, and simmer in new milk till it forms a paste as thick as cream, cool and apply. You will find this one of the best poultices for felons, or any kind of swelling that needs poulticing, and far superior to bread and milk. Try it ye afflicted.

SIMPLE SEED CAKE.—Two pounds flour, half pound butter, one pound sugar, one tablespoonful saleratus, one tablespoonful carawayseed, half a pint of milk. Rub the flour, butter, sugar, and seed together; then add the milk and saleratus. Knead the dough well, roll it out, cut it in cakes, and bake them on slightly buttered tins in a quick oven.

TO CURE RHEUMATISM.—Take a large handful of wild blue flag-root, and as much black cohosh root, [pound fine;] put it into a quart of best brandy; let it stand a day or two, then take a tea-spoonful three times a day till nearly well. Then taper off gradually to one a day until cured. This is also a preventive.

SORGHO SEED CAKE.—Being requested by a friend to try it, I took a small batch to mill and got it ground and manufactured it into bread after the same fashion that you do buckwheat, and it made as good bread as does that grain. It is prepared as buckwheat.

STOCK.—Let stock of all sorts be salted sufficiently, this month. It is a good plan to have the rock salt at hand where they can take it as they will. A cool dark stable is the best place for them during the heat of the day, when the flies are very troublesome.

CURE FOR WARTS AND CORNS.—The bark of a willow tree, burnt to ashes, mixed with strong vinegar and applied to the parts, will remove corns or excrescences on any part of the body.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution, "Relative to an amendment to the Constitution providing for Annual Sessions of the General Assembly," is a true copy from the original roll on file in this office.

A. P. RUSSELL, Secretary of State.

AUDITOR'S OFFICE, FRANKLIN COUNTY, OHIO,
COLUMBUS, April 23, 1859.

I hereby certify that the foregoing Joint Resolution is correct as returned to this office.

JOHN PHILLIPS,
Auditor of Franklin County.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,

PHILADELPHIA,

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year are of great value.

By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

DR. STEWART

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of the most hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio but of the Eastern and Middle States, and Canada, where he has practiced.

Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.

Being naturally inclined to CONSUMPTION, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a malady, which under the old treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Conjointly with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by chemists too much for it.

Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Disease should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, suffer themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!

Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.

DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the state. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.

CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.

Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 25,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.

A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

Office hours 9 a. m., to 4 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.

☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.

DR. HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS,

AND

DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhœa proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. Jackson will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. ROBACK'S

SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, [illegible]

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence is in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost innumerable

Dyspepsia,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels, the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. AYER'S

Ague Cure.

FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF

Intermittent Fever or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers; indeed for the whole Class of Diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.

No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such a remedy we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants, and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally, or daily, while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents, if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled Dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included, which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799; that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852, and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with the other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathise with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 6th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories" as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending to that direction.

Resolved, That the condition of fugitive slaves upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretensions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect equality of the States of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of the Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any honorable acquisition with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro [illegible].

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; declaring that the laws of this State should be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the sectional, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to [illegible], calculated, at all events, to bring the name of [illegible] into contempt abroad.

FUNERAL OF A TARTAR CHIEF.—At a late meeting of the London Royal Historical Society, Mr. Atkinson, whose interesting travels among the Kirghiz, and other nomades of Siberia, have recently been published, delivered to the meeting "A Narrative of some of his Adventures among these rarely visited tribes," giving a graphic picture of their habits and manners. The following is an account of the funeral of a chief named, Darma-Sterin, who died near Semipalatinsk, when Mr. Atkinson was on a visit to the tribe:

"So soon as the chief was dead, messengers were sent off to invite the head men residing within a hundred miles, who all immediately repaired to the place. The body of the chief was laid out in his best attire, his chair of state was placed at his head, his saddle, arms and clothing were hung around, and silk curtains were suspended from the roof of his yourt. His wives and daughters, with the females of the tribe, knelt around, chanting the funeral dirge, in which the voices of men occasionally joined. While this was going on the funeral feast was preparing. Ten horses and a hundred sheep were slaughtered, and the flesh was thrown into numerous caldrons boiling over fires kindled in the ground, which were constantly kept stirred by men stripped to the waist. When sufficient quantity of food was dressed the feast began. The guests sat in a circle around the meat, the chiefs nearest the center, those of next degree next him, and the women outside.

The feast lasted seven days, during which 2,000 persons partook heartily in the consumption of mutton and horse flesh. On the eighth day the body was conveyed to the tomb on a camel; the camel also carried the chair of State. The two favorite horses of the chief followed, after which went the whole tribe singing the funeral hymn. On reaching the place of burial, the body was deposited in the grave, and the horses were forthwith slain, and placed beside the body of their master. When the grave was filled up, all returned to the encampment to continue the funeral feast, which was furnished by one hundred horses and 1,000 sheep, slaughtered for the occasion. The festival continued for several days after the burial, the chiefs and the family of the deceased chanting his praises every day, until all the guests had gradually departed for their homes. The dirge was kept up by the tribe for a considerable time afterwards; and the chanting was repeated every day, at sunrise and sunset, for a whole year. Mr. Atkinson dwelt on the very impressive nature of the ceremony—the wailing music of the funeral chants—the sorrow, apparently at least, exhibited by an immense concourse of mourners, mingled with the almost savage accompaniments of the feast; all this, in the midst of a desert, which seemed of unlimited extent, produced an effect which an Englishman finds it difficult to picture to himself."

A letter from Japan gives some particulars of the manners and customs of that peculiar people. In some respects they appear to be more virtuous than people boasting of a higher civilization. Malversation by a functionary, embezzlement of public funds, extortion, bribery of officials, coining of false money, murder and robbery, are punished with death, and not only of the guilty person, but of his father, children and even all his male relatives, who are executed at the same moment, however distant they may be one from another. This system, which is repugnant to European notions, and to sound principles of justice, appears to be adopted by the Japanese from the belief that crime is owing to bad education.

The mode of punishment adopted in Japan are of different sorts, but all are horrible. The principal is crucifixion, and is reserved for traitors, murderers, and incendiaries. The culprit is fastened on the cross head downwards, and is left to die, unless he obtains the favor of being dispatched by stabs from a poignard. For parricide and adultery, culprits are plunged into boiling oil. Petty robberies, insults, calumny, fraud, even at play, and false testimony before magistrates are punished by hanging or beheading. If the offenders be gentlemen or soldiers, their bowels are opened—they have even the privilege of performing the operation on themselves. Pecuniary fines are almost unknown. The corporal punishment of the whip and the bastinado are reserved for slaves and servants, and are inflicted by their masters, not by public executioners. The Japanese consider corporal punishment so degrading that mothers never strike their offspring.

Although the climate is enervating, yet children are brought up hardily. They are made to bear hunger, thirst, cold, pain, excessive labor, and the rigor of the seasons. Horror of falsehood and fraud, and love of modesty, justice, and virtue, are diligently inculcated. One of the results of this system of education is to inspire the Japanese with a passion for books, which cause surprise to the European visitors.

The bookselling trade in Japan is subdued to no restriction, and there are everywhere, even in towns of small population, numerous book shops. Great part of the literature of the Japanese is Chinese; and their knowledge of arts and agriculture is derived from the same people. The language commonly employed is every year becoming more Chinese in character. And yet the Japanese despise the Chinese; they do so because from their early age they have been taught that the Chinese are not soldiers; that in ancient times a Japanese army defeated an immense Chinese army in the Corea; and that Coxinga himself, who was the scourge of the sea and the terror of the Chinese Empire, was a Japanese—as were also the greater part of his companions.

Horace Greeley Among the Saints—He Defends the Rights of Woman.

The Leavenworth Times says:

"We have received the Valley Tan of July 26, it contains a long account of Horace Greeley's sojourn in the Valley of the Saints.

Upon his arrival (July 13,) he was waited upon by the Typographical and Press Association of Great Salt Lake City, who tendered to him a public reception.

This being accepted, the court room of the Council House was arranged for his benefit in a style of great magnificence. Horace, on being introduced to the audience, made a long speech in which he dwelt mainly upon the typographical profession.

He was received with great respect by the Mormons, and frequently cheered.

Mormon leaders followed the philosopher of the N. Y. Tribune. Between their speeches he made a remark to the following effect:

However much I may like the Mormons, there is one thing that I have noticed. I have read your journal often, and have met many Mormons, but I have never yet seen an expression, or heard a Mormon come out boldly and decidedly as Anti-Slavery. I would like them much better if this thing could be corrected.

During the evening, Mr. Greeley was called upon for a few remarks upon the Woman's Rights question, upon which he arose and said that he would dispose of that in a few sentences. He believed that women had the right to do what is right; that it was right to do everything that was right, and that they had, or ought to have, the right to do whatever they could do right."

The Washington Monument, &c.

Lieut. Ives, the architect and engineer in charge of the Washington National Monument, has made an official report to the society, in which he says that when raised to the height of six hundred feet the entire weight of the shaft and foundation will be 70,000 tons. The weight of the structure in its present condition is forty thousand tons. He has been unable to detect any appearance of settling or insecurity. By scientific calculations he has arrived at the conclusion that the weight alone of the monument at full height would offer a resistance nearly eight times greater than the overturning effort of the heaviest tempest to which it would probably ever be exposed.

It was proposed to the Monument Society many years ago to surround the foot of the obelisk with a base of a pantheon form, and an engraving was made of the monument as it would appear when completed, in accordance with that plan. An impression has created in this way throughout the country that the engraved design has been adopted and cannot be deviated from, without tearing down what has been already built; but as it has not been the intention of the society to accept the plan referred to, and as the error which exist seems to have an injurious effect, Lieut. Ives suggests the expediency of notifying the public officially that the obelisk is the only portion of the monument, the form of which has been decided upon, and that the determination of the design for the base is still open for consideration. In this suggestion of Lieut. Ives the society has concurred.

The balance in the United States Treasury on Monday last was $4,123,000; the amount of receipts for the week ending on that day, $1,600,000; drafts paid, $7,446,000; drafts issued, $1,697,000.

AN EDITOR IN PURSUIT OF HIS POCKET-BOOK. The editor of the Nashua Telegraph gives a readable chapter of his experience in Boston on a recent occasion:

"The other night, when we stayed in Boston, we got up in the morning—(a very singular coincidence, some people may think)—and came down into the office of one of the big hotels, when we suddenly discovered that our pocket-book was missing from its accustomed pocket. There was rather a lively 'getting up stairs,' on the part of this deponent. Everybody knows, in a state of excitement, how very active the mind and imagination are. As we mounted the stairs we queried with ourself, 'are we a robbed individual?' Has some scamp of a 'nipper thief' been practising his art at our cost? and various other queries equally unanswered and unanswerable, at that instant, rushed through our mind. And then we imagined, if it was so, what our city cotemporaries would say of it. One, to add meanness to the robbery, would head his paragraph, 'A Country Editor Robbed.' Another, to add heinousness to the crime, would startle the world with, 'A Country Mayor Robbed.' Another, to excite indignation and curiosity, too, would commence an 'Atrocious Outrage.' And so we went on, and before we had run through the probabilities in that regard, we had reached the room we had occupied, and there was the pocket-book all safe and sound. But there wasn't much money in it."

A CHILD'S FAITH.—In the Highlands of Scotland there is a mountain gorge twenty feet in width and two hundred feet in depth. Its perpendicular walls are bare of vegetation, save in their crevices, in which grow numerous wild flowers of rare beauty. Desirous of obtaining specimens of these mountain beauties, some scientific tourist once offered a Highland boy a handsome gift if he would consent to be lowered down the cliff by a rope, and would gather a little basketful of them. The boy looked wistfully at the money, for his parents were poor; but when he gazed at the yawning chasm, he shuddered, shrank back and declined. But filial love was strong within him, and after another glance at the gifts and at the terrible fissure, his heart grew strong, his eyes flashed, and he said:

"I'll go if my father will hold the rope!"

And then, with unshrinking nerves, cheek unblanched, and heart firmly strong, he suffered his father to put the rope about him, lower him into the wild abyss, and to suspend him there while he filled his little basket with the coveted flowers. It was a daring deed, but his faith in the strength of his father's arm, and the love of his father's heart, gave him courage and power to perform it.

OHIO STATE NEWS.

—The Democrats of Morrow, at their County Convention on Monday, nominated Dr. [illegible] for Representative.

—The Republicans of Clark, in Convention on Saturday, nominated John Howell to represent that county in the State Legislature.

—The Democrats of Fairfield county, on Saturday, renominated Major Carlisle as their candidate for Representative.

—The Democracy in the Senatorial District composed of Fairfield, Hocking and Athens, met at Logan on Tuesday and renominated Col. N. Rohleigh by acclamation.

—Henry Weaver was elected President of the Champaign County Bank, in the place of S. H. Winslow, resigned, at a meeting of the stockholders on Saturday.

—The Republicans of the district composed of Trumbull and Mahoning counties have nominated J. Dodson Cox; and the Republicans of the district comprising Summit and Portage counties have nominated J. A. Garfield, for the State Senate.

—Bonfield's pail factory on the west side of Division street, Cleveland, a large dry house, a building for storing staves and lumber, and one or two small buildings, in connection with the factory, were consumed by fire on Wednesday afternoon. The loss is estimated at $12,000. Insurance $6,000.

—A man from Richland county, recently returned from California, bringing with him some $15,000 in gold coin. Being of a suspicious turn, he hid his money in the earth, and kept the place of deposit a profound secret. One day he went out riding on a young and fractious horse, which threw him off and broke his neck. Now, nobody knows where the money is; but the people in the vicinity are prospecting for the placer with great activity, though hitherto unsuccessfully.

—Fifty-four car loads of fat cattle have been shipped eastward from London, Madison county, so far of the present month.

—The Republicans of Wood county, in Convention at Perrysburg on Wednesday, nominated George Lasky, of Gilead, for Senator of that district.

—A brakesman on the C. C. & C. R. R. named Michael Carroll has been held to bail at Cleveland to take his trial on a charge of rape on a girl named Sarah Douglas.

—An Irishman was run over by a train on the Central Ohio Railroad near Newark on Saturday last. Both his arms were taken off—one above the wrist, and the other below the elbow.

—Judge Ranney, the Democratic candidate for Governor, while speaking at McConnelsville, Morgan county, a few days ago, was taken suddenly ill, and had to leave the stand in the middle of his speech. His illness was but temporary.

—The Military Encampment of the 10th Division, 1st Brigade O. V. M., which was to have taken place at Cleveland next week, has been postponed to the 28th, 29th and 30th of September, to ensure the attendance of Gov. Chase and other military gentlemen. So says the Leader.

PIGS TAKING OPIUM.—A London agricultural paper (the Field) says that the opiate in the flower of the poppy fattens pigs by making them sleep more. One of their correspondents writes:—"In a sandy field of mine, a part of which has been dug up and not planted, a large quantity of poppies grew and completely covered the ground. Not knowing what to do with them, I asked a farmer how I should act, and he advised me to give them to the pigs. This I did, and was surprised to find how fond they were of them—eating them up clean, and with evident relish and preferring them to other food as long as they lasted. The pigs improved in flesh, and one of them which was naturally noisy became quiet even when his feeding time came round. No doubt the poppies had some somniferous effect; but no injurious symptoms followed, and the bowels were not constipated, as I thought would perhaps have been the case. I had never heard of it before; and perhaps this may induce others whose land produces a large crop of poppies, to try this novel way of feeding their pigs."

THE VALUE OF HEBREW.—A German paper relates the following anecdote, prefixing it by the query "What is the use of Hebrew?" An eminent Parisian financier, of the Jewish faith knew the secret of the recent armistice several days before it was actually concluded, and he was desirous of communicating intelligence of the coming event to the heads of his house at Berlin. But how was it to be done? The electric wire is by no means a safe confidant for a secret. The banker hit upon a device. He wrote a telegraphic dispatch and concluded it in the following words: "Herr Scholem will shortly arrive." Scholem is a Hebrew word signifying Peace. In the Berlin house where the Hebrew language was understood, the true meaning of the announcement of Herr Scholem's expected arrival was readily interpreted. [illegible]

A State Temperance Convention will be held in Boston, on Tuesday, Sept. 13. The call emanates from the State Temperance Alliance, and one object of the meeting will be to organize the Alliance. The Boston Traveler says: "There is considerable feeling just now among the temperance men of the State, relating to the recent action of the Committee on the Revision of the Statutes; that committee having struck out the cider clause of the prohibitive liquor law. An expression of the public sentiment of the State on this point will undoubtedly be given at the Convention."

A correspondent of the Petersburg Express, writing from Raleigh, N. C., gives an account of a very distressing accident that happened near that city. He says that a son of the Hon. Kenneth Rayner—a fine promising youth, about 13 years old—was hunting with a shot gun, in company with his brother, several years younger than himself. The gun went off accidentally, the whole load passing through the head of the elder, and producing instant death.

Punch thinks a medicine pledge is fearfully wanted in England. He says in no other country is so much medicine drunk. When the teetotallers have put down the drinking of spirits, they must direct their attention to the putting down of the enormous consumption of medicine. The drug shop is almost as destructive an agent as the public house; and where you find the one, you may be pretty sure that the other is not very far off.

SONS OF MALTA.—The members of the Order of Sons of Malta are making preparations for a grand tournament near Washington on the of September. It intended to make one of 15th the most magnificent tournaments ever seen in the country—and Knights from every State in this Union will enter the lists.

James C. Pratt, in a communication to the St. Paul Times, says: "I was at Yellow Medicine during the recent payment of the Upper Sioux. About one hundred of the red men were sheared and dressed in the apparel of white men. Previous to the operation, Superintendent Cullen addressed them through an interpreter, and stated that he wished to have them vote at the next election, and vote the Democratic ticket!"

Accounts from New Hampshire speak of a severe drought. A letter from N. H., dated Aug. 22, says: "We are having a most severe drought, and my corn, &c., which appeared promising two weeks ago, will, I fear, be destroyed. We have had only two showery days for two months." Another letter from Plymouth, N. H., says that all the rain in that vicinity for six week's past would not equal half an hour's steady rain, and fears were entertained that the standing crops would prove an utter failure.

PUTTING SOLDIERS TO A GOOD USE.—In consequence of the difficulty experienced by many of the agriculturists in Kent, England, in obtaining a sufficient number of hands for reaping operations, orders have been forwarded giving permission for a large number of the troops belonging to the three battalions of infantry to be placed at the disposal of these farmers who may require their services.

"OLD KNOX."—Knox county, Indiana, was the third county organized in the Northwestern Territory, now embracing the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and part of Minnesota. Her organization took place on the 8th of January, 1790. Washington county, Ohio, was the first county organized within the Territory, (July 26, 1788,) and Hamilton, Ohio, the second, (Jan. 1st, 1790.)

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The administration has received assurances from the government of Costa Rica of its preparation to appoint, in conjunction with that of the United States, a Commissioner, to settle all claims of our citizens against that Republic. It is presumed that this Commissioner will be appointed shortly after the arrival of Minister Dimitry at San Jose.

Captain Marcy, of the Infantry, has been appointed by the President as Paymaster in the army, in place of Brevet Lieut. Col. Coffee, resigned.

The President, to-day, extended the hospitalities of the White House to Senors Mata and Lerdo.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 24.—The Democratic State Convention met to-day, and was the largest and most stormy ever held here. There were 2,000 persons present during the session. Six ballots were taken, when E. R. V. Wright, of Hudson county, was nominated as candidate for Governor. The next highest competitor was Charles Skelton, of Mercer county. The anti-Lecompton and Lecompton delegates from Sussex county had a long and tedious fight regarding their right to seats in the Convention. Finally the difficulty was settled by the withdrawal of both parties. Resolutions were adopted favoring the principle of popular sovereignty, opposing the opening of the slave trade, &c. The nomination of Mr. Wright was made unanimous. There was great rejoicing among Wright's friends on his success in so spirited a contest.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 24.—Thursday night Jesse Williams, an old and wealthy citizen of Caldwell county, under guard at Princeton, charged with murder, stealing and cruelty to his slaves, was taken from the jail and carried seven miles and hung. His two sons, John and James, guilty of numerous crimes, escaped death by absconding. About the same time Dr. Singleton, Mansfield Morsey and Shaw Watt, supposed to be connected with Williams' villanies, were severely punished and ordered to leave the county.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 24.—Craig & Righters, contractors for cleaning out the mouth of the Mississippi, publish a statement in the morning papers, exonerating their sureties, Richard M. Corwine, Wiswell and others, and stating that the work was formally accepted by the Government and money paid.

LEAVENWORTH, Aug. 24.—McCrea, who killed Clark, a pro-slavery man, in 1856, was arrested here to-day. Clark was the first man killed in the territory for political causes.

CLEVELAND, August 24.—John Bonfield's pail factory was burned to-day. Loss $12,000. Insurance $8,000—all in New York companies.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 25.—The American State Convention re-nominated Wm. H. Purnell as candidate for comptroller.

The American Congressional Convention of the Fourth District are now in session.

The Americans of the Second District have nominated Edwin H. Webster, of Harford, county, for Congress.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 25.—The Democratic State Convention to-day nominated Harrison C. Hobart, Calumet county, for Governor; and A. S. Palmer, for Lieut. Governor. It is doubtful whether delegates to the Charleston Convention will be elected at the present Convention. It is decidedly Anti-Lecompton.

NEW BEDFORD, Aug. 26.—A fire, which broke out at noon yesterday on North Water street, destroyed about twenty-five buildings, and was finally arrested on Kay and North streets, by blowing up several buildings with gunpowder. The buildings destroyed included Hathaway & Son's machine shop and planing mill, Ryder and Smith's spar yard, Barstade's turning mill, E. H. Nye's ship chandlery, Edward M. Robinson's oil yard, in which 3,000 barrels of oil were destroyed, besides some lots of oil belonging to W. G. G. Pope, E. B. Sarland and David B. Kemp. Several dwellings, carpenter shops and groceries were also included in the conflagration. A large number of bomb lances, on the premises of Wilcox and Hathaway, caused loud explosions, as did the bursting of the oil casks. The ship "John & Edward," lying at Wilcox & Richmond's wharf, was burned to the water's edge. The ship "Illinois" was also on fire, but was towed out and saved, with loss of sails, rigging, &c. Several persons were injured by the falling walls, although not dangerously. The total loss is estimated at from $200 to $300,000, on which the insurance is but small. Many families are rendered penniless, and several Captains and owners of vessels are ruined by the loss of their oil on storage.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 25.—The Leavenworth Express of Denver City has arrived, with two days later news, which is unimportant. The rush towards the new diggings is incessant. M'Crea was arrested yesterday and afterwards discharged, the indictment being worthless.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The administration has bestowed upon the subject of the African slave trade its earnest attention, and with the view of suppressing, as far as possible, this traffic, has initiated measures more efficient and more extensive than ever before, for that purpose. The squadron for the coast of Africa, as arranged by the Secretary of the Navy, will consist of the following named vessels: The steamers Mystic, Sumpter, San Jacinto, and Mohawk, and the sloops-of-war Constellation, the flag-ship Portsmouth, Marion, and Vincennes.

The most efficient officers are assigned to their command. Those of the Mystic and Sumpter are respectively, Lieut. W. S. Leroy and Lieut. J. F. Armstrong. Those gentlemen were at their own request ordered to this service. Their several vessels being of light draft can penetrate waters too shallow for those which have heretofore been on that coast, besides having the advantage of steam. Hence slavers will be more closely pursued.

The joint treaty with England requires that the United States shall keep there a force of 80 guns, but by the recent arrangement on the part of the administration, the number of our guns will be 116.

Mr. Birney, who succeeds Mr. Morse as Naval store keeper, went out in the Constellation with instructions to remove the Naval Depot for the African squadron from Porto-a-Praya to San Paul De Sando, which is 323 miles distant from Porto-a-Praya. This new depot will consequently be much nearer than the power to the principal points of traffic on the coast, and will in a great measure obviate the necessity of long cruises on our own coast. There is to be an efficient naval force composed of the steamers Crusader, Lieut. Maffit; the Mohawk, Lieut. Craven; the Wyandotte, Lieut. Stanly; and the Fulton, Commander G. G. Williams. They are to cruise in the neighborhood of Cuba for the purpose of capturing any slaver which may by their experience escape the vigilance of our naval force on the African coast. These arrangements will soon go into full operation, and the Secretary of the Navy is now hurrying the preparation of such of the vessels as are yet in port for this important service.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Aug. 22.—We learn from Halifax that McKay's stable at Truro has been burned, and all the horses, numbering ten, perished in the flames. As these horses included those used especially for expressing the steamers' news from Halifax to Sackville for the New York Associated Press, it is feared there will be unusual delay with the America's news now nearly at hand.

The fire was undoubtedly the work of an incendiary, and as it may be a part of the machinery by which some fraud is to be perpetrated in connection with the next news from Europe, the commercial public should be more than usually cautious until the authentic intelligence shall have been placed upon the bulletin of the Associated Press.

NIAGARA FALLS, Aug. 22.—The Convention agreed to reduce the rates to Memphis via Cairo, to one dollar and eighty and one dollar and forty four on first and second classes; one dollar and eighty-five and one dollar and forty nine to points below Memphis. Third and fourth classes remain at present rates.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22.—Vera Cruz advices to the 11th inst. report that Messrs. Bargona & Jecker have purchased the Tehuantepec transit. Their agent at Minatitlan has been ordered to engage engineers to recommence the work. The steamship Adriatic is to run on the Pacific side.

RICHMOND, Va., August 23.—A large meeting of the opposition was held here last night. Resolutions were passed, expressing a preference for John M. Botts for President, and recommending the holding of a State Convention during the fall.

BALTIMORE, August 23.—The yacht Haswell, of Providence, from Richmond, arrived here this morning in twenty-three hours from Old Point Comfort.

BALTIMORE, August 23.—The Sun of this morning publishes an account of a dreadful series of outrages perpetrated on Saturday night on board the steamboat Express, which left here the same evening with a large company for the camp meeting at Choptank River. After getting some distance from port, a party of rowdies, rallying under cries of [illegible], made an indiscriminate assault upon the white and colored passengers. Several were knocked down or horribly beaten. Some white men were robbed of their watches and money, the villains blowing out the lights to prevent recognition. A colored man was stabbed and robbed, and his wife outraged in his presence. On Sunday morning the Sheriff of Dorchester Co. arrested four of the ringleaders and committed them to jail. One colored man is said to have died of his wounds. Hugh Sullivan was shot in the head and instantly killed last night, when on his way home about 12 o'clock. Several arrests have been made and the coroner's inquest is now engaged in investigating circumstances leading to the murder.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The President has recognized Henry Tschudorff as consul of the Prince of Reuss of the elder branch, and of the Prince of Reuss of the junior branch, to reside at New York. He has also recognized C. E. Stewart as consul of Belgium, to reside at Charleston, S. C. The President has appointed W. T. Might, jr, of Maryland, as consul at Santo.

Prof. Dimitry, the new minister to Central America, will leave about the 1st of September for Costa Rica. Gen. Cass will entertain at dinner to-day Minister Mata and M. Lerdo. Other kind attentions have been extended to these distinguished Mexicans by gentlemen connected with the executive department of our government.

GENEVA, N. Y., Aug. 23.—Quite a number of prominent American politicians have congregated here to attend the American State Council which will meet to-day. The struggle will be on the time of holding the State Convention. Daniel Ullman, who it is said represents the policy of Thurlow Weed, will oppose a call of the Convention. On the same day the Republicans will hold theirs, in order that the latter may not be embarrassed by any union openly with the Americans. The Buffalo delegation, who favor a union and act with the anti-Weed Republicans, advocate the holding of a Convention on the 7th of September, at Syracuse, so as to force the Republican Convention either to recognize the Americans or drive them into an open rupture. The chances thus far seem to be in favor of the calling of the Convention to meet on the 2d of September.

SACKVILLE, N. B., August 23.—The latest advices received from Halifax this morning state that the steamship Canada, now due at that point, from Liverpool on 13th inst., had not yet arrived.

ST. LOUIS, August 23.—The Leavenworth Denver City Express of the 19th, with six passengers, has arrived, bringing $1,000 in dust.

A portion of the proceedings of the recently framed State Convention called to form a Constitution, is published. No allusion is made to the slavery question in the bill of rights. Suffrage is restricted to the whites. The local papers are silent in respect to the provisions of the Constitution.

The richest discoveries since the last arrival were made between Cape Lapandre and the Cheyenne pass, although opening of new leads are of daily occurrence. There is a great rush towards the Cheyenne pass, where, it is reported, hundreds to thousands are made per day to the single hand. Rich quartz is found in abundance everywhere. Emigration is light but steady. Business is brisk at Denver City. Merchandise and provisions are selling cheap.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—The First Baptist Church and the saleratus factory of D. Kellogg, with several other buildings, were burnt this morning.

Exchange on Europe is very unsettled and rates are somewhat nominal. London is about 1.10, and Paris 1.15 for the best bills.

The Hammonia, for Hamburg, to-morrow will take about $100,000 in gold and $60,000 in silver.

The Arabia, from Boston, takes none from this city. The Boards of the Panama Railroad Company and Pacific Mail Company, meet to-morrow to consult upon the details of the management and disposition of the boats just purchased from Messrs. Brown, the Adriatic, Baltic and Atlantic.

The Fifth Avenue Hotel, the largest establishment of the kind in the country, was opened to-day, under the proprietorship of Payne Stevens, Esq. The house was thronged all day with visitors, who testified their admiration of the thorough and systematic arrangement of the building in all its parts. The American Telegraph Company have an office in the basement of the hotel, connecting it by wires with points of the country, as well as with the other prominent hotels in the city. One of the most novel features of the house is the vertical railway for the conveyance of the guests from the ground to the upper floor.

The American Telegraph Company have obtained permission from the Secretary of War to open a marine telegraph station at Fort Lafayette, in the Narrows, and will proceed immediately to lay a cable from that point to Fort Hamilton, where it will connect with the Brooklyn line, which stretches to New York. This line will give the company unequalled facilities for reporting marine news, night and day, as it will also connect with the line already constructed from Sandy Hook.

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—A trot between Flora Temple and Princess for a purse of $1,000, mile heats, best three in five, came off this afternoon. Flora won in three straight heats, making time as follows: First 2:22; second 2:25; third 2:24.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 23.—A special dispatch to the Democrat says, thirteen buildings were burned at Cairo this morning. Loss $10,000.

The Omaha Republican says Chas. Leslie, of Marion county, Penn., arrived on the 14th with 1,033 ounces in gold dust, from Clear Creek. Leslie professes to have discovered the richest diggings yet found. He returns to the States for the purpose of procuring quartz mills to work them.

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Aug. 23.—E. Bush [illegible] has been nominated by the Republicans for the Legislature, as an investigation candidate on the sale of the State canals; the vote stood, 45 to 8. His opponent is Wm. Pearce.

GENEVA, N. Y., Aug. 24.—In the State American Council yesterday, the question of the time and place of holding the State Convention was discussed with great animation, but a majority were found to be in favor of holding it on a different day from that of the Republicans, and it was finally decided that it should be held at Utica on the 25th of September. Two delegates to the National Convention were subsequently elected—the Hon. Erastus Brooks and Hon. L. Lorenzo Burrows. Mr. Brooks addressed the Convention at considerable length, and was followed by the Hon. Daniel Ullman, after which the Council adjourned sine die.

GENEVA, N. Y., Aug. 24.—The American State Council met. At the afternoon session the Committee on Credentials, composed of Messrs. J. B. Murray and Charles E. Freeman, reported the names of one hundred and forty delegates as having presented regular credentials.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—The City Democratic Convention nominated Horner Kneass, Esq., for district attorney, and Mr. Thomas McGrath for prothonotary. Nominations were also made for senators and members of legislature.

At the New York City Post-Office two Washington monument boxes are put up at the points where pass the greatest number of persons daily; and the gross amount dropped into these boxes during the past three weeks, in that city of nearly a million of inhabitants, is only about eleven dollars. The new dodge for raising dimes will not do.

Some families are peculiarly unfortunate. Among such is this: A correspondent of the Berkshire Courier, in giving an account of the drowning of two of the daughters of Mr. George Lomist, formerly of Boston, at Sheffield, Mass., states as a remarkable fact that nine of Mr Lomist's kindred have been drowned. His father and mother were lost in the Lexington.

A large dog, raving with hydrophobia, passed through the upper part of Orange county, New Jersey, last week, biting a number of other dogs, several cows and a little girl on the heel, lacerating it very much. Dr. Wm. Pierson was called, and opened her leg, using every effort to save her life, but was unable to effect a remedy, and she died. The inhabitants are poisoning dogs in the place.

The Easton (Penn.) Express states that Mr. Clemens, who recently fought a duel with O. Jennings Wise while visiting his brother, a physician in Easton, underwent an operation for the removal of a piece of bone shattered by Wise's ball. The bone was quite large, and with it was removed a portion of the ball discharged by his opponent, which had been imbedded in the bone.

The proprietor of the house, discovering him, quietly drew a pistol and fired at him, but the young man managed to escape the shot and got away from the premises. He was subsequently arrested and fined $50 and costs.

As some workmen were engaged on Saturday in making excavations at the Babcock House, near Faneuil Hall, Boston, and at the depth of some five feet below the surface of the ground, they discovered several pistols and cannon balls, and also a glass bottle. The ground had not been disturbed for at least two hundred years.

The London Agricultural Gazette says that the harvest is now general through the midland and even the northern counties of England, and it is nearly completed in the South. The product will be in most parts above the average. There is the old apprehension for the safety of the potato crop in Ireland.

The Hon. Reverdy Johnson, it is said, is sending to Paris to have an eye (now blind) taken out. "Some years ago, while witnessing a duel, the ball from one of the parties struck a tree, and glancing into his eye, destroyed the sight." The serious operation of removing the whole ball of the eye has now become necessary.

O. Jennings Wise, editor of the Richmond Enquirer, and the son of Governor Wise, whose duels have of late been as frequent as if he delighted in the pistol and not in the pen, is one of the most quiet and peaceable-looking men in the Union; and those who know him esteem him for his manly and upright character. He does not seem to be more than twenty-two years of age.

The Petersburg Express says the following is a letter received by a clergyman, in that city, through the Post Office:—"Reverend Sir—I forbid the Bands of Marriage between Edmund Blunt and Mary Ann Howell, the reason is he is under age, and she has got a husband alive and she [illegible], so you cannot marry them sir, and [illegible]."

Of these about seven hundred departed for California by the two lines of steamers, the mail steamer taking five hundred of the number. The City of Manchester, for Cork and Liverpool, carried 119; the Quaker City, for Havana, took about 70; the Fulton, for Southampton and Havre, also carried 60 passengers, and a large number also took passage on board of the two or three steamers for the Southern ports.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
J. SIDNEY MARSHALL - - Editor
TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.
LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.
JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.
AUDITOR OF STATE,
G. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.
TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.
SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.
BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.
COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

The Statesman and the Democracy.

The course which the managers of the Statesman have chosen to adopt, with regard to the nominations of Commissioner and Auditor, has occasioned much remark among the Democracy of this county. The intention to defeat their nominations if possible, and the petty malice in which it originated, are regarded with displeasure by the Democracy of Franklin, who are not prepared to be governed by a "Junto" or clique, such as have their head-quarters at the post-office, branching off to the Statesman and the paper-mill.

The resignation of Mr. Horton caused a vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners, which the Auditor, Recorder and Probate Judge, whose duty it was, filled by appointing Mr. Sparrow. The official term of the Auditor being about to expire, and in conformity to custom here, Mr. Phillips desired a renomination. He had discharged the duties of his office with great fidelity, and entitled himself to the popular regard by his uniform courtesy and urbanity. But he had committed the unpardonable sin of contributing to the appointment of Mr. Sparrow, who is held in utter detestation by Miller, Cox & Co., and his official head must answer Tom Miller's unmitigated wrath. O. P. Hines is accordingly induced to compete for the nomination, a man of independent property, engaged in a lucrative business which claims all his time and attention, in the hope of punishing Johnny Phillips. It has been suggested that it is a Miller move to get Hines out of the paper-mill, which is doing a good business, and they would prefer having it all in the family. Should Hines receive the nomination he might be induced to part with his interest in the paper-mill! But, be this as it may, we think there is enough spirit and independence in the Democracy of Franklin to show the Miller influence that its time is short.

But what kind of Democracy is that which is inculcated by the Statesman, and practised by the clique, that would proscribe the most popular men of the party? Is it aggregating strength to the party? Miller wishes to punish Phillips because he would not bow to the former's dictation, and the Statesman thinks the appointment of Mr. Sparrow a heinous fault, for which Phillips should answer. It charges that Mr. Sparrow reported erroneously that the Treasury had been depleted by Breslin, with the aid of Gibson to conceal the fact; and further asserts that the report of Mr. Sparrow furnished groundwork to Gov. Chase for his false allegation that not a dollar of the public money had soiled the hand of a Republican. Yet it republishes from the Newark Advocate, edited by W. D. Morgan, one of the Investigating Commission, an article, stating in so many words, that Mr. Sparrow's report did not sustain Gov. Chase's assertion. Is the Statesman or the Advocate right? Did the former reproduce that article as an act of justice to Mr. Sparrow, or did it creep into its columns unawares? It was refreshing to see it there, where repeatedly it had been charged that Mr. Sparrow's report had wrought everlasting injury to the Democratic party, and furnished the basis of Gov. Chase's assertion that no Republican had taken a dollar of the public money. Now, if his report did not authorize this assertion of Gov. Chase, the objection of the Statesman falls. The Newark Advocate says it did not, and the Statesman reproduces the article. Ought not the Statesman in candor and justice, say that it did Mr. Sparrow injustice, and that Mr. Phillips was not so wrong after all in appointing him Commissioner?

☞ The primary election of the Democracy of this county will be held on Saturday next, when it is hoped that the people will take matters in their own hands and rebuke the self-constituted dictator, who by his unscrupulous arts, and devices has sought to sway the will of the people. Resort was had to the primary election principle in consequence of a fraud having been practised on a nominating convention, mainly through the instrumentality of Tom Miller, who could not be trusted after such barefaced treachery. The primary election will not secure proper nominations, unless the people act for themselves, have a discriminating appreciation of men, and refuse to listen to the syren song of these promising politicians, who are governed alone by selfish motives and look forward solely to their own aggrandizement.

A Grand Organ.—Those who can appreciate a magnificent instrument, should call at once at the Music Store of Messrs. Seltzer & Webster. They have an organ, or rather "Carhart Harmonium," that is one of the grandest instruments we have ever heard. It is from the manufactory of Carhart, Needham & Co., of New York, and costs but $800. The exterior is of plain appearance and finish, but it is by no means an unsightly piece of furniture, and with ten stops, five octaves with one and a half octaves of independent pedal bass, it is just the thing for churches, lodges and concerts.

Can it be Possible?

"Can such things be, [illegible]
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder?"

The fact that Judge Gholson did manumit his slaves before removing to Ohio, does not strike all Republicans alike. Some consider it a small matter, but others give it grave consideration. It was asserted as conclusive evidence of his sympathy with Abolitionism that he had set his slaves free; but it turns out that he sold them and put the proceeds in his pocket. The bills of sale were made out in his own hand-writing, and stand so recorded. We have not thought it necessary to publish these bills of sale, the fact of their existence being sufficient. They have had, too, through other channels, an extensive circulation. Some of the Republican press attempt to meet the damaging effect the establishment of the fact must have upon the estimation of Judge Gholson's Abolition sympathies, by denying the genuineness of the documents.—Others hint at the possibility of deception. The Portage County Democrat, however, evidently is shocked, and states the case as follows:

"When the name of Judge Gholson was presented to the Republican State Convention at Columbus for nomination for Supreme Judge, it was coupled with the assertion that he, formerly a Mississippi slaveholder, had become disgusted with and opposed to slavery; that he had set his slaves free, and, in order to enjoy the institutions of freedom fully, he removed to a free State, and that ever since he has duly manifested his devotion to freedom and his hostility to slavery.—These statements have been widely published and believed by the Republicans throughout the State.

"The above statements in regard to Judge Gholson are now flatly and vehemently denied by the Democratic press of the State. They charge that Judge Gholson did not liberate, but sold his slaves, prior to his emigration to Ohio, and that hence the Republicans of the State have been deceived—averring that Judge Gholson is and always has been a pro-slavery man, and that he accords with the decision of Judge Swan in the Oberlin rescue habeas corpus case, and that he would decide, were he called upon for a decision, in the same way."

"If these charges are false, they are susceptible of clear, positive and satisfactory denials. If the charges are false, all right, so far as Judge Gholson is concerned. If true, then the Convention was imposed upon, and the people are deceived. But the Republicans, as in the case of Judges Swan, Scott and Peck, must not be cheated.

"If it is improper for Judge Gholson, as a candidate for a seat upon the Supreme bench, to 'prejudge a case,' by defining his views upon the Fugitive Slave Law, then it was improper to nominate him.—And, in our opinion, it was improper to nominate him, and is always improper to nominate any man who, like him, has so little developed himself in regard to the cardinal principles of our party, as to need, after nomination, to define his position!

"Let us have men true, well-known and outspoken, then there is no chance for mistake or deception.

"We regret that Judge Gholson occupies, as he does in the minds of thousands of Republicans, an equivocal position.—Let his position be at once relieved, if it can be.

"We commend these considerations to the attention of the Ohio State Journal and the Cincinnati Republican journals."

There is no use in expressing regret that Judge Gholson "occupies an equivocal position," or to hope that it can "be at once relieved." His nomination was begun in fraud—it was conceived in a wish to deceive and humbug the Northern Republicans, with whom nothing would go down that was not tinctured with their favorite hobby. Accordingly, they were assured that Judge G. was "all right on the nigger," while those who knew him were confident that his decision, in any future case of a similar nature, would be identical with Judge Swan's. Democrats are sometimes charged with inconsistency, but for a Northern fanatic and Southern Republican to support Judge Gholson, as a representative of their sentiments, is an instance of inconsistency with scarcely a parallel.

Closing of White Sulphur Springs.—This is the last week of the season of the popular and attractive White Sulphur Springs, where so many citizens of our own and adjoining States have passed such pleasant days during the summer. This week will be the gayest of the gay, the courteous and capable proprietor having made every arrangement for a truly festal time.

Grand parties will be given on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, at which a very large attendance is expected, many of the former guests intending to pay their final visit to the Springs this week. The reunion will be extremely agreeable, and music and wine, dancing and beauty, flirtation and fashion will render this week the most delightful of the season.

We have heard of much preparation from this city, and there will be a fair representation from Columbus. The Railroad facilities and nice carriage drives, either from Lewis' Centre or Delaware Station, render it most agreeable, and the easiest thing in the world to visit the Springs.

Judge Gholson's Slaves.

The Democrats have sent to Mississippi and procured documents to show that Judge Gholson sold three negro boys in that State, fifteen years ago. Well, what are they going to do about it? Does having been a slaveholder disqualify a man from discharging the duties of a judge?—If so, how is it with our Supreme Judges who are now slaveholders?

We find the above, in some shape or other, in all our Republican exchanges.—It is a miserable subterfuge. The Republicans were claiming great credit for Judge Gholson, that he freed his negroes and removed from Mississippi, when the fact was he sold them, which was his unquestionable right. It is not that Judge Gholson was a slaveholder, or that he sold his negroes, instead of setting them free, to which there is objection, but to the pharisaical claim asserted for him, that his sympathies were so accordant with Northern sentiment, that he could no longer dwell in a slaveholding community, but manumitted his slaves and removed to a free State, which was not true.

The public mind is terribly abused by constant fabrications which appear from day to day in the New York Herald, relative to Senator Douglas, which certainly show a fertility and facility of invention, but are better indications of unscrupulous and determined wickedness than anything else. But, as if to show that the Herald and its corps [illegible] are not alone, the Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune has recently indulged in a similar fiction, which we give as illustrative of the malice and slander with which the Senator from Illinois is pursued on every side. The writer says:

"On any evening may be found, at the residence of Senator Douglas, Democrats of all shades, as well as every class of fence men. On Friday evening last was quite a large gathering there of politicians of all stripes by special invitation. Prominent among the guests were Senator Iverson, of Georgia, Mr. Browne, editor of the Constitution, (the Government organ,) Mr. Coombs, editor of the Republic, and many other leading Southern and Northern party men. There was much private and confidential conversation between Mr. Douglas and the representatives of the different factions there assembled."

Now this was pure invention. No such "evening" was had at the residence of Senator Douglas. The Washington Constitution disposes of its portion of responsibility thus:

"If the political gathering described in the above extract has no more reality than has the assertion that Mr. Browne was present, it must be purely imaginary.—Mr. Browne was not present on the occasion referred to; therefore, so far as he is concerned, there is not one word of truth in the letter."

The Washington Republic, also notices the same paragraph:

"A Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, of the 23d inst., professing to know all about what is going on at the residence of Senator Douglas, where, he says, 'on any evening may be found Democrats of all shades, as well as every class of fence men,' pretends to describe 'quite a large gathering of politicians of all stripes,' who met there by 'special invitation' on Friday evening last, and to give the substance of 'much private and confidential conversation' that then and there occurred 'between Mr. Douglas and the representatives of the different factions there assembled.'—'Prominent among the guests' who were present, this writer places one of the editors of the Republic, who was never prominent anywhere.

When we say that the editor of the Republic, thus elevated by the Tribune's correspondent into a prominent position among 'Democrats of all shades and every class of fence men' at the residence of Senator Douglas, was never in the house of that Senator in his life—and that we happen to know that Senator Douglas himself was not at home on the evening referred to, our readers will perceive that we have good grounds for acquitting said correspondent of all suspicion of having obtained his information by lurking round the premises of Senator Douglas, and peeping in at his windows or through the key-hole."

"Now, without discussing the morals of a writer who would avail himself of confidential conversation which he did not hear, or that of a paper which would admit of such surreptitiously obtained details in its columns, it is sufficient to state what we happen to know, that Mr. Douglas had no company at the time referred to, and that none of the gentlemen named have been at his residence since the adjournment of Congress; nor did he invite them to meet him anywhere else; nor has there been any such political gathering or conference. The writer of the letter, although intimating that he is a visitor at the city, is a resident of Washington, and, we understand, identified with the Abolition organ here. We leave it to the public to judge what punishment such a contemptible scamp merits."

Kentucky—Official.

We learn, by the Frankfort Yeoman that, in the face of a precedent themselves had set, the Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney General of Kentucky have given the certificate of election to Anderson, notwithstanding Chrisman had a clear majority, and was entitled to the seat by the rule established by themselves. The Yeoman remarks:

When the Board can prove that 56 and 1 make 47 on Chrisman's side of the poll in Cumberland county, they may satisfy the people that they acted fairly; but not till then. Among the number of Democrats now present in Frankfort there is but one opinion of the action of the Board, and we will not mar the good feeling now prevailing in the festivities of the Inauguration by repeating it in plain language. The last act of the Know Nothing administration is in perfect keeping with its former practices.

The following are the majorities by which the candidates upon the Democratic State ticket are severally elected:

Magoffin—Governor	[illegible]
Boyd—Lieutenant Governor	11,713
James—Attorney General	[illegible]
Green—Auditor	[illegible]
Garrard—Treasurer	[illegible]
Frazier—Register	[illegible]
Richardson—Sup. of Pub. Instruction	[illegible]
Bates—President Board of Int. Imp.	12,704

The average majority of the ticket is 11,860. Magoffin's total vote is 76,137—the largest ever obtained by any candidate in that State. Who says that Kentucky is not Democratic to the core?

☞ We very much regret to hear of the want of harmony among the Democrats of Richland and Ashland counties, in the choice of a candidate for Senator. There can be no possible objection to Gen. James Cantwell,—a fair and attentive legislator, a gallant soldier who served his country, a firm and unflinching Democrat, his nomination should have been satisfactory, notwithstanding there might have been some personal disappointment. The old usage of alternating the right of nomination from one county to another, may be dispensed with at times to advantage; although in the main correct, for the protection of the weaker counties. The most important thing is to make a good selection; and whether from one county or another, it is no time to squabble about preferences, if the candidate is "all right." We have a U. S. Senator to elect, and it is the best thing the Democracy can do to provide for keeping Gov. Chase out of the position.

The Charge against Mr. Dennison.

When the charge was made against Mr. Dennison, that he had used the language attributed to him at the Middletown Encampment, he assured us that it was a mistake, and that such an idea had never entered his head. We still think there is a mistake, although the evidence is very strong that such an expression was used. It is the tendency, the inevitable tendency of Republican doctrines. We take the article from the Hamilton, O. Telegraph of the 25th ult.:

"I WILL EMPLOY THE BAYONET, SO HELP ME GOD."

We present below the proof of the correctness of our statement in regard to the declaration made by Mr. Dennison, at the Middletown Encampment. We have only to add, for the benefit of the Cincinnati Gazette and others that have questioned the truth of our report, that we can easily get five hundred of the best men in Butler County (of both political parties) to vouch for the veracity and respectability of the gentlemen whose names are appended to the subjoined affidavits:

State of Ohio, Butler County, ss.

Before me, the subscriber, a Notary Public in and for the county and State aforesaid, personally came Elias Webster, a resident of Butler County, Ohio, who deposes and says that on the —— day of July, 1859, I visited the Guthrie Gray Encampment, near Middletown, in said county of Butler, and while there was introduced to the Hon. William Dennison, the Republican candidate for Governor, and while in conversation with me on the subject of the Fugitive-slave Law, he made use of the following language:

"If I am elected Governor of Ohio—and I expect to be—I will not let my fugitive be returned to Kentucky or any other slave State, and if I cannot prevent it in any other way, as Commander-in-chief of the military of the State, I will employ the bayonet, so help me God!"

The Treasury Nonsense of Mr. Dennison.

The speeches of Governor Chase and would-be Governor Dennison; the editorials of such leading Republican papers as the Ohio State Journal, Cincinnati Gazette, Cleveland Herald, and Lebanon Star, and the resolutions of the Republican County Conventions, show, very conclusively, that a combined and persistent effort is to be made by the Republican managers to reverse the present financial policy of the State for the safe-keeping of the public money, and to return to the old, rotten and justly-condemned system of depositing (another word for loaning) the public funds with banks, bankers and corporations, to be by them reloaned or speculated with, as they shall see proper.

We had supposed that the experience of the past few years, under the policy a return of which is now advocated by Dennison and the Republican managers, would have satisfied every honest and sound-thinking man that it is too unsafe for the State and too corrupting in its influence to be again resorted to. It is the same system under which Still, Breslin and Gibson operated, and the State lost nearly a million of dollars. While the operations of those Treasurers, and the disappearance of such enormous sums, under the old system, are still fresh in the memory of the tax-payers, it would seem to be the height of effrontery to ask the voters to give up their present mode of keeping the public money for the old, rotten, discarded one; yet we find Dennison and Company recommending them to do so.

We are much gratified to see the Commercial taking bold ground against a return to the old system. It takes up Mr. Dennison's main reason for preferring the law under which plunderers flourished so well, and says, very properly, that "the idea that the people are poorer from the locking up of a few thousand dollars is nonsense," and then lays down the correct doctrine in these words: "Let the rate of taxation be reduced as low as possible, and make no demand upon the people that the expenses of the State do not call. That is the old Jackson idea, to let the money of the people stay in their pockets until the Government needs it, and then draw so much only as is demanded by the absolute necessities of the Government. Semi-annual payment of taxes is founded on that idea, and is made a part of the present financial policy of the State, as to the safe-keeping of the people's money. We hope the people, who do not want to speculate on the public money themselves, or want others to do so, will set their faces like steel against this project of the Republican managers, to return to the old corrupt and corrupting system of managing the State Treasury.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Democratic Triumph in Kentucky — Non-Intervention. — The Nicholasville (Ky.) Democrat, in noticing the late election in that State, which resulted in such a brilliant Democratic victory, says:

The Opposition party was almost a unit in its advocacy of a slave code for the Territories, while the Democracy in the main denied the existence of a necessity for such a code, as well as its inutility.— * * * No one of our successful candidates advocated the propriety or expediency, much less the absolute necessity, of a black code. * * * * * *

Many of our candidates who were successful publicly proclaimed that they would not, under any circumstances, vote for a slave code. How, than, the intervention portion of our party can claim the victory as an evidence of the success of their peculiar views on that subject, is remarkably strange.

☞ Hon. Aaron Harlan was nominated for Representative at the Republican primary election of Greene county, on Monday. It is evident the party is putting forward its "best licks," and it is no time for the Democrats to be extending "complimentary votes."

A Presbyterian Clergyman over the Falls of Niagara—his body picked up fifteen miles below.

On the 5th inst. a Presbyterian clergyman from Maysville, Ky., named Rev. John A. McClung, arrived here for the purpose of staying a short time at the Water Cure, his health being in bad condition. He registered his name at the American House, but did not take a room. After registering his name he went out into the street and nothing thereafter was seen of him here.

It is supposed that whilst here he was partially deranged, and that he took the cars for Buffalo, where he arrived next day. He did not stop in that place but walked to Tonawanda. There he fell in with a man who got into conversation with him, and the two walked around the village for some time. This person says that Dr. McClung, did not appear from his manner and conversation to be in unsound mind. At five o'clock that evening he engaged a room in the hotel, and shut himself in it for some time, it is supposed for the purpose of changing his linen. When he came out he left his carpet bag in the room.

It is supposed that he walked from Tonawanda to Schlosser's landing 2 miles above the Falls. Here he was seen later in the evening, by a little girl, to undress and go into the river. Next morning his clothes were found where he had placed them on the dock, but no trace of his body was discoverable. The fact of his name being on a white handkerchief, served to identify the missing man.

On the 10th inst., four days after the disappearance of Dr. McClung, from Schlosser, a body was washed ashore at Youngstown, about 15 miles below the Falls. As the body was perfectly naked there were no traces by which to identify it, and it was therefore buried as a stranger.

Meanwhile his friends in Maysville had become alarmed for his safety and Mr. H. F. Miller of Maysville came to Cleveland in search of him. From this place he followed him to Schlosser, where the fact of his disappearance was learned. Diligent enquiries were set on foot, and ultimately the body found at Youngstown was disinterred and identified by Mr. Miller as that of Dr. McClung. A burial case was procured from Buffalo, in which the body was placed and taken home to Kentucky. Mr. Miller with the body in charge passed through here this morning.

Dr. McClung was about fifty years of age and leaves a wife and four children. Mrs. McClung is in feeble health, and this melancholy affair is a terrible blow in every way to the almost helpless family. He was the Pastor of the Maysville Presbyterian Church, and was much respected by all who knew him. We understand that he has been in poor health for a considerable time, and that he was of a very nervous temperament. Several years since, whilst in Indianapolis, he became partially deranged, and lived for seven weeks without sleep.

We copy the foregoing from the Cleveland Herald of the 23d August. It is a melancholy recital, disclosing the last event of a career checkered and colored, but which might have been brilliant and happy.

Dr. McClung was an elder brother of Alexander K. McClung, the brilliant speaker and writer of Mississippi, whose misfortune it was to take the lives of Allen and Menifee, in duels, and afterwards to fall by his own hand. His father, Judge McClung, of Kentucky, was eminent as a Jurist, and his mother was Susan Marshall, sister of the Chief Justice. Dr. McClung studied for the ministry while a young man and after officiating for some time, relinquished it as a pursuit and entered upon the profession of law, and was induced for a brief time to turn his attention to State affairs, as a member of the Legislature from Mason, where he stood in the front rank. He likewise distinguished himself at the bar, as a professional lawyer and powerful advocate. He was subject to dyspepsia from his youth, and as was the case with his brothers and sister, of a peculiarly nervous temperament. While yet a young man he published an interesting volume of scraps of Western story, under the title of "Sketches of Western Adventure." Shortly afterwards he produced a novel, entitled "Camden," a tale of the Revolution, the scenes of which were laid in the Carolinas, and which possessed considerable merit. He occasionally essayed poetry, but few fugitive pieces indicate his success in that line.

There, amid the thunder of the mighty cataract, where nature presents a grand illustration of sublimity, he passed into the presence of Him whose humble and conscientious servant and follower he was, whether by the inscrutable operation of his own free will, or through some untoward circumstance, can never be revealed.

☞ Senator Hunter, of Virginia, is reported to have said, in a recent speech, that if the Democratic party does not repudiate the principle of Popular Sovereignty, and advocate in lieu thereof the principle of Congressional Intervention, the party ought to be dissolved, and the sooner the better.

Senator Hunter—Correction.—A paragraph crept into our news columns yesterday to the effect that Senator Hunter, of Virginia, had declared in a recent speech that if the Democratic party does not repudiate the principle of popular sovereignty, and advocate in lieu thereof the principle of Congressional intervention, the party ought to be dissolved, and the sooner the better. This is undoubtedly a base libel upon Senator Hunter, gotten up by an unscrupulous political enemy. Senator Hunter and his friends in Virginia are combating the principle of Congressional intervention.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Delegates to the Charleston Convention.—Ten delegates have thus far been appointed to the Charleston Convention from the States of Vermont and Maine. Eight of the ten will certainly vote for Mr. Douglas as the Presidential candidate, and the other two will most probably do so. The Bangor (Me.) Times of the 23d of August, in speaking of the election of the delegates in that district, says:

"Both delegates to the Charleston Convention are in favor of Stephen A. Douglas, and were so elected, and their opinions have been long known in the community where they reside."

The Indianapolis Sentinel the central organ of the Democracy of Indiana, in noticing the statement of the New York Tribune that the electors to the Democratic State Convention in Indiana were mostly against Douglas, says it will certainly be news in that State.

A Day in Cincinnati.

Business called us to Cincinnati on Tuesday, where for a few hours we had the gratification of seeing many political and personal friends; and much to our satisfaction ascertained that the party was perfectly harmonious, and jointly waiting the nomination of a good ticket to cover itself with a glorious triumph.

The attempted fusion of the Know Nothings and Republicans it is thought cannot be consummated, as, if certain candidates are selected with the view of completing the coalition, their selfish purpose will be frustrated by a people who are not willing to be used as instruments in accomplishing such miserable bargains.

As was natural, we called at the sanctum of the Enquirer, and found "Hi Robinson" and Bloss "pitching in generally"—the editor in chief, Mr. Banks being absent at the east. The editorial force of the Enquirer is a strong team and no mistake, embracing Banks, Robinson, Bloss, with occasional touches from Faran, in the political department; Junius Browne and W. W. Fosdick in the commercial, political and fanciful; Winans railroading, and George Hennett "over the river."—We may, and probably have omitted to mention others connected with the editorial force, which is certainly much augmented since we were one of its lesser lights.

Our old friend Fred Hunt, after having his limb boxed up for seven weeks, is standing on his pins again, but limps with the aid of a cane. We were at the Opera together, being the second night of the season. The Opera House is all that the elaborate descriptions have represented—the company now performing there is a very clever one—at least Donizetti's Lucia di Lammermoor was very deliciously rendered to our unused and unpracticed ears. We did not inquire the names of the artists, but they are exceedingly agreeable in their respective roles.

The laying of a street railroad was inaugurated, and Andy Francisco of the Penny Press boasts of having the first boulder picked up, which it is possible he will have set for a breastpin, being much addicted to jewelry.

The National Theater produced the School for Scandal, with Miss E. Mitchell as Lady Teazle. The Sir Peter of Mr. Somebody was creditable, and Lady Teazle fair, but the piece did not sparkle as we have seen it, and our play was short.

To us of the rural districts, the bustle of the Commercial Metropolis gave it an air of business to which we are unaccustomed, in our quiet and peaceful city.—And with it came the impression that the race must be to the swift in the awful contest and scramble for the "mighty dollar."

We could not think of passing a day or part of a day in Cincinnati without dropping in on some of those old and agreeable spots, the memories of which in former years, occasionally haunt us now. The "St. Charles," the "Verandah," the "Donabee's," the "William Tell," and the "Debolt," are all standing statu quo ante bellum. Fred and Henry Dieters of the "Tell" we have known for more than thirty years, and we could not refuse a glass of their pure Catawba, as old times, when Charley Hammond, and "the foot two," and Moses Dawson, and father Punshon, Dennis M'Carthy, Sam Talbott and other editors, politicians and good livers were wont to habitate. They have passed away, but there stands the "Tell," and Fred and Henry look as if Time dealt lightly with them.

But we had to be brief in our day's agreeables, part being indispensably necessary to business. Some other time we shall see our old friends again and may be take some further "note."

Aurora Borealis.—We were visited by one of those magnificent displays on Sunday evening—the finest we think we ever witnessed—it is graphically described by the Louisville Courier:

Aurora Borealis.—The glorious spectacle which we noticed as taking place at nine o'clock on Sunday evening, was repeated at intervals on Monday morning, with a great increase of brilliancy. The pale pea-green rays, which generally form the northern lights, had remained with but little change from the time of their first appearance until daylight on Monday morning. At about half past two, however, the crimson rays again appeared, flanking the central radiation, and kept shooting incessantly far towards the zenith for more than an hour. The portion between the two flanks of crimson was of the most delicate purple hue, and at the base, just above the horizon, was an arch of light tinged with pale green. No part of the magnificent display was stationary, but kept shifting and changing without a moment's rest. At times spires of crimson and purple would shoot even beyond the zenith and then the whole would form a sheet of color, shimmering constantly like the incipient play of heat lightning, after becoming so compact as nearly to obscure the stars. At short intervals from the pale light forming the arch below, long slender spires would shoot, piercing the crimson and purple like the thrust of a mighty blade, and then seemingly sinking back to gain new strength for the conflict. It was the event of a lifetime to witness a phenomenon so grand. It was "beautiful as a dream of heaven." Words have no power to convey an idea of its appearance.

The phenomena of the northern lights have been watched with intense interest by savans all over the world. Various hypotheses have been given as to their origin. Some have ascribed them to electrical and magnetic causes, while others have given them solely a terrestrial origin. Prof. Olmsted, of Yale College, who died in May last, advocated the doctrine of their cosmical origin, deriving their materials from some supposed nebulous traversing the planetary spaces. He assigned them a period of about sixty years. This view found but little favor with men of science, and the electrical theory still maintains its ground. Certain it is, that the telegraph lines throughout the entire country were entirely powerless on Sunday night. Scarcely a message was received. This fact points to an electrical cause, and will afford new ground for the investigations of the scientific world.

☞ The New York Evening Post, the ablest Republican paper in the Union, in a review of Mr. Douglas' article in Harper's Magazine, says it is an exceedingly elaborate, minute and closely-reasoned document. It declares it to be a keen and vigorous defense of popular sovereignty.

Governor Chase Privately Explaining—His Excuse Examined.

We have a curious novelty made lately. The Ohio Statesman publishes a letter which Governor Chase addressed to it privately last winter. The Governor was anxious to stop the Statesman's allusions to the famous falsehoods by which he saved himself and his party from defeat in the campaign of 1857. As a means for excusing himself from the statements then made, Chase tells the Statesman that he placed his reliance on Sparrow's Investigation, and relying on their accuracy, he was led to make the declaration that not a single dollar of the public money had ever improperly soiled the hands of a Republican State officer. This is a most shameless pretence and sinks Chase still deeper in the mire. Sparrow's report did not sustain Chase's declaration. It did erroneously fix the entire defalcation as having occurred within Breslin's term of office, but it did not remove Republican State officers from participating in the improper use of the public money. On the contrary, it contained sufficient to show to all who were willing to open their eyes, that Bottom, whom Chase appointed Supreme Judge of Ohio, was one of Breslin's abettors in the misuse of the Treasury.

But had there been no such intimation as this in the report of Mr. Sparrow, the Governor had had on his table for 8 months previous, proof of a character so unimpeachable as should have prevented such assurances as he dishonestly gave to his deluded hearers from the stump. In February, 1857, the printed report of the Republican Investigating Committee (Messrs. Taylor, Sinnett and Smith,) was placed on the table of the Governor. This was six or eight months before the delivery of Chase's stump speeches through the State. In the Investigating report, the committee distinctly showed up the fact, that Gibson had loaned to Frank Kimball, the Republican Attorney General, THITY THOUSAND DOLLARS on which to start a BROKER'S OFFICE in Cleveland. This transaction is in all respects identical with the most censurable operations in which Breslin has been found to have been engaged. Yet Chase assured his friends, that not a single dollar of the public money had ever been wrongfully used by a Republican State officer! Perhaps he thought Kimball's conduct in no respect improper. If this be so, then he and Breslin agreed exactly.—Newark Advocate.

Style and the Ohio Statesman.

Dr. Johnson said, clothing the dictum with one of his customary triads, that whoever sought to acquire a pure English style must give his days and nights to the Spectator, and it may be doubted if much advance has been made, in the way of improvement upon the writers of Addison's day. There has been however a great variety of styles adopted since that period, the fashion of language having changed almost as much as that of dress; especially is this so in our country where all sorts of foreign idioms have been grafted upon the English stock; but most of the writers of this day, particularly of the newspaper class, are in the same category with Pope's characterless women, and have no style at all. From this negative condemnation we must except the Ohio Statesman. We have several times wondered, while reading that paper, upon what model its style was formed, and have come to the conclusion that its editor has taken for his prototypes two fellows somewhat notorious in the early part of our history for writing in a style uncouth, harsh, and devoid of ornament and, in other respects in unison with the character of those whom they sought to instruct—we allude to Tom Paine and Wm. Cobbett. In saying this, we do not mean to flatter him of the Statesman, since we are bound to add that his imitation is very far from perfect, being rather of the forcible feeble order, owing perhaps to some conventional restraints as well as to want of culture and innate strength. Doubtless he does his best, and we think that in the vituperative point he almost comes up to his originals; indeed he might, in time, surpass them, if he did not overdo this part of his labor, and if he would take time to study some collection of billingsgate synonyms so as to vary his epithets somewhat, and thus relieve the most prominent feature of his style from monotony. "Base, vile, infamous and atrocious—false, falsehood, lie and liar" are sharp and biting words but they lose their edge by frequent repetition. Such language, at the South is considered dangerous, in any season, but we observe that it is here looked upon as entirely harmless even in the hottest weather.—Probably it is understood to be used only in a Pickwickian sense. There are those perhaps, for tastes are unaccountable, who look upon this kind of writing as vigorous and refreshing—no doubt the editor understands the appetites of those for whom he caters—but we cannot admire it. Were we to undertake to classify or designate it by any particular name, we should call it the Porcupine or Hedge-hog style.

But if the manner of the Statesman be thus coarse and vulgar, what shall we say of the matter? His is the central organ and the paper, we suppose, is considered a sort of reservoir or fountain upon which the smaller democratic organs in the various counties are expected to draw for refreshment and instruction; But how weak the libation, how stale the teaching, before the diluted draught, and the dirty leaven reach the thirsty and hungry democrat! The paper is made up of bald assertions, sneaking espionage, personalities couched in vulgar and ungrammatical language, and political paragraphs whose greatest merit is the craftiness they display in the editor's efforts to pervert, distort, and suppress the truth. What must be the religion where a Monkey is the Priest, and what must be the party of which such a paper is the Organ!—Zanesville Courier.

"The Confederacy espouses the cause of the Opposition, under the conviction that the only hope for the South is in the triumph of that party in 1860. The Democracy can succeed in the next Presidential canvass only under the leadership of Douglas. 'It is in vain,' says that journal, 'to think of success, unless the Charleston Convention accept Stephen A. Douglas—and that would be a success of disguised free-soilism.' And again, it says: 'As far as we are concerned, we prefer the election of William H. Seward to that of Stephen A. Douglas.'"

The Iron Furnaces of Ohio.—We have before us a chart comprising a list of Iron Furnaces in the vicinity of Portsmouth published by Mr. McFarland of the Portsmouth Tribune. The entire number is set down at forty-five. It also contains a list of seventeen furnaces in Kentucky making a total of sixty-two. The yearly aggregate of pig iron turned out at these is estimated at 155,000 tons, with a value of $4,650,000. The number of hands employed at these furnaces is estimated at 6,200, receiving the total sum of $155,000 per month. The Iron trade is quite a feature in the Scioto Valley and the neighborhood.

Tenth Ohio State Fair.

Ho! all ye papers with whom we exchange, far and near, we charge you, as ever you will look for favor at our hand, take up this our trumpet blast, and let it echo across from Pennsylvania to Indiana, and from the Ohio river to the Lake and back again, until it swells over every hill and penetrates every valley of the State, so that all true Buckeyes, in every nook and corner, may hear that they are summoned by the good people of Zanesville to draw near and give their attendance at the tenth great State Fair, which is to be held in this vicinity on the twentieth day of September next.

There is, perhaps, no locality within the State, which is more readily accessible for stock of heavy freight, from all the parts than Zanesville, as may be observed from the brief summary which we subjoin of these various avenues having reference to the different points of the compass.

From the West and North West it can be reached by the various railroads connecting with the Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland railroad via Columbus, and by the Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark railroad via Newark.

The North East portion of the State, have the Cleveland and Erie railroad up the Lake shore to Cleveland. The Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago railroad, connecting with the Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark railroad at Mansfield. The Pittsburgh and Cleveland railroad connecting with the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad at Alliance, and at the Ohio river at Wellsville where shippers will have choice of steamboat via Marietta, or railroad via Central Ohio from Bellaire.

The central portion of the State East of Columbus by the Central Ohio railroad, and the Steubenville and Indiana railroad via Newark.

From Cincinnati and vicinity, the Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland railroad via Columbus and the Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville railroad via Morrow, Wilmington, Circleville and Lancaster.

From the South, by the Cincinnati and Marietta railroad West to Glendale via Columbus, or East to Marietta; thence from Chillicothe and vicinity to Circleville by Ohio canal, from thence via Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville railroad.

From Athens and Hocking valley by Hocking valley Canal to Lancaster, and thence by Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville railroad.

From South Eastern part, and river counties of Ohio, Virginia and Kentucky, by steamboat on Ohio and Muskingum rivers.

For machinery and small live stock, and other freight, the Ohio Canal with all its branches is available via the Dresden side cut and Muskingum river.

We have thus hastily grouped some of the principal points of connexion and divergence in the routes to our obscure city, where the inhabitants are now busy in making preparations to welcome visitors from all of this, and part of the adjoining States.

Execution at Mobile.—G. W. Jordan, only twenty-three years of age, was hung for murder at Mobile on the 19th ult. The Register says:

When he left the prison door and walked out to the scaffold, he did so with a firm, intrepid step. He threw a glance around the circle of witnesses, of whom there was not exceeding fifty, to see if he recognized any one, and then turned his attention to an examination of the temporary frame work, which had been erected especially for him. There was no unnatural expression in his eye, no compressing of the lips, no blanching of the cheek, no outward expression of any emotion which he may have felt within. His was an extraordinary stoicism—if acted, excellently acted—which was apparent to the last. After ascending the steps—down which he would never again walk—to the platform, and one of the officers adjusted the rope around his neck, some one remarked that a fall of three feet would be too far for his height, he [illegible] the better." These were the only words he spoke upon the scaffold, except to bid one of the officers farewell.

He twice had an interview with the Emperor Napoleon—once at Paris, in the Tuileries, and once in the camp at Valleggio—where the plans for an invasion of Hungary by French troops were discussed and fixed, provided that the war should extend to the shores of the Adriatic.—This, however, did not take place, and thus the Hungarian expedition was of course postponed until the second Italian campaign, which cannot fail to follow in a few years, unless Austria changes her system of policy.

Whatever we may say against Napoleon, that he left the Tuscans, Modenese, Romagnols and Venitians in the lurch, and did not fulfil his famous Milan promise, to free Italy from the Alps to Adriatic; still we cannot say that he betrayed Hungary or Kossuth. He threw away a splendid opportunity of establishing himself by destroying Austria and giving freedom to the nations oppressed by her; but he had not the nerve to incur the open hostility of Prussia and the resentment of England, for it is certain that, even the Liberal statesmen of England believe that Europe requires an Austria. They wish for a better Austria, but an Austria they must have, to preserve their balance of power.

Douglas Meeting in Pittsburg, Penn.—On Monday night the Democrats of Pittsburg, Penn., friendly to the nomination of Stephen A. Douglas, of Ill., for President, held a meeting "for the purpose of promoting, by all the means in their power, his nomination." The Pittsburg Post says:

The soundest Democratic feeling prevailed, and the most enthusiastic approval of the political course of Mr. Douglas was expressed.

On motion, Joseph E. Hunter, Esq., was called to the Chair, and Samuel Harper, Esq., appointed Secretary.

On motion, Charles Bennett, James Irwin, H. Haye Smith, Thomas M. Hamilton and John J. Mitchell were appointed a committee to select permanent officers for an adjourned meeting.

On motion, the meeting adjourned to re-assemble at the hall of the Vigilant Engine House, on Tuesday evening, August 30th.

Speeches of Senator Pugh and General Geiger in Fayette County, Ohio.—A correspondent writes us from Washington, Fayette County, Ohio, under date of August 26, that the late speeches of Senator Pugh and General Geiger, in that county, had had a good effect, and that the Democracy will cut down the opposition majority considerably at the coming election. The people, he declares, are sick of the negro question. The Democratic meeting held on the 19th was the largest convened in Fayette County since 1856. It was much larger than the Republican meeting, which was addressed by Dennison.

TERMS - $2 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,
STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,
OF ILLINOIS.

Democratic State Ticket.

FOR GOVERNOR,
RUFUS P. RANNEY, of Cuyahoga County.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,
WILLIAM H. SAFFORD, of Ross County.

JUDGE OF THE SUPREME COURT,
HENRY C. WHITMAN, of Fairfield County.

AUDITOR OF STATE,
C. VOLNEY DORSEY, of Miami County.

TREASURER OF STATE,
WILLIAM BUSHNELL, of Richland County.

SECRETARY OF STATE,
JACOB REINHARD, of Franklin County.

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS,
JAMES TOMLINSON, of Washington County.

COMMON SCHOOL COMMISSIONER,
CHARLES N. ALLEN, of Harrison County.

The Statesman and the Democracy.

The course which the managers of the Statesman have chosen to adopt, with regard to the nominations of Commissioner and Auditor, has occasioned much remark among the Democracy of this county. The intention to defeat their nominations if possible, and the petty malice in which it originated, are regarded with displeasure by the Democracy of Franklin, who are not prepared to be governed by a "Junto" or clique, such as have their head-quarters at the post-office, branching off to the Statesman and the paper-mill.

The resignation of Mr. Hoover caused a vacancy in the Board of County Commissioners, which the Auditor, Recorder and Probate Judge, whose duty it was, filled by appointing Mr. Sparrow. The official term of the Auditor being about to expire, and in conformity to custom here, Mr. Phillips desired a renomination. He had discharged the duties of his office with great fidelity, and entitled himself to the popular regard by his uniform courtesy and urbanity. But he had committed the unpardonable sin of contributing to the appointment of Mr. Sparrow, who is held in utter detestation by Miller, Cox & Co., and his official head must answer Tom Miller's unmitigated wrath. O. P. Hines is accordingly induced to compete for the nomination, a man of independent property, engaged in a lucrative business which claims all his time and attention, in the hope of punishing Johnny Phillips. It has been suggested that it is a Miller move to get Hines out of the paper-mill, which is doing a good business, and they would prefer having it all in the family. Should Hines receive the nomination he might be induced to part with his interest in the paper-mill! But, be this as it may, we think there is enough spirit and independence in the Democracy of Franklin to show the Miller influence that its time is short.

But what kind of Democracy is that which is inculcated by the Statesman, and practised by the clique, that would proscribe the most popular men of the party? Is it aggregating strength to the party? Miller wishes to punish Phillips because he would not bow to the former's dictation, and the Statesman thinks the appointment of Mr. Sparrow a heinous fault, for which Phillips should answer. It charges that Mr. Sparrow reported erroneously that the Treasury had been depleted by Breslin, with the aid of Gibson to conceal the fact; and further asserts that the report of Mr. Sparrow furnished groundwork to Gov. Chase for his false allegation that not a dollar of the public money had soiled the hand of a Republican. Yet it republishes from the Newark Advocate, edited by W. D. Morgan, one of the Investigating Commission, an article, stating in so many words, that Mr. Sparrow's report did not sustain Gov. Chase's assertion. Is the Statesman or the Advocate right? Did the former reproduce that article as an act of justice to Mr. Sparrow, or did it creep into its columns unawares? It was refreshing to see it there, where repeatedly it had been charged that Mr. Sparrow's report had wrought everlasting injury to the Democratic party, and furnished the basis of Gov. Chase's assertion that no Republican had taken a dollar of the public money. Now, if his report did not authorize this assertion of Gov. Chase, the objection of the Statesman falls. The Newark Advocate says it did not, and the Statesman reproduces the article. Ought not the Statesman in candor and justice, say that it did Mr. Sparrow injustice, and that Mr. Phillips was not so wrong after all in appointing him Commissioner?

The primary election of the Democracy of this county will be held on Saturday next, when it is hoped that the people will take matters in their own hands and rebuke the self-constituted dictator, who by his unscrupulous arts and devices has sought to sway the will of the people. Resort was had to the primary election principle in consequence of a fraud having been practised on a nominating convention, mainly through the instrumentality of Tom Miller, who could not be trusted after such barefaced treachery. The primary election will not secure proper nominations, unless the people act for themselves, have a discriminating appreciation of men, and refuse to listen to the syren song of these promising politicians, who are governed alone by selfish motives and look forward solely to their own aggrandizement.

A Grand Organ.—Those who can appreciate a magnificent instrument, should call at once at the Music Store of Messrs. Smythe & Webster. They have an organ, or rather "Carhart Harmonium," that is one of the grandest instruments we have ever heard. It is from the manufactory of Carhart, Needham & Co., of New York, and costs but $300. The exterior is of plain appearance and finish, but it is by no means an unsightly piece of furniture, and with ten stops, five octaves with one and a half octaves of independent pedal bass, it is just the thing for churches, lodges and concerts.

"Can such things be,
And overcome us like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder?"

The fact that Judge Gholson did not manumit his slaves before removing to Ohio, does not strike all Republicans alike. Some consider it a small matter, but others give it grave consideration. It was asserted as conclusive evidence of his sympathy with Abolitionism that he had set his slaves free; but it turns out that he sold them and put the proceeds in his pocket. The bills of sale were made out in his own hand-writing, and stand so recorded. We have not thought it necessary to publish these bills of sale, the fact of their existence being sufficient. They have had, too, through other channels, an extensive circulation. Some of the Republican press attempt to meet the damaging effect the establishment of the fact must have upon the estimation of Judge Gholson's Abolition sympathies, by denying the genuineness of the documents.—Others hint at the possibility of deception. The Portage County Democrat, however, evidently is shocked, and states the case as follows:

"When the name of Judge Gholson was presented to the Republican State Convention at Columbus for nomination for Supreme Judge, it was coupled with the assertion that he, formerly a Mississippi slaveholder, had become disgusted with and opposed to slavery; that he had set his slaves free, and, in order to enjoy the institutions of freedom fully, he removed to a free State, and that ever since he has duly manifested his devotion to freedom and his hostility to slavery.—These statements have been widely published and believed by the Republicans throughout the State.

"The above statements in regard to Judge Gholson are now flatly and vehemently denied by the Democratic press of the State. They charge that Judge Gholson did not liberate, but sold his slaves, prior to his emigration to Ohio, and that hence the Republicans of the State have been deceived—averring that Judge Gholson is and always has been a pro-slavery man, and that he accords with the decision of Judge Swan in the Oberlin rescue habeas corpus case, and that he would decide, were he called upon for a decision, in the same way.

"If these charges are false, they are susceptible of clear, positive and satisfactory denials. If the charges are false, all right, so far as Judge Gholson is concerned. If true, then the Convention was imposed upon, and the people are deceived. But the Republicans, as in the case of Judges Swan, Scott and Peck, must not be cheated.

"If it is improper for Judge Gholson, as a candidate for a seat upon the Supreme bench, to 'prejudge a case,' by declaring his views upon the Fugitive Slave Law, then it was improper to nominate him.—And, in our opinion, it was improper to nominate him, and is always improper to nominate any man who, like him, has so little developed himself in regard to the cardinal principles of our party, as to need, after nomination, to define his position.

"Let us have men true, well-known and outspoken, then there is no chance for mistake or deception.

"We regret that Judge Gholson occupies, as he does in the minds of thousands of Republicans, an equivocal position.—Let his position be at once relieved, if it can be.

"We commend these considerations to the attention of the Ohio State Journal and the Cincinnati Republican journals."

There is no use in expressing regret that Judge Gholson "occupies an equivocal position," or to hope that it can "be at once relieved." His nomination was begun in fraud—it was conceived in a wish to deceive and humbug the Northern Republicans, with whom nothing would go down that was not tinctured with their favorite hobby. Accordingly, they were assured that Judge G. was "all right on the nigger," while those who knew him were confident that his decision, in any future case of a similar nature, would be identical with Judge Swan's. Democrats are sometimes charged with inconsistency, but for a Northern fanatic and Southern Republican to support Judge Gholson, as a representative of their sentiments, is an instance of inconsistency with scarcely a parallel.

Closing of White Sulphur Springs.—This is the last week of the season of the popular and attractive White Sulphur Springs, where so many citizens of our own and adjoining States have passed such pleasant days during the summer. This week will be the gayest of the gay, the courteous and capable proprietor having made every arrangement for a truly festal time.

Grand parties will be given on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, at which a very large attendance is expected, many of the former guests intending to pay their final visit to the Springs this week. The reunion will be extremely agreeable, and music and wine, dancing and beauty, flirtation and fashion will render this week the most delightful of the season.

We have heard of much preparation from this city, and there will be a fair representation from Columbus. The Railroad facilities and nice carriage drives, either from Lewis' Centre or Delaware Station, render it most agreeable, and the easiest thing in the world to visit the Springs.

Judge Gholson's Slaves.

The Democrats have sent to Mississippi and procured documents to show that Judge Gholson sold three negro boys in that State, fifteen years ago. Well, what are they going to do about it? Does having been a slaveholder disqualify a man from discharging the duties of a judge?—If so, how is it with our Supreme Judges who are now slaveholders?

We find the above, in some shape or other, in all our Republican exchanges.—It is a miserable subterfuge. The Republicans were claiming great credit for Judge Gholson, that he freed his negroes and removed from Mississippi, when the fact was he sold them, which was his unquestionable right. It is not that Judge Gholson was a slaveholder, or that he sold his negroes, instead of setting them free, to which there is objection, but to the pharisaical claim asserted for him that his sympathies were so accordant with Northern sentiment, that he could no longer dwell in a slaveholding community, but manumitted his slaves and removed to a free State, which was not true.

The public mind is terribly abused by constant fabrications which appear from day to day in the New York Herald, relative to Senator Douglas, which certainly show a fertility and facility of invention, but are better indications of unscrupulous and determined wickedness than anything else. But, as if to show that the Herald and its correspondents are not alone, the Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Tribune has recently indulged in a similar fiction, which we give as illustrative of the malice and slander with which the Senator from Illinois is pursued on every side. The writer says:

"On any evening may be found, at the residence of Senator Douglas, Democrats of all shades, as well as every class of fence men. On Friday evening last was quite a large gathering there of politicians of all stripes by special invitation. Prominent among the guests were Senator Iverson, of Georgia, Mr. Browne, editor of the Constitution, (the Government organ,) Mr. Coombs, editor of the Republic, and many other leading Southern and Northern party men. There was much private and confidential conversation between Mr. Douglas and the representatives of the different factions there assembled."

Now this was pure invention. No such "evening" was had at the residence of Senator Douglas. The Washington Constitution disposes of its portion of responsibility thus:

"If the political gathering described in the above extract has no more reality than has the assertion that Mr. Browne was present, it must be purely imaginatory.—Mr. Browne was not present on the occasion referred to; therefore, so far as he is concerned, there is not one word of truth in the letter."

The Washington Republic, also notices the same paragraph [illegible]

"A Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, of the 23d inst., professing to know all about what is going on at the residence of Senator Douglas, where, he says, 'on any evening may be found Democrats of all shades, as well as every class of fence men,' pretends to describe 'quite a large gathering of politicians of all stripes,' who met there by 'special invitation' on Friday evening last, and to give the substance of 'much private and confidential conversation' that then and there 'occurred between Mr. Douglas and the representatives of the different factions there assembled.'—'Prominent among the guests' who were present, this writer places one of the editors of the Republic, who was never prominent anywhere.

When we say that the editor of the Republic, thus elevated by the Tribune's correspondent into a prominent position among 'Democrats of all shades and every class of fence men' at the residence of Senator Douglas, was never in the house of that Senator in his life—and that we happen to know that Senator Douglas himself was not at home on the evening referred to, our readers will perceive that we have good grounds for acquitting said correspondent of all suspicion of having obtained his information by larking round the premises of Senator Douglas, and peeping in at his windows or through the key-hole."

"Now, without discussing the morals of a writer who would avail himself of confidential conversation which he did not hear, or that of a paper which would admit of such surreptitiously obtained details in its columns, it is sufficient to state what we happen to know, that Mr. Douglas had no company at the time referred to, and that none of the gentlemen named have been at his residence since the adjournment of Congress; nor did he invite them to meet him anywhere else; nor has there been any such political gathering or conference. The writer of the letter, although intimating that he is a visitor at the city, is a resident of Washington, and, we understand, identified with the Abolition organ here. We leave it to the public to judge what punishment such a contemptible scamp merits."

Kentucky—Official.

We learn, by the Frankfort Yeoman that, in the face of a precedent themselves had set, the Governor, Secretary of State and Attorney General of Kentucky have given the certificate of election to Anderson, notwithstanding Chrisman had a clear majority, and was entitled to the seat by the rule established by themselves. The Yeoman remarks:

When the Board can prove that 56 and I make 47 on Chrisman's side of the poll in Cumberland county, they can satisfy the people that they acted fairly; but not till then. Among the number of Democrats now present in Frankfort there is but one opinion of the action of the Board, and we will not mar the good feeling now prevailing in the festivities of the Inauguration by repeating it in plain language. The last act of the Know Nothing administration is in perfect keeping with its former practices.

The following are the majorities by which the candidates upon the Democratic State ticket are severally elected:

Magoffin—Governor	8,904
Boyd—Lieutenant Governor	11,712
James—Attorney General	12,685
Green—Auditor	7,808
Garrard—Treasurer	13,023
Frazier—Register	12,055
Richardson—Sup. of Pub. Instruction	13,088
Bates—President Board of Int. Imp.	12,704

The average majority of the ticket is 11,369. Magoffin's total vote is 76,187—the largest ever obtained by any candidate in that State. Who says that Kentucky is not Democratic to the core?

☞ We very much regret to hear of the want of harmony among the Democrats of Richland and Ashland counties, in the choice of a candidate for Senator. There can be no possible objection to Gen. James Cantwell,—a fair and attentive legislator, a gallant soldier who served his country, a firm and unflinching Democrat, his nomination should have been satisfactory, notwithstanding there might have been some personal disappointment. The old usage of alternating the right of nomination from one county to another, may be dispensed with at times to advantage; although in the main correct, for the protection of the weaker counties. The most important thing is to make a good selection; and whether from one county or another, it is no time to squabble about preferences, if the candidate is "all right." We have a U. S. Senator to elect, and it is the best thing the Democracy can do to provide for keeping Gov. Chase out of the position.

The Charge against Mr. Dennison.

When the charge was made against Mr. Dennison, that he had used the language attributed to him at the Middletown Encampment, he assured us that it was a mistake, and that such an idea had never entered his head. We still think there is a mistake, although the evidence is very strong that such an expression was used. It is the tendency, the inevitable tendency of Republican doctrines. We take the article from the Hamilton, O. Telegraph of the 25th ult.:

"I WILL EMPLOY THE BAYONET, SO HELP ME GOD."

We present below the proof of the correctness of our statement in regard to the declaration made by Mr. Dennison, at the Middletown Encampment. We have only to add, for the benefit of the Cincinnati Gazette and others that have questioned the truth of our report, that we can easily get five hundred of the best men in Butler County (of both political parties) to vouch for the veracity and respectability of the gentlemen whose names are appended to the subjoined affidavits:

State of Ohio, Butler County, ss.

Before me, the subscriber, a Notary Public in and for the county and State aforesaid, personally came Elias Webster, a resident of Butler County, Ohio, who deposes and says that on the —— day of July, 1859, I visited the Guthrie Gray Encampment, near Middletown, in said county of Butler, and while there was introduced to the Hon. William Dennison, the Republican candidate for Governor, and while in conversation with me on the subject of the Fugitive-slave Law, he made use of the following language:

"If I am elected Governor of Ohio—and I expect to be—I will not let any fugitive be returned to Kentucky or any other slave State, and if I cannot prevent it in any other way, as Commander-in-chief of the military of the State, I will employ the bayonet, so help me God!"

The [illegible] Nonsense of Mr. Dennison.

The speeches of Governor Chase and would-be Governor Dennison; the editorials of such leading Republican papers as the Ohio State Journal, Cincinnati Gazette, Cleveland Herald, and Lebanon Star, and the resolutions of the Republican County Conventions, show, very conclusively, that a combined and persistent effort is to be made by the Republican managers to reverse the present financial policy of the State for the safe-keeping of the public money, and to return to the old, rotten and justly-condemned system of depositing (another word for loaning) the public funds with banks, bankers and corporations, to be by them reloaned or speculated with, as they shall see proper.

We had supposed that the experience of the past few years, under the policy a return of which is now advocated by Dennison and the Republican managers, would have satisfied every honest and sound-thinking man that it is too unsafe for the State and too corrupting in its influence to be again resorted to. It is the same system under which Still, Breslin and Gibson operated, and the State lost nearly a million of dollars. While the operations of those Treasurers, and the disappearance of such enormous sums, under the old system, are still fresh in the memory of the tax-payers, it would seem to be the height of effrontery to ask the voters to give up their present mode of keeping the public money for the old, rotten, discarded one; yet we find Dennison and Company recommending them to do so.

We are much gratified to see the Commercial taking bold ground against a return to the old system. It uses up Mr. Dennison's main reason for preferring the law under which plunderers flourished so well, and says, very properly, that "the idea that the people are poorer from the locking up of a few thousand dollars is nonsense," and [illegible] lays down the correct doctrine in these words: "Let the rate of taxation be reduced as low as possible, and make no demand upon the people that the expenses of the State do not call." That is the old Jackson idea, to let the money of the people stay in their pockets until the Government needs it, and then draw so much only as is demanded by the absolute necessities of the Government. Semi-annual payment of taxes is founded on that idea, and is made a part of the present financial policy of the State, as to the safe keeping of the people's money. We hope the people, who do not want to speculate on the public money themselves, or want others to do so, will set their faces like steel against this project of the Republican managers, to return to the old corrupt and corrupting system of managing the State Treasury.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Democratic Triumph in Kentucky — Non-intervention. — The Nicholasville (Ky.) Democrat, in noticing the late election in that State, which resulted in such a brilliant Democratic victory, says: [illegible]

"The Opposition party was almost a unit in its advocacy of a slave code for the Territories, while the Democracy in the main denied the existence of a necessity for such a code, as well as its inutility.— * * * No one of our successful candidates advocated the propriety or expediency, much less the absolute necessity, of a black code. * * * * *

Many of our candidates who were successful publicly proclaimed that they would not, under any circumstances, vote for a slave code. How, then, the intervention portion of our party can claim the victory as an evidence of the success of their peculiar views on that subject, is remarkably strange.

☞ Hon. Aaron Harlan was nominated for Representative at the Republican primary election of Greene county, on Monday. It is evident the party is putting forward its "best licks," and it is no time for the Democrats to be extending "complimentary votes."

A Presbyterian Minister over the Falls of Niagara—his body picked up fifteen miles below.

On the 5th inst., a Presbyterian clergyman from Maysville, Ky., named Rev. John A. McClung, arrived here for the purpose of staying a short time at the Water Cure, his health being in bad condition. He registered his name at the American House, but did not take a room. After registering his name he went out into the street and nothing more was seen of him here.

It is supposed that whilst here he was partially deranged, and that he took the cars for Buffalo, where he arrived next day. He did not stop in that place but walked to Tonawanda. There he fell in with a man who got into conversation with him, and the two walked around the village for some time. This person says that Dr. McClung, did not appear from his manner and conversation to be in unsound mind. At five o'clock that evening he engaged a room in the hotel, and shut himself in it for some time, it is supposed for the purpose of changing his linen. When he came out he left his carpet bag in the room.

It is supposed that he walked from Tonawanda to Schlosser's landing 2 miles above the Falls. Here he was seen later in the evening, by a little girl, to undress and go into the river. Next morning his clothes were found where he had placed them on the dock, but no trace of his body was discoverable. The fact of his name being on a white handkerchief, served to identify the missing man.

On the 10th inst., four days after the disappearance of Dr. McClung, from Schlosser, a body was washed ashore at Youngstown, about 15 miles below the Falls. As the body was perfectly naked there were no traces by which to identify it, and it was therefore buried as a stranger.

Meanwhile his friends in Maysville had become alarmed for his safety and Mr. H. F. Miller of Maysville came to Cleveland in search of him. From this place he followed him to Schlosser, where the fact of his disappearance was learned. Diligent enquiries were set on foot, and ultimately the body found at Youngstown was disinterred and identified by Mr. Miller as that of Dr. McClung. A burial case was procured from Buffalo, in which the body was placed and taken home to Kentucky. Mr. Miller with the body in charge passed through here this morning.

Dr. McClung was about fifty years of age and leaves a wife and four children. Mrs. McClung is in feeble health, and this melancholy affair is a terrible blow in every way to the almost helpless family. He was the Pastor of the Maysville Presbyterian Church, and was much respected by all who knew him. We understand that he has been in poor health for a considerable time, and that he was of a very nervous temperament. Several years since, whilst in Indianapolis, he became partially deranged, and lived for seven weeks without sleep.

We copy the foregoing from the Cleveland Herald of the 23d August. It is a melancholy recital, disclosing the last event of a career checkered and colored, but which might have been brilliant and happy.

Dr. McClung was an elder brother of Alexander K. McClung, the brilliant speaker and writer of Mississippi, whose misfortune it was to take the lives of Allen and Menifee, in duels, and afterwards to fall by his own hand. His father, Judge McClung, of Kentucky, was eminent as a Jurist, and his mother was Susan Marshall, sister of the Chief Justice. Dr. McClung studied for the ministry while a young man and after officiating for some time, relinquished it as a pursuit and entered upon the profession of law, and was induced for a brief time to turn his attention to State affairs, as a member of the Legislature from Mason, where he stood in the front rank. He likewise distinguished himself at the bar, as a professional lawyer and powerful advocate. He was subject to dyspepsia from his youth, and as was the case with his brothers and sister, of a peculiarly nervous temperament. While yet a young man he published an interesting volume of scraps of Western story, under the title of "Sketches of Western Adventure." Shortly afterwards he produced a novel, entitled "Camden," a tale of the Revolution, the scenes of which were laid in the Carolinas, and which possessed considerable merit. He occasionally essayed poetry, but few fugitive pieces indicate his success in that line.

There, amid the thunder of the mighty cataract, where nature presents a grand illustration of sublimity, he passed into the presence of Him whose humble and conscientious servant and follower he was, whether by the inscrutable operation of his own free will, or through some untoward circumstance, can never be revealed.

☞ Senator Hunter, of Virginia, is reported to have said, in a recent speech, that if the Democratic party does not repudiate the principle of Popular Sovereignty, and advocate in lieu thereof the principle of Congressional Intervention, the party ought to be dissolved, and the sooner the better.

Senator Hunter—Correction.—A paragraph crept into our news columns yesterday to the effect that Senator Hunter, of Virginia, had declared in a recent speech that if the Democratic party does not repudiate the principle of popular sovereignty, and advocate in lieu thereof the principle of Congressional intervention, the party ought to be dissolved, and the sooner the better. This is undoubtedly a base libel upon Senator Hunter, gotten up by an unscrupulous political enemy. Senator Hunter and his friends in Virginia are combating the principle of Congressional intervention.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Delegates to the Charleston Convention.—Ten delegates have thus far been appointed to the Charleston Convention from the States of Vermont and Maine. Eight of the ten will certainly vote for Mr. Douglas as the Presidential candidate, and the other two will most probably do so. The Bangor (Me.) Times of the 23d of August, in speaking of the election of the delegates in that district, says:

"Both delegates to the Charleston Convention are in favor of Stephen A. Douglas, and were so elected, and their opinions have been long known in the community where they reside."

The Indianapolis Sentinel the central organ of the Democracy of Indiana, in noticing the statement of the New York Tribune that the electors to the Democratic State Convention in Indiana were mostly against Douglas, says it will certainly be news in that State.

A Day in Cincinnati.

Business called us to Cincinnati on Tuesday, where for a few hours we had the gratification of seeing many political and personal friends; and much to our satisfaction ascertained that the party was never more harmonious, and is only waiting the nomination of a good ticket to cover itself with a glorious triumph.

The attempted fusion of the Know Nothings and Republicans it is thought cannot be consummated, as, if certain candidates are selected with the view of completing the coalition, their selfish purpose will be frustrated by a people who are not willing to be used as instruments in accomplishing such miserable bargains.

As was natural, we called at the sanctum of the Enquirer, and found "Hi Robinson" and Bloss "pitching in generally"—the editor in chief, Mr. Banks being absent at the east. The editorial force of the Enquirer is a strong team and no mistake, embracing Banks, Robinson, Bloss, with occasional touches from Faran, in the political department: Junius Browne and W. W. Fosdick in the commercial, political and fanciful; Wiguns railroading, and George Bennett "over the river."—We may, and probably have omitted to mention others connected with the editorial force, which is certainly much augmented since we were one of its lesser lights.

Our old friend Fred Hunt, after having his limb boxed up for seven weeks, is standing on his pins again, but limps with the aid of a cane. We were at the Opera together, being the second night of the season. The Opera House is all that the elaborate descriptions have represented—the company now performing there is a very clever one—at least Donizetti's Lucia di Lammermoor was very deliciously rendered to our unused and unpracticed ears. We did not inquire the names of the artists, but they are exceedingly agreeable in their respective roles.

The laying of a street railroad was inaugurated, and Andy Francisco of the Penny Press boasts of having the first boulder picked up, which it is possible he will have set for a breast-pin, being much addicted to jewelry.

The National Theater produced the School for Scandal, with Miss E. Mitchell as Lady Teazle. The Sir Peter of Mr. Somebody was creditable, and Lady Teazle fair, but the piece did not sparkle as we have seen it, and our stay was short.

To us of the rural districts, the bustle of the Commercial Metropolis gave it an air of business to which we are unaccustomed, in our quiet and peaceful city.—And with it came the impression that the race must be to the swift in the awful contest and scramble for the "mighty dollar."

We could not think of passing a day or part of a day in Cincinnati without dropping in on some of those old and agreeable spots, the memories of which in former years, occasionally haunt us now. The "St. Charles," the "Verandah," the "Dentber's," the "William Tell," and the "Debolt," are all standing [illegible] ante bellum. Fred and Henry [illegible] of the "Tell" we have known for more than thirty years, and we could not refuse a glass of their pure Catawba, to old times, when Charley Hammond, and "six foot two," and Moses Dawson, and father Punshon, Dennis McCarthy, Sam Talbott and other editors, politicians and good fellows were among its habitues. They have passed away, but there stands the "Tell," and Fred and Henry look as if Time dealt lightly with them.

But we had to be brief in our day's agreeables, part being indispensably necessary to business. Some other time we shall see our old friends again and may be take some further "notes."

Aurora Borealis.—We were visited by one of those magnificent displays on Sunday evening—the finest we think we ever witnessed—It is graphically described by the Louisville Courier:

"Aurora Borealis.—The glorious spectacle which we noticed as taking place at nine o'clock on Sunday evening, was repeated at intervals on Monday morning, with a great increase of brilliancy. The pale pea-green rays, which generally form the northern lights, had remained with but little change from the time of their first appearance until daylight on Monday morning. At about half past two, however, the crimson rays again appeared, flanking the central radiation, and kept shooting incessantly far towards the zenith for more than an hour. The portion between the two flanks of crimson was of the most delicate purple hue, and at the base, just above the horizon, was an arch of light tinged with pale green. No part of the magnificent display was stationary, but kept shifting and changing without a moment's rest. At times spires of crimson and purple would shoot even beyond the zenith and then the whole would form a sheet of color, shimmering constantly like the incipient play of heat lightning, after becoming so compact as nearly to obscure the stars. At short intervals from the pale light forming the arch below, long slender spires would shoot, piercing the crimson and purple like the thrust of a mighty blade, and then seemingly sinking back to gain new strength for the conflict. It was the event of a lifetime to witness a phenomenon so grand. It was "beautiful as a dream of heaven." Words have no power to convey an idea of its appearance.

The phenomena of the northern lights have been watched with intense interest by savans all over the world. Various hypotheses have been given as to their origin. Some have ascribed them to electrical and magnetic causes, while others have given them solely a terrestrial origin. Prof. Olmsted, of Yale College, who died in May last, advocated the doctrine of their cosmical origin, deriving their materials from some supposed nebulous traversing the planetary spaces. He assigned them a period of about sixty years. This view found but little favor with men of science, and the electrical theory still maintains its ground. Certain it is, that the telegraph lines throughout the entire country were entirely powerless on Sunday night. Scarcely a message was received. This fact points to an electrical cause, and will afford new ground for the investigations of the scientific world.

☞ The New York Evening Post, the ablest Republican paper in the Union, in a review of Mr. Douglas' article in Harper's Magazine, says it is an exceedingly elaborate, minute and closely-reasoned document. It declares it to be a keen and vigorous defence of popular sovereignty.

Governor Chase Privately Explains—His Excuse Examined.

We have a curious development lately. The Ohio Statesman publishes a letter which Governor Chase addressed to it privately last winter. The Governor was anxious to stop the Statesman's allusions to the famous falsehoods by which he saved himself and his party from defeat in the campaign of 1857. As a means for excusing himself from the statements then made, Chase tells the Statesman that he placed his reliance on Sparrow's investigation, and relying on their accuracy, he was led to make the declaration that not a single dollar of the public money had ever improperly touched the hands of a Republican State officer. This is a most shameless pretence and sinks Chase still deeper in the mire. Sparrow's report did not sustain Chase's declaration. It did erroneously fix the entire defalcation as having occurred within Breslin's term of office, but it did not relieve Republican State officers from participating in the improper use of the public money. On the contrary, it contained sufficient to show to all who were willing to open their eyes, that Bowen, whom Chase appointed Supreme Judge of Ohio, was one of Breslin's abettors in the misuse of the Treasury.

But had there been no such intimation as this in the report of Mr. Sparrow, the Governor had had on his table for 8 months previous, proof of a character so unimpeachable as should have prevented such utterances as he dishonestly gave to his deluded hearers from the stump. In February, 1857, the printed report of the Republican Investigating Committee (Messrs. Taylor, Sinnett and Smith,) was placed on the table of the Governor. This was six or eight months before the delivery of Chase's stump speeches through the State. In the investigating report, the committee distinctly showed up the fact, that Gibson had loaned to Frank Kimball, the Republican Attorney General, THITY THOUSAND DOLLARS on which to start a BROKER'S OFFICE in Cleveland. This transaction is in all respects identical with the most censurable operations in which Breslin has been found to have been engaged. Yet Chase assured his friends, that not a single dollar of the public money had ever been wrongfully used by a Republican State officer! Perhaps he thought Kimball's conduct in no respect improper. If this be so, then he and Breslin agreed exactly.—Newark Advocate.

Style and the Ohio Statesman.

Dr. Johnson said, clothing the dictum with one of his customary triads, that whoever sought to acquire a pure English style must give his days and nights to the Spectator, and it may be doubted if much advance has been made, in the way of improvement upon the writers of Addison's day. There has been however a great variety of styles adopted since that period, the fashion of language having changed almost as much as that of dress; especially is this so in our country where all sorts of foreign idioms have been grafted upon the English stock; but most of the writers of this day, particularly of the newspaper class, are in the same category with Pope's characterless women, and have no style at all. From this negative condemnation we must except the Ohio Statesman. We have several times wondered, while reading that paper, upon what model its style was formed, and have come to the conclusion that its editor has taken for his prototypes two fellows somewhat notorious in the early part of our history for writing in a style uncouth, harsh, and devoid of ornament and, in other respects in unison with the characters of those whom they sought to instruct—we allude to Tom Paine and Wm. Cobbett. In saying this, we do not mean to flatter him of the Statesman, since we are bound to add that his imitation is very far from perfect, being rather of the forcible feeble order, owing perhaps to some conventional restraints as well as to want of culture and innate strength. Doubtless he does his best, and we think that in the vituperative point he almost comes up to his originals; indeed he might, in time, surpass them, if he did not overdo this part of his labor, and if he would take time to study some collection of Billingsgate synonyms so as to vary his epithets somewhat, and thus relieve the most prominent feature of his style from monotony. "Base, vile, infamous and atrocious—false, falsehood, lie and liar" are sharp and biting words but they lose their edge by frequent repetition. Such language, at the South is considered dangerous, in any season, but we observe that it is here looked upon as entirely harmless even in the hottest weather.—Probably it is understood to be used only in a Pickwickian sense. There are those, perhaps, for tastes are unaccountable, who look upon this kind of writing as vigorous and refreshing—no doubt the editor understands the appetites of those for whom he caters—but we cannot admire it. Were we to undertake to classify or designate it by any particular name, we should call it the Porcupine or Hedge-hog style.

But if the manner of the Statesman be thus coarse and vulgar, what shall we say of the matter? His is the central organ and the paper, we suppose, is considered a sort of reservoir or fountain upon which the smaller democratic organs in the various counties are expected to draw for refreshment and instruction; but how weak the libation, how stale the teaching, before the diluted draught, and the dirty leaven reach the thirsty and hungry democrat! The paper is made up of bald assertions, sneaking espionage, personalities couched in vulgar and ungrammatical language, and political paragraphs whose greatest merit is the craftiness they display in the editor's efforts to pervert, distort, and suppress the truth. What must be the religion where a Monkey is the Priest, and what must be the party of which such a paper is the Organ?—Zanesville Courier.

☞ The Confederacy, a fire-eating sheet published at Atlanta, Ga., came out for Mr. Atkin, the Opposition nominee for Governor. It said:

"The Confederacy espouses the cause of the Opposition, under the conviction that the only hope for the South is in the triumph of that party in 1860. The Democracy can succeed in the next Presidential canvass only under the leadership of Douglas. 'It is in vain,' says that journal, 'to think of success, unless the Charleston Convention accept Stephen A. Douglas—and that would be a success of disguised free-soilism.' And again, it says: 'As far as we are concerned, we prefer the election of William H. Seward to that of Stephen A. Douglas.'"

The Iron Furnaces of Ohio.—We have before us a chart comprising a list of Iron Furnaces in the vicinity of Portsmouth published by Mr. McFarland of the Portsmouth Tribune. The entire number is set down at forty-five. It also contains a list of seventeen furnaces in Kentucky, making a total of sixty-two. The yearly aggregate of pig-iron turned out at these is estimated at [illegible] tons, with a value of [illegible]. The number of hands employed at these furnaces is estimated at 6,200, receiving the total sum of $155,000 per month. The Iron trade is quite a feature in the Scioto Valley and the neighborhood.

Tenth Ohio State Fair.

Ho! all ye papers with whom we exchange, far and near, we charge you, as ever you will look for favor at our hand, take up this our trumpet blast, and let it echo across from Pennsylvania to Indiana, and from the Ohio river to the Lake, and back again, until it swells over every hill and penetrates every valley of the State, so that all true Buckeyes, in every nook and corner, may hear that they are summoned by the good people of Zanesville to draw near and give their attendance at the tenth great State Fair, which is to be held in this vicinity on the twentieth day of September next.

There is, perhaps, no locality within the State, which is more readily accessible for [illegible], from all the parts than Zanesville, as may be observed from the brief summary which we subjoin of these various avenues having reference to the different points of the compass.

From the West and North West it can be reached by the various railroads connecting with the Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland railroad via Columbus, and by the Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark railroad via Newark.

The North East portion of the State, have the Cleveland and Erie railroad on the Lake shore to Cleveland. The Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago railroad, connecting with the Sandusky, Mansfield and Newark railroad at Mansfield. The Pittsburgh and Cleveland railroad connecting with the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad at Alliance, and at the Ohio river at Wellsville where shippers will have choice of steamboat via Marietta, or railroad via Central Ohio from Bellaire.

The central portion of the State East of Columbus by the Central Ohio railroad, and the Steubenville and Indiana railroad via Newark.

From Cincinnati and vicinity, the Cincinnati, Columbus and Cleveland railroad via Columbus and the Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville railroad via Morrow, Wilmington, Circleville and Lancaster.

From the South, by the Cincinnati and Marietta railroad West to Glendale via Columbus, or East to Marietta; thence from Chillicothe and vicinity to Circleville by Ohio canal, from thence via Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville railroad.

From Athens and Hocking valley by Hocking valley Canal to Lancaster, and thence by Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville railroad.

From South Eastern part, and river counties of Ohio, Virginia and Kentucky, by steamboat on Ohio and Muskingum rivers.

For machinery and small live stock, and other freight, the Ohio Canal with all its branches is available via the Dresden side cut and Muskingum river.

We have thus hastily grouped some of the principal points of connexion and divergence in the routes to our not obscure city, where the inhabitants are now busy in making preparations to welcome visitors from all of this, and part of the adjoining States.

Execution at Mobile.—G. W. Jordan, only twenty-three years of age, was hung for murder at Mobile on the [illegible] ult. The Register says:

"When he left the prison door and walked out to the scaffold, he did so with a firm, intrepid step. He threw a glance around the circle of witnesses, of whom there was not exceeding fifty, to see if he recognized any one, and then turned his attention to an examination of the temporary frame work, which had been erected especially for him. There was no unnatural expression in his eye, no compressing of the lips, no blanching of the cheek, no outward expression of any emotion which he may have felt within. His was an extraordinary stoicism—if acted, excellently acted—which was apparent to the last. After ascending the steps—down which he would never again walk—to the platform, and one of the officers adjusted the rope around his neck, some one remarked that a fall of three feet would be too much for his height, he looked at the quantity of slack, and remarked, 'No that's so much the better.' These were the only words he spoke upon the scaffold, except to bid one of the officers farewell."

☞ Pulsky writes to the N. Y. Tribune the following interesting items respecting Napoleon and Kossuth:

"He twice had an interview with the Emperor Napoleon—once at Paris, in the Tuileries, and once in the camp at Valeggio—where the plans for an invasion of Hungary by French troops were discussed and fixed, provided that the war should extend to the shores of the Adriatic.—This, however, did not take place, and thus the Hungarian expedition was of course postponed until the second Italian campaign, which cannot fail to follow in a few years, unless Austria changes her system of policy.

Whatever we may say against Napoleon, that he left the Tuscans, Modenese, Romagnole and Venetians in the lurch, and did not fulfill his famous Milan promise to free Italy from the Alps to Adriatic, still we cannot say that he betrayed Hungary or Kossuth. He threw away a splendid opportunity of establishing himself by destroying Austria and giving freedom to the nations oppressed by her; but he had not the nerve to incur the open hostility of Prussia and the resentment of England, for it is certain that even the Liberal statesmen of England believe that Europe requires an Austria. They wish for a better Austria, but an Austria they must have, to preserve their balance of power."

Douglas Meeting in Pittsburg, Penn.—On Monday night the Democrats of Pittsburg, Penn., friendly to the nomination of Stephen A. Douglas, of Ill., for President, held a meeting "for the purpose of promoting, by all the means in their power, his nomination." The Pittsburg Post says:

"The [illegible] Democratic feeling prevailed, and the most enthusiastic approval of the political course of Mr. Douglas was expressed.

On motion, Joseph R. Hunter, Esq., was called to the Chair, and Samuel Harper, Esq., appointed Secretary.

On motion, Charles Barnett, James Irwin, H. Hays Smith, Thomas R. Hamilton and John J. Mitchell were appointed a committee to select permanent officers for an adjourned meeting.

On motion, the meeting adjourned to re-assemble at the hall of the Vigilant Engine House, on Tuesday evening, August 30th."

Speeches of Senator Pugh and General Geiger in Fayette County, Ohio.—A correspondent writes us from Washington, Fayette County, Ohio, under date of August 26, that the late speeches of Senator Pugh and General Geiger, in that county, had had a good effect, and that the Democracy will cut down the opposition majority considerably at the coming election. The people, he declares, are sick of the negro question. The Democratic meeting held on the 19th was the largest convened in Fayette County since 1856. It was much larger than the Republican meeting, which was addressed by Dennison.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1, 1859.

FOR REPRESENTATIVES.

Please announce BENJ. L. REES, of Hamilton township, a candidate for the next General Assembly, subject to the decision of the people at the Democratic Primary Election.

WM. R. RANKIN, the able and efficient representative in the last Legislature, will be supported for re-election, by the "unterrified DEMOCRATS" OF FRANKLIN.

FOR AUDITOR.

JOHN PHILLIPS, the present Auditor, is recommended for re-election by Democratic voters of every ward of Columbus and every township in the County of Franklin, as a faithful and efficient officer, and entitled to the suffrages of the people.

FOR SHERIFF.

GEORGE W. HUFFMAN will be supported for Sheriff of Franklin County, by MANY VOTERS.

Naturalization and Suffrage—No. IV.

Of all the races which are now striving for the mastery of the world—to impress on the future of society and civilization the stamp of its own character and genius; to make its law, ideas, religion, [illegible] government and opinion prevail, the Anglo-Saxon is now unquestionably the most [illegible]. The day when it might have been crushed, absorbed or trampled out by stronger hordes, is gone by forever; the tongue of Shakspeare and Bacon is now too firmly rooted ever to be torn away. No longer content with mere preservation, it aims at universal mastery. The growth of the great Anglo-Saxon states is astonishing. In 1801, the population of Great Britain was 10,945,646; in 1800, that of the United States was 5,319,762, or not quite half: in 1860, the population of the United States is two millions and a third more than Great Britain; in 1869, at this moment, it probably exceeds it by eight millions. The rate of decennial increase in England is less than fifteen per cent.; while in America it is about thirty-five per cent. The immigration daily pouring into this country from Europe is regarded with apprehension abroad, as occasioning a great abstraction of capital. From Germany alone, from 1846 to 1851, the annual average was 96,676, and the capital brought into the country annually was 19,879,383 rix dollars, (about 15,000,000 Spanish dollars. According to the progress of the last fifty years in France and in America, the United States will have the larger population in 1870; in 1900, they will exceed those of England, France, Spain, Portugal, Denmark, Sweden and Switzerland combined. Many persons now alive may see the time when America will be of more importance, socially, commercially and politically, than all Europe put together. She now has a solid territory of the width of twenty degrees of latitude, stretching from ocean to ocean, and nearly equal in extent to the whole of Europe; square miles in U. S. 3,260,073; in Europe 3,700,271. (See American Almanac for 1856, pp. 315 and 316.)—She will become a power numbering 100,000,000 of free and energetic men, of the Anglo-Saxon race. This race was the pioneer in civil and religious liberty.—The Magna Charta of England, obtained in the reign of King John,—I think in the year 1216,—contains the great body of what is called English liberty, out of which was developed our American revolution. We all know the story of the revolution; it is the first lesson which our mothers taught us. The colonies which produced it were animated by a sense of their wrongs, and that spirit of "universal emancipation," which has instigated man all round the globe to throw off the chains of despotism; that spirit which induced Brutus to stab Cæsar; which actuated Tell, Wallace, Bruce and Emmett to court martyrdom—to become a sacrifice on the altar of freedom. The revolution affirmed the self-evident truths, "that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," &c. I have, heretofore, furnished your paper with matter on the subject of the rights of aliens and persons born without the United States and settling here. I need not amplify and elaborate the subject farther, without one should controvert the positions I have assumed, that all men have a natural, equal and inalienable right to vote, because they are all born free and equal; that they all have common rights and interests entitled to protection, and therefore have an equal right to decide, either personally or by their chosen representatives, upon the laws and regulations, which shall control, measure and sustain those rights and interests; that they cannot be compelled, to surrender, except by their free consent, what, by the bounty and order of Providence, belongs to them in common with all their race.

HAMILTON COUNTY.

WIG MANUFACTORY.—It may not be generally known that our friend and fellow citizen, J. W. Collier is engaged in preparing those indispensable ornaments which preserve the youthful appearance, beyond the reach of [illegible], and should claim special attention from those who have not given over all pretensions to juvenility and gallantry. Mr. Collier's rooms are opposite the Goodale House, where he is prepared at all times to drape the head in any desirable style, and show specimens of his high finish and perfection as an artist.

The Piqua Enquirer is anxious to know if there is such a paper as Young's Spirit of the South? There have been some inquiries to the same effect hereabouts.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY.—The Democrats of Montgomery County, Ohio, have nominated Adam Clay and Henderson Elliott for Representatives in the Legislature, and Ben. W. Ayers for Treasurer.

THAT SNUFF-BOX.—Gen. Jackson's gold snuff-box, that box of many contentions, is finally disposed of. Gen. Ward B. Burnett, of New York City, famous in the Mexican War, is the happy recipient. The presentation was formally made at Nashville, on the 17th inst.

JUDGE RANNEY.—We learn that Judge Ranney, the Democratic candidate for Governor, is winning golden opinions wherever he speaks. His addresses are said to be the finest efforts on the stump that have been heard in the State for many years. A Republican, who heard him at Marietta, told us he never listened to such a powerful political address in his life. And he said that Mr. Ranney falsified the truth in but one instance, and that was when he represented Judge Swan as the best Judge in the State; when, said our informant, he knew there was no one superior to himself as Judge. Though Judge Ranney is not posted to speak at this place we are assured he will speak here before the close of the canvass. The people here, of all parties, would have been highly pleased to have had the two Gubernatorial candidates speak together in this city. We hope that may yet be accomplished.—Cin. Enquirer.

SWINDLER.—The New Albany (Ind.) Ledger is telling a bad story about a citizen of Columbus, who gives his name as WM. BRADLEY. We have examined the directory and can find but one WM. BRADLEY in the list, and following that name to the sentence "—commission merchant, West side of High between Gay and Broad." How it comes to get there we are not prepared to state, as no commission houses are situated in that locality, and no WM. BRADLEY ever done business "on the square," we mean his square. But the Ledger says:

"About eighteen months ago a man, aged about fifty years, named William Bradley, bringing a letter of introduction from a Louisville banker, sold to the Ohio Insurance Company of this city a bill of exchange for $1,100, purporting to be drawn by himself, and accepted by Stanley & Bostick, whom he alleged to be dealers in produce in New York. Only $600 of the amount was paid, however, and when the bill became due it was not met in New York. On Tuesday the President of the Ohio Company, learning that Bradley was in Portland, went to see him, and asked him to come over to this city, which he did not having been "arrested," as stated by a Louisville paper. Mr. Bradley alleges that he was sunk on a steamboat in the Upper Mississippi, where he lost all his money and property. Telegraphic dispatches were sent to New York, but the replies were not entirely satisfactory. Bradley resides in Columbus, Ohio, where he has a family. He was permitted to leave the city for the purpose of endeavoring to arrange the debt, which, he says, he can do."

REPUBLICAN MEETING AT ELYRIA.—There was a Republican meeting at Elyria, in Lorain county, on Saturday, at which Gov. CHASE, Judge SPALDING, and Hon. D. K. CARTER were present and took part. The editor of the Cleveland National Democrat, who was also present, reports that Judge SPALDING said in his speech that as at present advised, he would be constrained to vote against Judge GHOLSON, not because he sold his slaves, and not because his friends claimed before his nomination that he had emancipated them—for he, Judge S., was not going to deny these facts; but he would not vote for any man that will sustain a decision that kept citizens of Lorain county in jail at Cleveland, for aiding a Fugitive to regain his freedom. Mr. CARTER, however, differed with Judge SPALDING, and said if he had a thousand votes instead of one, he would give them all to Judge GHOLSON.

[illegible] GRIGGS OF THE STUMP.—General GRIGGS and Judge RANNEY were making speeches in Portsmouth last week. The Tribune thus daguerreotypes the General:

"Gen. Griggs is a very ready, witty stump speaker. He enlists the attention of all at the start, and keeps his audience in a continual good humor. He is a droll looking genius—not larger than a piece of chalk, but all nerve and vitality. He reminds us of those packages of preserved meats put up for transportation on long marches, for Arctic expeditions—light and dry in appearance, but when warmed up, found to contain all the spice and nutriment of a regular French dinner. He said last night that "the Republicans took a survey of the world through a goose quill, and saw nothing but a nigger dangling at the end of a cotton string!" Again—that they "did not play the harp of a thousand strings, but were forever sawing away on the big fiddle, with one string, to the tune of—'Nigger, nigger, nigger!'"

The fact is, both parties play the tune of [illegible]

SCENE AT A CAMP MEETING.—An eastern exchange has it that while the Long Island camp meeting was being held, "Capt. ('Awful') Gardner came up to the camp one evening, bringing a 'noted' character from the Bowery and a dog fighter. The man, under the preaching the next morning, was struck through and through with conviction for his sins and came forward in the crowd falling on his knees, weeping, shrieking and crying aloud for mercy. So well had the work been done his terrors were soon turned to triumphs. The son of [illegible], broke in upon his sight, and with Capt. Gardner [illegible] shaking together with arms upon each other's neck, wept like children, [illegible] shouting over the joy of sins forgiven. Others constantly followed in like manner."

PRACTICAL JOKING IN THE ENGLISH ARMY.—Two roystering lieutenants belonging to the 14th British regiment, a few weeks since, entered the hut of the ensign of the corps and bring his favorite dog with his sash, and, as if to add to the indignity, stuck his tooth brush into the animal's mouth. For this ungentlemanly conduct the two officers were tried by a court-martial; Excitement consequent upon fate living was pleaded, but the decision of the court was prompt and decided. It recommended the accused to be cashiered. The Commander-in-Chief confirmed the finding, which, according to the usual charge in such cases, was read at the head of every regiment in the service. The father of one of the lieutenants commanded the regiment for two years, and is now a general officer.

GOV. WISE GASSED OUT.—It is suggested that the "Popular Sovereignty" manifesto of Mr. DOUGLAS, published and copyrighted by Harper's Magazine, should bring out Governor WISE, in a learned reply, through Sheahan's Ledger, on "Congressional Sovereignty." It is insisted that he must answer DOUGLAS's arguments or abandon the field.

JUDGE McLEAN.—The Lake Superior Journal of the 17th says:—"Among the passengers seeking recreation, on the Northern Light on her last trip up, was Judge McLean, of the U. S. Supreme Court. He was looking fresh and vigorous, and appeared to be greatly interested with what he saw and heard."

NEW YORK HOTELS.—The entire cost of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, was one million one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, of which the furniture, carpets and paintings cost $350,000. One hundred guests were registered the day the hotel opened. The St. Nicholas has for three weeks past averaged something like 700 guests; the Metropolitan 500 or 600; the La Farge 200; the New York Hotel 400 to 500.

SNOW HAT.—A vaporing Cincinnatian at the Tremont House, Boston, expatiating on the "vine clad hills," &c., claimed that the Ohio, was "the Rhine of the New World."

"Yes," ejaculated old X—, the pork-Rhine."

There was a pause, then several exploded, and then the crowd took a last view of the whole subject through the bottoms of glass tumblers, at the expense of the Porkopolis man.

The Canadian Telegraph Company's bill has passed the House of Lords in the British Parliament, and it expects to get to work at an early day, laying down a line via Greenland, Faroe Islands, Iceland and Labrador.

The good people of Waterbury, Conn. have been treated the past week to an exhibition of wax figures representing Mr. and Mrs. Sickles and Mr. Key. A monkey and an orang-outang made up the balance of this unique show.

Advices to the Department of the Interior at Washington announce that the government has obtained judgment for five thousand dollars against Mr. Dodge, surety for Mr Ransom, charged with frauds on the Pension Office, who fled.

A second crop of strawberries is being raised in portions of Pennsylvania. The berries are said to be excellent.

Douglas a Magazine Writer.

THE K. G. C.—A New York correspondent of the Charleston Mercury says that the real mission of this secret Order is to aid the liberal party in Mexico. A branch of the Order is now being formed in New York City, and, in filibustering circles, its object is perfectly well understood. The Mercury's correspondent adds that its scheme is tacitly favored by the United States Government.

SENATOR DOUGLAS has written an article which is published in Harper's Magazine for September, on "The Dividing Line between Federal and Local Authority—Popular Sovereignty in the Territories." It is an elaborate defense of his ideas upon the question of slavery in the Territories. He contends, as he always has done, that Congress has no authority over the subject, but that it belongs exclusively to the people of the Territories. The essay is complimented by the opponents of Mr. Douglas as a shrewd production. Publishers are prohibited by copyright from copying the article. This is a novelty in regard to the circulation of speeches and essays on political subjects by distinguished politicians.—[Tribune.

PRESIDENTIAL REBUKE.—Mr. JOHN T. JOHNSON, lately a Custom House officer in Alexandria, publishes a card in the Gazette of that city explanatory of the cause of his removal from office. It appears that he voted for Mr. SHACKLEFORD for Congress, instead of Gov. SMITH. And, although Mr. SHACKLEFORD was a Democrat, yet the Governor was considered the regular party candidate, and therefore Mr. Johnson was ousted for his offence. [illegible] the President in regard to his removal. Here is his own account of the interview:

"The President informed us, that persons who hold office under his Administration would be expected to support the re-election of members of Congress who were friendly to his Administration, regardless of their antecedents: Opposition to such candidates, he regarded as just cause for removal."

APPARENT PARTIALITY IN POST-OFFICE OFFICIALS.—The DAILY FACT is mailed at the Columbus Post-Office every evening, and the Statesman, being a morning paper, is, of course not mailed until the next morning, and yet we are credibly informed that the Statesman is delivered at the Cincinnati Post-Office six hours before the FACT of the previous evening. What is the cause of this seeming partiality, and where does the misfeasance occur?

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Aug. 28.—The screw steamships City of Washington, from Liverpool, August 17th, and Cork, August 18th, was boarded by the news boat of the Associated Press off Cape Race at half past two o'clock this (Thursday) afternoon and such news as can be gleaned from the papers at hand will be provided without delay.

The City of Washington's news had not reached Sackville at 8 o'clock on Friday evening and the presumption is that the report was withheld as usual by the Nova Scotia Telegraph line; but as the Newfoundland Co. are about to disconnect their cable from the Nova Scotia shore and to carry it over to Prince Edward's Island, as originally intended, this passing around and avoiding Nova Scotia, the public may reasonably hope to be relieved at an early day from the outrageous conduct of the Nova Scotia telegraphers.

The R. M. steamship America was boarded by the news boat of the Associated Press on Wednesday, and her news was immediately provided to Port Hood, and there handed over to the Nova Scotia line, and would have been forwarded to New York in ample season for publication in Thursday morning's journals if the Nova Scotia telegraphers had performed their duty, but as such a course would have deprived the telegraph managers of the opportunity of favoring the news speculators' report of the America's date, the important intelligence was allowed to rest at Port Hood until after the America had arrived at Halifax, and her news had been dispatched to Sackville by Express.

The screw steamer City of Manchester, which left New York for Liverpool on Saturday, was boarded by the agent of the Associated Press off Cape Race at half-past four o'clock on Friday afternoon, and Capt. Kennedy was bountifully supplied with the English papers, received from Capt. Petrie, of the City of Washington, three days previous, as well as the latest advices.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Aug. 26.—The Nova Scotia line has closed beyond Sackville, without delivering the five days later European news despatched for the Associated Press, which is known to be upon their wires.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Aug. 27.—The blue noses of the Nova Scotia Telegraph Company still withhold our important news by the steamer City of Washington, and, as they may attempt some fraud on the public by rising what does not belong to them, the commercial public should be upon their guard. As soon as we receive authentic intelligence it will be made public.

FARTHER POINT, Aug. 27.—11 o'clock A. M.—There are as yet no signs of the steamship Indian now fully due, with dates to the 17th inst.

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—The steamship Etna arrived last night, with Liverpool dates to the night of the 13th inst., having sailed twelve hours after the America.

The Zurich Conference has resolved to prolong the armistice until the ratification of the treaty of peace.

It is reported that the foreign ambassadors in France would refuse to attend the Paris fetes if the colors taken from the enemy were allowed to be carried in the procession.

The Bank of France has gained 67,500,000 francs in specie during the month of July. Three per cent. Rentes on the Paris Bourse had declined to 69f 25c.

A vague rumor prevails that Prince Napoleon was to be made Sovereign of Tuscany.

The King of Prussia was not expected to live much longer.

The collision between the Austrian and Prussian soldiers at Frankfort was serious, but it is believed that no lives were lost.

Spain has resolved to increase the fortifications of Cuba.

C. Lennox Wyke has been appointed her Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary to Central America.

The Atlantic Telegraph shares are quoted at £300.

The Paris correspondent of the London Press says that the Emperor is about to publish a political amnesty, including Changarnier, Louis Blanc and Ledru Rollin.

Advices from Italy indicate serious trouble in the dukedoms; secret emissaries of the fugitive princes were fomenting discord.

The people generally were bitterly opposed to the return of the dukes, and Farini, the Dictator of Modena, threatens to level the city to the ground sooner than see the dukes restored by force.

GREAT BRITAIN.—Parliament was prorogued on the 13th. The Lord Chancellor read the Queen's speech. She regrets that the interruptions during the session have prevented many important measures from being carried, and hopes for their early consideration at the next session.

War in Italy having been concluded, England has been invited to take part in the conference of the Great Powers should one be held, but no sufficient information on this subject to admit of a definite reply, she would rejoice at being able to contribute to arrangements to serve a lasting peace. She hopes that the direct communication with Pekin will prove beneficial. She hopes for a continuance of the existing amicable relations with all powers, and rejoices at the complete suppression of the Indian rebellion. She promises her serious attention to the internal improvements of India. She gladly assented to the bills providing for the naval and military reserves, and regarded permanent national defenses as of paramount importance. The remainder of the speech is congratulatory on the prosperity of the nation.

The Daily News says, that the strike among the men belonging to the Building Association was likely to last long.

The Herald has reason to believe that the Grand Duke Constantine on leaving Lyde will pay a visit to the Emperor Napoleon at Biarritz.

The doings of Parliament on the 12th were not of great importance.

LONDON, FRIDAY EVENING.—The Times' city article says securities have gradually become weaker during the last forty-eight hours. The knowledge that the Indian and Russian loans would be forthwith introduced contributed to the heaviest, though not to so large an extent as was expected. The effect was nevertheless prejudicial and apparent in every one of the departments. A similar influence is at work on the other side of the channel, and while the position of politics may have something to do with the current of business, capitalists at the same time cannot be unmindful of the result of a steady absorption, such as is indicated by these aspirations. The decline in consols was nearly one quarter per cent., and although during the day a slight rally ensued it was not maintained, particularly when it was found that an additional fall had taken place in the French rentes. The positive range in quotations was from 95@95½, but the final price was 95⅛@95¼, with fresh symptoms of dullness in more advanced hours.

HAVRE MARKET.—For the week ending the 9th inst., Wheat advanced 3@3f., under short supplies. Potashes dull and quotations barely maintained. Coffee firm. Rice firm. Sugar steady. Lard dull but steady. Oils—quotations barely maintained.

ITALY.—The news from Italy is contradictory. The Liverpool Post gives the following resume: The rumors published yesterday that the Red Republicans had obtained an advantage over the friends of order in Parma, and that the Piedmontese had been driven from that city is confirmed partially by news received from Austrian official sources. On the other hand we learn that Count Reiset, the French Emperor's special Envoy to Central Italy, had at Parma handbills thrown into his carriage expressing the wish for annexation to Sardinia.

The provisional government of Tuscany issued a proclamation to the people before the election took place, calling upon them to enable by their conduct the Emperor Napoleon to do for Italy what he intended for their good. It is stated besides that they have sent a special Envoy to Berlin to obtain the consent of the Prussian Government to the removal of the present Dynasty. With regard to the question as to who is to take the place of that Dynasty, the Paris correspondent of the London Star returns to the project already mentioned, viz: A marriage between the Grand Duchess of Parma and the nephew of Victor Emanuel, the Prince of Carignan, to be followed by other marriages destined to cement the union between the houses of Savoy and the Bourbons of Parma, and at the same time to promote the cause of Italian unity under the Sardinian supremacy. In the Duchy of Modena everything seems in favor of union with Piedmont. The people run in crowds to vote the dethronement of Francis Vth. The Duke, it is added, is in the environs of Reggio, where he wanders about in disguise in secret to warm the zeal of his partisans. It is further stated that the Modenese and Parmese authorities have been invited to a monster banquet which is to take place at Piacenza, for the purpose of coming to an understanding upon three points, viz: First, the dethronement of former Dynasties; second, the annexation to Piedmont; and third, the confederation with Tuscany and Romagna to secure common political and military action.

The military riots at Mayence have been followed by others of a more serious nature in the neighborhood of the City of Frankfort, the seat of the German federal Diet, where fighting in the streets with side arms takes place daily. The combatants are Prussian soldiers on the one side and Austrian [illegible] and Frankfort troops on the other. This news is not very reassuring for the continuance of peace on the continent. There is discontent in Italy and disunion in Germany, and the opinion is gaining strength that there are serious obstacles to the establishment of the proposed Italian confederation. The St. Petersburg Gazette on this last point asks how can absolutist Austria, theocratic Rome, constitutional Piedmont, and the two Sicilies, Parma, Tuscany and Modena be amalgamated? What measures can be adopted for the uniform development of the admirable and productive forces of the nation? How can unity be established and discord prevented? Must Piedmont make a sacrifice of her liberal innovation to some as Vienna, or must the contrary take place? These grave questions, it adds, can only be decided by a Congress.

FRANCE.—The news from Paris is pacific in its tone. The Emperor has resolved to inaugurate a solid peace policy, and with the new proposes to reduce the import duty on certain raw materials, including coal and iron, to promote Railway works and otherwise to give stimulus to trade and commerce.

TURKEY.—The Continental papers announce that the last earthquake completely demolished the town of Essaron, and even demolished the ramparts.

The Etna brought no regular files of English journals, but a few miscellaneous papers were found on board and forwarded to the agent of the New York Associated Press.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET, Aug. 12.—Messrs. Richardson & Spence report the weather favorable for the crops. Flour quiet at 10s @12s 3d. Wheat steady and holders demand an advance; white, 8s to 9s 6d; red, 7s 6d@7s 9d. Corn quiet; holders offering freely, but showing no disposition to press sales; white, 7s@7s 6d; mixed and yellow, 5s 9d@5s 10d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET, Aug. 12.—Beef quiet at a decline of 5s 6d since last report, and holders are pressing on the market. Sales of [illegible] at 60s@65s. The government refuses to receive American cured in the new contract. Bacon steady. Lard firm at 54@57s.

LONDON MARKETS, Aug. 12.—Breadstuffs steady. Sugar quiet and prices easier, but quotations unchanged. Coffee firm at an advance of 1s.

FARTHER POINT, BELOW QUEBEC, Aug. 28—Midnight.—The steamship Indian, from Liverpool, with dates to Wednesday, the 17th inst., has passed this point on her way to Quebec.

The steamers Barussia and North Briton had arrived at Liverpool.

At Zurich, on the 15th inst., a conference between Austrian and French plenipotentiaries took place, lasting two hours. A cabinet courier arrived from Paris. On that day a second Austrian plenipotentiary, M. Meysenberg, had not left Zurich for Vienna as reported. The plenipotentiaries had no formal sitting on the 15th and 16th, but were engaged in festivities.

FRANCE.—At the military fete at Paris the entry of Napoleon proved to be a very grand affair. The troops were headed by the Emperor, and the display made was most imposing. The Emperor has granted full amnesty to all political offenders. A Te Deum took place in Paris on the 15th in honor of the fete. Napoleon, and all the plenipotentiaries and members of the federal council were present.

The Paris correspondence of the Daily News asserts that the Zurich Conference is at a dead lock. The Emperor Napoleon exhibited symptoms of annoyance at the conduct of the Court of Vienna, and recent articles in the Paris journals in praise of Kossuth and Garibaldi are attributed to this feeling.

The grand military spectacle which had been prohibited in the Paris theatres out of consideration for Austria has been permitted to reappear.

AUSTRIA.—The ministerial journal of Vienna insists very strongly on the stipulations at Villa Franca being carried out at Paris.

ITALY.—The rumored Red Republican movement in Parma is contradicted.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 16.—Breadstuffs have a declining tendency and quotations are barely maintained. Provisions also declining. Beef heavy, and holders are pressing on the market. Pork heavy, and all qualities have slightly declined in consequence of holders pressing their stocks on market; quotations are nominal. Lard quiet and steady.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET, Aug. 16.—Sugar quiet. Coffee dull. Rice dull.

LONDON MARKET, Aug. 16.—Wheat steady and holders demand an advance, which, however, has not been obtained. Flour firm. Sugar quiet. Coffee firm. Rice firm.

LONDON, Aug. 17—NOON.—Consols quoted 95⅛@95¼ for money and account.

LIVERPOOL, 17—NOON.—Richardson & Spence quote the harvest prospects favorable. The market closes quiet; flour steady. Wheat very dull and quotations barely maintained; Western red 7s 6d@9s, white 9s@9s 6d. Corn has a declining tendency, and freely offered at easier prices; mixed and yellow 5s 6d@5s 10d; wheat 7s@7s 6d.

QUEBEC, Aug. 29.—The steamer Indian arrived at this port this morning. Her papers furnish the following details in addition to the brief summary telegraphed from Farther Point.

GREAT BRITAIN.—Lord Jno. Russell said in the House of Commons prior to the delivery of the Queen's speech that Mr. Bruce had been sent to Pekin with a view to the ratification of a treaty with China, and that it was the intention of the Government to require the Chinese to fully carry out the conditions of the treaty.

Lord Palmerston, in reply to a question, said it was the express desire of the Government to encourage the formation, of rifle and artillery corps.

The nomination of Charles Lennox White, as Envoy Extraordinary to Central America, and the rumored cession of the territory in Honduras to Great Britain, had given rise to the impression that the English Government was seeking to strengthen its position in that quarter of the world.

Sir William Gore Ouseley is about to be recalled.

The arrangements for a great cricket match in America between picked players of both countries have been finally completed. The English players will leave England for America on the 7th of September.

Capt. Pember, of the ship John Fife, had been arrested for shooting dead a seaman named John McCarthy.

THE LATEST BY TELEGRAPH FROM LONDON TO LIVERPOOL.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—A proposal has been made on behalf of Mr. Lever to charter the steamship Great Eastern, for a voyage out and home from Great Britain to America. [illegible] was offered.

FRANCE.—The triumphal entry into Paris of the army of Italy on the 14th passed off with great eclat. The streets were crowded to excess and all the public buildings and many private residences were decorated. The illuminations in the evening were on the grandest scale. The soldiers bearing the standards taken from the enemy received ovations. The Emperor is said to have been coolly received in the more Democratic quarters of Paris.

On Sunday evening a grand banquet was given by the Emperor to the principal chiefs of the army. At the close of the banquet, the Emperor made a speech and distributed medals to all who were engaged in the Italian campaign.

On the day of the fete, the Emperor pardoned upwards of eleven hundred persons who had been sentenced to imprisonment for the commission of various crimes.

The Moniteur states that the Emperor has decided on retaining for the present an army of 50,000 men in Lombardy.

Several of the corps which had very highly distinguished themselves in the campaign could not be represented at the entree of the troops.

Lille is to be made the head quarters of the grand military command, with the Marshal of France as the head.

The accounts from the vineyards are unfavorable.

LATER.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—The Moniteur of to-day contains an imperial decree granting a full and entire amnesty to persons sentenced for political offenses, and who have been the object of any measure taken for public security.

AUSTRIA.—The ministerial crisis is not yet over. It was reported that the new Constitution will be characterized by the principle of decentralization by the re-establishment of representing provinces by prerogatives given by the aristocracy, and lastly, by a liberal Catholic spirit.

ITALY.—Garibaldi has accepted the command of all the forces in Central Italy. He had arrived at Leghorn.

At Milan, on the 14th the municipality inaugurated the Statue of Napoleon by Canova in the Place Brera, in the presence of Marshal Vaillant, Sardinian and authorities, a large concourse of people.

In the Tuscan National Assembly the deputy Governor proposed that the Assembly declare the dynasty of the House of Loraine impossible in Tuscany. It was unanimously supported by the representatives but the discussion was postponed. It is reported the French Government has addressed a dispatch to the great powers declaring that France will not assist the self elected Princes to return to their dominions by force, nor will she permit Austria or any other power to afford them military aid for that purpose.

The elections at Modena have been followed by admirable order.

PRUSSIA.—The death of the King of Prussia was looked for hourly. All the Princes and Ministers have been recalled. No attempt was made to conceal from the public the near approach of his death.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, Aug. 17.—The quotations in the funds have been slight but a dull tone prevailed with a downward tendency in prices.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

SAVANNAH, GA., Aug. 26.—Louis Barne, the French consul at this port, died to day of old age. He was an old resident of this city, and occupied the post of consul for the last twenty-two years.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—The steamship America, from Liverpool, via Halifax arrived, last night. Her mails were dispatched by the morning train, and will be due in Philadelphia to-night.

The steamer Etna made an excellent run from Liverpool to Boston, having beaten the America into the latter port about 30 hours, although she left Liverpool 12 hours later than the America.

It was erroneously stated yesterday that the Etna brought no files of European papers from the Liverpool agent of the Associated Press that were received through the Post-Office, their delivery here having been delayed about 15 hours by the purser of the Etna neglecting to deliver the bag to the Boston agent, to whom it was addressed.

OSWEGO, Aug. 26.—Prof. Steiner ascended in the balloon Europa, from Toronto, Canada, yesterday afternoon, and landed last evening eight miles south of this city, having come over Lake Ontario.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 26.—The Santa Fe mail has reached Independence. The Kiowa Indians stopped the mail party and forced them to divide provisions. The Indians declared their intention to levy a contribution on all persons by hereafter.

A company returned from Pike's Peak reports deep snow on the mountains.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Sixteen candidates have recently passed a satisfactory examination, and will be warranted as third assistant engineers. The unusually large number of steamers added to the Navy, during the past year, renders the increase of such officers necessary. No definite action has yet been taken in the case of Quarter-Master Cross, as recently investigated by a court martial. The delay is owing to the absence from Washington of the Secretary of War.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Mr. Greenwood, has received a dispatch announcing the arrival at Leavenworth of two of the children who were spared at the Mountain Meadow massacre. They will at once be taken to Carrollton, Arkansas, near the point from which they were connected, and will then be restored to their friends.

The Assistant Secretary of State is absent in Maine.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 26.—Vera Cruz dates to August 14 are received. A revolutionary movement had been made at Jalapa, but it has been suppressed by Gen. Robles. Numerous arrests have been made.

No yellow fever or vomito is expected in this city. [illegible]

It has been reported, but the report is discredited, that Gen. Miramon has sent peace commissioners to Juarez.

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—The city continues remarkably healthy, as is evidenced by the Bills of mortality for the past week. The whole number of deaths was only ninety-two, including five from small-pox.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 26.—Alexander [illegible], who passed forged notes here to large amounts some months since, was arrested to-day by officer Bligh, of this city.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—Preparations for the Fair of the United States Agricultural Society, to be held in this city commencing September 12th are rapidly approaching completion. All the railroads centering here have made arrangements to carry stock and articles for exhibition free, and visitors half fare. The superintendent is in daily receipt of letters from all parts of the country, containing application for room. The prospects for a successful fair are very flattering.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 26.—Henry M. Fitzhugh, one of the proprietors of the Daily Exchange, was assaulted this afternoon in an omnibus by a notorious rowdy named 'Paul Placide.' Mr. Fitzhugh drew a revolver, and fired three balls, which took effect in the hand and arm of the assailant. The affair produced considerable excitement.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 26.—Holmes and Conwell, grocers and commission merchants have made an assignment. Conwell has absconded.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 26.—George Brown, the senior partner of the Banking House of George Brown & Co., died at his residence this morning at an advanced age.

Mr. Brown, possessed immense wealth.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—New Orleans papers of Sunday last have been received by mail. By a new regulation, to go into effect on the 1st September, all free persons of color arriving there must immediately be lodged in jail and remain there until the departure of the boat or vessel on which they arrived.

The Alexandria store of Ben Barton, in this city, was robbed last night of watches, jewelry, &c., estimated at $7,500. The entrance was effected from an adjoining unoccupied building.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The steamer City of Baltimore sailed to-day with $500,000 in specie for Liverpool.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The schooner Breeze, of Philadelphia, from Alexandria, bound to Providence, was abandoned on the 25th inst., in a sinking condition. Her crew has arrived.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—An arrival at this port furnishes later advices from Venezuela. The liberals had taken Laguira without opposition on the morning of the 22nd Aug.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The Superintendent of the Canadian telegraph Co.'s Lines, telegraphs as follows in relation to the effect of the Aurora Borealis last night: "I never, in an experience of fifteen years, in working telegraph lines, witnessed anything like the extraordinary effect of the Aurora Borealis between Quebec and Farther Point last night. The line was in most perfect order, and well skilled operators worked incessantly from 8 o'clock last evening till one o'clock this morning to get over in an intelligible form about the words of the report per steamer Indian for the Associated Press, and at the latter hour, so completely were the wires under the influence of the Aurora Borealis, that it was found utterly impossible to communicate between telegraph stations, and the line had to be closed. The same difficulty prevailed as far South as Washington."

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 29.—Doctors Foster and Choppin, physicians of the Charity Hospital, have entertained for some time past an animosity towards each other, arising from professional jealousy. They met on one of the public streets yesterday, and an altercation ensued, when Dr. Foster drew a revolver and fired at Dr. Choppin. Two of the balls took effect in the body of the latter causing wounds of a dangerous character.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 28.—The members of the Board of Trade, with the merchants and business men generally have united in a call for a town meeting to adopt measures to secure the maintenance of order at the coming election; and to put in nomination reliable men in opposition to nominees of the Rowdy Clubs. The call is signed by a thousand names of our most influential citizens.

New York Cattle Market.

[From the New York Tribune, August 25.]

The entries of cattle for sale this week in the great market, Forty-fourth street, largely exceeded the anticipations of all parties. A slight supply only was expected. The number yarded, besides the small lots down the Harlem Road, was 2,881, and we heard of enough to come in to-morrow to make a total of over 3,000 for the week in those yards, and a larger number than usual were retailed at Bergen, so that the total for the week will exceed that, and to-morrow will not show any advance on the average of the sales. There were some sales made at 10½a11c, per lb., net, and probably more were sold at these rates than on the opening day last week, but that is by no means the price of the mass of cattle offered for sale. It will be found that the poorest grades will be quoted quite as low this week as last, down to 6@7 per lb. The average quality of stock is about as it has been in weeks past, very rough, with a great many thin grass steers and heifers, and an unusual number of dry cows. There was an ample supply left over unsold, when the market closed this evening.

THE SCANDINAVIAN BLOOD AND PILLS.—CINCINNATI, July 1, 1858.—DR. C. W. ROBACK.—Dear Sir:—In reply to inquiries made of me, it gives me pleasure to say, that Mrs. N. Ayers, of the Society of Friends, and widow of the late Dr. Ayers of Cincinnati, previous to her going East, expressed her confidence in the efficacy of your Scandinavian Remedies, and the benefit she derived from using them. She had been suffering from general prostration at times, being over seventy-six years of age, and opthalmia and inflammation of the face. Various remedies were resorted to without relief, when some friends recommended a course of your Scandinavian Blood Purifier and Blood Pills. They had the desired effect, and she was considered as restored to health.

I know many who have used your medicines, and speak decidedly of the benefits derived, thus testifying of their renovating influence in purifying the blood and giving vigor and energy to the system. They have my cordial approbation. Very respectfully your obedient servant, S. J. BROWNE.

Rev. Samuel J. Browne has been a devoted laborer in the cause of Christianity, in Cincinnati, for more than thirty years, as almost every old Cincinnatian knows. Such testimony, from such a source, is not to be passed over lightly. No other Proprietary Remedies ever presented to the public, ever received a tithe of the commendation from MEN OF STANDING, in every walk of life, that mine have done.—[See advertisement.

THE SEVENTH WONDER.

Of the wonders, wonder famous,
We, throughout our land, have seen
None more useful, few astonish
More than SINGER'S Famed Machine.
Great success and universal,
Those who've tried them years have shown;
Favorites in domestic circles,
One should be in every home.

Thousands who, sad vigils keeping,
On in sorrow night, repine,
Hail with joy the dawn that's peeping—
Soon they'll see the better time.
'Tis they gladly hail and welcome
This great marvel of our day;
Wives and sisters, mothers, children—
All, their joyful tribute pay.

Thirty thousand now are using
These Machines throughout our land;
Stitching, felling, hemming, gathering,
All without the aid of hand.
Tens of thousands have intention—
And are using every means—
Soon to buy this great invention,
SINGER'S world-renowned MACHINES!

Stitching linen, cloth or leather,
[illegible]
[illegible]
Wonderful, indeed, their fame.
Large Improved, with guides and hemmers,
Ornamented they have been;
Also, made in handsome cases,
SINGER'S NOW IS THE MACHINE!

McCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel L. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June 2, 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL L. McCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your's cannot pass any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country. [illegible] SHEFFER, Formerly teacher of [illegible] in Duff's College, [illegible]

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's Building, town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs. Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having Instruments out of tune. He removes stains from Ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

R. F. JOHNSON, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cold cellar, in warm weather.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

FARMER's Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made ours for the last two or three years.

ROBBINS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "Jones" says that he don't care if pots is three cents a pound, [illegible]

The Billiard Room [illegible] is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, [illegible] deserves the liberal custom he has.

Hats are of various patterns and styles—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at BURDELL'S if you want a superior article.

SODA.—That noble fountain of our portly friend J. M. Dennis on Town street, is throwing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the [illegible] to "take a glass" [illegible]

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in want of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. G. CHITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city, and the prices such as will suit the times.

SELTZER & WEBSTER are the agents of Knabe & Co.'s celebrated pianos, [illegible] becoming known all over the world, as [illegible] unequaled.

Dr. J. [illegible] has returned to the city from his successful visit to the [illegible] of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House [illegible]

CHARLEY [illegible] is sending off some of the handsomest suits we have seen. Those in want of the Spring style for summer wear should look in.

FRANK HERITAGE, at Winchester's Daguerrean Rooms, continues to take the handsomest daguerreotypes, and Photographs in the city.

BRINGING OUR SHEAVES.

[From the Atlantic Monthly, for August.]

The time for toil is past, and night has come—
The last and saddest of the harvest-eves;
Worn out with labor long and wearisome,
Drooping and faint, the reapers hasten home,
Each laden with his sheaves!

Last of the laborers, thy feet I gain,
Lord of the harvest! and my spirit grieves
That I am burdened not so much with grain,
As with the heaviness of heart and brain;—
Master, behold my sheaves!

Few, light and worthless,—yet their trifling weight
Through all my frame a weary aching leaves;
For long I struggled with my hapless fate,
And staid and toiled till it was dark and late;
Yet these are all my sheaves.

Full well I know I have more tares than wheat,
Brambles and flowers, dry stalks and withered leaves;
Wherefore I blush and weep, as at thy feet
I kneel down reverently and repeat,
"Master, behold my sheaves!"

I know these blossoms, clustering heavily,
With evening dew upon their folded leaves,
Can claim no value nor utility,—
Therefore shall fragrancy and beauty be
The glory of my sheaves.

So do I gather strength and hope anew;
For well I know thy patient love perceives
Not what I did, but what I strove to do,—
And though the full, ripe ears be sadly few,
Thou wilt accept my sheaves.

AN ESCAPADE IN THE WEST.

About three or four years ago—more or less—I was practising law in Illinois, on a pretty large circuit. I was called on one day in my office in the town of C——, by a pretty woman, who, not without tears, told me that her husband had been arrested for horse-stealing. She wished to retain me on the defense. I asked her why she didn't go to Judge B——, an ex-Senator of the United States, whose office was in the same town, and told her that I was a young hand at the bar.

She mournfully said that he asked a retaining fee beyond her means, and besides did not want to touch the case, for her husband was suspected of belonging to an extensive band of horse thieves and counterfeiters, whose head-quarters were on Moore's Prairie.

I asked her to tell me the truth about the matter, and it was true that he did belong to such gang.

"Ah, sir," said she, "a better man at heart, than my George, never lived; but he liked cards and drink, and I fear they've made him do what he never would have done if he had not drank! I'm afraid it can be proved that he had the horse, but he didn't steal it; another did and passed it to him."

I didn't like the case. I knew that there was a great dislike to the gang located where she named, and feared to risk the case before a jury. She seemed to observe my intention to refuse the case, and burst into tears.

I never could see a woman weep, without feeling like a weak fool myself. If it hadn't been for eyes brightened with "pearly tears," (blast the poet that made 'em come in fashion by praising 'em) I'd have never been caught in the lasso of matrimony. And my would-be client was pretty. The handkerchief that hid her streaming eyes didn't hide her red, ripe lips, and her snowy bosom rose and fell like a white gull in a gale of wind at sea. I couldn't stand it. I agreed to take the case; she gave me all the particulars.

The gang, of which he was not a member, had persuaded him to take the horse. He knew the horse was stolen, and, like a fool, acknowledged it when he was arrested. Worse still—had trimmed the horse's tail and mane to alter his appearance, and the prosecution could prove it.

The trial came on. I worked hard to get a jury of ignorant men, who had more heart than brains, who, if they couldn't fathom the depth of argument, or follow the labyrythian meshes of the law, could feel for a young fellow in a bad scrape who had a weeping, pretty wife nearly broken-hearted and quite distracted.—Knowing the use of "effect," I told her to dress in deep mourning, and to bring her little cherub of a boy, curly haired and only three years old, into court, and to sit as near her husband as the officers would let her. I tried the game once in a murder case, and a weeping wife and sister made a jury render a verdict against law, evidence and the judge's charge, and saved a fellow that ought to have been hanged as high as Haman.

The prosecution opened very bitterly, inveighed against the thieves and counterfeiters who had made the land a terror to strangers and travelers, and had robbed every farmer, in the region, of their finest horses. It introduced witnesses who proved all or more than I feared they would.

The time came for me to rise for the defense. Witnesses, I had none! But I was determined to make one effort—only hoping to interest the judge so as to secure a universal recommendation to gubernatorial clemency and light sentence. So I painted the picture. A young man entering into life, wedded to an angel, beautiful in person, possessing every virtue, every gentle and noble attribute. Temptation was before and all around him. He kept a tavern. Guests there were many—it was not for him to inquire into their business—they were well dressed, made large bills, and paid promptly. At an unguarded hour, when he was insane with the liquor which they had urged upon him, he had deviated from the path of rectitude. He was not himself at the time. The demon of alcohol reigned in his brain. And it was his first offense. Mercy plead for another chance to save him from ruin. Justice did not require his sacrifice. Nor did it require that his sweet wife should go down sorrowing to the grave, and that the shadow of disgrace, or the taunt of a felon father, should fall across the sunny pathway of that sweet child. Oh, how earnestly did I plead for them—the woman wept, her husband did the same—the judge fidgeted and rubbed his eyes—the jury looked melting. If I could have closed, he would have been cleared, but the prosecution had the close, and threw ice on the fire I had kindled. But they did not put it quite out.

The judge charged according to law and evidence, but evidently leaned upon the side of mercy. The jury found a verdict of guilty, but unanimously commended the prisoner to the clemency of the court. My client was sentenced to the shortest imprisonment the court was empowered to give, and both jury and court signed a petition to the Governor for an unconditional pardon, which has since been granted, but not before the following incident occurred:

Some three months after this, I received an account for collection from a wholesale house in New York. The parties to collect from were "hard ones," but they had property, and before they had an idea of the trap I laid I had the property, which they were about to assign before they "broke," under attachment. Finding that I was a neck ahead, and bound to win, they paid over three thousand seven hundred and ninety-four dollars, eighteen cents (per my memorandum book,) in current money. They lived in Shawneetown, twenty-five or thirty miles southeast of Moore's Prairie. I received the funds just after bank opening, but other business detained me until after dinner. I then started for C——, intending to go as far as the village of Mount Vernon that night.

I had got along at a fair pace about ten or twelve miles, when I noticed a double team of splendid horses coming up behind me, attached to a light wagon, in which were four men—evidently of the high strung order. They swept past me as if to show how easy they could do it, then shortened in and allowed me to come up. They hailed me and asked me to "wet," or in other words, to diminish the contents of a jug of old rye they had aboard, but I excused myself on the plea that I had plenty aboard. They asked how far I was going. I told them as far as Mount Vernon, if my horse did not tire. They mentioned a pleasant tavern ten or twelve miles ahead as a nice stopping place, and then drove on.

I did not like the looks of those fellows—nor their actions. But I was bound to go ahead. I had a brace of revolvers, a nice knife, and my money was not in the valise in my sulkey, but in a belt around my body. I drove slow in hopes they would go on, and I should see them no more. It was nearly dark when I saw a tavern sign ahead. At the same time I saw their wagon stood before the door. I would have passed on, but my horse needed rest. I hauled up, and a woman came to the door. She turned pale as a clean sheet when she saw me—she did not speak, but with a meaning look she put her finger on her lip and beckoned me in. The woman was the wife of my late client.

When I entered, the party recognized me, hailed me as if I had been an old traveling friend, and asked me to drink. I respectfully but firmly declined to do so.

"By G——! you shall drink or fight," said the nicest of the party.

"Just as I please—drink I will not," said I, purposely showing the butt of a "colt," which kicks six times in rapid succession.

The others interfered, and very easily quelled my opponent. One offered me a segar, which I would have refused but a glance of entreaty from the woman induced me to accept it. She advanced to proffer me a light, and in doing so slipped a line into my hand, which she must have written in pencil but the moment before. Never shall I forget the words. They were, "Beware!—they are members of the gang—they mean to rob and murder you!—leave soon; I will try to detain them."

I didn't feel comfortable just then, but I tried to look so.

"Have you room to put up my horse?" I asked the woman.

"What, are you not going on to-night?" asked one of the men. "We are."

"No," said I; "I shall stay here."

"We'll all stay, I reckon, and make a night of it!" said another.

"You'll have to put up your own horse—here's a lantern!" said the woman.

"I'm used to that," said I. "Gentlemen, excuse me a moment, I'll join you in a drink when I come in!"

"Good on your head! more whisky, old gal," shouted they.

I went out, glanced at their wagon, it was old fashioned; linch pins secured the wheels. To take out my knife and pry one from the fore and hind wheels only took me an instant. I threw them as far off in the darkness as I could. To untie my horse and dash off, was but the work of a moment. The road lay down a steep hill, but my lantern lighted me somewhat.

I had hardly got under full headway, when I heard a yell from the party I had left so unceremoniously. I put my whip to my horse. The next moment with a shout they started. I threw my light away, and left my horse to pick his way. A moment later I heard a crash—a horrible shriek. The wheels came off. Then came the rush of the horses tearing along after me with the wreck of the wagon.—Finally they seemed to fetch up in the woods. One or two shrieks I heard as I swept on, leaving them far behind. For some time I hurried my horse—you'd better believe I rid! It was a little after midnight when I got to Mount Vernon.

The next day I heard that a Moore Prairie team had ran away, and that two men out of four had been so badly hurt that their lives were despaired of. I didn't cry. My clients got their money—but, I didn't travel that road any more!

Romance of a Maid-Servant.

The New York correspondent of the Charleston Courier writes:—Almost everybody that is anybody, is now out of town. The business streets are less crowded than usual, while the fashionable ones are entirely deserted. The young men in the down-town wholesale stores have nothing to do but to loaf, read the papers and try to keep cool. The splendid residences in the Fifth-Avenue, and other similar streets, are barred and bolted, and even a procession with a band of music brings no one to the windows as it passes but the servant girls who remain at home. They have a good time playing the lady while their mistresses are dancing at Saratoga and bathing at Newport. But I would have you know that some of the maid-servants here are a very good-looking and well-behaved class. A most amusing illustration of the attractiveness of certain people, and of the infatuation of others, occurred the other day. A young man from one of the interior States, having come to town, tought it but right and proper that he should pay his respects to a family with whom some members of his own had been well acquainted. He got himself up regardless of expense, and having shaved and been shampooned at Phalon's, and having dined at the St. Nicholas, he started to call upon his aristocratic, but unfamiliar, friends. Ringing the bell, a very handsome young woman came to the door and let him in. Upon inquiry as to whether the "folks were at home," he was informed that they were not, but that they had been out of town some time, and would be absent all summer. The young man was fresh from the country, and could not distinguish the lady from the lady's maid. Having heard his sister describe Miss B——, he made up his mind that the person before him was none other than she whom he had called to see. The maid-servant denied the soft impeachment, but he would have it that she was only playing off. He had, a night or two before, been to see "She Stoops to Conquer," at one of our theatres. The maid-servant finding it impossible to undeceive the young man from the country, invited him into the parlor. They spent the evening very pleasantly together, the ready and spirited conversation of the servant convincing her visitor that she had been playing an assumed part. He thought that she was intelligent and handsome enough to be the daughter of the proprietors, if she were not. Under this conviction, he went to his hotel, not, however, until he had assured her that he would call again, and his sleep was of course sweetened by pleasant dreams. His visits were frequent and constant. And although he has since satisfied himself that the young woman whom he saw was a maid-servant, and not the young lady of the house, his interest in her has increased to such an extent that he has formally proposed marriage. He is honest in his intentions, and well-to-do in the world, and of course she will have him. This marriage will or should create quite as much talk as that soon to take place between the millionaire Spaniard and the daughter of a gentleman late leutenant in the navy.

He that swims in sin will sink in sorrow.

A Tall Collector.

A gentleman from New York who had been in Boston for the purpose of collecting some money due him in that city, was about returning, when he found that one bill of a hundred dollars had been overlooked. His landlord who knew the debtor, thought it a doubtful case; but added that if it all, a tall raw-boned Yankee, then dunning a lodger in another part of the hall, would "worry it out" of the same. Calling him up therefore, he introduced him to the creditor, who showed him the account.

'Wal, Squire,' said he, 'taint much use o' tryin' I guess. I know that critter.—You might as well try to squeeze it out of Bunker Hill monument as to c'lect a debt out of him. But any how, Squire, what'll you give, spesing I try.

"Well, sir, the bill is one hundred dollars. I'll give you—yes, I'll give you half if you'll collect."

'Greed,' replied the collector, 'there's no harm tryin', any way.'

Some weeks after the creditor chanced to be in Boston, and in walking up Tremont street, encountered his enterprising friend.

'Look o'here,' said he. 'Squire, I had considerable luck with that bill o'yourn. You see I stuck to him like a dog to a root, but for the first week or so 'twan't no use; not a bit. If he was at home, he was short; if he wasn't at home I could get no satisfaction. By the by, says I. So I sat down on the door step, and sat all day and part of the evening, and I began early next day; but about ten o'clock he 'gave in.' He paid me MY half and I gin him up the note!'

No Mother.

"She has no mother?"

What a volume of sorrowful truth is comprised in that single utterance—no mother!

We must go down the hard, rough path of life, and be inured to care and sorrow in their sternest forms, before we can take home to our own experience the dreadful reality—no mother—without a struggle and a tear.

But when it is said of a frail young girl just passing from childhood towards the life of a woman, how sad is the story summed up in that one short sentence?

Who now shall administer the needed counsel? Who now shall check the wayward fancies? Who now shall bear with the errors and failings of the motherless daughter?

Deal gently with the child.

Let not the cup of her sorrow be overflowed by the harshness of your bearing, or your unsympathising coldness.

Is she heedless of her doing? Is she forgetful of her duty? Is she careless in her movement?

Remember, oh! remember, she has no mother!

A British Sailor on Pig-Tail.—"Dear Brother Tom:—This comes hopein to find you in good health as it leaves me safe anckor'd here yesterday at 4 p. m. arter a pleasant voyage tolerably short and a few squalls. Dear Tom, hopes to find poor old father stout, and am quite out of pig tail. Sights of pig tail at Gravesend, but unfortinly not fit for a dog to chor.—Dear Tom, Captain's boy will bring you this, and put pig tail in his pocket when brot. Best in London at the Black Boy in 7 diles, where go ask for best pig tail will do, and am short of shirts. Dear Tom, as for shirts, only took 2 whereof one is quite wored out and tother most, but don't forget the pig tail, as I ain't had a quid to chor never since Thursday.—Dear Tom, as for the shirts, your size will do, only longer. I like um long—get one at present; best at Tower-hill, and cheap, but be particler to go to 7 diles for the pig tail at the Black Boy; and, dear Tom, acks for pound best pig tail, and let it be good. Captain's boy will put the pig tail in his pocket, he likes pig tail, so ty it up. Dear Tom, shall be up about Monday there or thereabouts. Not so particler for the shirt, as the present can be washed, but don't forget the pig tail without fail, so am your loving brother,

"T. PINK.

"P. S.—Don't forget the pig tail."

A Cute Darkey.—"How much ye charge, Massa Squire, to marry me and Mis Dinah?"

"Why, Clem, I'll marry you for two dollars."

"Two dollars,—what ye charge to marry white folks, massa?"

"We generally charge them five dollars," replied the Squire.

"Well, ye marry us like white folks, and I'll gib ye five dollars, too."

"Why, Clem, that's curious notion; but as you desire it, I'll marry you like white folks for five dollars."

The ceremony being over, and Clem married to Dinah, the Squire asked for his fee.

"Oh, no, massa, ye come to de greement—ye no kiss de bride!"

"Get out of my office, you black brute!" exclaimed the squire, at the same time pointing the toe of a boot in the direction of Clem.

Clem bolted with a nigger laugh at having got married for nothing.

☞ "What did you give that bloodmare of yours the other day when she had the botts?" asked a Wall-street broker of a friend from Long Island.

"A pint of spirits of turpentine. Good morning"—"morning;" and they separated.

Two days after, the same parties met in the street.

"Say, look here, I gave my mare a pint of turpentine, and, by Jove, it killed her."

"So it did mine was the reply. "Good morning"—"morning." And straightway they departed.

☞ Two Yankee horse-jockeys were discussing, the other day, at Berkshire, Mass., the respective merits of their horses, dogs, &c., when one of them spoke in somewhat spreading terms of the size of a certain dog. "How large is your dog?" said the other. "Well, I d'no exactly," was the reply; "I wont pretend to give his measure just from recollection, but one thing I know—I sent to New York for a full description of the critter, and the postage on the docyment was just three dollars!" There was no further inquiry as to size.

Why did Jacob Cry?—Jacob kissed Rachel and lifted up his voice and wept.—Scripture.

If Rachel was only a pretty girl, and kept her face clean, we can't see that Jacob had much to cry about.—New York Globe.

☞ Two centuries ago, not one in a hundred wore stockings. Fifty years ago not a boy in a thousand was allowed to run late at night. Fifty years ago not a girl in a thousand made a waiting maid of her mother. Wonderful improvement in his wonderful age.

The difference between a fool and a bore is this—one don't know how to speak, and the other when. Avoid both as you would a club loaded with headache.

A Short Dialogue.—Sentimental youth—"My dear girl, will you share my lot for life?" Practical girl—"How large is your lot, sir?"

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT!

Making Charcoal.

I have for many years practiced the making of charcoal in a very simple and economical way from every refuse of wood kind, which is either too worthless or too small to be good for anything else; of course small charcoal, but that is no disadvantage for gardening purposes. The materials have been the small branches and twigs of all trees, clippings of hedges, evergreens, &c., which it generally costs labor to destroy. I could produce this charcoal at a cost of 10s. a ton—for the mere labor of making—assuming that the materials must be got rid of somehow. Of course it would be sold with a profit at any price above 10s. The mode of making can be best understood by being seen as there is a little, but very little practical skill required. The materials are placed in a large heap, as if to be burnt to ashes, but near where water is at hand. The heap is set fire to, and allowed to burn up, but when some way advanced it is then drenched with buckets of water. This arrests the burning to ash. An iron rake must then be applied to the burning mass, the larger parts separated from the smaller in half burnt and burning state. The smaller in a half burnt and burning state. The smaller will be found excellent small charcoal, the larger half charred wood and still burning. This part of the mass must be raked to one side and a mass of new raw material placed on the top of it, which will blaze up, and when it has burnt to the proper point water must be administered as before, the raking take place, and the same operations pursued ad infinitum. No doubt a smaller portion of the finger twigs is reduced to an ash, but that loss is amply compensated by the economy of the process, and the large proportion of perfect charcoal produced. It is obvious that a little practical experience is required to execute the process as well as is admits of being performed, but a person who well understands it, can teach another to do it as well as himself in one hour. I manufactured it to a considerable extent, but no one would buy my charcoal, so I ceased to make more than I could use, and had to revert to the wasteful practice of destroying annually a vast mass of material which might have been converted into excellent charcoal at a cost of 10s. a ton. I had no intention of writing so much when I commenced. The quantity of charcoal which might be produced by this simple process in all districts is immense, if people only would use it in culture and in deodorising, and in that event it might be a source of profit to the owners of woodlands. The mere dressings of the hedges of the kingdom would produce an immense quantity.—Correspondent of the London Agricultural Gazette.

Facts about Cattle.—It is a fact that all domestic animals can be improved in size and value. One hundred and fifty years ago, the average weight of cattle at the Smithfield Market was not over 370 pounds, and that of the sheep 28 pounds. Now the average weight of the former is over 800 pounds, and of the latter 80 pounds.

The average weight of cattle, properly termed beeves, in the New York market, is about 700 lbs., and sheep 50 lbs.

The average live weight of the heaviest drove of beeves, 109 in number, ever brought to this market, was 2,057 pounds, weighed from dry feeding in Illinois, last spring.

The mode of selling cattle in New York is at so much per pound for the estimated weight of meat contained in the four-quarters. The estimation is made upon the live weight of cattle as follows:

A drover in buying a lot of grass-fed, common stock in Illinois, should never calculate to get an estimate of over one-half here of the live weight there. That is, if the drove average 12 cwt., they will make 6 cwt. of meat each.

Medium beeves may be estimated at 54 or 55 lbs. per cwt. Good beeves at 56 or 57 lbs. Extra good, large and very fat, from 57 to 62 pounds per cwt.

In the Boston market, the weight is generally estimated upon "five quarters," that is, the product estimated upon an average, 64 lbs., per cwt.

In New York, not one bullock in ten thousand goes upon the scales to determine his price to the butcher.—N. Y. Tribune.

Washing Horses Legs.—It is quite a common practice for carmen and hostlers to founder noble horses, by the erroneous practice of dashing cold water on their legs when they are dirty. In regard to this practice Sir George Stephens the eminent veterinary surgeon, says, "whenever it is necessary to wash a horse's legs do it in the morning. Most grooms, acting on a different principle, wash them as soon as the animal comes in. I am convinced that this is a bad practice. When the roads are dirty and the weather wet, and the legs already soaked, washing can do them no harm; but deluge the legs with water the moment a horse enters the yard heated with exercise, is to my mind, as unnatural and absurd as to jump into a shower bath after playing an hour at cricket. My plan is rubbing down with straw and a dry brush and the next morning wash as clean as soap and water can make them. Pick and wash the soles as soon as the horse comes in."

Rice Corn Bread.—One pint of boiled rice, one pint of corn-meal, one ounce of butter, two eggs, one pint of sweet milk; beat the eggs very light, then add the milk and melted butter; beat the rice until perfectly smooth, and add to the eggs and milk; lastly, add the corn-meal; beat all together until very light, and bake in shallow pans in a quick oven.

Our receipt for Mush Pie is as follows: One pound of mush, quarter of a pound of butter, one pound of brown sugar, six eggs, the juice and peel of a fresh lemon; beat the butter well into the hot mush; beat the sugar and yolk of the eggs well together, and add to the mush and butter; then add the juice and grated peel of the lemon, then the whites of the eggs, which must first be beaten to a strong froth.

If this receipt is carefully followed, I am sure the result will please the taste of the greatest bon vivant in Virginia or elsewhere. V. S.

Charcoal for Swine.—It is not, perhaps, generally known that one of the best articles that can be given to the swine, while in preparation for the tub, is common charcoal. The nutritive properties are so great that they have subsisted on it, without other food, for weeks together. Geese confined so as to deprive them of motion, and given three grains of corn per day, and as much coal as they can devour, have become fattened in eight days. The hog eats voraciously, after a little time, and is never sick while he has a good supply.

☞ 'Boss, I want twenty-five cents,' said a jour printer to his employer.

'Twenty-five cents!' 'How soon do you want it, Jake.'

'Next Tuesday.'

'As soon as that? You can't have it; I told you often that when you were in want of so large a sum of money you must give at least four weeks notice.'

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of the most hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States, and Canada, where he has practiced.
He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling impostors, (who stay perhaps a day in a place, and are then hundreds of miles away,) should note the above fact. Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest [illegible], and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.
Being naturally inclined to Consumption, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a malady, which under the old treatment, is always fatal; and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.
Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, suffer themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!
Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.
DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.
CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.
Correspondence by or consultations solicited. He will forfeit $[illegible] for any of the following he cannot cure: Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 25,) Swelled Neck, St. Vitus' Dance.
A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.
Office hours 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, inclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.
☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicines gratis.

AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,
The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,
and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.
The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing
Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of Confirmed Consumption.
A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from Cold in the Bowels.
These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. Jackson will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.
In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called Everybody's Almanac, you will find testimony and [illegible] notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

Fever and Ague,
from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathise with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the Chill. But in this effort it fails. Then the Fever follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of Fever and Ague. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.
We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.
which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Billious Headache, Billious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "Ague Cure" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.
This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "Ague Cure" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine: their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the Territories, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether of the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyances of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the dangers of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public lands heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from the ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our [illegible] equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, fanatical, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into [illegible].

THE MORMONS AND MORMONISM.—In a letter to the New York Tribune, dated at Salt Lake City, July 10, Mr. GREELEY gives the result of his observations upon the state of things in Utah:

Since my interview with Brigham Young, I have enjoyed opportunities of studying the Mormons in their social or festive and in their devotional assemblies. Of private social discourse—that is, intercourse between family and family—I judge that there is comparatively little here; between Mormons and Gentiles or strangers, of course still less. Their religious services are much like those that may be heard or witnessed in the churches of most of our popular sects; the music rather better than you will hear in an average worshipping assemblage in the States; the prayers pertinent and full of unction; the sermons adapted to tastes or needs different from mine. They seemed to me rambling, dogmatic and ill-digested.

* * * * * * *

The discourses to which I listened were both intensely and exclusively Mormon. That is, they assumed that the Mormons were God's peculiar, chosen, beloved people, and that all the rest of mankind are out of the ark of safety and floundering in heathen darkness. I am not edified by this sort of preaching. It reminds me forcibly of the Pharisee's prayer: "Lord, I thank thee that I am not as other men are—unjust, extortioners," &c. I do not think good men delight in this assumption of an exclusive patent for the grace of God, and I am quite sure it is not well adapted to the transformation of bad men into good. It is too well calculated to puff up its disciples with self-conceit and spiritual pride. That Jesus Christ is about to reappear on the earth, in all the pomp and splendor of a mighty conqueror—that he will then proceed to take vengeance on his enemies, mankind in general (whether heathen or nominally Christian), and to glorify his elect (the Latter Day Saints or Mormons), were treated by the Tabernacle preachers as propositions too self-evident to need demonstration. Having thus chastised his enemies and "gathered his elect from the four winds of Heaven," the Saviour is to reign over them here on earth for a thousand years, at the end of which period they are together to be transferred to heaven. Of course, I had heard the like of this before, but it always seems to me a very gross and wooden perversion of the magnificent imagery whereby the Bible foreshadows great spiritual transformations. But the spirit of the Mormon religion appears to me Judaic rather than Christian; and I readily believe that Heber Kimball, or, at any rate, one of the great lights of the church, once said in conversation with a Gentile, "I do pray for my enemies—I pray that they may all go to hell." Neither from the pulpit nor elsewhere have I heard one spontaneous, hearty recognition of the essential brotherhood of the entire human race—one generous prayer for the enlightenment and salvation of all mankind. On the other hand, I have been distinctly given to understand that my interlocutors expect to sit on thrones and to bear rule over multitudes in the approaching kingdom of God.

An Affair of Honor.

CHIVALROUS CONDUCT OF THE SECONDS—THE CHALLENGE—THE FINALE.

A somewhat ludicrous episode of "life in Washington" has just transpired, and affords no little mirth among those few to whom the particulars are known.

It seems that among the employees of the United States Capitol are two gentlemen alike distinguished by the most impetuous courage, and withal endowed with no moderate share of discretion which the proverb tells is the better part of valor. On Tuesday morning a slight quarrel arose between this rash and valiant pair, one of whom hails from the borders of the Keystone State, while the other proudly claims the Old Dominion as his birth place. During the difficulty words passed derogatory to the social standing and mental acuteness of the Virginian. Disinterested friends mildly suggest to him that the honor of his State (not to speak of his own honor) demands an explanation. Their urgent arguments prevail. The Virginian authorizes his "friend" to pen a note asking for an explanation. Friend, pardonably solicitous for the honor of his principal, pens a challenge instead. Pennsylvanian, a little alarmed at the sudden rise in his adversary's courage, wonders how to get out of his "fix." Finally decides to "face the music." Sends note accepting the challenge, and choosing rifles at thirty paces. Virginian, terrified to learn that his name had actually been affixed to a challenge, and imbued with a Christian horror of shedding the blood of man, protests that there was a mistake. He never desired a duel, but merely an "explanation." Pennsylvanian grows ferocious as Virginian grows relenting. Virginia finally consents himself to "explain." Pennsylvanian thinks it better not to go farther, lest Virginian should grow desperate, and a duel actually ensue, and accept the amende.

So fight we duels in Washington.—States.

AN OWNER WANTED.—Some time ago we mentioned the arrest of a youngster who gave his name as James Maloy, and who was found in possession of a well lined pocket book, that he claimed to have picked up in Cleveland, the contents of which he was spending lavishly in the purchase of clothing and a variety of articles. He has been retained in custody ever since, while efforts have been made to ascertain where and how he obtained the money, and to whom it belonged, but without any success. Yesterday the boy was brought before Justice Bidwell, and there being nothing to justify a longer detention he was discharged. The pocket book and its contents, however, were retained, and will be held by Justice Bidwell a reasonable length of time, subject to claim. Ten sellers of the articles which the boy had purchased out of his prize fund, were traced out by officer Emerick, and made to receive them back and return the money; so that the sum with which he entered Buffalo is no doubt nearly intact. It amounts to between fifty and sixty dollars, and includes two twenty dollar bills on a Bank within this State. There is very little doubt but the pocket book was found or stolen in some city west of here—probably in Cleveland or Columbus. The boy's father, who lives somewhere on the Hudson, and who came on here a while since, has formally demanded the money since the discharge of his son, and if there are no signs of a claimant before long it must of necessity be given to him.—Buffalo Express, 26th.

THE GROWTH OF THE UNION.—A correspondent of the Washington States notes the following suggestive facts:

The settlement of the Mississippi Valley began in 1778, in which year the first colony, or united company of emigrants, landed at Marietta, in Ohio. They had crossed the Alleghanies to Brownsville, on the Monongahela, and there embarked on a flat boat or ark, and floated down to the mouth of the Muskingum river. They were bold and determined men, ever actuated by the principles of truth, virtue and industry. From this germ, in 15 years, arose the State of Ohio.

Since 1802, when Ohio was received, ten more States have been admitted into the Union, fronting on that river, eight on its west and two on its east banks, namely—Louisiana, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Mississippi, Arkansas, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Minnesota, besides the Territories, one of which, namely, Kansas, is nearly ready for admittance.

While these developments have been going on in the West and South-west, Alabama, Maine and Florida, in the East, and California and Oregon, on the Pacific coast, have been admitted. Adding to these the primal trio of Vermont, Kentucky and Tennessee, and the increase of States in sixty-one years is precisely 30. If an equal increase marks the coming sixty-one years, in 1920 we shall stand at fifty-three States, with a population of one hundred and twenty millions.

FIRE IN CAIRO, ILLINOIS.—On Saturday, the 27th Aug., a fire broke out in Cairo, Illinois, fronting the Ohio Levee, consuming almost an entire block. The flames spread rapidly, and in less than two hours eleven or twelve frame buildings, mostly south of the Emmet House, were in ashes. The loss is between $20,000 and $30,000 the amount of insurance not known. The buildings were all light frames and not of much value. Most of the goods, furniture, &c., were saved. The buildings, were all used as coffee houses, except the Vermont House, occupied by C. D. Bradford as a hotel.

Among the occupants of the burned buildings were John Sohel, Hugh Dolan, Jacob Grunder, Chas. Schmentoof, M. Kooler, Chas. Sucher, Julius Shussler, Thos. Wilson, and C. D. Bradford.

THE GREAT EASTERN TO SAIL TO PORTLAND.—Late advices from Liverpool, England, state that tickets were being issued there for passage in the Great Eastern to Portland, Me., and back, for the sum of forty-two pounds, the passengers to be allowed to live on board the ship during the stay at Portland, which, it is supposed, will be about two months. In anticipation of her arrival, the Portlanders are making preparations. Voor's fine marble hotel is being furnished and will be opened. This hotel has been lying in an unfinished state for over a year. Several of the other houses are being put in order.

THE MEADOW MOUNTAIN CHILDREN AT FORT LEAVENWORTH.—The Commissioner of Indian Affairs, says the Washington Star, has received a dispatch from Mr. Wm. C. Mitchell, special agent in charge of these children, informing him that they had arrived safely at Fort Leavenworth, in excellent health, and that arrangements were immediately to be made for restoring them to their relatives and friends.—There were seventeen in all rescued, but only fifteen were brought to Fort Leavenworth—two having been detained at Salt Lake City for the purpose of giving testimony. Mr. Mitchell, the special agent, can fully sympathize in the great loss these children have sustained, as he also had relatives and friends in the party, who shared the same fate as the others.

NEW WAGON ROAD TO SALT LAKE VALLEY.—A letter of instructions has been issued to Gen. HARNEY, commanding in the Military Department of Oregon, directing the opening of a new wagon road from the Dalles, a point a little to the south of the Columbia river, to the Great Salt Lake Valley, connecting with the road through the Western States by South Pass, already constructed. This route will open a direct communication between the Pacific coast and the heart of Utah Territory, and also open up another great artery of travel throughout the Mormon domain.

FROM SIERRA LEONE.—The Salem Register says that a letter received in that city from Sierra Leone, dated July 22, states that it was then, and had been for some time, very sickly there, and that many deaths had occurred among the foreign residents. Twelve of European houses were closed in consequence of the death of the heads of the respective firms. In one instance, where the head of the house had gone on a visit to Europe, all the clerks died of the fever shortly after he left.

—Captain Benjamin Adams, a soldier of the war of 1812, died at Painesville, Lake county, on Thursday. The deceased was appointed Postmaster at Painesville, during the third year of Jackson's Administration, and held that office until the incoming of the administration of Gen. Harrison. He was prominent in getting up the Old Soldiers' Convention held last week in Painesville.

ANECDOTE OF CASSIUS M. CLAY.—Notwithstanding the strong enmities which the slavery question ever engenders in the south, C. M. Clay's social qualities have made him always a favorite with the magnanimous portion of the slaveholders. On the Kentucky river, at the base of one of those immense ledges of perpendicular limestone, which give that stream the most sublime and picturesque scenery, where Fayette county joins Madison, (Mr. Clay's native county) flows one of the coldest and purest streams of water in all the land.

Here for many years parties of gentlemen from both counties have been in the habit of meeting in the most social and unreserved manner, and feasting upon what is called a "burgout"—a kind of camp soup made of fish, turnips, red peppers, &c.—as much relished in the west as chowder in New England—with interludes of cigars, old Bourbon and anecdote. On such occasions all come unInvited—high and low, rich and poor—and a general jollification ensues.

A few years since, on one of these occasions, the Vice President, (John C. Breckenridge,) the Dudleys, Bruces, Hunters and other good fellows being present, it was proposed to go in bathing, and for many hundred yards the river was splashing with good and bad swimmers, playing on each other all sorts of tricks. At length, in the midst of all the fun, came the terrible cry "a man is drowning!" This was Mr. Willis, of Madison county, whose family had been the most bitter enemies of C. M. Clay. The four or five men who were nearest him fled to the shore in great terror, and immediately from twenty or more persons rose the cry, Clay—Clay—Clay! Mr. Clay was about fifty or sixty yards above, but immediately swam down the swift stream to where Willis had sunk—never to rise again of his own effort, and seizing him by the hair at arm's length, swam, keeping the face of the nearly insensible man under water, towards the shore.

He was called to on all sides to raise Willis' head above water; but knowing that the life of both depended upon keeping the drowning man from seizing hold of the swimmer, he proceeded calmly without answer till he placed his charge safely on land; then turning to his officious advisers who had fled from the danger which they left to others, he said—"Next time if you want his head raised above water, raise it yourself!" The universal call for Clay in this emergency showed the great and unquestioned confidence which all, who know him place in his quiet courage, and magnanimity of soul; and the end proved that it was not misplaced. Willis and family became thenceforth his life friends.—Boston Journal.

PLENTY TO EAT.—There is no threatened starvation in our city just at this time. Flour is selling at $5 per barrel. Best cuts of beef at 8c, and other meats in proportion. Chickens 25 to 40 cts. per pair; prairie chickens 30 cents per pair. Vegetables of all seasonable kinds abundant and cheap. The retail prices of the leading vegetables are—potatoes, 50c. per bushel; green corn, 15 to 20 ears for a dime, cucumbers from five cents to a dime per dozen, cabbages, one or two heads for five cents, turnips, beets, egg plant, squashes, &c., numerous and cheap. Market well supplied with melons, apples, peaches, pears, &c., all but the melons being principally brought from distant points, and yet held high. Living is now cheap enough, generally considered, in Davenport.—Davenport (Iowa) Gazette.

☞ The Sullivan (Indiana) Democrat thus refers to the character and death of the late Hon. JOHN W. DAVIS:

His long career in political life did not affect his character—he was always regarded as an honest man. Though not a member of any church, we believe, he was a strictly moral and exemplary man. In his last sickness he frequently expressed his confidence in the efficacy of the Atonement of our Savior, and expressed his willingness to die. His last words were, "Lord, help me to pray."

RIOT AND BLOODSHED IN JAMAICA.—By an arrival, we have later dates from the West India Islands. The 1st of August, the anniversary of negro emancipation, has been stained with bloodshed, in the town of Falmouth, Jamaica. The riot arose out of a case of litigation. The jail, court-house and police station were attacked. The police fired a volley among the mob, which killed two black women, and seriously wounded several other persons.

CONVICTION OF MORMON COUNTERFEITERS.—Special Agent Jarvis, arrived from Salt Lake, brings the information that McKenzie and Brewer, the two Mormons who were arrested upon a charge of counterfeiting drafts on the United States Sub-Treasury at Salt Lake City, have been tried and convicted before Judge Eckles, at Camp Floyd, and sentenced to twenty-one years' imprisonment. They will be taken to California or Washington, D. C., to serve out the term.

LIBERAL SPECIAL PREMIUM.—C. H. McCormick, Esq., our reaper-king, offers his best combined reaper and mower for the best cultivated farm with reference to the use of reaping and mowing machines—the same to be awarded under the auspices of the United States Agricultural Society, during the harvest of 1860.—Chicago Times.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The City of Washington arrived last night.

GREAT BRITAIN.—Lord Jno. Russell stated in response to a question that he had not received any official information which altered the character of the statement he had already made with respect to the intentions of France and Austria regarding Parma, Modena and Tuscany, neither had any information been received as to the reported proclamation of the Republicans in Parma as announced in the Vienna journals.

The official investigation into the loss of the steamship Argo had terminated, but the decision would not be made public until it was communicated to the Board of Trade. It was understood, however, that the assessors give it as their opinion that the loss of the ship did not arise from any willful act on the part of the captain, but that it was a grave omission by him in not having slewed his vessel on the coming on of the fog. This finding is to be accompanied with a recommendation of the case to the lenient consideration of the Board.

The Liverpool Albion, in announcing Mr. Wyke's projected departure for the Isthmus by the steamer leaving Southampton on the 7th of August, says unless Mr. Wyke be crippled in his actions by secret dispatches from home his countrymen may expect shortly to see some practical evidence of sound policy, which while respecting the rights of Central America and assisting in the development of free routes of transit shall, at the same time, maintain the rights of her Majesty and her subjects in this hitherto neglected but important corner of the Queen's dominions. Mr. Wyke has been made a Companion of the Bath.

Queen Victoria had been on a three days' cruise in the Royal Yacht among the Channel Islands. She landed at Jersey and Guernsey, receiving an enthusiastic reception at each place.

Capt. Pember, of the ship John Fife, arrived at Glasgow, and G. B. Alms, chief mate, were under arrest for having shot dead a seaman named John M'Arthur. Capt. P. is said to have fired a pistol at M'Arthur after having been thwarted in an attempt to strike him with a hand spike.

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH.

LONDON, Wednesday—Noon.—The Great Eastern, on her first trip, is to start from some safe port in Great Britain to some safe port in North America. The vessel to be provided with accommodations for 2,000 passengers, and to steam 14 knots an hour.

The official correspondence relative to the conveyance of the North American Mail was published yesterday.

FRANCE.—At the close of the banquet given by the Emperor Napoleon, he spoke as follows:

"Gentlemen, the joy I experience at finding myself again with most of the chiefs of the army of Italy would be complete if it were not tinged with regret to behold soon the dissolution of the elements of a force so well organized and formidable. As a sovereign and as Commander in-Chief, I thank you again for your confidence. It was flattering to me, who had never commanded an army, to find so much obedience on the part of men who had great experience in warfare. If success has crowned our efforts, I am happy to attribute the greater part of it to the skillful and devoted generals who rendered my command so easy, because animated with a sacred fire, they have necessarily given an example of duty and of disregard of death. A portion of our soldiers are about to return to their homes—you, yourselves are about to resume the occupation of peace—nevertheless do not forget what we have done together. Let remembrance of obstacles overcome, of dangers eluded, of imperfections discovered, be ever present to your minds. In commemoration of the Italian campaign, I shall distribute a medal to all who took part in it, and I wish that to-day you may be the first to wear it. May it recall me sometimes to your memory, and while reading the glorious names engraved thereon, let each exclaim if France has done so much for a people, who is her friend, what would she not do for her own independence. I now propose 'The Health of the Army.'"

AUSTRIA.—The Ministerial crisis is not yet over; a combination with Count Leo Thun at its head had met with so many difficulties that its success is very doubtful. The Count Clears has refused to accept the Portfolio of Public Instruction, and in regard to his acceptance of the Ministry of the Interior, he put in combinations which were rejected, and he had, therefore returned to his post of Governor of Cracow.

ITALY.—The Mayor of Parma, who had arrived at Paris, gives the most positive contradiction through the columns of the Patrie to the report of a Republican movement in Parma, and adds that order had not ceased to prevail for a moment in the towns and duchies.

ST. JOHNS, Aug. 30.—The steamship Jason, from Galway on the 20th, has arrived.

[illegible]—Consols 95¼@95½ for money and account. Money market is slightly easier.

The following is the resume as compiled from European journals:

The Zurich Conference is in a state of inactivity. Nothing of importance had yet been done.

The Empress Eugenie of France was enceinte.

The National Assembly of Tuscany declares that the former dynasty must not be recalled.

MODENA.—The National Assembly was taking strong grounds for the establishment of national liberty. M. Found has accepted the dictatorship of Parma.

The work on the fortifications at Koenigsburgh, which was suspended on the announcement of peace, has been vigorously resumed.

Cardinal Antonelli had resigned the presidency of the Council of Rome.

The King of Prussia had rallied his strength and was expected to linger on for a time.

Political affairs in England were quiet. Richard Cobden has been in London. A grand demonstration was given to him by his Rochdale constituents.

The amnesty of political prisoners of France, granted by the Emperor on the occasion of the triumphant entry of the troops into Paris, created surprise, but gave general satisfaction. Louis Blanc had refused to accept of it.

LONDON, Saturday—Noon.—The Austrian plenipotentiary announced at the Zurich banquet that he had strong hopes of the early success of the Conference in arranging amicable terms.

The Tuscan Assembly received with great enthusiasm a proposition to banish forever the House of Hapsburg.

Doubtful rumors have been received from Paris, stating that Generals Canrobert and Niel had not been confirmed as Senators.

INDIA.—The Calcutta mail of the 5th of July had been telegraphed. The King of Oude had been released. Five thousand of the European troops at Calcutta had accepted of their discharge, as tendered them by the British government.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET.—The flour market is quiet. American brands quoted at 10s@13s 3d; wheat firm, and the French qualities have slightly advanced. Western red is quoted at 7s 9d@9s 3d; and white at 8s@9s 6d; corn has a declining tendency—holders offer freely but show no disposition to press sales. Mixed and yellow sells at 5s 6d@5s 9d, and white at 7s@7s 6d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET.—The Circulars report beef steady with a decline on inferior qualities. Holders are pressing on the market; pork also heavy, and quotations are but nominal; bacon heavy and declined 1s@2s; and lard quiet at 57s; tallow slow of sale but unaltered in price.

LONDON MARKET.—Baring reports breadstuffs generally steady; sugar dull; iron—Welsh rails steady at £5 1s 3d; Welsh bars also steady at £6 5s.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The steamship Africa, from Liverpool 20th ult., arrived here at eleven this morning. Her commercial advices have been anticipated by the arrival of the Jason at St. Johns. The papers received furnish the following additional advices than were contained in the St. John's dispatch:

The steamer Europa arrived out on the afternoon of the 20th ult.

It was rumored at Paris that Marshals Canrobert and Neil had fought a duel, in which the latter was killed.

The long pending trial of Dr. Smithurst has ended. The Doctor was sentenced to be hanged. The testimony elicited at the trial showed that Dr. Smithurst had got up a fictitious marriage with Miss Banks, at the same time having a wife living, and that he slowly poisoned her for the sake of her money.

The builders' strike continued at London.

John Edward Buller, of the firm of Buller & Smart, solicitors, of London, has absconded. He is a defaulter to the amount of £100,000.

FRANCE.—The Emperor Napoleon has ordered two government steamers to proceed to Algeria and Guano to bring back the political exiles.

The Paris correspondent of the London News intimates that the news from Italy had much to do with the Emperor's amnesty, and that the impossibility of carrying out the peace of Villa Franca in accordance with the views of Austria had made Napoleon reflect seriously on the necessity of rallying the men of all parties about his standard.

The projected fortifications at Antwerp were exciting increased attention and uneasiness at Paris.

ITALY.—The Chevalier Farini had quitted Modena for Parma to assume the dictatorship offered him. The municipality had issued a proclamation expressing a unanimous desire for this, and the population evinced great enthusiasm. The government had purchased four thousand rifles and invited the disbanded corps of the riflemen of the Alps to take service under Parma.

A decree had been issued at Bologna, declaring all the citizens of Romagna, without distinction of religion, equal in law and in the exercise of their political rights. Father Gavazzi had been preaching at Bologna.

John Moody, second mate of the ship Mary of Bath, had been committed in England on the charge of wilful murder, in killing on board his ship a seaman named Daniel Watham.

AUSTRIA.—It was reported from Vienna that the Emperor was getting impatient at delay in the restoration of the Grand Dukes, and also that the Austrian corps d'armee was to be concentrated near Hostiga, as the road to the legations and the city of Modena.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The Treasury Department is now preparing some interesting statistical tables relative to the trade between the United States and France, exhibiting the amount of duties paid by each on the imported products of each other. These tables, it is understood, are designed to facilitate the negotiation of a treaty between the two countries by which our commercial interests will be extended.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30.—Lieut. Beale and party reached Kansas City on the 24th, from their second exploration of the thirty-fifth parallel. Lieut. Beale has been absent ten months, opened fourteen hundred miles of wagon road, and traveled about 3,000 miles. He reports abundance of wood and water. West Albuquerque, he says, is the dividing ridge between the waters of the Pacific and the Atlantic, and is so easy of ascent and so free from obstructions as to be traversed in fifteen minutes.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—According to dispatches received at the Navy Department, dated 13th inst., Minister McLane was passing the summer at the City of Andrea, and would return to Vera Cruz on the 1st of September.

Two Spanish frigates and one French brig of war were at Sacrificios.

The sick list of the Saratoga was slowly increasing, but the Captain hoped, by careful attention, to stay the progress of the disease, although it was in the midst of the sickly season.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—An arrival furnishes advices from Port-au-Prince to the 15th inst. Business was dull during the week.

The receipts of coffee during the week amounted to 689 bags.

At Jackmal business was also dull. The prices of provisions and merchandise were generally maintained, but the movement of trade was very slow.

Similar reports in regard to the dullness of trade are received from Aux Cayes, from Jeremie, from Cape Haytien, and Gonaives.

The stock of provisions at Jeremie was almost exhausted on the 6th of August, when a small supply was received from the Capital coast-wise.

President Geffrard had approved of the Haytien tariff enacted by the Corps Legislatif of the 20th July last.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The steamship Asia sailed for Liverpool at noon to-day, with upwards of $100,000 in specie.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Aug. 31.—The Niagara House was destroyed by fire to-day. The loss amounted to $8,000, on which there is no insurance.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The steamer Karnac arrived here this morning, from Nassau, N. P., August 26th. Among her passengers is George Bailey, of Nassau.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—A letter received in this city from Vera Cruz states that Minister Otway has been ordered by the British Government to avail himself of the leave of absence previously granted, and surrender the charge of the Legation to Mr. Matthews, the Secretary of Legation.

Ably written circulars have been addressed by Ocampo to the Governors of the several States of Mexico, impressing upon them the necessity and importance of enforcing the recent reformatory decrees of the Constitutional Government.

Nothing concerning the late Convention between Guatemala and Great Britain, the former ceding a large extent of territory to the latter, has reached this Government in an official form; but it is known that the administration is not an indifferent observer of events in that quarter.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 31.—A special dispatch to the Bulletin says the express from Denver City, with dates to the 24th, reached Leavenworth to-day. The richness of the new diggings at the head waters of the South Platte is confirmed, but the prospects of profitable mining are not flattering, owing to the distant location, the roughness of the roads, and the difficulty in procuring supplies. Four quartz grinders were in successful operation in Gregory Valley.

The express brought a large quantity of gold dust.

An Indian fight took place on the 13th on the banks of the Running Water, between the Sioux and Poncas. Eleven of the latter were killed and many wounded.

ROCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 31.—A young man named W. H. Jennison fell 90 feet from the Genesee Falls, this afternoon, while witnessing the walking of the tight rope by M. DeLave, and was instantly killed. He fell a short distance from where Sam Patch met his death.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 31.—The steamer Wm. L. Ewing sunk on the Upper Rapids on Sunday. The boat is valued at twenty-two thousand. Insured for eighteen thousand.

DETROIT, Aug. 31.—Major Jonathan Kearsley, a resident of this city for over forty years, and a prominent actor in the early history of Michigan, died this morning.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 30.—The Railroad depot at Fair Haven was destroyed by fire to-day. Loss $10,000.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 31.—The Republican Convention to-day nominated Alexander W. Randall, the present incumbent, for Governor. The vote was, Randall one hundred and eighteen, [illegible] forty-eight, scattering twenty.

CARLISLE, Pa., Aug. 31.—Peter Rethavre was arrested to-day by Special Mail Agent Moore, on the charge of riding the letters at the Centreville P. O., in Cumberland county, of money. A hearing of the case will be held on the 5th of [illegible].

SUNBURY, Pa., Aug. 30.—The Opposition Convention of this county met to-day and passed resolutions recommending General Cameron for President, and D. Taggart for Governor, by a unanimous vote. Ex-Governor Pollock and Andrew Donald were appointed delegates to the State Convention.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—An arrival furnishes interesting intelligence from Venezuela.

President Castro had been seized and compelled to surrender the presidency to the Constitutional party, after which he was thrown into prison and a close guard of one hundred men set over him to watch his movements.

Some severe fighting had occurred, resulting almost altogether in favor of the Constitutionalists. The utmost alarm prevailed in the country, and the general expectation was that [illegible]. Three thousand men were under arms at Caracas, resolved to deliver their country from the Federalists or to die in the attempt.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 30.—The Overland Mail with dates to the 8th inst. arrived last night.

Horace Greeley had gone on a visit to Col. Fremont.

A duel between Given and Broderick is expected immediately after the election.

The Fort Smith Times says that the Camanches made two attacks on the Wachita, Caddo and Delaware Indians while en route for new homes under the charge of Indian Agent [illegible].

The steamer Duncan S. Carter sunk in the Missouri river on Sunday night. The boat will be a total loss. The cargo is badly damaged. No lives lost. The steamer cost $44,000, insured for $24,000 principally in Pittsburgh offices.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—One of the most successful efforts at rascality ever heard of was brought to light yesterday in this city. It appears that a sharper in Philadelphia advertised for a number of young ladies to go south to fill situations as teachers of music. Fifteen young women were accepted by the advertiser; they were to have [illegible] in the families of wealthy southern planters and in every respect their future prospects were of the most flattering description. It was simply stipulated by the advertiser that the ladies should defray in part their expenses to their respective destinations. On arriving in this city, en route for the south, the sharper took charge of the baggage of the ladies, collected from them about $150 for their fare to the steamship, and while they were waiting patiently at a Hotel for him to conduct them on board, he decamped with the plunder.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Sept. 1.—The case of the State against the Pennsylvania Gas [illegible] Company for the payment of the tonnage tax has been on trial for the last few days and was terminated. Judge Pearson delivered an able opinion this morning, deciding against the company.

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—A man in the [illegible] named Wilton has been arrested in [illegible], charged with murdering her [illegible], by putting his body in an oven and then setting fire to [illegible]. The remains of the body were subsequently found in the oven.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—We learn from private correspondence received at the Herald office that the mammoth steamer Great Eastern will sail from Galway, Ireland, about the middle of September, for New York direct, calling off St. Johns, N. F., to land dispatches for the Associated Press and mails for the New Foundland Government.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 1.—[illegible] McKeehan and Brown's Pork house on [illegible] and Sixth streets, was destroyed this [illegible] by fire. The building [illegible] 3,000,000 pounds of meat, most of which was lost. Loss estimated at $50,000. Fully insured.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 1.—Tobacco [illegible] seventeen thousand five hundred hogsheads. Hogs [illegible].

The Women's Rights Movement.

The New York Herald thus announces a notice of a recent Women's Rights Convention:

Very little has been heard of late of the various social excrescences denominated the women's rights party. Lucy Stone has let her hair grow, taken a husband, and put on trousers. The Rev. Miss Antoinette Brown had also changed her name, tacking on to her maiden patronymic the addition of Blackwell and taking to herself a husband of that name. Mrs. Abby Kelly Foster had found the [illegible] of her man Stephen as much as she could tend to. Miss Brown had gone a little too far ahead in her advocacy of woman's rights, and considerable odium had been brought on the movement by the free love doctrines and practices which came to be dovetailed into it; and so it came to pass that people had begun to forget all about woman's rights, or to suppose, at least, that the subject had passed into the domain of dead and gone curiosities.

But it seems this supposition was not well founded, for a Women's Rights Convention was held at Saratoga about a week ago, at which the Rev. Antoinette Brown, and a Miss Susan B. Anthony were active spirits, while the masculine supporters of the movement were represented by Judge Culver, of Brooklyn, N. Y., assisted by a Lebanon Shaker. The main point in the platform of principles adopted by the Convention was the declaration that it is their great work to secure the right of woman to vote and be voted for.

ILLINOIS BANKS.—The Chicago Tribune says:—We understand that within the last fortnight a number of the banks of this State have virtually refused to redeem their issues. The course these institutions pursue when bills are presented for redemption, is as follows: The bills are first counted, and in a manner so deliberate as to show that the consumption of the greatest possible amount of time is the leading purpose of the officers of the bank. This accomplished, the work of redemption is commenced in ten and five cent pieces, which are counted in the same slow and deliberate manner in which the bills had been counted. A gentleman who had the curiosity to time the operation, in one instance, ascertained the rate to be about $300 per day. A little over three days, would, therefore, be consumed in the redemption of a package of $1,000.

CANADIAN HARVEST IN 1859.—The Hamilton Spectator publishes returns carefully compiled from the answers given to the questions sent out, a short time since, by the Hamilton Board of Trade. Circulars were forwarded to the various agencies of all the banks doing business in Toronto, to the station masters along the line of the Great Western Railway, and to at least one reliable correspondent in each county of a leading firm in Toronto. The prospect of a good harvest this year, judging from these returns, is most cheering. From all sections of the country the evidence of excellent crops is presented, and nothing seems now wanting but a short continuance of fine weather to make the barns of each farmer throughout the country plethoric with the earth's products.

A new tragedy has been produced in New York by Miss Heron, the author of which is Mrs. [illegible]. The heroine of the piece is a young lady, who recovers from the spinal disease with a great hunch upon her back, a knowledge of which her considerate friends conceal from her for six years! The young lady was one of those remarkable young women who never consult their looking glasses. The play is called "Geraldine; or Love's Victory." Love's triumph was short, for a first performance damned the play.

Mr. Douglas in Columbus.

Yesterday Mr. DOUGLAS arrived from Pittsburgh, according to previous announcement, and addressed the people from the eastern terrace of the Capitol. The anxiety to hear Mr. DOUGLAS brought together a large concourse of citizens from distant counties, and the crowd eagerly pressed to the place appointed for speaking at the hour announced.

We have never witnessed a more rapt and attentive audience, numbering many thousands, and eager to catch the language, clear and explicit, of the great statesman, who proceeded to explain the true principles of popular sovereignty, which underlies our institutions.

Mr. ENGLISH, the accomplished reporter of the Philadelphia Press, made phonographic notes of the entire speech, which will doubtless be published. We listened attentively, and are free to say that no effort of Mr. DOUGLAS which we have heard, or read, was more entitled to the attentive consideration of his audience, and the general ear of the people.

The relative positions of the two parties now struggling for political ascendancy, could not have been more distinctly portrayed. The uniformity contended for by Seward, Chase and others was shown conclusively to be the merest chimera, and at war with the Constitution and laws of the land. The doctrine of Popular Sovereignty was explained from the earliest difficulties of the American Colonies with the British government up to the present time, and there could not have been one among the attentive listeners, who was not satisfied with the position of the speaker, that the people of a Territory as well as of the States have the right, the inherent right to regulate their own domestic affairs.

At the conclusion of his speech, which occupied an hour and a half, he was loudly cheered, and notwithstanding the pressed and cramped order of the crowd, there was no apparent unwillingness that he should close.

Those who may have thought that the name of DOUGLAS would not create enthusiasm, if used in our State canvass, after witnessing the earnest attention and enthusiasm of the crowd, can now doubt no longer. The inspiration of a great mind, earnest and candid in the expression of opinion, has left its impress upon his hearers, which they will long remember and treasure in their hearts. His appeal for obedience to the law, as the very essence of liberty, had the happiest effect. The distinction between the law itself and pretended conscientiousness, was most forcibly illustrated, and its effect was visible upon the entire audience.

We do not attempt to give an outline of Mr. Douglas's speech, which for plain, practical statesmanship, we have never heard equalled, and only express the general opinion, that he is the man for Ohio.

A CHALLENGE.—W. M. CORRY, the eccentric "citizen" of Cincinnati, who was once elected to the Legislature from Hamilton county, and, while his original talent and acquirements were acknowledged, his whimsicalities begat a feeling of sorrow and regret that so much material had been wasted, has offered a challenge to Mr. DOUGLAS to discuss with him the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty, at Pike's Opera House, which is capable of seating twenty-five hundred persons. The missive was not received by Judge DOUGLAS, until yesterday on the cars between Newark and this city. The editor of the Statesman, as Chairman of the State Central Committee, had the honor of acting as Mr. CORRY's second on the occasion. Of course, the challenge will be respectfully declined, as Mr. CORRY may have other modes of reaching public attention, which he may use to advantage.

SENATOR TOOMBS, OF GEORGIA, AND MR. DOUGLAS.—Senator Toombs, of Georgia, has been making a speech lately, at Lexington, in that State. No report of it has yet been published. The only information about it that we have seen is contained in the following notice:

"The editor of the Augusta Evening Dispatch, who was present, says he sustained the doctrine of Popular Sovereignty, and excoriated Hon. L. J. Gartrell, because he (Gartrell) says he will not vote for Senator Douglas for President, if nominated. He assumed that the Opposition are responsible for the extravagance of the Administration, and are the authors of all the abuses that now exist in our Government."

The Primary Election.

We cannot say that it gives us pleasure to present the ticket made for us, at the primary election, for the support of the Democracy of Franklin county. We cannot urge the plea of the Statesman that the candidates selected are better known to the people than to the editor.—The confessed ignorance of the editor of the Statesman is ill-timed. He should have foregone his assaults upon candidates, and withheld his special javelins, prior to the primary election. The result proves that he was ignorant of the feelings of the Democracy of Franklin county. No—not ignorant; but playing into an unscrupulous and unprincipled hand which seeks to use the people for his own selfish purpose.

We present the ticket. It was made by the people, with considerable assistance from the Post Office, but the Post Office, with a couple of exceptions, had not sufficient force to control the choice of the people. We hold to the necessity of organization. We have always been content to work in the ranks, and have advised and urged the most cordial feeling among those of our party overlooking slight differences of opinion on minor matters. But the necessity of organization, does not act as a despotism, and render obedience subservient without will. There is no Democrat who should not ask his heart, in casting his suffrage: "Can I vote for this man?" Therefore, while we acknowledge the necessity of organization, we take the occasion to say that no organization has a right to force upon individual opinion what its own sense of right, and its own justice to itself would refuse. We say this in a spirit of candor and frankness which we hope will always govern us.

In mentioning that objections exist to some upon the ticket, we take occasion to say that we are governed by no personal feeling whatever. We did object to one of the candidates on personal grounds prior to the election, because he had done us a wrong, but we pursue that no further. The objection to the other was more serious, and will no doubt materially affect his vote.

Taken as a whole the ticket is strong, especially when compared to that of the Republicans. The candidates are unexceptionable (save one) and he will probably have an opportunity to clear his record during the brief canvass.

Mr. Douglas and Harper.

The "Opposition" press generally and some of the Democratic press leaning to the Administration of Mr. Buchanan, right or wrong, have taken exceptions to Mr. Douglas having written out his views upon a cardinal principle of government, and published the essay in Harper's Magazine. It has been made the subject of severe animadversion, and of many a playful satire, under which the venom of hostility was concealed. Instead of refuting the oft-repeated and sedulously-maintained doctrines therein enshrined, the enemies of Mr. Douglas assail the motive which caused him to become a contributor to a popular Magazine. The true motive was plain. Harper has the largest circulation of any periodical in America. (By the way we are under obligations to Mr. Kennedy for the September number.) In the form presented to the reader, it was more permanent than if restricted to the ephemeral existence of the daily press. Mr. Douglas considered the principles there inculcated eternal. They were his, and he desired that they should be understood. If first published in a Democratic newspaper, the States, or the Press, or the Times, its circulation would have been confined to Democratic newspapers which could reproduce so elaborate an article, while it would not reach Republican readers at all, or through garbled extracts, or unsatisfactory abridgements, and misrepresentations.—But there it is—impregnable, as lasting as monumental marble itself and as enduring as literature. In this matter Judge Douglas has manifested his clear judgment, as his views may be now seen by every reader, without abridgement, without distortion, unshorn of its proportions, and perfect in its symmetry.

IMPORTANT NEWS FROM MEXICO AND BRITISH COLUMBIA.—President Buchanan has sent an ultimatum to President Juarez in Mexico, demanding immediate ratification of the treaty which our Minister, Mr. McLane, has made with that country.

From British Columbia the news is becoming quite exciting. The British Governor, Douglas, is on the point of using force to prevent the Americans from occupying the Island of San Juan, which is claimed by our country under the Oregon Treaty of 1846. If it is true that a collision has occurred, in which Americans have been killed, there will be an excitement which may lead to important results. The dispute is concerning the construction of the Treaty of 1846, as before stated.

A Miserable Excuse.

In the Statesman of Tuesday we have the following paragraph, apologetic for the result of the primary election:

"The ticket nominated will be found in its appropriate place in the Statesman of this morning. The Democrats of the county are much better acquainted with the gentlemen who compose it, than the editor of the Statesman can be. His residence in the county is of so short a duration that he has not yet made the acquaintance of several of the nominated candidates, and therefore as he cannot speak from a personal knowledge of some of the candidates, it would be invidious to make special reference to any of them. Let the Democracy now go to work and sweep the county like a whirlwind."

It would have been as well if the editor of the Statesman had confessed his ignorance of the candidates prior to the primary election, when he was making invidious distinctions.

A Child Lost in the Woods and Found Dead.

A little girl, about six years of age, belonging to a Mr. King, about four miles north of Kalida, and near the Blanchard river, went on Wednesday fortnight last to visit a neighbor's, and while there went out with his children to carry some water to where their father was working. Some difficulty occurred between the children, and the little girl was caused to go back, and turned to go to the neighbor's house, full of vexation at its treatment. Thinking, doubtless, more about the childish wrong it had received than where it was going, it wandered on moodily, and though in sight of the house where its mother was, took the wrong path, and soon became lost in the dense woods. Two hours after the children it went out with returned, but it was not with them; it was lost. Day and night it was hunted for for nine days, and on Friday last it was found, within two miles from where it had first strayed, naked and dead, lying on its belly over two logs, as if it had fallen and was too weak to rise again. The people of Putnam county from all parts of the county turned out day after day to search for it, and traversed the whole woods for eight or nine and ten miles around during the whole nine days by four and five hundred per day without avail. It appears that where it was had been overlooked, and the search extended too far, in the supposition that it had gone farther. Its little bonnet was hung on a limb and its frock also and clothes; perhaps the little one thought of going to bed, or more probably hung up its clothes to dry after the heavy storm of Thursday night before it was found. It had built play houses to while away its loneliness in the wild woods, and had sucked off the fallen timbers for yards the moss for sustenance. It had waited for its mother and father's coming to take it home, for many days, and had played in the hope of their coming, but they could not find it, though so near to them. When found it had evidently died within a few hours, the body had undergone no putrefaction. The poor mother, we learn, has nearly lost her reason, and no wonder! Those nine days of terrible and soul-harrowing suspense, who can conceive it for her! And then the long years of unavailing regrets the loss must bring to the family, who would have saved, but could not. There are some incidents in this our life, so melancholy, and where human effort is so unavailing that it makes the mind sad to think upon, and where speculation is wasted. Poor child! Sad mother!

The citizens of Putnam county have one consolation. They did all that men could, generously and willingly. It is not their fault that the child was not saved.—Lima National.

MURDER OF MR. JOHN WRIGHTSON.—We are pained to learn, by our last advices from Tubac, that Mr. John Wrightson, formerly of this city, was brutally murdered near that place on the afternoon of Sunday, August 14. Mr. Wrightson was in charge of the Santa Rita Company's Rancho at Tomacacori Mission, and on the afternoon mentioned rode in company with his herder to seek some missing animals. When about a quarter of a mile from the buildings, and at a spot where the road is bordered by high grass, he was suddenly lanced by some Mexicans lying in wait there to rob him. Although the first blows were fatal they pierced him again as he was falling from his horse, and, robbing him, dragged his body into the bushes, where it was not discovered till next day at two o'clock, the whole American population turning out to search for it. Mr. Wrightson, who was buried at Tubac, was a man of great energy and undaunted courage. He was well suited to frontier life, and had escaped many dangers from Indians, to be at last cut off when he least expected danger.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Great Eastern.

The Great Eastern steamship, which is advertised to sail from Portland, Dorset, England, on the 15th inst., is thus noticed by Dublin Evening Mail of the 18th ult:

The Great Eastern being all ready, what will be done with her, or where she will get cargoes, are questions which must be rather perplexing to the directors. Australia and India won't do; New York would be the best port to get the full of her, but nature says no, in the depth of water at the Narrows below the Empire City. [We have proved that Nature says 'yes.'—Ed. Herald] Quebec, then, with the Grand Trunk Railway and its connections through the States, Canada, and, with the St. Lawrence navigable for vessels of 300 tons to Chicago, 1,000 miles in the interior, is the only port in the world where she can get loaded.

On this side there are three rivals for this golden apple—Milford Haven, Holyhead and Queenstown. As to a passenger line, the odds are decidedly in favor of the Irish port, all the Channel risks and danger from fogs being avoided, and the ship on way rejoicing clear of all land in one hour, while goods could be brought from Liverpool almost as cheap by steam or by rail to Milford or Holyhead. Instead of the mee of the "Beautiful City" envying Galway, let them pull together to have Queenstown the port, as it ought to be, of the Great Eastern. Cork and Quebec in six days; Dublin and St. Louis, across the Mississippi, in eight [illegible]

☞ The N. Y. Journal of Commerce, in a candid notice of Mr. Douglas' essay on Popular Sovereignty, expresses the opinion that "it is ably written, and notwithstanding its great length, presents a concise, logical, and connected view of the subject upon which it treats, from the earliest period in our colonial history down to the present time." Such must be the honest judgment of every candid reader.

DEMOCRATIC GERMAN MEETING.—On Tuesday evening, there was a large and enthusiastic meeting at City Hall, which was addressed in German by Hon. Jos. E. Egly, who kept them in constant good humor by his lively sallies, and deeply interested by his earnest eloquence.—Otto Dresel, Esq., of this city, made a short and interesting speech at the close of Mr. Egly's remarks.

☞ The Memphis (Tennessee) Appeal says there is but one paper in that State which advocates the doctrine that Congress should protect slavery in the Territories. That paper is the Memphis Avalanche. It has no backers in the press of either party. But one candidate for office, Mr. Sneed, Opposition nominee for Congress in the Memphis District, advocated it at the last election.

☞ The Chicago Herald states that the Cincinnati Enquirer maintains that the people of the Territories can regulate and control the question of slavery within their limits, "notwithstanding the Supreme Court and the Constitution of the United States." It is in error. We maintain that they are allowed to do it by the Constitution, and that no decision or opinion has been expressed by the Supreme Court to the contrary.—Cin. Enquirer.

THE REMOVAL OF S. S. DODGE.—We have received a card from this gentleman in reply to the article which we published yesterday from the Evansville (Ind.) Enquirer respecting him. Mr. Dodge declares that it is true that he was removed from the Pension Office because he was friendly to Mr. Douglas, and that private reasons had nothing to do with it.—Cin. Enquirer.

Gov. Magoffin's Inaugural—Congressional Non-Intervention.

Governor Beriah Magoffin was inaugurated at the capital of Kentucky, Frankfort, August 30th, to serve the term of four years. The usual ceremonies attending the inauguration of the Executive of Kentucky were displayed. From the address of Gov. Magoffin, (whom we sincerely congratulate, as an old and warm Democratic and personal friend, upon his successful accomplishment of his patriotic task of winning over Kentucky to Democracy,) we take the following extracts on the doctrine of "Non-Intervention by Congress" with the affairs of the Territories:

The Territories are the property of the States, and all have an equal right to go there with their property, and to be protected in its enjoyment. The people who emigrate there have the right to, and will determine for themselves, whether they will or will not have slavery when they have framed a constitution and propose to Congress to come into the Union as a sovereign State. But they have no right to do so while they are in a Territorial condition. The Democratic party is pledged to resist all attempts at a renewal in Congress, or out of it, of the agitation of the slavery question, under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made. Since the late election, our position cannot be misunderstood. The people of Kentucky have spoken decisively at the polls, after full discussion all over the State between my competitor and myself, in favor of non-intervention by Congress with the question of slavery in the States and Territories. The Democratic party, under the lead of Mr. Clay, if you choose, had succeeded in removing this dangerous question in 1850 from Congress to the Territorial Legislature, and thence to the courts. It was a satisfactory settlement to all but the Free-Soil party, which struggled to keep it in Congress, where they claimed full power over the question, and had announced their intention to exclude slavery from the Territories as soon as they had a majority.

The settlement of the question in the compromise measures was ratified by both National Conventions, in eighteen hundred and fifty-two, and when it came up again in the organization of the Kansas-Nebraska bill in 1854, it was again adopted.—Removed from Congress, localized upon the same principle, and that unjust and odious restriction, the Missouri Compromise, repealed, the South, the whole country, breathed freer, after this second victory over the Republicans. Again was this position taken by the Democracy, and advocated and voted for by almost the entire South. Endorsed by the Conventions which nominated Mr. Buchanan and Fillmore, and opposed more bitterly than ever by the Republicans, there was no difference of opinion in Kentucky. The Opposition Governor, their prominent politicians, orators on the stump backed by the press and people, were understood to occupy a position similar to ours. It was in their speeches, newspapers, resolutions in Convention, and finally the resolutions passed by them in the Kentucky Legislature. It was the old Whig position, the Know Nothing position, the position of all parties, and finally embodied in the Opposition address adopted in their Convention last February. I was not a little surprised when I saw the position that the agitation of the question should be kept out of Congress, and that the existing laws upon the subject must be adhered to as final and a complete settlement, without cause abandoned.

No one in the Territories had complained of any lack of protection by law—nothing had occurred to show the inadequacy of the laws, or that the courts were powerless to protect slave property in the Territories; and yet, in order to distract, divide and ruin the only existing national party, our opponents suddenly abandoned their position, and dragged the question into issue without any grievance being complained of. That purpose was thwarted. The Democratic party is united upon the essential principles and questions it has ever advocated. The people have so decided at the polls, and may we not now hope that the opposition will cease, the discussion of this dangerous, exciting and impracticable question. Surely no good to the slave States or to the country can grow out of it, but incalculable evil. If the Republican party ever can succeed, it must be from the agitation of this sectional question in Congress. Instead, then, of fancying evils which may never happen, instead of non-action or unfriendly or unconstitutional legislation which may never occur, and if it does—and we believe it will—may we find an adequate remedy in existing laws, the Constitution, and the courts, instead of supposing that the Territorial Legislatures will proceed contrary to all justice, experience, precedent, custom and reason to disregard their uniform practice, and all social and constitutional right and duty, in their refusal to pass or in enacting such laws—have we not better wait until they act or refuse to act? Have the rights of anybody yet been violated? Has any Territory yet passed laws detrimental to slave property? Has Kansas, with an overwhelming anti-slavery majority, done it even under all the ignorance, bloodshed and excitement which prevailed there upon the subject? Has any such disposition been manifested by Nebraska? Has not New Mexico passed a strong slave code of laws? If, however, this necessity should arise, why not stand by the settlement agreed upon, and go to the courts instead of to Congress? Has anything occurred to cause you to distrust that great tribunal which has given you the Dred Scott decision? Will you be safer to take back your grievances to Congress, with a majority against you, than to appeal to that great sheet-anchor of safety to our rights, the Supreme Court? When it decides that the constitution and laws do not afford adequate protection, and that they can give no relief, will it not then be time enough to go to Congress and make your solemn and imperative demand? Now, that you have succeeded in removing the slavery question to the Territories and courts, would it be prudent to violate your own agreement and remove it back from a place of safety to Congress? By taking it there, you cannot get the protection you demand. It will produce nothing but discord and a severance of all those fraternal ties that bind us together as a nation, and will finally dissolve the Union, brought together by a common sense of danger. Should we not take up a common position of self-preservation, planting ourselves upon the principle that this government was framed to protect the weak against the strong—standing upon the broad ground that it has the power, and that it is its duty, in all the departments, to protect us in the full enjoyment of our negro property, as well as in all other kinds of property guaranteed to us by the constitution? Whenever it fails to do that, it fails in one of the great purposes for which it was created. In that event, having made our demand and afforded full time for reflection—having made an appeal in vain to the justice, the reason and patriotism of a reckless sectional, fanatical majority at the ballot box—we have but one other course to pursue in discharging our duties to ourselves and our children. When we can no longer live as equals in this government—when we can no longer obtain our rights guaranteed to us by the constitution, we have but one other desperate resort, but one other dreadful hope, and in that hope is involved the dissolution of the Union. Other slave States away off in the South, may take ultra ground, and talk lightly of the breaking up of this glorious Republic. Politicians and presses there may advocate the opening of the African slave trade, and upon pretexts great or small may appeal to prejudices or to reason, in order to prepare the public mind for a Southern republic, but we are differently situated. We have a different position in this great sisterhood of States. Kentucky, calling not in question the motives or the morality of other sections, is firmly united in resistance to the re-opening of the African slave trade. She is stubbornly opposed to the introduction of any such tests of political orthodoxy. She will give no countenance whatever at this time, come from what quarter it may, to any movement that looks to a dissolution of the Union. With seven hundred miles of line bordering on free States, we must think more calmly and act with more discretion. The position of Kentucky, ever loyal, ever true to the Union, is to avoid the ultraisms of the South and the treason and dangerous fanaticism of the North. Firm in her high conservative position, avoiding all extremes, true to her friends, she will take no position that will drive from the Democratic party the Free States who have stood so nobly by us in the struggles of the past. She will take no position that will sectionalize the only existing national party that can and will protect her as an equal in this government. In her true spirit of justice she will respect the rights of others and demand her own, submitting to nothing wrong.

She will stand by the compact as our fathers made it, in all of its compromises, yielding what is right and expecting that measure of justice she would render to others."

The Charleston Convention.

The friends of the various Presidential aspirants are watching every suggestion with reference to the Charleston convention with suspicion. In common with many other Democratic journals, we a few weeks ago, advocated the holding of the Charleston convention at a somewhat earlier period than the month of June, for the simple reason that the intense heat of that month would prove not only inconvenient, but intolerable to the delegates from the New England, Northern, and Western States. This is considered a suspicious movement. The convention will be held during a month when thousands of the citizens of Charleston leave the city to avoid the scorching heat. At such a time, a southern city crowded to suffocation, hotels overflowing, and private boarding houses filled, cannot present many comforts.

Those who swaltered in Baltimore at the same season of the year, in 1852, and at Cincinnati in 1856, may form some idea of the torture which is in store for them in a city where strawberries and green peas are at their prime early in April.—We speak knowingly when we say that, whilst a convention of Salamanders might find Charleston pleasant in June, such will not be the case with the delegates to the Democratic National convention.

The final disposition of the time and place for holding the convention rests, we believe, with the National Executive Committee of the Democratic party, and we trust that they will give the whole subject a careful consideration. If the convention meets in Charleston at a pleasant season of the year, it will be the most pleasant ever held. The city of Charleston is one of the most striking, peculiar and attractive cities in the Union, and the citizens the most chivalrous, cultivated and hospitable. In architecture, habits, style of living, and tone of thought, the people of Charleston are unlike the people of any other city in the Union. So great their courtesy, forbearance and respect for the proprieties of life, that nothing is more ludicrous to those who have seen them in their homes, than the absurd newspaper articles which are going the rounds about "Charleston Mobs," and delegates from the North being in danger of being 'slain in the streets.' The people of Charleston are the most quiet, orderly, and thoroughly-well-bred people in the world. The delegates to the convention, if it is held in June, will have much more to fear from "sun strokes" than from "bowie knives and revolvers."—Richmond Examiner.

THE OHIO COAL FIELDS.—The Cincinnati Gazette says that the entire coal field of Great Britain is less than that of the State of Ohio, yet the coal bed has been used with such skill and energy as to create a manufacturing industry and production beyond anything the world has ever seen in an equal space. What that coal production now is, we find from a table in the Merchant's Magazine to be as follows:

Collieries	3,000
Tons of Coal produced	65,394,707
In bushels	1,634,867,700
Bushels produced in Ohio	70,000,000
Worth	60,000,000

We find that Ohio can produce more than thirty times the coal it now produces annually, before it reaches the proportion of annual production in Great Britain. The entire amount of coal annually produced in Great Britain, may be mined in Ohio for 600 yrs, without exhausting more than one seam, while it is well ascertained that in a thousand feet in depth, there are four or five seams. The 12,000 square miles of coal in Ohio is scarcely a fourth part of the coal basin of which it is a part, comprehending large portions of Western Pennsylvania, Virginia, Kentucky, and Tennessee. This is the Eastern coal deposit of the North-Western States; but there is also a Western of still greater magnitude.

BROWN COUNTY.—The Democratic Standard says: "The Republicans of this county are in a low condition, an apathy has seized hold of them, their courage has departed, and they feel whipped before they have commenced. The Bee is trying hard to arouse them from their lethargy, and to revive their drooping spirits, in sounding in their ears names ever dear to them. He wants them to come up to the rack, "fodder or no fodder." But it is useless, the Republican party of Brown county is past recovery, it is fast sinking from sight, and will soon 'sleep that sleep that knows no waking.'"

"Come! let the burial rite be read—the funeral song be sung!—
An anthem for the most dead that ever died so young!"

☞ A letter from Constantinople states that such is the prodigality of the Sultan, that, though his civil list is 27,000,000 francs—the ninth of the total revenue of Turkey—his debts amount to nearly 600,000,000 francs. As examples of his Majesty's extravagance, the letter states that in 1858 he borrowed 10,000,000 francs, at 11 per cent., to pay for a fete given to two of his daughters.

☞ The New York Shipping List, after glancing at financial matters, thinks that the great "panic" that was to overwhelm us in the course of the autumn, will have to be postponed till a more convenient season.

☞ The late Major M. A. Browder, of Alabama, left by his will the sum of $150,000 to the Glennville (Ala.) College and Military Institute. The interest on this sum is to be applied to the payment of Professors' salaries, and the education of the poor boys.

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

That excellent and valuable American work, Appleton's new Cyclopoedia, contains a well written, fair, and usually correct biographical notice of Stephen A. Douglas. It appears in a publication that was prepared mostly by men who, in politics, are opposed to Mr. Douglas—and as we understand it, this article, which we subjoin, was written by a Republican who has become eminent in the service of his party. We mention this fact, as an explanation of any want of friendly favor that the reader may observe in the composition. It is an article designed for use in history, sketching the life of a statesman of positive views, by a partisan of an opposite school. As such we commend it to the candid opinion of the Illinois public.—Chicago Times.

DOUGLAS, STEPHEN ARNOLD, an American statesman, born at Brandon, Rutland county, Vt., April 23, 1813.—His father was a native of the State of New York, and a physician of considerable reputation. He died suddenly of apoplexy, when his son, Stephen Arnold, was but little more than two months old. The widow, with her infant, and a daughter only 18 months older, retired to a farm which she had inherited conjointly with an unmarried brother. At the age of 15 her son, who had received a good common school education, desired to prepare for college; but his family proving unable to bear the requisite expense, he left the farm, determined to earn his own living, and engaged himself as an apprentice to the trade of cabinet making, at which he worked a year and a half, partly at Middlebury and partly at Brandon, when his health became so impaired by the severity of labor that he abandoned the occupation altogether. He has often since said that the happiest days of his life were passed in the workshop. He now entered the academy at Brandon as a student, and remained there a year. His mother about this time was married to Mr. Granger, of Ontario, N. Y., to whose son her daughter had been previously married. Young Douglas removed with his mother to Canandaigua, and entered as a student the academy of that place, in which he continued till 1833. He studied law in the office of the Messrs. Hubbell, at the same time he pursued his academical course, having finally adopted that as his profession. In the spring of 1833 he went to the West in search of an eligible place in which to establish himself as a lawyer.

At Cleveland he was detained the whole summer by severe illness, after his recovery from which he went to Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, and Jacksonville, Ill. At Jacksonville he found his funds reduced to 37½ cents, and accordingly walked to Winchester, a little town 16 miles distant, where he hoped to get employment as a school teacher. He found there a large crowd assembled to attend the auction sale of the stock of a deceased trader. The auctioneer was without a clerk to keep the account of the sale, and he perceiving that Mr. Douglas, who stood among the spectators, looked like a man who could write and keep accounts, requested him to serve in that capacity. Mr. Douglas consented, and acted as clerk during the three days of the sale, receiving for his services, $6. With this capital at hand he promptly opened a school, and obtained 40 pupils, whom he taught for three months at $3 a quarter, devoting his evenings to the study of some law books, which he had borrowed in Jacksonville, and on Saturday afternoons practising before the justice of the peace of that town. In March, 1834, he opened an office and began practising in the higher courts, for which, after examination, he had obtained license from the judges of the Supreme court. He was remarkably successful at the bar, as may be inferred from the fact that within a year from his admission, while not yet 22 years of age, he was elected, by the legislature, attorney general of the State. This office he resigned, in Dec. 1835, in consequence of having been elected to the legislature by the Democrats of Morgan county. He took his seat in the house of representatives, the youngest member of that body.

In 1837 he was appointed by President Van Buren register of the land office at Springfield, Ill., a post which he resigned in 1839. In Nov. 1837, Mr. Douglas received the Democratic nomination for Congress, although he was under 25 years of age and consequently ineligible. He however attained the requisite age before the day of election, which was the first Monday in August, 1838. His congressional district was then the most populous one in the United States, and the canvass was conducted with extraordinary zeal and energy. Upward of 36,000 votes were cast, and the Whig candidate was declared to be elected by a majority of 5 only. A number of ballots sufficient to have changed the result were rejected by the canvassers because the name of Mr. Douglas was incorrectly spelled. After this defeat, which under the circumstances was claimed by his friends as a victory, Mr. Douglas devoted himself exclusively to his profession until 1840, when he entered into the famous presidential campaign of that year, with so much ardor that he traversed the State in all directions for seven months, and addressed more than 200 political gatherings. To his exertions were ascribed the adherence of Illinois at that election, to the Democratic party. In Dec. 1840, Mr. Douglas was appointed Secretary of State of Illinois. In Feb. 1841, he was elected by the legislature a judge of the Supreme Court, which office he resigned in 1843 to accept the Democratic nomination for Congress, which was urged upon him against his own wishes, on the ground that he was the only Democrat who could be elected. After a spirited canvass Mr. Douglas was chosen by upward of 400 majority. He was re-elected in 1844 by a majority of 1,900, and again in 1846, by nearly 3,000 majority. He did not, however, take his seat under the last election, having in the meantime been chosen to the Senate of the United States for six years from March 4th, 1847.

In the House of Representatives, Mr. Douglas was prominent among those who, in the Oregon controversy with Great Britain, maintained that our title to the whole of Oregon, up to latitude 54 deg. 40 min. was "clear and unquestionable." He declared that "he never would, now or hereafter, yield up one inch of Oregon, either to Great Britain or any other government." He advocated the policy of giving notice to terminate the joint occupation; of establishing a territorial government over Oregon, protected by a sufficient military force; and of putting the country at once into a state of preparation, so that, if war should result from an assertion of our just rights we might drive "Great Britain and the last vestige of royal authority from North America, and make the United States an ocean bound republic." He denied the right of the federal government to prosecute a system of internal improvements in the States, though he maintained the constitutionality and expediency of improving rivers, harbors, and navigable waters, and advocated a scheme of tonnage duties for that purpose to be levied and expended by the local authorities.—He was mainly instrumental in securing the passage of the law extending the maritime and admiralty jurisdiction of the federal courts over the great chain of northern lakes, having reported the bill as a member of the judiciary committee, and put it upon its passage. As a member of the House of Representatives, he was one of the earliest advocates of the annexation of Texas, and after the treaty for that object had failed in the Senate, he was one of those who introduced propositions, in the form of joint resolutions, as a substitute for the treaty. As chairman of the committee on territories, in 1846, he reported the joint resolutions declaring Texas to be one of the United States of America, and he vigorously sustained the administration of President Polk in the measures which it adopted for the prosecution of the war with Mexico, which was the ultimate consequence of that act. As chairman of the territorial committee, first in the House of Representatives and afterwards in the Senate, he reported and successfully carried through the bills to organize the territories of Minnesota, Oregon, New Mexico, Utah, Washington, Kansas, and Nebraska, and also the bills for the admission into the Union of the States of Iowa, Wisconsin, California, Minnesota, and Oregon. So far as the question of slavery was involved in the organization of territories and the admission of new States, he early took the position that Congress should not interfere on the one side or the other, but that the people of each Territory and State should be allowed to form and regulate their domestic institutions to suit themselves. In accordance with this principle he opposed the "Wilmot Proviso" when first passed in the House of Representatives in 1847, as an amendment to the bill appropriating $3,000,000 to enable President Polk to make a treaty of peace with Mexico, and afterward in the Senate when offered as an amendment to the bill for the organization of the territory of Oregon. In August, 1847, however, he offered as an amendment to the Oregon bill, extending the Missouri Compromise line indefinitely westward to the Pacific ocean, in the same sense and with the same understanding with which it was originally adopted in 1820, and extended through Texas in 1845, prohibiting slavery in all the territory north of the parallel of 36 deg. 30 min., and by implication recognizing its existence south of that line. This amendment was adopted in the Senate by a decided majority, receiving the support of every Southern Senator, but was defeated in the House of Representatives by nearly a sectional vote.

The refusal of the Senate to adopt the policy of congressional prohibition of slavery in all the territories, and the rejection in the House of Representatives of the proposition to extend the Missouri Compromise to the Pacific ocean, gave rise to the sectional agitation of 1849–50, which was temporarily quieted by the legislation known as the Compromise measures of 1850. Mr. Douglas supported these measures with zeal and vigor; and on his return to his home at Chicago, finding them assailed with great violence, he defended the whole series in a speech to the people (Oct. 24, 1850) which is regarded by his friends as one of the ablest he has ever made. In this speech he defined the principles on which the compromise acts of 1850 were founded, and upon which he subsequently defended the Kansas-Nebraska bill in these words:—"These measures are predicated on the great fundamental principle that every people ought to possess the right of framing and regulating their own internal concerns and domestic institutions in their own way.——These things are all confided by the constitution to each State to decide for itself and I know of no reason why the same principle should not be extended to the territories." Mr. Douglas was an unsuccessful candidate before the Democratic National Convention in Baltimore, in 1852, for the nomination for the Presidency. On the 30th ballot he received 92 votes, the highest number given to any candidate for that ballot, out of a total of 288 votes. At the congressional session of 1853–4, he reported from the committee on territories the celebrated bill to organize the territories of Kansas and Nebraska, which effectually revolutionized political parties in the United States, and formed the issues upon which the Democratic and Republican parties became arrayed against each other. The passage of this bill caused great excitement in the free States of the Union, and Mr. Douglas as its author was widely and vehemently denounced, and in many places was hanged and burned in effigy. The whole controversy turned on the provision repealing the Missouri compromise, which Mr. Douglas maintained to be inconsistent with the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the States and territories. After repealing the Missouri restriction, the bill declared it to be the "true intent and meaning of the act not to legislate slavery into any State or territory, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the constitution of the United States." Whatever diversity of opinion may exist in regard to the correctness of this principle and the propriety of its application to the territories, it must be admitted that Mr. Douglas has proved faithful to it under all circumstances, and defended it whenever assailed or violated. In 1856 Mr. Douglas was again a candidate for the Presidential nomination before the Democratic National Convention at Cincinnati. The highest vote he received was on the 16th ballot, which stood for Mr. Buchanan 168, for Mr. Douglas 121, for Mr. Cass 6. In the Congressional session of 1857–8, he denounced and opposed with energy and ability the Lecompton constitution, upon the distinct ground that it was not the act and deed of the people of Kansas, and did not embody their will.

Before the adjournment of that session of Congress he returned home to vindicate his action before the people of Illinois, in one of the most exciting and well contested political canvasses ever known in the United States. He had to encounter the determined hostility of the federal administration and all its patronage, and the powerful opposition of the Republican party. But he succeeded in carrying the election of a sufficient number of State senators and representatives to secure his return to the United States Senate for six years from March 4, 1859, by fifty-four votes for him, to forty six for Abraham Lincoln, his able and distinguished opponent. During the whole of that contest he maintained and defended the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty, in the same sense in which he had previously proclaimed it in Congress. Subsequently, in a debate in the Senate (Feb. 23, 1859,) he avowed and defended the same doctrine when assailed by several of the Democratic party.

Mr. Douglas has been remarkably successful in promoting the local interests of his own State during his congressional career. To him, more than to any other individual, is Illinois indebted for the magnificent grant of lands which secured the construction of the Illinois Central railroad, and contributed so much to restore the credit and develop the resources of the State. He has always been a warm supporter and advocate of a railroad from the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean, having been a member of the various committees of Congress on that subject, and being the author of several bills reported by those committees.

Mr. Douglas' views in regard to our foreign relations have seldom been in accordance with the policy of the administration. He opposed the treaty with England limiting the Oregon territory to the 49th parallel, contending that England had no right on that coast, and that the United States should never recognize the claim. He opposed the treaty of peace with Mexico on the ground that the boundaries were unnatural and inconvenient, and that the provisions in regard to the Indians could never be executed. The United States have since paid Mexico $10,000,000 to change the boundaries and relinquish the stipulations in regard to the Indians. He opposed the ratification of the Clayton and Bulwer treaty, and endeavored to procure its rejection, upon the ground, among other things, that it pledged the faith of the United States in all time to come never to annex, colonize, or exercise dominion over any portion of Central America. He declared that he did not desire to annex that country at that time, but maintained that the isthmus routes must be kept open as highways to the American possessions on the Pacific, that the time would come when the United States would be compelled to occupy Central America, and that he would never pledge the faith of the republic not to do in the future in respect to this continent what its interest and safety might require. He also declared himself in favor of the acquisition of Cuba whenever the island can be obtained consistently with the laws of nations and the honor of the United States. Mr. Douglas was married April 3, 1847, to Miss Martha D. Martin, daughter of Col. Robert D. Martin, of Rockingham county, N. C., by whom he had three children, two of whom are living. She died Jan. 19, 1853.—He was again married, Nov. 20, 1856, to Miss Adele Cutts, daughter of James Madison Cutts of Washington, D. C.

Thomas Corwin.

It is predicted by the New Orleans Delta that the Speaker of the next House of Representatives will be either Thomas Corwin or Emerson Etheridge.—Cincinnati Gazette.

The Delta says of Mr. Corwin:

It may be that each of the coalitionists may try to cheat the other by proposing Tom Corwin for the Speakership. It would be difficult to say which would be the greater loss by such a selection—for Corwin is really and truly of neither party. He has been struggling for years past to define his position—in American phrase to "locate himself;" but, though one of the clearest and most gifted character [illegible] and natural orators in the Union, and withal a good-hearted man, he has not yet succeeded in enlightening a single person as to his true attitude toward existing parties. One day he is a Black-Republican, or rather a full-blooded Abolitionist, on the same platform, hand in glove with the man he more thoroughly hates than any in the world—Salmon P. Chase, the next, he is addressing Sam's boys over the glories of Fillmore's administration and convulsing immense audiences with uncontrollable laughter, by his humorous pictures of the Abolitionists, setting themselves up against the authority of the United States, and overturning the old gentlemanly Whig party. The next day he is defending, as a volunteer and unpaid counsel, some slave-stealer, and shedding tears over the wrongs and outrages of the Southern tyrants.

The truth is, Tom is the peculiar institution of Ohio. Everybody turns out to see and hear him, but nobody follows him, or attaches the least weight to his opinions or his political pledges. He is the greatest living dramatist—a natural improvisator—who can speak on any subject, or on any side, with equal humor, pathos and eloquence. The most striking illustration of his versatility was afforded during the last Presidential campaign, when the whole country turned out to hear him, about two weeks before the election, make a most eloquent and effective speech in favor of Fillmore, and a bitter and vigorous denunciation of the candidate, whose claims rested upon his catching a butterfly on the top of the Alleghanies, and satisfying his hunger upon mule steaks with grasshopper sauce.

In a week afterward, in the city of Cincinnati, he followed Governor Chase, at a Black-Republican meeting, in an able appeal to the people to vote for John C. Fremont.

Such is Tom Corwin. His election to the Speakership would, in our view, be a great loss to the people. It would deprive them of the best entertainment in the dramatic line—of the richest specimens of witty, racy oratory—that were ever offered to a humor-loving people.

SUICIDES IN NEW YORK CITY.—The Post published about a month ago a list of twenty-six suicides which had been committed in the city within the preceding two weeks. On Friday morning, it published another list for the month of August, containing twenty-seven instances in which life had been actually taken, and twenty attempts which had proved unsuccessful. Domestic trouble was the cause in the majority of the cases; straitened circumstances, and disappointments in business in others. Fortunately, none of these wretched victims were persons of so much note, or afflicted themselves with such pain, as to induce any people to follow their example [illegible]

[illegible] —The New York City has now in process of construction, at a cost of forty thousand dollars, a press that possesses this advantage—namely, it will feed itself and print both sides of the paper at the same time, and with the same rapidity that [illegible] mammoth Hoe presses now in use by the Times, Herald and Tribune.

LARGE PREMIUMS.—The mammoth Fair of the Agricultural and Mechanical Association at St. Louis commences on the 26th day of the present month, [September]. Amongst the premiums offered are those of $1,000 each, as follows: For best thorough-bred herd of any [illegible] for best roadster stallion, $1,000; for best thorough-bred stallion of any age, $1,000.

☞ The [illegible] asserts positively that cargoes of African negroes are "constantly landed in the United States, and publishes a copy of an agreement entered into between a Rhode Island captain, one Miller F. Wickham, commanding brig Favorite, and a firm on the African coast, for the delivery of eighty "fat and merchantable negroes." The [illegible] adds, that this cargo has been safely landed on the Southern coast, and the negroes found a ready market.

There is a caricature privately circulating in Paris representing the Emperor Napoleon putting a cat, a dog, a monkey, a parrot, a weasel, and a serpent, all into one bag. The Emperor Francis Joseph looks on in some surprise, and inquires: "What are you at, there?" "An Italian Confederation," replies Napoleon, "and you will be so good as to put one of your arms into it." "Very willingly," replies the Austrian, [illegible] with his 500,000 claws.

A CHALLENGE.—We are authorized by Jacob Shaeffer, of [illegible] township, to announce that he will run his three year old mule up the Turnpike, [illegible] against any three year old now owned in the State, mares not [illegible] to rule, mile heats, for from $200 to $500, [illegible] to come off this fall over the [illegible] Course, [illegible], Ohio. Match to be made three weeks before the race.—[illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1859.

Democratic Primary Election.

On Saturday afternoon and evening the Democracy of this county held their primary election. For some of the offices there were outside candidates, but the lines were pretty distinctly drawn between the "Minnon clique" and "Anti-Minnon clique," and the voting principally confined to those who represented the two wings.

The emissaries of the "clique" were unusually active, and swarmed, not only in the wards, but in several of the townships. In the first and fifth wards, the Post-Office was well represented, a deputy, the Son-in-law of the P. M., operating in the former, aided by deputies from the Statesman, and the latter literally alive with new-fledged politicians, who had received their "free principles" from Tom Minnon. Washington township was put under contribution by Albert Thurman, a Post-Office clerk, and Sam Davis, deputy Sheriff, who were despatched there for the purpose of moulding the political sentiment of that township. Weeks ago we were told that a number of young Republicans of that township intended to join the Democrats, with the view of nominating unpopular candidates, in the hope of defeating them at the general election. This probably was the case; and Thurman and Davis could have no difficulty in securing such assistance.

The main attention of the "clique" was turned to some of the townships, and the sole disclosure exactly where they operated. They did not scruple to misrepresent the prospects of the candidates in the city, and give assurances that their friends would sweep the city as by a hurricane. The honest farmers, unused to deceit and treachery, fell into the snare. They could not suspect the monstrous falsehoods fabricated for the occasion, and were deceived. They were the unintentional abettors of fraud, and were made the instruments of defeating candidates who received the support of the city. By this time they will have discovered the deceit practiced upon them and should not forget the deceivers.

From the time of his appointment as Commissioner, to fill a brief vacancy, the Statesman waged a relentless war upon Mr. Sparrow. It assailed his report on the defalcation in the Treasury, made two years ago, and set it up as the cause of Democratic disaster and defeat, charging it as furnishing Gov. Chase with the elements, or basis rather, of his successful canvass. It called the appointment unfortunate, and not fit to be made. It thought "our Democratic county officials" (John Phillips, auditor,) were asleep, or had stultified themselves in making such an appointment. O. P. Hines, a popular and respectable citizen of ample means, was brought out to beat Phillips, and every engine of Post-Office and Statesman set at work to defeat both Phillips and Sparrow.—But the people have said No!

What will the Statesman do? The people have endorsed both Phillips and Sparrow. Will the Statesman respond affirmatively to their endorsement? We shall see. It is a matter of no moment to us, what course the Statesman may now pursue, whether it will continue its malicious revilings of two excellent gentlemen, of unblemished reputation, and "[illegible]," or curl its tail between its legs and sneak off like any other whipt dog. The rebuke is signal, and would have been overwhelming, had it not been for the free use of money, and the most unscrupulous fabrications and unblushing effrontery.

The contest between the candidates for Clerk of Common Pleas was animated and severe. Mr. Smith, a courteous and amiable gentleman, was already in the office, to which he had been appointed in compliance with the arrangement of Tom Miller. He was respected by his acquaintances, but this is not a disposition to beget sympathetic warmth; and his connection with Minnon, although he received the benefit of its active service, damaged him materially in the estimation of many who really liked him. On the contrary, Mr. Martin has been a citizen here for forty years—has been an old-line Democrat—has toiled hard for the party, and has a positive individuality which, while it makes some enemies, is always sure to rivet strong friendships. He was undisguised in his support of Phillips, and consequently had the hostility of the Minnonites. He, too, is courteous to all, although ready to deal severe blows with an adversary. He had nothing to back him but his own energy and his integrity to his party, to which he has been a hard worker, but he mixed well with the people and his success was not unexpected, although it must be confessed [illegible].

In the formation of the ticket there was a very evident trick or device to defeat Martin. Now. It was so divided that two candidates were set apart for the long term, and three for the vacancy. In this way some of the tickets were headed, while others contained all the names but one, as should have been done in every instance, taking the highest on the list for the long, and the next two for the short term. The trick did not succeed.

For Representative, Mr. Reed was elected by a large majority, and a contest between Judge Rankin and Mr. Cowgram was very close—the townships in which Millerism prevailed, being without exception for the latter, who at the time of writing this, is supposed to have succeeded by a small majority. The objections, however, to him are of considerable standing, and when it was first suggested that he had been nominated, the hostile feeling manifested itself in undisguised expressions; and it was asked what confidence could be reposed in a man who denied over his own signature that he had been a K. N. when he had been in full fellowship with the organization and had participated in its proceedings? These were suggested other objections, besides his being a Miller candidate, and the affairs and interests of the county were not considered in safe hands if confided to him.

The defeat of J. R. Rankin has caused no little dissatisfaction among those citizens who sustained him, especially among the German population. His uprightness and integrity, his long and devoted services to the Democratic party, his peculiar fitness for the office entitled him to the regard of his fellow citizens; without the necessity of pursuing an active canvass in which his competitor engaged, aided and backed by Millerism, although it is averred that [illegible].

There has been some talk of an independent ticket. That there will be we are not prepared to say. The "Minnon clique" and its policy and mode of operation are despised, and the disaffection to any one suspected of a partnership in the concern is deep-seated.

The Board of Canvassers, consisting of a Judge of election from each ward and township, met to-day, and appointed a committee to select a County Central Committee, and adjourned until this afternoon. The votes of the several wards and townships were all in, but incomplete at the time of this writing. Should they be received in time, we shall give them, reserving further comment for to-morrow. We need only say that in this family contest of the Democracy the Post-Office and Statesman "clique" met with a disastrous defeat and that their prestige is gone.

Another Trot Between Flora Temple and Princess.—A trot between Flora Temple and Princess, mile heats, for $1,000, came off at Portland, Me., on Thursday. Flora won in three straight heats. Time—2:23, 2:25½, 2:29.

—Marysville, Union county, was the scene of another incendiary fire last week. On Thursday morning, the Millway store, occupied by Mrs. Armstrong, was consumed with its contents. The stock was insured for $300 and the building, a frame, belonging to Mrs. Pickels for $150. Wm. Eaton, who was a sufferer in a former conflagration, lost a lot of tin and brass ware valued at $300, which was stored on the premises.

—A destructive fire occurred at Wellsville, Columbiana Co., on Saturday morning last, occasioned by some scoundrel firing the barn of John M. Jenkins, the keeper of the principal Hotel in that place. Besides the destruction of the barn, Mr. Jenkins lost two horses, two fine hogs, about two hundred and fifty bushels of oats, seventy-five dozen sheaf oats, hay, lumber and other property, amounting, probably, to $1,500.

Ms. J. T. Prosser, Smith and Rogers, and Mr. Nicholson owning property adjoining, lost to the extent of $330. There was no insurance.

The Approach of Death.—The article on Death, in the New Cyclopedia, has the following:

As life approaches extinction, insensibility supervenes—a numbness and disposition to repose, which does not admit to the idea of suffering.—Even in those cases where the activity of the mind remains to the last, and where nervous sensibility would seem to continue, it is surprising how often there has been observed a happy state of feeling on the approach of death. "If I had strength enough to hold a pen, I would write how easy and delightful it is to die," were the last words of the celebrated William Hunter, during his last moments. Montaigne, in one of his essays, describes an accident which left him so senseless that he was taken up for dead. On being restored, however, he says: "Methought my life only hung upon my lips; and I shut my eyes to help to thrust it out, and took a pleasure in languishing and letting myself go."

A writer in the London Quarterly Review records that a gentleman who had been rescued from drowning declared that he had not experienced the slightest feeling of suffocation. The stream was transparent, the day brilliant, and as he stood upright he could see the sun shining through the water, with a dreamy consciousness that his eyes were about to be closed on it forever. Yet he neither feared his fate nor wished to avert it. A sleepy sensation which soothed and gratified him made a luxurious bed of a watery grave.

Beautiful was the reply of a venerable man to the question whether he was yet in the land of the living. "No, but I am almost there."

Sad Occurrence—Three Persons Drowned near Wellsburg.—Yesterday, two young ladies, Miss Worthington and Miss Bell, started from the Ohio side of the river to attend a Camp meeting at Gentleman's Run; when near Wellsburg they hailed a man to take them across the river to the Virginia side. Mr. Chamberlain, the gentleman whom they requested to take them over, started with a skiff. The young ladies stepped in, and when near the center of the river the skiff, being a worn out affair, filled with water and sunk, consigning the three to a watery grave. This melancholy occurrence has cast an universal gloom over the neighborhood where they resided. The bodies were recovered about four hours after the occurrence.—Wheeling Times, Sept. 5.

Editorial Life.—But few realize every thing of the labor and care devolving upon an editor—one who vastly feels his responsibility. Captain Marryatt says: "I know how a periodical will wear down one's existence. In itself it appear nothing, the labor is not manifest nor is it in the labor. It is the continual attention it requires. Your life becomes, as it were, the publication. One day's paper is no sooner corrected and printed than on comes another. It is the stone of Sisyphus, and endless repetition of toil and constant weight upon the intellect and spirits, and demanding all the exertions of your faculties, at the same time you are compelled to the severest drudgery. To write for a paper is very well, but to edit one is to condemn yourself to slavery.

The Oldest Church in America.—It was built in 1681, in the town of Bingham, Mass., and is still occupied as a place of worship. The bell-rope hangs down in the middle of the aisle, where it was placed in order that the bell might be rung instantly to give alarm of any sudden Indian incursion. There are many of the old-fashioned square pews in the house, enclosed by what resembles more a high and substantial unpainted fence than anything to be seen in a modern church. The frame is of oak, and the beams are huge and numerous. The old house is good for two hundred years more. The old church has an old pastor, the Rev. Joseph Richardson, having preached in it for fifty-three years.—Exchange paper.

Mortality in New York City.—At a meeting of the New York Sanitary Association, on Thursday evening, Dr. Bowman stated that he had in preparation a table of mortality extending over fifty-two years, from the year 1804, showing 416,000 deaths in fifty-two years, 150,000 of which were children under two, and over 100,000 children under or at one year of age.

The Chairman also made some remarks, in the course of which he stated that the proportion of deaths in New York was four times more than Providence, three and a half times more than Philadelphia, and three times more than Boston. In Providence, as in London, it was one in fifty; in New York, it was one in twenty-seven.

Horace Greeley's Baggage.—A San Francisco paper, in noticing the arrival in that city of Horace Greeley, says:

Mr. Greeley's baggage was taken in charge by the committee and hung upon a hook. It consisted of a leather carpet sack, containing his clothing; that world-wide "old white coat" which, he says, he has had for thirty years—carried with him through Europe, worn while a member of Congress, and has been brought with him to California; a cotton umbrella, considerably worn, and a pair of blankets done up in an oil-cloth cover.

One of Sixteen.—The latest and best, some on the extract in question, we find in the Cleveland Herald:

A Reporter's Joke.

Morgan O'Sullivan, an Irishman, and a celebrated Parliamentary reporter, attached to the London Morning Chronicle, some fifty years ago, was as remarkable for his humor as his professional ability. Whenever any one offended Morgan, or got out of favor with him, he invariably retaliated in the way of some practical joke, that generally placed his antagonist in a very ridiculous position, and afforded the humorist satisfaction. In this way he once "got even" with two individuals at the same time, who had excited his ire—namely, the celebrated Wilberforce, then a leading member of the opposition in Parliament, and one Jack Finnerty, a Parliamentary reporter of the Morning Herald. Finnerty was fresh from Tipperary, and quite unacquainted with the characteristics of the different members of Parliament, but he received a good deal of generous professional assistance at the outset of his career from Morgan O'Sullivan. On the occasion now referred to, Finnerty came into the reporters' gallery at a period of the night when the debates seemed to have slackened; he concluded to take a doze on one of the benches, and requested his friend to wake him up if anything lively came before the House, and thereupon went off to sleep. Presently Mr. Wilberforce got upon his legs and addressed a very thrilling speech before the House. As he progressed a mischievous idea seized Morgan O'Sullivan, which, as soon as Wilberforce sat down, he proceeded to put in practice thus:

Rousing Finnerty from his slumber on the benches, O'Sullivan exclaimed, "Jack Wilberforce has just made an extraordinary speech." "What about?" returned Finnerty, rubbing his eyes. "About the potato; the effect of it on national vivacity, the great virtues of it as an article of popular diet; proved that the finest kind of men were reared on it, far superior to the English." "Wilberforce said that, did he?" exclaimed Finnerty, "come, let me take his remarks in all from your notes." "With pleasure, my dear fellow," replied O'Sullivan, who commenced as if reading from a notebook, whilst Finnerty eagerly wrote after him, in the following vein: "Mr. Wilberforce then emphatically remarked that it always appeared to him beyond question that the great cause why the Irish laborers, as a body, were so much stronger and capable of enduring so much more fatigue than the English arose from the surpassing virtue of their potato." "That's what I call eloquence," interrupted Jack Finnerty. Morgan resumed: "And I have no doubt (continued Mr. Wilberforce) that had it been my lot to have been born and reared in Ireland, where my food would have principally consisted of that inestimable root, instead of being the poor, infirm, shriveled and stunted creature you, sir, and honorable gentlemen behold me, I would have been a stout, athletic, handsome man, able to carry an enormous weight." "Well done, Wilberforce," exclaimed Jack, in high glee; "go on, Morgan." O'Sullivan then proceeded in the same vein of pathos and absurdity, but adroitly keeping within the bounds that Finnerty's credulity would swallow, until he had placed a most whimsical speech in the mouth of the grave and earnest Wilberforce. Finnerty, with many expressions of thanks to his brother reporter, started for the Herald office. On his way, turning into a tavern close by the House of Commons, where a number of reporters of the different morning papers were regaling themselves, Jack furnished them all with copies of "Wilberforce's speech," and the boat found its way the next morning into every paper in London, with the exception of the Morning Chronicle, to which, as a matter of course, the correct report was furnished by O'Sullivan.

The public was astounded at the extraordinary speech, which, according to all the papers, Mr. Wilberforce had made, and the general [illegible] was that he was a candidate for [illegible]. On the following evening, on the Speaker taking the chair, Wilberforce rose and claimed the indulgence of the House. "Every honorable member," he observed, "has doubtless read the speech which I am represented as having made on the previous night. With the permission of the House, I will read it." (Here the honorable gentleman read the speech, amidst the most deafening roars of laughter.) "I can assure honorable members that no one could have read this speech with more surprise than I did myself this morning when I found the paper on the breakfast table. For myself, personally, I care but little about it, though [illegible] such unaccountable nonsense as is here put into my mouth. It is high time that instead of being a member of this House, I were an inmate of some lunatic asylum. It is for the dignity of this House that I feel concerned, for if the honorable members were capable of listening to such nonsense, supposing me capable of giving expression to it, it were much more appropriate to call this a theater for the performance of farces, than a place for the deliberations of the representatives of the people."

This was only one of the many instances in which Morgan O'Sullivan paid off, to his heart's content, members of Parliament and other persons who had, in some manner or other, provoked the waggish propensities of the incorrigible humorist.

Physical Benefit of the Sabbath.—The Sabbath is God's special present to the working man, and one of its chief objects is to prolong his life, and preserve efficient his working tone. In the vital system it acts like a compensation pond; it replenishes the spirits, the elasticity and vigor which the last six have drained away, and supplies the force which is to fill the six days succeeding; and in the economy of existence, it answers the same purpose as, in the economy of income, is answered by a savings' bank. The frugal man who puts away a pound to-day and another pound next month, and who, in a quiet way, is putting by his stated pound from time to time, when he grows old and frail, gets not only the same pound back again, but a good many pounds besides. And the conscientious man, who husbands one day of his existence every week—who, instead of allowing the Sabbath to be trampled and torn in the hurry and scramble of life, treasures it devoutly up—the Lord of the Sabbath keeps it for him, and in length of days and a hale old age gives it back with usury. The savings' bank of human existence is the weekly Sabbath.—North British Review.

A Scotch Parson, in his prayer, said "Laird, bless the great council, the parliament, and grant they may all hang together."

A country fellow standing by, replied:

"Yes, with all my heart, and the sooner the better. I'm sure it is the prayer of all good people."

"But, friend," said the parson, "I don't mean as that fellow does, but pray they may all hang together in accord and concord."

"No matter what kind of cord," replied the other, "so 'tis a strong one!"

Zurich, Aug. 19.—Yesterday a Conference took place between the Plenipotentiaries of France and Austria. A messenger of the French Cabinet has arrived here and departed again for Paris.

At the banquet given by Count Colloredo, M. Debus proposed the health of the Emperor of Austria, and Count Colloredo proposed as a toast—the permanence of friendship between Austria and Switzerland and the Government of Zurich. In the next sitting of the Conference it is supposed that the question of the boundary of Lombardy, and her participation in the Austrian debt, will be settled. To-day there was a Conference between M. Debourqueny and M. Desambrois, the French and Sardinian Plenipotentiaries.

Paris, Aug. 19.—The Moniteur of this morning contains a decree to the effect that foreign shares and securities may be negotiated at the bourse after two-fifths of their value have been paid up. Previously it was necessary that seven-tenths should be paid up. The Moniteur further announces that their Imperial Majesties arrived yesterday at Tarbes, and proceeded to the villa of M. Fould. They were received with great enthusiasm by the population.

Signor Sasazi has suspended the publication of the Undiciani at Genoa.

Austria—Vienna, Aug. 19.—Since the return of the Emperor to Vienna no council of the Ministers still in power has been held. The official Wiener Zeitung contains a list of numerous military promotions and distinctions made on account of the battle of Solferino. It is stated that the Minister of the Interior, Baron Bach, will be appointed ambassador at Rome.

Austria.—A letter from Verona says that some of the regiments of the army of Italy, which were to have returned, have received counter orders, and will remain in Venetia.—This has been construed by some as an intention on the part of Austria to make an armed intervention shortly on the Duchies, but information derived from a good source, refutes any such intention on the part of the Imperial Government. The Imperial family of Austria show the greatest sympathy for the deposed sovereigns, and is making every diplomatic exertion to procure their restoration. A second counsellor attached to foreign affairs has left for Zurich to stimulate the zeal of the Austrian Plenipotentiaries, and new dispatches have been forwarded to Count Colloredo on the subject of the measures to be adopted, for effecting as soon as possible the much dreaded restoration of the Arch Dukes.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

New York, Sept. 3.—A terrible catastrophe happened yesterday afternoon at No. 106 Goerick street at about four o'clock a steam boiler located on the premises alluded to, which were occupied by John Roach as an Iron Foundry, exploded, completely demolishing the building and burying all the hands employed in it some fourteen in number, in the ruins. By some fortunate circumstance, however, but one man named Shaw was killed, while five others were more or less injured. The names of the wounded men are, Edward Roach, Edward Petrie, Wm. Louisville, Sept. 1.—A difficulty occurred at Hopkinsville, Ky., between W. W. Weston and Captain John Jackson, late candidate for Congress. The former was shot and instantly killed.

Washington, Aug. 31.—The scoundrel who recently brought from Philadelphia to New York three young ladies under the pretence of taking them south as school and music teachers, and then robbed them of their money and baggage, was arrested here to-night. He was recognized as Hiram P. Leslie, heretofore temporarily employed in the Patent Office. Some of our own citizens had been swindled by him. His valise contained a large number of letters from various parts of the country, the contents of one of which shows that he has traveled south, and was extensively engaged in dishonest schemes. He has a wife living in Washington. Two large traveling trunks claimed by him are at the Express office and are supposed to contain money and valuables belonging to his victims. He has been committed to await the requisition of the Governor of New York.

Boston, Sept. 2.—The auroral display of last night was so brilliant after midnight that ordinary print could be read by its lights. It considerably impeded the working of telegraph lines, and its effects were continued up to noon of to-day. The auroral current from east to west was so regular that the operators on the eastern lines could send messages to this city without the usual batteries being applied. The same extraordinary effect was apparent on the National Telegraph wires between Philadelphia and Pittsburg.

New York, Sept. 3.—Three colored lads, whose ages range from ten to thirteen years, are missing, under certain circumstances leading to the suspicion that they have been taken south to slavery.

Bellows Falls, Vt., Sept. 2.—Prof. La Mountain descended in his balloon, near Saxton river, at 8 o'clock this evening, having traveled a hundred miles in an hour and a half.

New York, Sept. 3.—The steamship Quaker City from Havana on 29th ult., arrived at this port at noon to-day. A royal decree imposing great restrictions on the commerce of the island gave much trouble to American shippers and captains. The weather was very hot, but the health of the city was good for the season.

The sugar market was flat but unchanged in price. Exchanges were declining; on London 12@13 per cent. premium.

Washington, Sept. 3.—The Southern mail furnishes New Orleans papers of Saturday and Sunday. There was not a case of yellow fever in New Orleans during the past season.

Washington, Sep. 3.—The Department of State is officially informed of the ratification by Nicaragua of the Lamar Zeledon treaty after the omission of the obnoxious clause objected to by this Government.

Boston, Sept. 3.—An Englishman named Edward Humphrey, who it is alleged is a defaulter to the amount of £40,000, has been arrested here. Humphrey is the clergyman who eloped with another man's wife from England as already published. He is a brick.

New York, Sept. 3.—The Herald says among the arrivals at the Clarendon hotel in this city, we are pleased to record, that of the Hon. Grantley F. Berkley, the celebrated English sportsman, who is about to commence a hunting excursion through this country.

Baltimore, Sept. 4.—The law and order town meeting for to-morrow evening will be an immense affair, and the spirit already manifested has had the desired effect upon the rowdy gangs. A full independent ticket will be nominated.—Our city is certainly bad enough, but the sensation reporters have awfully exaggerated recent events. The late steamboat outrage is an instance of this spirit of exaggeration. At the investigation into the affair forty-two witnesses were examined, and yet not one either saw or heard of any violence to the females on board. The other parts of the story as originally published appear to have been equally magnified.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The government has been advised by General Harvey of his proceedings in taking possession of San Juan, and the steamer of to-morrow will convey to him a reply. From what has here transpired, it is reasonable to infer the position of the administration admits of no compromise, it being fully satisfied the island belongs to the United States.

Official notice is given, that in all cases in which pre-emption declaratory statements, founded on bona fide, actual settlement and cultivation made prior and up to date, are filed by the settlers before the 5th of October, the registers and receivers are directed, where the pre-emption claimants are unable and do not prove up and pay for their tracts at or before that time, to withhold such actual and cultivated tracts.

The public sales in Minnesota are to take place in October and November.

The Secretary of the Interior has informed certain memorialists in St. Louis who asked the public lands of Kansas and Nebraska to be withheld from private entry after the close of the public sales, that the President is of opinion the law invests him with no power to grant such request.

The State Department has been informed by Mr. Wright, Minister to Berlin, that it is not true, as reported by many American newspapers, that several American citizens are in the Prussian army. He knows of none.

Washington, Sept. 4.—Senator Douglas leaves the city on Monday morning, passing through Harrisburgh at noon and reaching Pittsburgh at midnight. He speaks at Columbus at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon; also at Cincinnati Thursday evening. He will reach Chicago on Saturday.

St. Louis, Sept. 5.—A dispatch from Leavenworth says a collision between Democrats and Republicans occurred on Saturday night, both parties having made demonstrations prior to the municipal election. To-day the Republicans were holding a meeting at the intersection of two streets, the Democratic torchlight procession attempted to pass through, but being resisted a general melee ensued, several hundred on both sides participating, using stones, bludgeons, pistols and knives. One was shot and five or six severely cut, none fatally. The Republicans maintained their ground and proceeded with the meeting. The affray, it is believed, was purely accidental, and is universally regretted. There is some apprehension of a disturbance to-day. Effective preventive measures have been taken.

The Denver Express of the 27th arrived yesterday with a small quantity of dust. In Gregory's Diggings some miners penetrated three feet through a strata of sulphate of iron, finding rich dirt below. Discoveries on Colorado prove remunerative.

Indian depredations continued, and isolated parties of miners were frequently cut off.

Indianapolis, Sept 5.—Ex-Governor Wallace, an old resident, and lately judge of the Court of Common Pleas, died of apoplexy last night.

New Orleans, Sept. 5.—The steamship Havana, of the Louisiana and Tehauntepec line, has arrived below, with San Francisco advices to the 20th ult., and Minatitlan to the 1st inst.

The Pacific Mail steamships Sonora and Cortes, sailed from San Francisco on the 20th ult., for Panama, with over $2,000,000 in specie and 1,200 passengers.

A British man-of-war had arrived at San Francisco from Vancouver's Island, and it is supposed she brings dispatches for England concerning the San Juan dispute.

No arrivals at San Francisco are reported. Business had improved. Provisions are unchanged. Candles had advanced ½c. Sugar firm; refined sold at 11½c.

Advices from Vancouver's Island to the 10th ult., state that Gen. Harney, on the 9th ult. ordered four artillery companies from Fort Washington to reinforce Capt. Pickett, who still occupied San Juan unmolested.

Gen. Harney had forwarded dispatches to Washington.

Horace Greeley had addressed a large Pacific Railway meeting at San Francisco.

St. Louis, Sept. 5—6 P. M.—The Arizona correspondent of the Republican, writing from Tubac, Aug. 27th, says the express from Magdalena brings intelligence that independence is about to be declared by Sonora and Chihuahua. Governor Peagriera was placed at the head of affairs some time past. Pesqueira has been receiving large supplies of cannon, small arms and ammunition, and has increased the army nearly three thousand more.

Markets.

New York, Sept. 6.—Flour heavy; sales of 6,500 bbls at $4@4 40 for State, and $5 00@5 35 for Ohio. Wheat heavy; sales of 5,000 bu red at $1 24 and mixed at $1 10. Corn quiet. Pork quiet at $15 for mess and $10 25 for prime. Lard steady. Whisky firm.

New York, Sept. 6—Stocks.—The Stock Market was active and higher at the first Board, and the excitement continued after the close. Large sales were made especially in Missouri sixes, Michigan Southern and New York Central. Quotations C. & R. I. 62½; Illinois Central, 67½; Illinois Central Bonds, 88; Michigan Southern, 24½; New York Central, 75½; Pennsylvania Coal, 84; Virginia Sixes, 95; Missouri Sixes, 85¼; United States fives of 1874 105½; Galena and Chicago, 73¼; Michigan Central, 47½; Cleveland and Pittsburg, 7; Cleveland Columbus and Cincinnati 93½.

Philadelphia, Sept. 6.—Flour receding; sales for home use at $4 50@5, for old stock and fresh ground superfine and $4 75@6 00, for extra and fancy. Rye flour held at $3 75. Cornmeal at $3 50. Wheat in fair request; 3,000 bu of red sold at $1 17@1 19. A lot of fair white sold at $1 30; some Kentucky sold at $1 35. Rye sells readily at 73@75c. Corn firmer; 4,000 bu yellow sold at 78½@79c; 2,000 bu prime new Delaware oats sold at 34c. Whisky unchanged, sales at 27@27½c.

The correspondent of the London Times, at St. Petersburg, says twenty thousand men are at work on the St. Petersburg and Warsaw Railway, and other lines are progressing. For the moment, Russia desires peace, which is indeed, almost a necessity for her.

The American party of New Jersey, in convention at Camden on Thursday, nominated Hon. Peter I. Clark candidate for Governor. The movement created considerable sensation in political circles.

The Scandinavian Pills and Purifier.—The following flattering notice is taken from the Portsmouth (Ohio) Scioto Valley Republican, of April 8, 1858:

Scandinavia.—A friend writes to us for our "real opinion" of Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies—where he can obtain them—and why they are called "Scandinavian," and we are frequently asked the same questions. Scandinavia is the ancient name of Sweden and Norway, and a Scandinavian, that is a Swede or Norwegian, affectionately calls his country "Scandinavia," in the same sense as we speak of "Columbia," or "The Union." By the way, there are over nine thousand Scandinavian families in Dane county, Wisconsin. Although a citizen of this country for many years, Dr. Roback is a Swede by birth; and compounds his Medicines of Swedish herbs. We think the name is very appropriate. We have the very highest opinion of the Medicines, and of Dr. Roback himself, who is not only a singularly skillful physician, but a gentleman of the Old School, as we know personally. Our advertisement columns will answer the rest of our friend's letter.—See advertisement.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. Four copies will be furnished for one dollar; and we shall supply them from the present time to the election—each subscriber being furnished with the full returns.

We hope that orders may reach us as soon as possible; as we intend to make the Campaign Press do yeoman service in the canvass. Let it go to every domicil, where its sound, unwavering, reliable Democracy will bring cheer to the household. Its motto is "Equal rights to all—Exclusive privileges to none."

THE SEVENTH WONDER.

Of the wonders, wonders famous,
We, throughout our land, have seen;
None more useful, few amusing
More than SINGER'S Famed Machine.
[illegible] universal,
Those who've tried them [illegible]
[illegible] in domestic circles.
One should be in every home.
Thousands who, sad vigils keeping,
Oft in sorrow night repine,
Hail with joy the dawn that's peeping
Soon they'll see the better time.
[illegible]
This great marvel of our day
Wives and sisters, mothers, children—
All, their joyful tribute pay.
Thirty thousand now are using
These Machines throughout our land;
Stitching, felling, hemming, [illegible]
All without the aid of hand.
Tens of thousands have intention,
And are using every means—
Soon to buy this great invention,
SINGER'S world-renowned MACHINES!
Stitching lines, cloth or leather,
On each side the work the same;
More employed than any other.
Wonderful, indeed, their fame.
[illegible]
Ornamented they have been,
Also, made in handsome cases.
SINGER'S NOW IS THE MACHINE!

McCoy's Commercial College.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the most practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are taught, and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to hold his own against the vicissitudes and avoid the baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of approbation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution of similar character, which speaks for itself:

Birmingham Commercial College, June [illegible], 1859.

Prof. Samuel I. McCoy—

Sir: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that yours surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the Union. As to the penmanship department, you have carried it home, and but few equals in the country.

N. SHAFFER,

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisped in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever wooed a couplet, and need not be repeated here. [illegible] Edward Cornelison, whose address heads the music store of Messrs. Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes discords from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and villages if needed. He is an accomplished musician and agreeable gentleman.

E. P. Jennings, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a stock of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

The Capitol Restaurant is centrally located and its Proprietor John O'Hare is determined to furnish all the luxuries of the season for the market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

Fashion Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made ours for the last two or three years.

Rossing & Dickinson continue to furnish the townsmen with delicious bread. "Jonny" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

The Bitter Rooms on State street do one of the most agreeable trade in these [illegible]. The fixtures are superior, and everything is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the corks fly and Monroe deserves the liberal custom he has.

Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at [illegible] article.

Soda.—That marble fountain of our jovial friend J. M. Dennis on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. Very convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block.

Cheap Dry Goods.—Those who are in pursuit of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. Chittenden on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

Seltzer & Webster are the agents of Knabe & Co's. galvanized pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, unequaled.

Dr. J. Stewart has returned to the city from his successful visit to the eastern part of Ohio, and may be consulted at the Goodale House where he has rooms.

Charley Brenner is becoming one of the handsomest sights we have seen. Their is one of the Spring style for summer wear that will look ha[illegible].

THE WASTED QUIVER.

Love came one night when the revel was wild
All in a grand saloon,
And tripped about like a fairy child,
And danced to a lively tune.
He came where a pair were playing at "Because,"
And he shot at a lady fair,
But his bow was snarled in the lady's [illegible],
So his arrow went to her hair.

Then at one as bright as a tropical [illegible],
All [illegible] in a languid [illegible],
Love sent his shaft; with a silver gleam,
Like dew beneath the moon,
The arrow flew in a [illegible],
Was lost in a [illegible],
But oh! what a whispered, fluttering rush,
When it struck on "patent bustle."

Then he pulled at a man with a foreign air,
[illegible]
Assuming the role of the "do dad dare,"
But acting that of the "fool;"
And he, the gallant and bold "son of Mars,"
Would scorn Love's flimsy net,
So the arrow sunk from out the bars
Of his gaudy epaulet.

And then on a dandy all polish and smell,
The heir of his father's house,
With a puppy's face and a goose's swell,
With the talent and tact of a [illegible],—
I am sorry to say Love wasted a dart;
The dandy thought it a joke,
But the shaft was true and found the heart,
When it struck in his padded vest.

And then for a pensive creature,
With a perfectly outlined bust,
With elegant classic features,
And a faint sweet odor of [illegible],
Love fitted his choicest arrow,
And tipped with a glittering [illegible],
But it fell to the ground like a sparrow,
It struck on a corset bone.

"Out," he cried, "on your corset ribs,
And out on your skeleton skirts,
[illegible]
You're a terrible army of flirts."

GOOD AND BAD FUNGUS.

[From Dickens's "All The Year Round."]

Some of the most important diseases of corn and other agricultural crops are owing to the attacks of microscopic fungi. These having been divided into four sorts: those attacking the flower, as smut (uredo segetum); those attacking the grain, as pepper-brand (uredo foetida); those attacking the leaves and chaff, as rust (uredo rubigo); and those attacking the straw, as corn-mildew (puccinia graminis). Smut-balls, pepper-brand, or blight, is a powdery matter occupying the inside of the grain of wheat, and when examined under the microscope is found to consist of minute balls, four millions of which may exist in a single grain, and each of these contains numerous little spores. In this disease the seeds retain their form and appearance, but the parasitic fungus has a peculiar fetid odor, and hence is called stinking dust. Dust-brand is a sooty powder, having no smell, found in oats and barley, and shows itself conspicuously before the ripening of the crop. Baur says that in one hundred and sixty thousandth part of a square inch he counted forty-nine spores of this fungus. Rust is an orange powder exuding from the inner chaff scales, and forming yellow and brown spots and blotches in various parts of corn plants. It is sometimes called red gum, red robin, red rust, and red rag. Mildew is supposed to be another state of the same disease.

Those fungi which are developed in the interior of plants, and appear afterwards on the surface, are called entophytic, within a plant. Their minute sporules are either directly applied to the plants, entering by their stomata, or they are taken up from the soil. Many other funguses grow parasitically on plants, and either give rise to disease or modify it in a peculiar way. In the potatoe disease a species of fungus commit great ravages by spreading its spawn through the cells of the leaves and the tubers, and thus accelerating their destruction. Various kinds of fungi attack the tomato, beet, turnip, and carrot. A species of dorparis sometimes causes disease in the knots of wheat. A diseased state of rye and other grasses, called ergot is owing to a fungus which causes the ovary of the grain to become dark colored, and project from the chaff in the form of a spur; and hence its name of spurred rye. The nutritious part of the grain is destroyed, and is acquires highly injurious properties.

Many kinds of wood are liable to the attacks of fungi, "which renders," says the Rev. M. N. Berkeley, "one or two species, known under the common name of dry-rot, such a dreadful plague in ships and buildings." This disease, once established, spreads with wonderful rapidity; and Professor Burnett records the following instance of the speed with which a building may be destroyed by this insidious enemy. "I knew," he says, "a house into which the rot gained admittance, and which, during the four years we rented it, had the parlors twice wainscoted, and a new flight of stairs, the dry-rot having rendered it unsafe to go from the ground-floor to the bedrooms. Every precaution was taken to remove the decaying timbers when the new work was done; yet the dry-rot so gained strength, that the house was ultimately pulled down. Some of my books which suffered least, and which I still retain, bear mournful impressions of its ruinous tread; others were so much attacked that the leaves resembled tinder, and, when the volumes were opened, fell out in dust or fragments."

A species of fungus called racodium is somewhat bacchanalian in its tastes, and to gratify them pays frequent visits to [illegible] and places like the London Docks where it is said "he pays his unwelcome visits, and is in even worse odour than the exciseman." An instance is related of a gentleman who, having a cask of wine rather too sweet for immediate use, directed that it should be placed in a cellar, that the saccharine might be decomposed by age; at the end of three years he directed his butler to ascertain the state of the wine, when, on attempting to open the cellar door, it was found to be impossible, on account of some powerful obstacle. The door being cut down, the cellar was found to be completely filled with a fungous production, so firm that it was necessary to use an axe for its removal. This appeared to have grown from, or to have been nourished by, the decomposing particles of the wine, the cask being empty, and carried up to the ceiling, where it was supported by the fungus.

Like insects, fungi do not content themselves with preying upon dead organized matter; some of them also attack living substances, both animal and vegetal. They have been found growing in the air-cells of birds, and even upon the living membranes of the human lungs. Silk-worms are sometimes destroyed in vast numbers by an internal fungus called muscardine. A species of wasp, inhabiting the West Indies, may often be seen flying about with fungoid plants as long as its own body growing upon it; and the caterpillar of a New Zealand moth, when it retires into the earth to undergo its metamorphosis, is attacked by a fungus which destroys it. A very curious circumstance connected with this fungus-bearing caterpillar is, that the plant invariably grows from immediately behind the head of the victim, and from no other part of its body. One sort of fungus specially devotes itself to destroying the hoofs of horses and the horns of cattle, sticking to nothing else. Several French surgeons, among the rest Lemery, narrate cases in which, on removing bandages from sore surfaces, they have found a collection of fungus growing upon them, generally about the size of a finger, and one of them adds that, having reapplied the wrappings, a second batch came out in the course of twenty-four hours, and this for several days consequently.

The uses to which funguses have been put are various, such as making dye or ink, for stupifying bees, for staunching blood, and for making tinder. A fungus called Agaricus muscarius is largely used in Kamtschatka, in decoction, as an intoxicating liquor. Reeves says this is the Moucho more of the Russians, Kamtschatdales, and Koriacs, who use it for intoxicating; they sometimes eat it dry, but more commonly immersed in a liquor, and when they drink it they are seized with convulsions in all their limbs, followed by that sort of raving which accompanies a burning fever; they personify this mushroom, and if they are urged by its effects to suicide, or any other dreadful crime, they pretend to obey its commands; to fit themselves for premeditated assassination they recur to the use of Moucho more.

Of the funguses formerly employed in medicine, the ergot of rye is the only one which keeps its ground. A fungus called Polyporus suaveolens has been much vaunted for its surprising effects in cases of consumption, but it has now fallen entirely into disuse.

In Lapland, Linnaeus saw the Boletus igniarius, is shaped like a horses hoof, hung up on the walls of the cottages, and used as a pin-cushion. It is made use of as a tinder in some parts of England and Germany.

The Yeast-plant is another of the useful fungi. It surprises many persons to be told that yeast is plant. Yet, nevertheless, it represents one condition of a species of fungus remarkable for the diversity of forms it exhibits, its almost universal distribution, and the wonderful effect it is capable of producing. The forms in which it is familiar to most persons, although its nature may be unsuspected, are yeast, the gelatinous vinegar-plant, the "mother" of vinegar, and many other decomposing vegetable infusions, and the common blue or green "mould" which occurs everywhere on sour paste, decaying fruits, and all dead organic matters exposed to combined moisture and moderate heat. Yeast and the vinegar-plant are the forms in which it vegetates when well supplied with food. Mildew is its fruits, formed on the surface exposed to the air, at certain epochs, like the flowers and seeds of the higher order of plants, to enable it to diffuse itself. This it does most effectually, for the microscopic germs, invisible singly to the unaided sight, are produced in myriads, and are so diminutive that ordinary notes floating in the atmosphere are large in comparison.

A wholesome vinegar can be made by placing a developed vinegar-plant in a syrup composed of a quart of water and half a pound of sugar. If kept covered from dust in a cool place, the vinegar after being filtered will be fit for use.

But, the edible, the most useful of the funguses are the most neglected by botanists. The Chinese present a striking contrast to ourselves in the care they bestow on their esculent vegetation. About a dozen years ago, M. Stanislaus Julien presented to the Academy of Sciences, at Paris, a Chinese treatise in six volumes, with plates, entitled the Anti-Famine Herbal, containing descriptions and representations of four hundred and fifty-six different plants, whose leaves, rinds, stalks or roots, are fitted to furnish food for the people when drought, ravages of locusts, or the overflow of the great rivers have occasioned a failure of rice and grain. Of this book the Chinese Government are said annually to print thousands, and distribute them gratuitously in those districts which are most exposed to natural calamities.

In England wilful ignorance and silly prejudices still prevail to such an extent that Mr. Badham says: "I have myself witnessed whole hundred weights of rich wholesome food rotting under trees; woods teeming with food and not one hand to gather it; and this, perhaps, in the midst of potatoe blight, poverty, and all manner of privations, and public prayers against imminent famine. I have indeed been grieved to see pounds innumerable of extempore beef-steaks growing on our oaks in the shape of fistulina hepatica; agaricus fasipes to pickle in clusters under them; puff-balls, which some of our friends have not inaptly compared to sweet-bread, for the rich delicacy of their unassisted flavor; hydna, as good as oysters, which they somewhat resemble in taste; agaricus deliciosus, reminding us of tender lamb kidneys; the beautiful yellow chantarelle, growing by the bushel, and no basket but our own to pick them up; the sweet-nutty flavored boletus, in vain calling himself edulis where there are none to believe him; the dainty orcella, the agaricus heterophyllus, which tastes like the crawfish when grilled; the agaricus ruber, and agaricus virescens, to cook in any way, and equally good in all; these are among the most conspicuous of the edible funguses."

No country is perhaps richer in esculent funguses than our own, for we have upwards of thirty species abounding in our woods. No markets might, therefore, be better supplied than the English, and yet England is the only country in Europe where this important and savory food is, from ignorance or prejudice, left to perish ungathered. In France, Germany, and Italy, funguses not only constitute for weeks together the sole diet of thousands, but in many form a valuable source of income. Indeed, enthusiastic writers upon the subject have styled them "the manna of the poor."

A CLEAR CASE.—Coming along the street the other morning we overheard the following conversation which is clear enough:

'Julius, is you better dis morning?'

'No, I was better yesterday, but I's got ober dat.'

'Are dere no hopes for your discovery?'

'Discovery of what?'

'Your discovery from the convalescence what am fotching you on your back.'

'Dat depens, sir, altogeddah on de prognostication which implies the disease should dey continue fatually, de doctor thinks I'se a goner, should dey not consinuate fatually, he hopes dis sailed individool wont die dis time. But as I said afore, dat all depends on de prognostics, and till dese come to a head, dere are no telling wedder dis pusson will come to a disconfluation or oderwise."

A HANDY ARTICLE.—Adam Slonaker a number of years ago, came to Huntington Furnace, and there, for the first time, seeing a pair of snuffers, he asked:

"What's them for?"

"To snuff the candle."

"To snuff the candle?"

The candle just then needed attention, and Adam with his thumb and finger pinched off the snuff, and carefully poked it into the snuffers, saying:

"Well, now, them is handy."

☞ A newly married couple, some years since, took up their abode in a place named Poplar. At breakfast the next morning the gentleman said to his lady: "My dear, this is Poplar, and by putting in u (you) it becomes popular." "And by putting us in it," promptly replied the lady, "it will become populous."

☞ Marriageable young women are in great demand out west. A Jerseyman writing from that section, to his father says:

"Suppose you get our girls some new teeth, and send them out here?"

The Cotton States.

We have been so far content with the assurances that come to us from sources at the North, wherein may be found the virtue and patriotism we have so often attributed to certain classes of Northern men, that we have been led to regard the crusade that has been made against our domestic institutions by certain declaimers and propagators of sectional antipathy, as utterly impotent to effect any change in the policy of the government inimical to the rights of the South. Although we do not claim for this Northern sentiment of slave toleration any high or elevated falling of patriotic devotion to the Constitution or the rights of the South, yet the sagacity of the Northern manufacturer, and the peculiar and very striking interest which he has ever manifested in any enterprise which might tend towards the promotion of his own interest, has long since convinced us that should the dissolution of the Union ever become a practical issue, we would find issuing from the counting-rooms of the merchant, the work-shops of the manufacturer, and the marts of trade an army of interested allies, each and all impelled by that irresistable first law of nature, self-protection. That this class at the North are fully sensible of the mutual benefit resulting to both sections of the Union from reciprocal commercial relations, we have abundant evidence from the bold and patriotic avowal which often comes to us, with a refreshing influence, from the very hot bed of abolitionism.—The following toast, given at a public celebration in Boston on the 5th of July, warrants the opinion expressed above that the mutual commercial dependency existing between the producer and the manufacturer will, whenever the fearful crises may arrive, be found as a Gordian-knot which even the two-edged sword of fanaticism cannot sever:

"The Cotton States.—Producers of the staple we consume, and consumers of the manufactures we produce: May the reciprocal tie of union, which springs from our mutually advantageous commerce, be cemented by continued warm and generous social relations."

The sentiment expressed in the above extract, is the result of an intelligent appreciation of the entire dependancy of the Northern work-shop upon the product of slave labor, and the capacity of the North for affording employment to her growing population. Without the demand for manufacturing labor, which is afforded by the manufacturers of the North to the vast population that are now fed and sustained by the manufacture of the raw material, the product of slave labor, the cry of "bread or blood" would again startle the good order of society, and agrarianism would become the watchword of her starving hordes. More than two thirds of the working classes at the North are supported by work-shops and manufactories; they are in turn sustained by the demand from the South for the manufactured product. Thus, by a reciprocal interchange of buying and selling, the product of the Southern soil gives employment of Northern laborers, sustains the work-shops of Northern enterprise, builds up her commerce, freights her railroads, and adds strength and vigor to the already giant-grown arm of her political power. Such has become our political inferiority, that we are neither feared or hated, but are regarded as vassals to do her bidding. So long as the South can supply her physical and material demands, so long will Southern rights be tolerated; when she fails as a producer, she forfeits the respect of her Northern task-masters.

CAUSE OF THE AURORA BOREALIS.—M. de la Rive, the celebrated French astronomer, explains the production of the Aurora Borealis in the following manner:

When the sun, having passed into the southern hemisphere, no longer heats our atmosphere, the aqueous vapors which have accumulated during the summer in this part of the atmosphere begin to condense, the kind of humid cap enveloping the polar regions extends more and more, and facilitates the passage of electricity accumulated in the upper portion of the air. But in this elevated region, and especially at this period of the year, the aqueous vapors must most frequently pass into the state of minute particles of ice or snow floating in the air, similar to those which give rise to the halos; they form, as it were, a kind of semi-transparent mist. These half frozen fogs conduct the electricity to the surface of the earth, near the pole, and are at the same time illuminated by these currents or electricity discharges. In fact, all observers agree in asserting that the Aurora Borealis is constantly preceeded by a mist, which rises from the pole, and the margin of which, less dense than the remainder, is colored by the first; and indeed it is very frequent near the pole in the winter months, and especially in those where there is an abundance of vapors in the air.

☞ The following recipe for making tattlers is said to be infallible in its effects:

Take one pound of the vine called runabout; the same quantity of the root called nimble-tongue; a sprig of herb called blackbite added either before or after dog-days; a table spoonful of don't-you-tell-it; six ounces of malice; a few drops of envy, which can be found in any quantity, at the shop of Miss Tabitha Tea-table and Miss Nancy Night-walker. Stir them well together, and let them simmer well for half an hour over the fire of discontent, kindled with a little jealousy; then strain them through the rag of misconstruction; put it in the bottle of malevolence; rub it on a skein of street yarn; shake it occasionally for a few days, and it will then be fit for use. Just take a few drops before walking out—you will then be able to speak all manner of evil about your neighbors, and that continually. The recipe never has failed yet.

☞ Jim H., out West, tells a good story about a shell-bark lawyer. His client was up on two small charges—frivolous charges, as shell-bark designated them—(forging a note of hand, and stealing a horse.) On running his eyes over the jury he didn't like their looks, so he prepared an affidavit for continuance, setting forth the absence in Alabama of a principal witness. He read it in a whisper to the prisoner, who shaking his head, said:

"Squire, I can't swear to that ar document."

"Why?"

"Kose hit haint true."

Old shell inflated and exploded loud enough to be heard throughout the room.

"What! you forge a note and steal a hoss, and can't swear to a lye! Hang such an infernal fool."

And he left the conscientious one to his fate.

☞ Boys, if you don't want to fall in love, keep away from muslin. You can no more play with those girls without losing your hearts, than you can play with gamblers without losing your money. The heartstrings of a woman, like the tendrils of a vine, are always reaching out for something to cling to. The consequence is, that before you are going you are "gone," like a lot at an auction.

"Jack, did you carry that umbrella home I borrowed yesterday?" "No, father, you have often told me to lay up something for a rainy day."

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

HOW GOSHEN BUTTER IS MADE.—Mr. Dennison, a practical butter maker, tells in the following brief description how the celebrated Goshen butter is made:

The cellar where the milk is kept should be cool, well ventilated and clean. The milk ought to be strained in pans containing ten or twelve quarts each. If the weather is very warm, the pans ought to be set on the cellar bottom—otherwise on shelves. The milk ought to be churned until it becomes thick, or loppered—the milk and cream are then churned together. Some dairymen skim off the cream and part of the milk, and churn that, but the Goshen butter is churned from the milk and cream. The churn used is the common "dasher churn," driven by dog, horse or hand power, according to the size of the dairy. The churn may be half or two-thirds full with milk; and a pailful of cold water added before starting to churn. In cold weather, warm water is put in.—The churning should be with a slow, regular motion—and to make good, solid butter, will take from one hour to one hour and a half; before the churning is done, another pailful of water ought to be put in. When the butter is done, take it out, wash it through one water in a large tray, throw the water out, then salt the butter, using about one ounce of pure Liverpool (Ashton) salt to each pound of butter—put in a cool place, and let it stand an hour, then work it carefully over, and set it aside for five or six hours—work it over again, and set it aside in the same cool place until the next morning, when it is packed. In working butter, great care ought to be taken to work out all of the milk—but not to work it too much, so as to break the grain, and make it salvy.—If any milk is left in, the butter will soon become rancid; and if worked too much, it will be greasy or salvey, and not solid. Butter worked just enough, will be solid—sweet yellow—and the drops of brine on it will be as clear as a cystal.

Orange county butter is packed in white oak firkins, the staves selected so as not to leak the brine; the firkins will weigh about eighteen or twenty pounds empty. The firkins are soaked in pure cold water for some days before using, by being filled with water; they hold from eighty to one hundred pounds of butter. When the firkin is full a linen cloth is placed over the top of the butter, and on this cloth a layer of salt an inch in depth is laid, made a little damp with cold water. The butter stands until marketed; then the salt and cloth are taken off, a fresh cloth wet with brine put on, and the firkin headed up. Great care should be taken to have the firkins kept perfectly clean. The outside out to be as bright as when turned out by the cooper. No leaky firkin, or say that will filter the least particle of brine, ought to be used. This is the way Goshen butter is made.

SALT FOR HORSES.—A person who kept sixteen horses made the following experiments with seven of them, which had been accustomed to eat salt with their feed: Lumps of rock salt were laid in their mangers. These lumps, previously weighed, were examined regularly, to ascertain what quantity, weekly, had been consumed; and it was repeatedly found that whenever these horses were fed on hay or corn they consumed only two and a half or three ounces per day, and when they were fed with new hay, they took six ounces per day. This fact should convince us of the expediency of permitting our cattle the free use of salt at all times; and it can not be given in so convenient a form as rock salt, it being much more palatable than the other in a refined state, and by far cheaper. A good lump should always be kept in a box by the side of the animal, without fear that it will ever be taken to excess.—Cultivator.

RECEIPT FOR MAKING HONEY.—Just get a half pint of alcohol and put it in a clean bottle; to this add five drops of rose oil, and shake it up; cork it well, and keep it for use as it may be needed.—Then take one and a half pints of water, 4 lbs white sugar; ½ oz. alum. Put these, in a clean vessel, on the stove and let it boil for three or four minutes, then pour it in an earthen vessel, and add one table spoonful of the alcohol in the bottle, and stir it up, and when cool it is fit for use. Brown sugar will do for common use, but will not be so clear [illegible].

When you add the alcohol, it will boil up suddenly, like putting water into hot grease; the vessel should be large, that it may not boil over. By stirring, it soon settles down. The above are proportions, so that you can make any quantity desirable.

TO TAKE OUT PITCH, TAR, RESIN, PAINT, ETC.—If any of these happen to get on a garment, either linen or woolen, pour a little alcohol on the place, and let it soak in about half an hour. Then rub it gently, and you will find the alcohol has soaked out the glutinous quality, so that it will easily crumble out [illegible].

THE NEGRO AND THE BEAR.—The following good story of a negro's first meeting with a bear is told by Colonel ——, who had spent some of his fortune and life in the woods of Florida. The Colonel had a black fellow—a good natured, happy creature—who, one morning was strolling through the woods, whistling and roaring as he went, when suddenly he spied an individual as black as himself, with much more wool. Dick looked at his new friend, and the bear seated on his rump, looked at Dick, Dick's eyes began to stick out a feet.

'Who's dat?' cried Dick. 'Who's dat?' again cried Dick, shaking all over.

Bruin began to approach. Dick pulled heels for the first tree, and the bear after him. Dick was upon the cypress and the bear scratching close after him. Dick moved out on a limb, the bear followed till the limb began to bend.

'Now, see here, mister, if you come any farder, dis limb brake. Dere! dere! I told you so.' As Dick had said, the limb broke, and down came bear and nigger.

'Dere, you black imp, I tole you so; dis is all your fault. Yer broke your neck, and I'll just take yer to Massa Colonel.'

☞ The entire expense of the feeds, champaign, hack hire, &c., incurred by the Philadelphia Committee in the entertainment of the City Council of Cincinnati, during their late visit, is said to be about $1,500. The Committee are now hard at work to collect money to settle bill, in order to prevent the necessity of asking an appropriation for that purpose.

☞ Information, derived from the Missionary House, in Boston, is contradictory of the statements published in the New York Independent, to the effect that the Sandwich Islanders were backsliding into barbarism; on the contrary, it is asserted that the churches are in good condition and civilization rapidly progressing.

☞ Col. Hiram Fuller, who has recently enjoyed the intimate friendship of ex-President Pierce, says that it is utterly useless to recommend his nomination by the Charleston Convention. "Nothing can induce him to accept a second nomination, or a public office of any grade."

"Off she goes," said Mrs Smith to her spouse, as they started by the railway from Charleston.

"There you are wrong," said Smith, "for this is the mail (male) train."

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,

PHILADELPHIA,

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in cases of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.

The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.

An admirable Report on Spermatorrhea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

By order of the Directors.

DR. STEWART

WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for diseases of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of these of hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio but of the Eastern and Middle States and Canada, where he has practiced.

He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling impostors, (who may perhaps a day in a place, in turn the next hundreds of miles away,) should note the above fact.

Columbus is a central location, is one of the [illegible] countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.

Being naturally inclined to Consumption, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a remedy, which under the old treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.

Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, suffer themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!

Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Catarrh cured in every case [illegible].

DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.

CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.

Cases sworn to or claims collected. He will forfeit $500 for any of the following he cannot cure:

Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 25,) Swelled Neck, St. Vitus Dance.

A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.

Office hours 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, containing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.

☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished medicine gratis.

DR. HOOFLAND'S

AND

DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,

The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,

and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.

The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of

Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption,

Confirmed Consumption.

A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.

These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.

In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and Ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,

and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. That

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in hopeless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual Disabilities are removed by their cordial and gently stimulating properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been trifled with and abused; that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the poison of disease in the blood, they

Cause sores to Heal,

and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels the liver, the nervous system, the skin glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief, and, (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They banish acne through every avenue and organ of the system, and are expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, forit takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser, containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

AYER'S

Ague Cure.

FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF

Intermittent Fever or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers; indeed for the whole Class of Diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.

No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such a remedy we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.

Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants, and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally, or daily, while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents, if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.

Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.

Do not be put off by unprincipled Dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.

So wide is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular sovereignty.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included, which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union—

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850,—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in the maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exercise of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathise with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the [illegible] the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of mere violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

HON. GRANTLEY BERKELEY, THE ENGLISH SPORTSMAN.—The New York Herald, of Saturday, noticing the arrival in that city of the Hon. Grantley Berkeley, the famous English sportsman, says:

This gentleman has visited the United States for two purposes; which may yet be called one, seeing how intimately they are connected. His first design is to proceed to the West to hunt the elk, the antelope, the buffalo and the other animals which hold undisputed possession of our extensive prairies and forests. For this purpose he has brought his hounds, and he intends to enter with spirit into the sport, so that he might find abundant material for his "Adventures," which he proposes to send to the Field, the sporting paper of the English metropolis. His next intention is to visit all the Western farms and plantations, and to witness the operations carried on upon them in regard to the care and rearing of stock. There can be no doubt the honorable gentleman will meet with a warm and generous reception from the true-hearted and sturdy sons of the West, who will gain a great deal of information from him concerning English sports, in all the branches of which he is so proficient; while on his part he will not fail to gather some useful practical lessons from the hardy American sportsmen of that beautiful country. Let the western sportsmen brighten their rifles and keep their powder dry, for the hunt will soon begin.

THREE PERSONS OVER THE FALLS.—The telegraph on Friday evening advised us of a rumor that a boat containing three persons—two men and a woman—went over Niagara Falls the day previous. The following particulars are given by the Lockport Advertiser of Friday morning:

Yesterday afternoon, about one o'clock, a man by the name of Rosseau, and a Mr. Morse and wife, started in a boat from near the head of the Hydraulic Canal at Niagara Falls, to cross over the river to Chippewa, when the boat was struck by a gale and capsized. They were observed by persons on the shore with spy-glasses, to get on the boat in safety. They were soon carried by the strong current into the rapids, and were last seen above the "Three Sisters." The wind was blowing a gale at the time, and the efforts which were commenced for their rescue could not be completed before they were hopelessly engulphed in the fatal waters of the rapids.

We learn that Rosseau was saved from a fate like this only about a year ago, and when rescued was so chilled as to be entirely helpless. He is reported by the citizens in his neighborhood to have been a smuggler by occupation. Mr. Morse was a jeweler, and resided at Chippewa.

For these particulars we are indebted to Officer Canfield, of Niagara Falls, who came down here on the late train last night.

Editorial Life—A True Picture.

Did it ever occur to you, most agreeable reader, that editorial life is not an unruffled sea? Did you ever pause in looking over a newspaper to think of the ceaseless toil that is necessary to provide for you the columns and paragraphs you so easily scan? This editorial writing—what a ceaseless tapping of man's brains it is! No matter how he feels—the paper must be out at the appointed time, and his usual contributions must fill the accustomed niche.

The limited space of a newspaper column does not allow the editor to treat any subject at large. He must not attempt an extended discussion, no matter what he writes about; but he is expected to touch on a variety of themes every week, and to just touch them—nothing more; so that his readers may not be wearied by long articles. To write a long essay or series, would sometimes be a great relief. But if he does either, ten chances to one he will hear of it. Once or twice, in a long editorial service, we have ventured to do this dangerous thing. Fortunately we heard no complaints, though we have no doubt many were uttered. Now and then, however, we have been complimented by a brother saying to us: "That was a very good article of yours in last week's paper, as far as I read; but it was so long, I was called off before I had time to finish it!"

Editorial writing is pleasant enough, and easy enough to a man accustomed to it—when he has once determined what he shall write about. But this selection of topics is not easy. For a single paper or two, any man will find subjects at hand; but when it comes to writing to the same readers year in and year out—when one calls up the subjects already presented, some briefly, others more elaborately, either by himself or by correspondents, the difficulty of selecting so as to avoid self-repetition, is quite embarrassing. As to waiting till something suggests itself—till it comes to you—that is out of the question. The respectable but ill-named boy is at your door already. He is calling for copy. You must sit down and write at once. What if half a dozen persons in the office are earnestly discussing Church matters or politics? What if you are interrupted every moment or two by some irrelevant interrogatory urged with singular indication of obliviousness of what you are about or not; you must feel your way through, like a man walking in a narrow pass during a dark night; and, having reached the end of your sheet, you may take a long breath, a adture away in search after some other subject. And there is no end to this, for as soon as you have succeeded in arranging for one number, the burden of another is upon you, from the first week in January till the last in December.

But to the writing of editorials is to be added the other aggregate of other duties. Here is correspondence well meant and full of sensible sayings. But it is badly written, perhaps badly spelled, perhaps poorly put together. You must go over it. You must dash out an unnecessary word yonder. You must be a grammarian for the writer, who either has never learned grammar, or has permitted himself to write without revision. You must, in short prepare his irregular composition for the press, and, where we cannot make out precisely what he intended to write, guess at it, and let your readers have the benefit of your guessing.

To read a newspaper for pastime is a very inviting employment. But here are twenty received by the morning's mail. You take the scissors in hand and glance over them. What a treat would these be to some people—people who have leisure to read them through. But your work is to scissorize. You are looking for scraps. Here is one, but it was in your paper last week. Here is another, but it is too sectarian. Here is a third, but it is one of last year's creation, that has lodged a while on the shores of forgetfulness, and and is now swept again on the tide of news to float until it can find another standing place.—After an hour or two of search, you gather up the result. It is your column of clippings from the exchanges! What a search for so meagre a reward.

Well, have you done? See, there is a roll of proofs. The type is set, and the foreman wishes to make up the form. Here is a letter upside down—there is a word you never saw before—here is a sentence without meaning. What are you to do? Look at every letter—read every line—mark every intended correction—and send it back to be printed after your alterations shall have been made. You must do this at once. "Delays are dangerous!" You must not take half a day for it. Drop everything you have before you, and read your proofs. The press will be waiting for you, and unless you are in time, your place will be taken by another, and your issue delayed. Happy the editor who, when his sheet is out, does not find a dozen errors that he could not find before! Thrice happy he who, besides all this, does not find many that he did not see still glaring upon him in all their deformity and provoking calmness, despite of all his care!—Baltimore U. S. Journal.

IMPERIAL ACTS OF GRACE.—Napoleon has celebrated the nineteenth anniversary of his remarkable uncle's birthday by two acts of grace. The Moniteur of August 16th contains the following Imperial decree, of the "short and sweet" order of public documents:

A full and entire amnesty is granted to all persons sentenced for political crimes or offences, or those who have been the object of any measures taken for the "public security."

Another decree proclaims that the "cautions" given, or parte the Government, to newspapers, shall be considered as never having been issued. To comprehend the value of this boon, it must be remembered that when a French newspaper publishes an article which the Government censor dislikes, it receives a caution. If this caution be thrice received, the newspaper cannot be published any longer.

The full amnesty to all political "offenders," whether criminal or only suspected, shows the reliance which Napoleon now has upon his popularity. There can be no doubt of the fact that the Italian War has given him a prestige second only to that formerly enjoyed by his uncle. If he did not feel very strong, he could not afford to run the risk of re-admitting to France—most of them into Paris—some fifteen hundred opponents of his policy, whose principles and prejudices have not been mitigated by their enforced exile in England and America, Cayenne and Algeria.

BRANDING FLOUR.—The editor of the New York Examiner has been sojourning in Rochester, where he visited one of the large flour mills, and was initiated into the mysteries of branding flour. He says: "Branning, to us poor outsiders, has been a source of a good deal of mystery. In our simplicity, we have supposed that a brand was a true indication of the place where the flour was ground, and the wheat it was made from. But this is an egregious error. 'There are tricks in all trades but ours.' Only the very best flour is labeled by the name of the mill where it is ground. Inferior flour is branded Corinthian Mill, New Mill, or some other mill that is owned by the man of the moon. All these practices are known in the Corn Exchange as well as at the mills; but to us poor consumers, who buy a barrel of flour once a quarter, it may not be uninteresting to know that all the best family flour is branded double extra superfine, with the real name of the mill and manufacturer. Genesee flour is as ubiquitous as Orange county milk, Goshen butter, or relics of the ship Constitution among the curious, or the bones of saints and pieces of the true cross in the cabinets of Romish priests. Genesee flour is for the most part made from Western or Canada wheat."

THE EMPRESS EUGENIE.—Describing the Empress Eugenie as she appeared on the fete day at Paris, an enthusiastic correspondent of the London Times says: "Never was the realization of the beautiful beheld to greater advantage. Attired in white, enveloped in clouds of rich lace, through which her soft complexion was softened even more, she appeared the most perfect realization of Imperial grace and dignity ever beheld since Mary Stuart fell beneath the murderer's axe of the infamous Elizabeth. The taste displayed in her costume was perfect—a graceful daughter of high-souled and dignified Spain, deriving her descent, too, in part from the old Celtic race—Killpatrick of Scotland—an honorable branch of the Fitz-Patricks, Princes of Ossory, in Ireland. No fantastical bonnet concealed those flowing tresses and lovely features from the admiring crowd; she selected the Spanish and old Irish costumes; a long veil of Brussels print was thrown over her head, and that calm, fair forehead was encircled with the imperial diadem, the great Sanci diamond which flashed and sparkled, as the true gem only does, as in the sun of that memorable Autumn day."

OHIO STATE NEWS.

— Senator Douglas will speak at Wooster, Wayne county, on Friday, the 16th inst.

— The Republicans of Champaign county have nominated Dr. J. J. Masson for Representative.

— Mr. Robert Reilly, formerly an opulent merchant of Cleveland, died in that city on Sunday.

— The Republicans of Washington county yesterday nominated John Haddow for Representative.

— The Republicans of Preble county, on the 3rd inst., nominated Jesse Stubbs, of Gratis, for Representative.

— Cooper's English Opera Troupe will commence an engagement at Cleveland, the 12th inst., Monday.

— "Columbus," says a traveling correspondent of the Indianapolis State Sentinel, "is a beautiful city, blessed with clean streets and good water."

— On Monday, a woman named Rebecca Quinn was arrested at Ravenna, and committed to await her trial, on a charge of forgery. It seems that the offence hardly amounts to a forgery, for the signatures to the note were written in a girlish hand, and not calculated to deceive anybody.

— Hon. Wm. Dennison and Judge R. P. Ranney, Republican and Democratic candidates for Governor, met in debate at Tiffin, yesterday. Several thousand persons were present. The debaters occupied two hours each; Mr. Dennison reserving a half hour of his time to close.

— Jacob Dennis, a farmer of Guernsey county, whose mind became so seriously impared by the effect of the frost of June last on his crops, was a few days since sent to the Lunatic Asylum at Columbus.

— The Portsmouth Tribune learns that a fire at Haverhill on Friday morning destroyed the dwelling of Mr. P. M'Coy, Postmaster, and also injured the Public school building. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

— Three prisoners of the "chain gang" escaped from the Hamilton county jail last evening, by prying back the bolt of one of the doors. They were re-taken shortly after and brought back. Wm. Neely, confined on a charge of grand larceny, who escaped during the day, was also captured.

— Arrangements have been made with the Grand Lodge of the Sons of Malta of the State of Ohio to assist the Grand Lodge of Masons in laying the corner stone of Perry's Monument, at "Put in Bay Island," on the 10th inst. It is expected that George D. Prentice, Esq., of Kentucky, G. R. I. A. of the Order, will take part in the ceremonies.

— The Chicago Press and Tribune states that over fifteen hundred business men and firms have signed the remonstrance against the removal of Isaac Cook from the office of Postmaster.—No petition ever received the signatures of so many of the business men of Chicago, irrespective of party. Several hundred citizens known to be Douglas Democrats signed it.

— The Defiance Republican says:—A great many of the farmers of this and Henry Counties are raising tobacco this season, which, it is said, yields quite abundantly. The tobacco is of a superior quality, and brings from eight to ten dollars per hundred weight. Many are raising it this year, only as an experiment, and if successful they intend, hereafter, devoting much of their time to its cultivation.

CAN A MOTHER FORGET?—Can a mother forget? Not a morning, noon, or night but she looks into the corner of the kitchen where you read Robinson Crusoe, and thinks of you as yet a boy. Mothers rarely become conscious that their children are grown out of their childhood. They think of them, write to them, as if not full fourteen years of age. They cannot forget the child. Three times a day she thinks who are absent from the table, and hopes the next year, at the farthest, she may have "just her own family there;" and if you are there, look out for the fat limb of a fried chicken, and that coffee which none but everybody's own mother can make. Did Hannah forget Samuel? A short sentence, full of household history, and running over with genuine mother-love, is tellingly beautiful: "Moreover, his mother made him a little coat, and brought it to him from year to year, when she came up with her husband to the yearly sacrifice."

A mother mourning at her first born's grave, or closing the dying eye of child after child, displays a grief whose very sacredness is sublime. But bitter, heavier than the death-stroke is the desperation of a son who rushes over a crushed heart into vices which he would hide even from the abandoned and the vile.

Napoleon once asked a lady what France needed for the education of her youth, and the short, profound reply was, "Mothers!"

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 5.—From Vera Cruz we learn that Minister McLane has returned and presented Buchanan's ultimatum to Juarez, demanding an immediate ratification of the treaty. Nothing important from the Capital. Degallado had ordered the troops in the Tampico neighborhood to march to San Louis Potosi, which is to be the general rendezvous of the Liberals. He intends attacking the capital in October. All the Pacific coast is in peaceable possession of the Liberals. Vidauri is organizing his forces at Nuevalion against the Indians and Americans. Pesquiera defeated the Indian depredators in Sonora after a severe battle.

Business at Mazatlan is good. Lepis recaptured by Revolutionists after considerable fighting. Marquez is conducting $3,000,000 to San Blas from Guadaljara for the British war ship Calipso. The government of San Blas resolved to prevent the shipment if the duties were not paid. Difficulty was apprehended. Corona left Mazatlan with fifty men to join the Liberals' forces in Jalisco and attack Marquez at Guadaljara. The Isthmus of Tehuantepec is quiet.

An English writer has recently asserted that an undue proportion of lime in the system is the cause of premature gray hair, and advises all to avoid hard water either for drinking pure or when converted into tea, coffee, or soup' because hard water is always strongly impregnated with lime. Hard water may be softened by boiling it; let it become cold, and then use it as a beverage. It is also stated that a liquid that will color the human hair black and not stain the skin, may be made by taking one part of bay rum, three parts of olive oil, and one part of good brandy, by measure. The hair must be washed with this mixture every morning, and in a short time the use of it will make the hair a beautiful black, without injuring in the least. The articles must be of the best quality, mixed in a bottle, and always shaken well before being applied.

A PIECE OF THE METEORIC ROCK.—Garritt Vanderpool, a well-known and highly respected farmer, lives seven miles from the city and one mile west of the Bethlehem Church. When at work in his barn, on the morning of the mysterious commotion heretofore referred to, and about two minutes after the noise which had attracted his attention had ceased, he heard what sounded like a small stone thrown against the side of his carriage house. On looking up he saw the object fall, and at once picked it up. It is about the size of a pigeon's egg, broken through the centre, and is partially covered with a black substance. Mr. V. says there is no stone on his farm like it, and is fully persuaded that it is a part of the exploded meteor. Others also think so. It will be examined by competent judges, and the result proper announced.—Albany Evening Journal.

POSTMASTER ARRESTED FOR VIOLATING THE POSTAL LAWS.—John L. Van Allen, postmaster and station agent at Wenona, on the Illinois Central railway, was arrested last week for a flagrant violation of the postal law. It appears that the prosecuting witness, Wm. Ebrot, owed Van Allen some $8 50 for freight, and during his absence the latter opened a letter received for him from Iowa, containing $20, paying himself the money due. He then called in his brother-in-law, showing him what he had done, and lent him the balance of the $20. The letter was registered, which led to the development. On application to the postmaster the money was refunded. Van Allen and his brother-in-law were both station agents on the Illinois Central, and had been called upon at this time to pay up all freight bills for the month. Van Allen was brought to this city and recognized in the amount of $1,000 to appear for trial.—Chicago Times Sept. 1.

☞ Napoleon invited the diplomats at Paris to attend at the Place Vendome during the great fete of the 14th, but not in "uniform," which, in court etiquette, meant that they could accept or not. It was so arranged in order to gratify the Austrian, Prussian and English ministers, who preferred to keep away. The Americans displayed a considerable number of flags for the fete, but not a single British flag was to be seen.

☞ During the reception of Ex-Gov. Seymour at Hartford, the military were ordered to drive back the crowd by a charge with the bayonet. In the pressure, one young man named Charles W. Banks, from Trumbull, Ct., was stabbed by one of the bayonets in the right side, and so seriously injured that it is thought he cannot recover. The affair creates the greatest excitement in Hartford.

☞ The Peru (Ind.) Sentinel says: Mrs. Sarah Jackson died at the residence of her son-in-law, J. M. Jackson, on Thursday last, at the age of one hundred years. The family do not know her age from a date, but from circumstances, and the declaration of the deceased, they are sure she was over one hundred years at the time of her death.

☞ In Marion county, Ga., last week, a slave of Benjamin B. Matthews stole three hundred dollars. Pursuit was commenced, and for thirty-six hours the negro was kept unceasingly on the run, fresh pursuers coming up to the chase. Just as the party gained on him he fell dead in his tracks. A large bowie knife was found in his clinched fist.

☞ The Post Office in New Haven was entered Friday night by burglars who bored through the back door. They searched through all the bags they could find, but they contained only the way mails. It is not supposed any large amount of money was taken. Some counterfeit bills which they found may lead to there detection.

☞ The ship Sir John Franklin, at Philadelphia, from Liverpool, reports having spoken, August 10, the steamship England, 150 days from Calcutta, for London, under sail, her engines being out of order. She was short of provisions, and the crew had been subsisting on one meal per day for nearly 30 days. The England had 36 passengers, most of whom were ladies and children. The Sir John Franklin supplied their wants.

☞ A number of prominent Philadelphians have addressed a letter to Ex-Senator Cooper, requesting an expression of his views relative to the expediency of insisting on a reduction of the postage rates and an increase of import duty as issues in the approaching national election. His reply is looked for with interest by dabblers in state and federal politics.

☞ The death of General Sir John Slade, Bart, G. C. B, loses to the English army its oldest living member, save one. Had he lived but a few months longer he would have completed eighty years of military service, his commission, as Cornet, in the Tenth Hussars, bearing date May 11, 1780.

☞ Near Jacksonville, Ill., on Sunday, Aug. 28, a lad named Carter, about twelve years of age, took up a gun which was sitting in the corner of the room, and playfully pointed it at his little sister, some three years old. Unfortunately the gun was loaded and the contents were discharged into her body, mangling her horribly, and killing her almost instantly.

☞ In Philadelphia, for one hundred and seventy-five years, there have been market buildings and stalls along Market street. Those last erected there were graceful in appearance, clean, light and airy, but the voice of the public has called for their removal, and so they have been scattered around the city, in clean and wholesome structures erected for the purpose.

☞ When railways were in their infancy it was supposed that they would injure the estates through which or near which they ran, and the English Cabinet Minister, Mr. Labouchere's father, received the compensation of $150,000 for an imaginary detriment of this sort. After his death, his son, finding that there was no injury to the estate from the vicinity of the railway, but the contrary, refunded the $150,000.

SAD NEWS FOR CHILLY PEOPLE.—According to the views of a distinguished astronomer, the earth is gradually increasing its distance from the Sun, and in the course of six thousand years the distance will be so great that only an eighth of the warmth we now enjoy will be communicated to the Earth from the Sun; the Earth, therefore, will be covered with eternal ice and snow, as we now see the plains of the North, where the elephant formerly lived, and where there is neither Spring nor Autumn. In this case, we recommend rheumatic and gouty people to lay in a stock of flannels and see to their drawers. Six thousand years will pass away very soon, and there is no telling how expensive flannel and "sich" will be at the time mentioned.

ARREST OF A MISSOURI JUDGE.—Judge John Watson was recently arrested at Kaytesville, Chariton county, Mo., on the charge of having been one of the party who broke open the county safe, about a year and a half ago, and robbed it of some $5,000. The grand jury of that county indicted him for grand larceny and burglary, and he was required to give bail to the amount of $2,000. This case attracts a great deal of attention, partly from the fact that the accused is a man of considerable wealth, and at the time the crime was committed was one of the judges of the County Court.

THE FIRST SMOKERS.—In Fairholt's "History of Tobacco" it is said that it was in the first week in November, 1492, that Europeans first noted the Indian custom of tobacco smoking. The two sailors sent by Columbus to explore Cuba returned to the ships of their great commander, and told this among other things new and strange. They found the natives carried with them a lighted firebrand, and puffed smoke from their mouths and noses; this their European notices led them to conclude was some mode of perfuming themselves. A more intimate acquaintance with the natives taught them that it was certain leaves of a herb rolled up in the dried leaves of the maize or Indian corn that they thus burned and inhaled the smoke. It was a novelty to the Spaniards, but it was an ancient and familiar custom with the natives.

OBJECTIONABLE LITERATURE.—The leaders and stewards of the M. E. Church at Lambertville, N. J., have "resolved, that the circulation and reading of the New York Ledger and Police Gazette is a violation of the spirit and intent of that portion of the general rule of that Church—first, the injunction to do no harm; second, doing what we know is not for the glory of God; thirdly, the reading those books which do not tend the knowledge and love of God."

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—There is no truth in the recent statement from Vera Cruz that Minister McLane had presented an ultimatum, and demanded the immediate ratification of the treaty, for it is known here that the preliminary points thereof were mutually satisfactory to both this government and that of the Constitutionalists. It was also understood that if the treaty should be ratified on this basis M'Lane himself would return it to Washington.

The main points probably are, the right of way across the northern States of Mexico from the Rio Grande to Mazatlan, and from Arizona to Gayamas, or some other outlet on the Gulf of California, the United States to have the privilege of transporting troops and munitions of war over these routes, and protect the latter in the case of Mexico's inability. To do so in consideration of these grants the United States pay $4,000,000, one half to be appropriated for the satisfaction of claims of American citizens against Mexico.

Gen. Harney has acquainted Gen. Scott with all the circumstances attending his occupation of the Island of San Juan. It appears he had not been previously specially instructed to take possession, but sent troops thither to protect the twenty-five or thirty Americans residing there, who had been included in the taxation limits by the authorities. Our boundary commissioner, Mr. Campbell, has no doubt about the island belonging to the United States, but the British Commissioner made the issue, and hence the protest of Gov. Douglass. This subject excites much interest in official and diplomatic circles.

PARIS, Wednesday, Aug. 24.—The Moniteur of this morning contains the following: The Emperor having ordered that the army be placed from a war to a peace footing, the Minister of War has given orders that from September 30,000 men should return to their homes, whose term of service expires in 1859.

BELGIUM.—The Belgian Chamber of Deputies agreed to the project for the fortification of Antwerp. The Le Nord concludes that the project will endanger the neutrality of Belgium.

ITALY.—The Modinese National Assembly, on the 30th ult., unanimously decreed the forfeiture by the house of Hapsburg Loraine of the Ducal throne. On the following day the annexation of Modina to Piedmont was unanimously decided by a vote by ballot, and Signor Farine concentrated Dictator. A loan of 5,000,000 livres was elected.

The Tuscan National Assembly, on the 20th, voted the annexation of Tuscany to Piedmont.

A defensive league has been formed of the States of Central Italy.

LONDON, Wednesday.—The Times' city article says the funds continue to show remarkable steadiness. Money is in good supply.

The business in the Railroad market was quiet but firm.

Forester's festival at the Crystal Palace attracted over 52,000 people, the greatest concourse ever assembled there.

The builders' strike in London shows no sign of adjustment. The chairmakers of Worcestershire are also on a strike, and other branches of trade give signs of discontentment.

FRANCE.—Commands had been distributed to the marshals at the head of the army of Italy. M. McMahon is appointed to the command at Lille, where a large body of troops is being concentrated.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 8.—A Committee of five hundred has been appointed by the Democratic Executive Committee to receive Mr. Douglas at the Depot, on his arrival here. Extraordinary preparations are making to give him an enthusiastic reception. Democrats from all parts of the State are flocking to this city to hear him speak.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—The steamer Arago, from Havre and Southampton on the 24th, ult. arrived here at 8 o'clock this afternoon. Her advices are anticipated. She brings 240 passengers, including Henry W. Raymond, editor of the New York Times; J. Ouleno, Sardinian Consul for the port of New York; Gen. Bernard, of New Orleans, and C. Bodolonegule, manager of the New Orleans Opera.

MOBILE, Sept. 6.—The Brooklyn left Vera Cruz on the 1st inst. The Progresso says Mr. McLane avails himself of two months' leave of absence.

HAVANA, Sept. 3.—The Bank of Havana has increased its capital one million, and is authorised to issue bills to double the amount of its capital.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6.—The Overland mail of the 15th has arrived. The town of Vallecito, Calaveras county, was destroyed by fire on the 13 h ult.

The Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Convention will be held at San Francisco on the 20th of September. All the Pacific States and Territories will be represented.

SYRACUSE, Sep. 7.—The State Convention this afternoon made the following nominations: For Secretary of State, Elias W. Leavenworth, of Onondaga county; Comptroller, Robt. Denniston, of Orange county; Attorney General, Chas. G. Myers, of St. Lawrence county; State Engineer, Orrville W. Storrs, of Allegheny county.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Some two months ago Capt. Stone made a full statement to our government of the circumstances attending the expulsion of himself and others, Americans, from Sonora. This act of Gov. Peschiera being clearly violative of the provisions of our treaty with Mexico, proper measures have been taken for the protection of U. S. citizens in that quarter, and instructions are now on the way for the purpose.

Lists of lands, embracing an area of nearly one hundred and seventy-two thousand acres, enuring to the Southern Mississippi R. R., under the act of Aug., '56, has been certified to the State of Mississippi by the Secretary of the Interior.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—An arrival at this port from Ciudad, Bolivar, August 11th, furnishes later Venezuelan advices. There was no communication with the interior, owing to the river being in possession of the factionists, and most vessels in port will leave in ballast, as no hides are to be had.

Revolution was going on in the interior—a free pardon offered to the revolutionists having been refused.

Gen. Brito, with 800 to 900 government troops, was at San Fernando in expectation of an attack upon the town. It had been well defended by artillery.

FREEPORT, Ill., Sept. 7.—The State fair is a complete success, there being not less than 25,000 people on the ground. Receipts for the day amount to $5,000. Steam plows on exhibition this forenoon, and Fawkes' machine plowed an acre in eleven minutes. The number of agricultural implements on exhibition is larger than at any previous fair. The Farmers' Convention meets this evening for the purpose of discussing matters pertaining to agriculture. Friday is the last day, when premiums amounting to $16,000 will be awarded.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The Republican State Convention to nominate candidates met at noon to-day. The hall was crowded to suffocation. Ward Hunt, of Oneida Co., was chosen temporary chairman. Wm. A. Wheeler, of Franklin Co., will be the permanent President. The Convention adjourned till this afternoon.

NORFOLK, Va., Sept. 7.—A destructive fire this morning consumed the Mechanics' Hall in this city, together with six large stores. The loss amounts to nearly $40,000. The buildings were insured. The Excelsior Minstrels, who have been performing at the hall, lost $2,000 worth of property. Beneau's Panorama of the Celestial Empire was destroyed—loss $7,000. No insurance. The stores were occupied by the following firms—Cowdery & Bros, druggists; Farcant & Co., tailors; Walters & Co., paper hangers; Pepper's Restaurant; Sandels Restaurant; Ultomon, shoe dealer. Their loss is partially insured.

ZANESVILLE, Sept. 7.—P. M.—The Fire Companies from Dayton, Urbana, Columbus, Cleveland, Newark, and other places have arrived. many more are expected to-night. The State Parade promises to be very large.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 7.—The meeting to-morrow will be immense. The disorderlies seem to have vanished, for the past two weeks there being not the slightest disturbance. Baltimore now is a model city.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 7.—The planing mill of Goodwin, Miller & Co., and two adjoining buildings on the corner of Ashley and Main street, were burned this morning—loss $30,000, insurance $19,000.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—The schooner John Elliott, Capt. John Green, capsized in the North River at the foot of 31st street, and sunk in deep water. The vessel was subsequently raised and towed to the dock at the foot of fourth street, where she was pumped out yesterday. In the cabin was found the body of a man who had taken passage from Haverstraw. The deceased has not been identified, but it is believed that he was a resident of Philadelphia. The Coroner was notified to hold an inquest.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 5.—The Railway bridge at Decatur is passable. No interruption to the Memphis and Charles Railroad.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 5.—The steamship Desota, with advices from Havana to the 2d inst., has arrived at this port.

Sugars were firm and had advanced 12-16. Exchange on New York [illegible].

Yesterday the Desota signaled the U. S. sloop-of-war Brooklyn, from Vera Cruz, and supposed to be bound to Pensacola, with Minister McLane's treaty.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 6.—The Leavenworth municipal election yesterday passed off quietly. Denman (Dem.) is thought to be re-elected by a small majority. The Republicans gained largely over the last election and probably will have a majority in the council and city offices.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The New Orleans papers, received by mail, state that the Independents, or Houston Democrats, have a majority of twenty-two on joint ballot in the new legislature recently elected.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Sept. 6.—The steamship Europa, from Liverpool, on the 27th ult., has arrived at Halifax. Her advices, which will be three days later, we expect to arrive here to-night.

ADVANTAGES OF WOMEN OVER MEN.—Some one sums up the advantages of women over men as follows: "A woman may say what she pleases to you without being knocked down for it. She can take a snooze after dinner, while her husband has to go to work. She can go forth into the streets without being invited to treat at every coffee-house. She can paint her face if it is too pale, and flour it if too red. She can stay at home in time of war, and wed if her husband is killed. She can wear corsets if too thick—other fixing, if too thin. She can eat, drink and be merry, without costing a cent. She can get divorced from her husband whenever she sees one she likes better. She can get in debt all over, until he warns the public by advertisements—not to trust her on his account any longer."

THE CHAIN GANG.—We think Toledo was among the first cities in Ohio to revive this mode of punishment. We do not mention this so much as a matter of pride, as one of fact, for whatever advantages the ball and chain may have as a "terror to evil-doers," they have no superior claim as a humanizer, or reformer of morals. There is no doubt that drunkenness, fighting, and other petty crimes are restrained in our city by this means to an extent unattainable by any other mode of punishment, and that in this way it is a public good; but we think few individuals have much hope of reformation in the man who has been degraded and humiliated by this process. There is something in the sight of the Chain Gang on a public street which is calculated to excite our commiseration for its members.—Toledo Blade.

HOG CHOLERA IN INDIANA.—The Lafayette Courier says the hog cholera is prevailing to an alarming extent in Tippecanoe county. One man has lost fifty of his best hogs within a few days by this disease, and several others have lost great numbers.

The New Harmony Advertiser says: The hog cholera is still very bad. Some three or four miles from that place, some of the farmers have lost nearly all their hogs. If it continues much longer there will not be much distilling done in that place this season, for the hogs are the principal profit in a distillery.

THE FROST IN WISCONSIN.—The Janesville Gazette says: A severe frost on Sunday night at Berlin has cut off the last hope of any considerable amount of good corn in that region. This, also, with continued drouth has wilted the potato business. "Grass on all the uplands is dead, says a Berlin paper, and the crop, as a consequence, have pretty much dried up."

The Ripon Times says that a severe frost on Friday night came off the last hope for corn and buckwheat crops in that region. It also states that fires have raged extensively during the past week, on the marshes of Green Lake and Marquette counties, and that hundreds of stacks of hay have been burned.

The Baraboo Republic says: Last Monday morning a black frost fell in that vicinity, and the cold was so intense as to freeze water to the thickness of nearly one fourth of an inch. This is the third time within seven years that frost has fallen on the 20th day of August, says our informant, who has noted them down at the time of the occurrence.

☞ The Auburn, N. Y., papers of the 9th state that a serious disturbance occurred on that day in the State Prison. Deputy Keeper S. S. Austin was assaulted in the shoe shop by a desperate convict and severely knocked on the nose with a shoemaker's hammer. Gilbert Roberts rushed to the rescue, who was struck over the head with a boot and cut severely. Assistance soon arrived and the disturbance was quelled. Seven or eight convicts were engaged in the affray.

☞ A young couple in Wheeling lately resolved on matrimony; the parents of the young lady refusing consent, an elopement was resolved upon. On Wednesday night the gay Lothario having a carriage in waiting, raised a ladder to the window of the sleeping apartment of his beloved, and ascended for the purpose of carrying off his prize; but, as the old adage has it, the course of true love does not always run smooth; as he entered the room there stood the lady's father, who applied a cowhide to the young man's shoulders soundly, and sent him home with his ardor somewhat cooled.

☞ Mrs. Elizabeth Byrnes, female physician, was arrested in New York, on Tuesday, for causing the death of Mary Vinscher through mal-practice. Mrs. B. is a native of Roxbury, and claims to be a graduate of the Boston Female Medical College.—A woman named Mary Smith was also arrested as an accomplice.

SALE OF THE EFFECTS OF A BANK.—On Monday, says the Buffalo Express, the effects of the Hollister Bank were sold at the instance of the Receiver, at the Old Court House. The face value of the effects sold was $69,500, but the total receipts amount to but $10,019. Most of the effects sold consisted of ordinary debts, judgments, &c., and only two mortgages were disposed of. J. P. Stafford's bond & mortgage for $8,000 brought $750, and became the property of Gibson T. Williams. Charles E. Clarke's bond and mortgage for $2,000 was bought by A. J. Rich for $650. 263 shares of Western Transportation stock were sold to G. Clagg, of New York, for 30 cents on the dollar.

LOSS OF THE CORN CROP IN IOWA.—The Dubuque Herald of the 3d September says:

We learn from the country that all corn not situated on very high land was completely killed by the frost on Thursday night. The corn was much of it still in the milk, and very little filled. Consequently those fields touched by the frost are almost a total loss.

Whether the frost extended over the State it is impossible to say, but we much fear that the corn crop is to be cut down a total loss.

A young gentleman was lately engaged in teaching mutes. He was explaining by signs the use and meaning of the particle "dis," and requested one of them to write on a black board a sentence showing her knowledge of the sense of the prefix. A bright little one immediately stepped forward and wrote the following: "Boys love to play, but girls to display."

The grand essentials to happiness in this life are, something to do, something to love, and something to hope for.

The violet grows low, and covers itself with its own tears, and of all flowers yields the most delicious and fragrant smell—such is humility.

Aunt Betsy has said many good things, and among the rest, that "a newspaper is like a wife, because every man should have one of his own."

A pedant said to an old farmer, he could not bear a fool. "Your mother could," replied the farmer.

Douglas in Harper.

The little squatter has turned his attention to literary pursuits, and appears in the late Harper's Magazine as the author of a fiction elaborately gotten up, but by no means original or pleasing. It is an unhappy move. Black and White are bad partners for so changeable a politician as Stephen A. Once committed to paper, in nine cases out of ten he finds himself committed to more than he contemplated.—However, we congratulate the little Squatter and his numerous friends. In abandoning the fields of politics for the walks of fiction, he only follows his natural bent.—But he must be careful not to confound the two pursuits. He must not give us as literary, his senatorial stupidity, or carry into politics the fictions more properly pertaining to literary romance.—Mac-a-cheek Press.

Here is a specimen of the mode in which the Republican papers attempt to dodge the unanswerable and irrefragable argument of Mr. Douglas, on "the dividing line between Federal and Local authority,"—and establishing beyond peradventure the true doctrine of "Popular Sovereignty in the Territories."

The Mac-a-cheek Press is flippant and pert, with some few scruples of conscience in some instances, considerable pretension to sarcasm and piquancy, and would have it generally believed, is not devoid of humor, if not wit, and taste, if not judgment. The publication in Harper for September, may be "an unhappy move," but not for Mr. Douglas; and it is a piece of arrogant knavery to refer to him as "so changeable a politician." When the great question of the right of a people to form their own constitution in their own way, was before Congress, in the case of Kansas, who were foremost in singing paeans to Mr. Douglas for his patriotism and firmness? The Republican press from Maine to California. He was regarded with favor by not a few of them, as the man for the times, to be supported by even Republicans, in resisting the threatening wave of Executive dictation. In what has he shown himself a "changeable politician?" He maintains the same opinions he maintained then. If he has matured them by contemplation and elaborately and clearly defined them, is it a symptom of variableness and vacillation? It is easy to call him "Squatter," and to prattle of "senatorial stupidities," but to prove the one, or refute the other, will be found rather beyond the calibre of even the Mac-a-cheek Press. Mr. Lincoln discovered it an undertaking beyond his capacity, although countenanced by the voluntary assistance of Federal office-holders and their parasites. The Mac-a-cheek editor, who turns a paragraph cleverly enough, would rather dispose of the subject by one of his free dashes, than to undertake the labor of pointing out in the magnificent article on government by Mr. Douglas, aught conflicting with the true theory and history of our institutions.

Negro Voters.

The free colored voters of the United States number about fifteen thousand.—They are comprised in the five New England States, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, where they vote on an equality with the white race, and in N. York where a property qualification is required. They are struggling for an increase of school and other privileges in other States, and their established journals, the Anglo-African and Frederick Douglass' Paper, betray an earnestness of purpose in the reformers which must result advantageously to their condition.—New York Evening Post, Republican.

The Post omitted to mention Ohio, where in the northern part of the State Republican judges of election despite the law which declares that none but white citizens shall vote, allow hundreds and thousands of negroes to deposit their ballots? It was by negro votes illegally taken that Salmon P. Chase was elected Governor in 1857. A majority of the white people voted for Payne, but the negroes unconstitutionally stepped in and decided the contest for Chase. Negro suffrage is one of the ends and aims desired by the Republican party.

DOUGLAS IN BALTIMORE.—The Baltimore correspondent of the Delaware (O.) Standard writes as follows:

"You have heard, I suppose, that the Democracy of Baltimore are almost unanimous for Douglas, and that such men as Robert J. Brent, Henry May, Reverdy Johnson, and S. Teakle Wallis stand in the front rank of his army of supporters. Though an "Old Joe Lane" myself, the truth must come out, whether I like it or not."

National Democracy in Virginia.

The Constitution carries slavery into and establishes it in all the Territories, and Congress is bound to protect it there.—Neither the people nor the Territorial Legislature have the power to exclude it.

The doctrine of Douglas is even more practically and effectively subversive of the constitutional rights of slaveholders than is the doctrine maintained by Mr. Seward and his adherents of the Black Republican party. Mr. Seward holds that Congress may rightfully exclude slave property from the territories. Mr. Douglas contends that this power resides in the local authorities of each territory.

No man in Virginia can be found bold enough, now, to advocate Mr. Douglas's doctrine through the press or on the hustings.—Richmond Enquirer.

This is a bonne bouche for the Republican papers, which are giving it an extensive airing. It may well be asked—What for? The Richmond Enquirer has lost its former prestige. It no more speaks for the united Democracy, or for the United States. It is the special organ of Gov. Wise, and is the mere expositor of his views. The letter which recently was unfortunately disclosed in New York explains pretty well the manner in which the Enquirer is edited and how influenced.—It belongs to the Wise family. It is the main pillar in the hopeful accomplishment of Gov. Wise's Presidential aspirations.—That it should endeavor to disparage Mr. Douglas, is not strange, after the development in Wise's letter. Nor is it more singular that it would rather fraternize with Seward than Douglas. The former attributes to Congress all powers in the territories, to be delegated by it or reserved, as in the case of slavery, which it may prohibit. How near akin to Mr. Wise's proposition, advocated by the Richmond Enquirer, that Congress is bound to protect slavery in the territories; but how much more congenial with Democratic sentiment, how congenial with our institutions, how natural and consistent the position of Mr. Douglas, that to the people of the territories belongs this power, which Congress has no right to exercise, and if it should attempt to exercise, it would be tyranny.

Notwithstanding the declaration of the Enquirer, there are more than a dozen influential papers in Virginia—among the most influential papers in the State, that boldly and freely advocate Mr. Douglas's doctrine; and among her leading politicians, are some of the most highly honored, who claim that the safety of the American Union depends upon maintaining them.

Judge Ranney Don't Please the Republicans!

In reference to the speech of Judge Ranney at Bellefontaine on Wednesday of last week, the Bellefontaine Republican says:

"But now the Judge holds that Congress has no power to prohibit slavery in any territory, and that the whole subject must be left to the people of the territories.

"He did not condescend to tell us when or how the people of the territories might exercise that power; whether before or after the adoption of a State Constitution."

He did not think it necessary to distinguish, because he thought everybody knew that after a State is organized the people are sovereign—that Congress has no right to interfere with the domestic institutions of the States; and it is the Democratic doctrine, and it was the Whig doctrine, that Congress should have no power over slavery in the territories, but the question should be left to the people themselves. That is the Douglas doctrine, and it is the true Democratic doctrine, north and south. Would the Republican have considered it condescension in Judge Ranney to have explained that the people, "after the adoption of a State Constitution," constitute a State, and are under no obligations to Congress? It is no longer a territory "after the adoption of a State Constitution." This quibbling under the merest pretext, and finding fault where there is none, show that Judge Ranney is rather distasteful to Republicans.

GEN. GEIGER.—We notice that some of the most reckless Black Republican papers, who make a trade of lying, and act upon the principle that a lie well stuck to is as good as the truth, are charging that Gen. Geiger is a whisky drinker, a regular toper, &c, &c. Nothing can be farther from the truth, as every body who knows the General will readily attest.—It is bad enough to lie politically, but to traduce and villify personal character, is something that gentlemen never do. But such conduct is characteristic of Black Republican 'decency.'—Circleville Watchman.

We take this occasion to say that there is not a more temperate gentleman in the State than Gen. Geiger, and any insinuation to the contrary is basely false. He does not carry his temperance into the zeal of fanaticism, nor desire to be considered an ascetic. Genial in character, and warm in heart, he is a gentleman of whose eloquence the Democracy are proud, and acknowledge him among their favorite champions.

REPRESENTING MAJORITIES. — Mr. Dennison, in his late speech at Tiffin, asserted that Senator Douglas and Mr. Pugh did not represent a majority of the people of Illinois and Ohio in the Senate of the United States. He said this in order to disparage their influence. In so doing he made a severe hit at Chase, who was elected Governor of Ohio twice by a minority vote. Senator Douglas does represent a majority of the people of Illinois. They elected him United States Senator on a direct issue between him and his competitor, Mr. Lincoln. We have no doubt that a large majority of the people of Ohio also indorse the general course pursued by Mr. Pugh in the Senate. The present Legislature of the State would either re-elect him or choose another man of similar views.

☞ They have had an indignation meeting in Adair county, Kentucky, and passed resolutions of censure upon the late State Commissioners, who gave the certificate of election for Congressman in that district, to Anderson, Opposition, when Chrisman, Democrat, received the [illegible]

Judge Ranney.

A Republican correspondent of the N. York Tribune, writing from Defiance, Ohio, pays the following compliment to the ability and popularity of Rufus P. Ranney the Democratic candidate for Governor:

"The Democratic candidate for Governor is Rufus P. Ranney. He is a native of Massachusetts, now forty-five years old, and has been in the State now thirty-four years. He was, some years ago, one of the law firm of Wade & Ranney,—B. F. Wade being the senior member. In 1850 he represented Trumbull county in the Constitutional Convention, where he was one of the most prominent members, and a member of the Judiciary Committee.—In 1851 he was elected Supreme Court Judge, and served his term with much ability; when, in 1856, he was defeated as a candidate for re-election. In 1857 he was appointed District Attorney for Northern Ohio, but soon resigned, and was a candidate for nomination for Governor in that year, but was defeated in the convention by the Hon. H. B. Payne. He was nominated by acclamation in the last convention. Judge Ranney is one of the leaders of Ohio Democracy; one of the best lawyers in the State, and a "suple-jack" politician. He was formerly one of the trustees of the Meadville College, and is now President of the Board of trustees of Ohio State and Union Law College at Cleveland where he has resided for two years. He will carry more votes than any other Democrat in Ohio could possibly carry who is out and out for Buchanan."

In one thing the Tribune correspondent is mistaken. Mr. Ranney is anything but a "suple-jack" politician. He is noted for his inflexibility of principle. Nor do we suppose that any of the Douglas men mean to bolt him.

We do not know in what paper the foregoing originated, but find it among the selected articles in the Newark Advocate, a paper which has given the Administration of Mr. BUCHANAN an undeviating support, and has taken no especial pains to conceal its dislike to DOUGLAS. The closing sentence of this extract contains an intimation that may as well be noticed first as last. It is gratuitous and uncalled for. Why should it be supposed that "any of the DOUGLAS men mean to bolt" Judge RANNEY? His views are those of Mr. DOUGLAS with regard to slavery in the Territories being the creature of local law, and that the power of the people in the regulation of their domestic affairs in their own way, is inherent and paramount, and requires no intercession of Congress to confer such right. There are a few persons in Ohio that endeavor to show their fealty to Democracy and the Administration by feeble demonstrations against Mr. DOUGLAS. It is well their number are few; for otherwise they might damage themselves seriously. Mr DOUGLAS is, unquestionably, the choice of Ohio, overwhelmingly the favorite against any competition. It is not, therefore, fair or just to insinuate that his friends might bolt Judge RANNEY, who is supposed to be friendly to Mr. BUCHANAN, or Mr. SAFFORD who is known to be a warm supporter of the Administration, because they occupy similar grounds, on which they stand, and the Ohio Platform of 1859 sustains the views of Mr. DOUGLAS and the Cincinnati Platform of 1856. The two platforms may be seen on the first page of this paper, and it would not be amiss for good and well-meaning Democrats to refresh their memories occasionally.

An Introduction Necessary.

Speaking of the Democratic ticket the Statesman apologized on the occasion of its nomination:

"The Democrats of the county are much better acquainted with the gentlemen who compose it, than the editor of the Statesman can be."

That's a fact, else they would not have placed on the ticket names of gentlemen whom the Statesman abused and sought to defeat. But the Statesman continues:

"His residence in the county is of so short a duration that he has not yet made the acquaintance of several of the nominated candidates, and therefore as he cannot speak from a personal knowledge of some of the candidates, it would be invidious to make special reference to any of them."

Then, as he had not made the personal acquaintance of the candidates, why disparage some of them week's before the election? Does he know Mr. Sparrow less than when resorting to low and despicable subterfuge and miserable insinuations to disparage that gentleman? Or is he less acquainted with Mr. Phillips than when as one of "our Democratic county officials," he was censured for his participation in the appointment of Mr. Sparrow as Commissioner?

Perhaps the editor of the Statesman would have it inferred that he is personally acquainted with the gentlemen nominated on the Democratic tickets in the several counties of the State, who have received his commendations, such as "this is a good ticket," or "this is a strong ticket," or some other commendatory expression.

The truth is the excuse given by the Statesman is a weak and mean equivocation, of which he has shown himself entirely capable. It is well understood here, and is laughed at as ridiculous and contemptable wherever it has been read. It was suggested the morning after it appeared, that the candidates should proceed in a body, and induce Tom Miller, the Postmaster to introduce them in form to his partner, Manypenny, the editor of the Statesman!

SPEECH OF COL. MCCOOK.—The sturdy Democracy of old Fairfield were more than pleased with the eloquent and masterly speech of Col. McCook at the meeting on Tuesday. It was replete with arguments and facts, upon State and national issues—carrying conviction to the hearts and minds of all unprejudiced hearers.

The Democracy of this county are under obligations to Col. McCook, not only for this but for past favors. He has never failed us when called upon, and there is, probably, not another man in Ohio who is listened to with greater pleasure here. If the canvass is conducted by all of our speakers in the State with the same vigor and ability, good work is being done.—Lancaster Eagle.

☞ The bears are very troublesome in Roanoke county, Va., this season, and have committed great depredations on the corn. The farmers have turned out and shot eight within three weeks.

Perry County.

The Democrats of Perry are having a warm time of it in the old county seat question, which has kept the people of the county in ferment for so many years. The Somerset Union and New Lexington Sentinel have different persons announced as the Democratic county ticket, the former with our friend T. O. Cox, Jr., for Representative, and the latter Joseph Thompson. They agree, however, upon Mr. Muse for the Senate, whom we trust may have the good fortune to avoid both Scylla and Charybdis, and successfully make port. In no part of the State, do the Democrats and their Abolition opponents exhibit more rancor toward each other, than do the Democrats of Perry among themselves, as illustrated by the columns of the Sentinel and Union. When the bill was subjected to close scrutiny in the Legislature, at the last session, we gave the matter our earnest attention. There could not have been a more persistent effort made, than Dr. Vanatta's, to defeat the measure, which was to give Somerset one more chance to recover her lost laurels from her rival.—He quarreled with some of his best friends, and became very indignant because in the exercise of their unbiassed judgment, they were convinced that in a spirit of justice, Somerset was entitled to a further trial. At this distance, we do not pretend to offer advice, for it is a domestic question with which we have nothing to do; and in which we hope to see both parties act fairly and squarely, that the question may be determined. Nothing is more perplexing than one of these county questions; and that in Perry is an old and troublesome customer; and while our sympathies are with Somerset and T. B. Cox, Jr., we do hope the contention will cease after the present struggle.

A Disinterested Patriot.

Colonel Schouler, formerly editor of those very interesting papers, the Gazette of Cincinnati, and Journal of Columbus, has recently published an article in the paper with which he is now connected in Boston, saying:

"In the next Presidential election we are for winning. Victory is, in our judgment, the great end to be gained. * * * What we want is possession of the Government."

Yes, that's it. The Republican party "want possession of the government."—That is their sole end and aim. The means, whatever they may be, must be used—we want possession of the government—we are for winning. Promise largely, no matter what, but promise—any thing to get votes—"we are for winning—we want "possession of the government."

And should they get "possession of the government," what then? Very naturally, anarchy and confusion would ensue, and rascality would reign. They merely "want possession of the government," for what? To impress upon it their crude and ill-defined and heterogeneous notions, that, made for one meridian, will suit no other.

The confession must have done Shouler's soul good, in lifting so vast a weight from his very much attenuated conscience. We hope he breathes more freely. But of this he may be assured. The people are not going to confide the government to any such hands, to tinker with and destroy its delicate machinery under the plea of mending matters. They have no objection to Massachusetts setting up a nigger for Governor, and electing him too, but are content that Massachusetts should have the sole enjoyment of so divine a blessing.

A VOICE FROM TENNESSEE FOR DOUGLAS.—The East Tennessee Democrat, a paper of large circulation and influence in that division of the State, has taken ground in favor of the nomination of Mr. Douglas for President. It says:

"There are some papers claiming to be Democratic that profess a holy horror for Judge Douglas. If a Democratic editor, in the exercise of his right as an American freeman, advocates or even seems to advocate the nomination of Judge Douglas, these papers commence talking about treason and all such scare-crow epithets. They charge those papers that seem to favor Douglas with attempting to force him upon the party.

"Now, we want to know from these wise expounders of Democracy if we have not as much right to be in favor of Judge Douglas as they have to be in favor of any body else? If it is our opinion that he should be nominated, have we not a right to express that opinion without being charged with an attempt to force him upon the party? We have just as much right to advocate the nomination of Judge Douglas as they have to advocate the nomination of any body for any political office. The Avalanche talks about us lavishing 'disgusting praise' upon Douglas. It has lavished some of the most disgusting praise we ever saw or heard upon men who are mere pigmies compared to Judge Douglas. We have a perfect right to be in favor of Judge Douglas. We are for his nomination, and expect to be until next June."

Although such articles are daily appearing in the Southern papers, the Republicans insist that nobody in the South is for Douglas.

SENATOR DOUGLAS IN COLUMBUS.—In company with some thirty or more citizens of this city and county, we went to Columbus on Wednesday, to hear a speech by that great champion of Democracy and man of the people, Stephen A. Douglas. We have neither time nor space this week to give a synopsis of his speech, but will endeavor to do so hereafter.

It cannot be otherwise than highly gratifying to Mr. Douglas, and to all his friends, to witness the enthusiastic reception given him by the people wherever he goes. There were hundreds of people in Columbus on Wednesday who had traveled tens, and even hundreds of miles, to see and to shake by the hand their favorite champion of the rights and unrestricted liberties of the people.

He spoke a little more than an hour and a half in the afternoon, on the east terrace of the Capitol, to a vast multitude of people, who evinced their satisfaction by many hearty plaudits.

From Columbus Judge Douglas went to Cincinnati, where he had an appointment to speak on last evening.—Circleville Watchman.

☞ Capt. James H. Roberts, of Parkersburg, Va., was thrown from a buggy near that place, on Saturday, and dangerously injured His recovery is said to be doubtful.

Hon. Stephen A. Douglas in Cincinnati.

We publish to-day a portion of the speech of Mr. Douglas, at Cincinnati on Friday last. It is similar to the one delivered here, in sentiment and purpose. It is impregable to the assault of the adversaries of true Democracy. We shall give the conclusion in the next number of our paper

FELLOW-CITIZENS OF CINCINNATI:

There seems to be a fatality accompanying my attempts to address you on the great political topics of the day. Four years ago when I came here for the purpose of addressing you, I was attacked with a disease of the throat, which deprived me of the opportunity of being heard, and confined me to my room for many months. While on my way here yesterday I had a recurrence of the same attack which rendered it impossible for me to comply with my engagement to address you last night, and I fear I will not be able to address you this evening in a way satisfactory to you or myself; but trust that if you indulge me for a few moments until we shall get fairly into the subject that my voice will return, so that I shall be able to be heard even to the extremities of this immense crowd.

I desire to say, in the first place, that it is no part of my present purpose to discuss any question appertaining to the internal policy or domestic affairs of the State of Ohio. So far as the topics that are now pending before the country affect your internal affairs, I choose to leave them to those who are directly interested in them; but there are certain great principles of universal application, affecting the people of the entire country, in which we are all alike interested, and which can be advocated in Cincinnati as well as in Louisville—in the free States as well as in the slaveholding States. So long as we live under a Constitution, which is the paramount law of the entire Republic, any political creed is radically wrong which cannot be proclaimed in the same form wherever the American flag waves or the Constitution rules. (Cheers.) You will permit me to remark, also, that the Democratic party is the only political organization in this country which can preserve the peace, the harmony, the fraternity of this glorious Union. (Renewed cheering.) There ever has been—there ever will be—two parties in this country: the one is founded on the great fundamental principle of self-government, which underlies all our institutions; the other is the antagonism of the Democratic party.

The history of the Democratic party is the history of this Republic; the record of the Democratic achievements contains a list of all those glorious measures which have characterized the unparalleled growth and development of this Republic. The opposition party to the Democracy at some periods of our history has been known by the one name, at another by another, but still its cardinal features are opposition to the Democratic organization and principles. In the Northern States, at this time, this opposition party is known as the Republican party; in the Southern States it does not assume that name, but sympathizes with all the Republicans in all their implacable hostilities to the Democratic party. The great question which separates the Democratic party from the Opposition party at the present time, involves the slavery question; the Opposition party contending that the slavery question is a Federal question to be determined and controlled by Federal authority, and the Democratic party holding that the slavery question is a local question, a State question, depending on local authority, and to be determined by the people interested in the several States and Territories of this Union.

According to the platform of the Republican party, adopted at Philadelphia in 1856, it is affirmed that Congress has the power and duty to prohibit slavery in the Territories of the United States, and they assert the sovereign power of Congress over the Territories for their government. The doctrine of the sovereign power of the General Government over the Territories or colonies is not new, nor is it advanced by the Republicans of the present day for the first time. The same doctrine was asserted by the King and Parliament of Great Britain over the American Colonies before the Revolution. You will all recollect that the great Webster said, and many others have repeated the remark, that the American Revolution was fought against a preamble—that preamble to an act of Parliament declaring that the British Parliament had the power and the right to bind the American Colonies in all cases whatever. To that preamble the Colonies replied, denying the right of Parliament to interfere with their local and domestic concerns. When the American colonies assembled at Philadelphia, in 1774, for the first time they proceeded to assert a bill of rights for the Colonies. In that bill of rights, they acknowledged and conceded to Parliament the right to pass all laws regulating commerce and touching those matters which were imperial not colonial. But on the other hand they asserted that these Colonies possessed the sole and exclusive power of legislation in their respective provincial Legislatures, in all cases of taxation and internal policy. Thus, you will find the Tories of the Revolution asserted the very doctrine of that day contended for by the Republicans of this day; that Congress, or Parliament, have sovereign power over the Colonies or Territories for their Government. Our fathers of the Revolution resisted that claim of parliamentary sovereignty over the colonies with blood, and with their lives, during the Revolutionary War; and the Democratic party of this day are prepared to resist, by all constitutional means, this claim of the Republican party to exercise sovereign power over the Colonies or Territories of the United States. (Cheers.)

If any person will trace the history of this question, he will find that the Democratic party to-day stands precisely where the Whigs of the Revolution stood, and that the opponents of the Democracy advocate the same principles that were contended for by the British Parliament and the Tories of the Revolution. I do not use these terms in any offensive sense. I do not impeach the patriotism, nor impugn the motives of those who advocate this doctrine of the right of Congress to bind the Territories in all cases whatever. I simply assert that their claim of sovereignty over the Territories is the precise claim against which all the battles of the Revolution were fought, when that claim was urged by the British Parliament over the American Colonies. The Republicans declare in their platform that in the exercise of this sovereign power over the Territories, it is the duty of Congress to prohibit slavery, wherever it may be found, in all the Territories of the United States. The Southern Opposition party on the other hand assert the sovereign power of Congress over the slavery question, and demand that it shall be exercised for the protection and maintainance of slavery in all the Territories of the United States.

Thus you find that the Southern Opposition party advocate the same principle—that of Congressional intervention on the subject of slavery, and differ only as to the application of that principle. The Northern Interventionists demand that the power of the Federal Government shall be exercised to destroy and prohibit slavery everywhere in the Territories; the Southern Interventionists demand that the power of the Federal Government shall be exerted to protect and maintain slavery in the Territories. On the other hand, the Democratic party stand firmly by the principle of non-intervention by Congress with slavery anywhere, and popular sovereignty in the States and Territories alike. (Tremendous cheering.) The Democratic principle on the subject was never more clearly defined than in the letter of Mr. Buchanan accepting the Cincinnati nomination in 1856. (Continued cheering.) In the letter of acceptance as you will find it represented in the banner over your heads, (pointing to a large banner suspended across the street,) Mr. Buchanan declared that the principles of the Nebraska bill was as ancient as free government itself, and asserted that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, should decide for themselves whether slavery should or should not exist within their limits. I stand here to-night defending that great principle of Popular Sovereignty and self-government in the precise language of James Buchanan in his letter of acceptance. (Applause.)

The Democratic party are a unit in the assertion of the principles of the Cincinnati Platform. Let us stand by that platform as its reads and as it was expounded in the canvass of 1856, and explained by Mr. Buchanan in his letter of acceptance. The Cincinnati Platform is as good a platform as any Democrat has a right to demand. Let us stand firmly upon it as it exists, without the addition of a single plank or the removal of a single pillar. (Applause.) Standing upon that platform the Democratic party asserts that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, have a right to decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits. The enemies of the Democratic party, North and South, deny this doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty. The Southern Interventionists demand intervention by Congress for the protection and maintainance of slavery; the interventionists of the North demand the interference of Congress for the destruction and prohibition of slavery. The Democracy everywhere deny the right of Congress to interfere, one way or the other, for or against slavery; but assert that the people themselves shall decide whether they will or will not have slavery within their limits.

These different positions of the Democratic party and our opponents are not merely idle, speculative, theoretical questions.—They are practical issues presented to the people this day for settlement. Already has New Mexico on the one hand, and Kansas on the other, presented a case for Congressional intervention. You will remember that several years after the passage of the organization of the Territory of New Mexico, the Legislature refused to pass a slave code, for the protection of slave property in the Territory. But during the last year the Territorial Legislature of New Mexico passed a slave code, protecting and maintaining slavery in the Territories as a domestic institution, and punishing all offenses against slave property. The Republican party stands pledged by their platform to repeal the slave code which the people of New Mexico, have adopted, and to abolish slavery where the people have declared that they want it. On the other hand, the people of Kansas Territory, through their first Legislature, passed a law protecting slavery in that Territory; but on the 9th of February 1858, the Territorial Legislature of Kansas repealed their slave code, abolished all the remedies for the protection of slave property, and withdrew from the Courts any jurisdiction over the subject. By this unfriendly legislation on the part of Kansas, slavery to-day is excluded from that Territory. Now the Southern Opposition to the Democratic party tell you that Congress must interfere, and maintain and protect slavery in Kansas, against the wishes of the people and in defiance of the local law, while the Northern Opposition called the Republican party, demand that Congress shall deprive the people of New Mexico of slavery, and abolish the slave code against the wishes of the people, and in violation of the local law. To both of these doctrines the Democratic party maintains a strong, inflexible and irresistible opposition. (Cheers.) We assert that if the people of New Mexico want slavery they have a right to it. (Cheers.) We assert that if they want a slave code they have a right to pass it. We assert that they having passed such a code thro' their Legislature, it must and shall stand the law of the land until they repeal it themselves, and in reference to Kansas, the Democratic party also assert that if the people of Kansas do not want slavery it shall not be forced on them. We assert that if Kansas does not want a slave code, Congress shall never compel her to have it, (cheers;) that if the people of Kansas prefer free institutions, they have a right to them, and that the Southern Opposition, or the Northern Opposition, or any other Opposition, shall not overrule the wishes of the people. (Applause.)

Now, if the Opposition to the Democratic party, either North or South, are sincere in their professions, they are compelled at the next session of Congress to bring forward a law to carry out their doctrines in the Territories. If Mr. Seward be an honest man, he must bring in a bill to abolish slavery and repeal the slave code of New Mexico. If the Southern Opposition members elected in Kentucky and other Southern States, be honest men when they assert that it is the duty of Congress to protect slavery in the Territories against the wishes of the people, then they are bound to bring in laws to establish and maintain slavery in Kansas, in opposition to the wishes of the people. Hence I say the question of non-intervention of Congress with the domestic concerns of the Territories can be no longer postponed. That issue must be met.—Either the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty must be acquiesced in and carried out in good faith, or else Congress must interfere for slavery or against slavery, in opposition to the wishes of the people in each locality. Now let me ask you how you can ever have peace on the slavery question so long as Congress is allowed to interfere with it? Any man who advocates Congressional intervention is an enemy to the peace and harmony of the States of the Union.

DOES THE WIFE OWN HER HUSBAND?—The Richmond Enquirer, speaking of the local fashions in that city, says:

The ate Parisian fashion of ladies going dressed with the utmost plainness to church, has brought out in America a similar desire and at present modest dresses, of the Quaker grades of colors, with plain, full skirts, without flounces, are becoming the bon ton of the day. These "couleurs sean," as the French call them are elegant in their simplicity, and will look far more tasteful and lady-like than the brilliant notions vulgar taste loves to spread itself in.

For concerts and operas this winter, extensive show in dress will be carried out to correspond with the newly-imported striped opera cloaks of bright green, scarlet, purple, gold color, &c. Lord help the man who is owned by a tip-top fashionable wife.

[From the Cincinnati Enquirer.]

WELCOME TO STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS.

BY EDWARD CRAFTS?

Ring out! ring out the welcome shout,
To greet the true and brave;
And let from every house-top high
Our country's banner wave.

For now comes he whose single thought
Through years of wild unrest
Has been to see that banner float.
With proud and stainless crest.

In tricksters' arts, in [illegible] parts,
Altho unlearned is he;
And from corruption's loathsome taint
His manly soul is free.

His country's weal, his only aim,
And truth his only guide,
The People own him—North and South—
With open, [illegible] pride.

All hail! all hail! let every gale
Bear out the welcome roar;
And let our loud hosannas now
Float o'er Ohio's shore,

That all our brethern South may know,
That we as well as they,
With loyal hearts can fitly greet
The Jackson of to-day.

The Way Judge Ranney Answered Dennison.

In his speech at Dayton, Judge Ranney, the Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, made the following answers to his competitor's (Mr. Dennison's) questions on current political matters:

Q. Do you deny or affirm the constitutional power of the Federal Legislature to prohibit slavery in the Territories?

A. I deny the constitutional power of the Federal Legislature to prohibit slavery in the Territories.

Q. Do you deny or affirm the rights of slave-holders to take slaves into the Territories and hold them there as property?

A. Without the protection of a Territorial law, I deny it.

Q. Do you deny or affirm that a Territorial Legislature may exclude slavery by law; that is, prohibit by law the bringing of persons into the Territories, to be held as slaves?

A. I say that the Territorial law has power over it.

Q. Do you affirm or deny the right of slave-holders in a Territory to demand compensation, in the full value of their slaves, when the Territory comes into the Union as a free State?

A. I deny them the first red cent.

Q. Are you for or against the repeal of the Fugitive-Slave Act of 1850?

A. I am against it?

Q. Do you approve or disapprove the act of 1857 "to prevent slaveholding in Ohio."

A. Now, here you have got me, for I never read it, and did not know till now that one had been passed.

Q. Do you approve of the Cincinnati Police Bill?

A. I don't know any thing about it.

Judge Ranney said he could not give a categorical answer to the Sub-Treasury queries, because the queries were somewhat complex. He was for the Sub-Treasury Law, was in favor of good big bonds, and wouldn't advise Treasurers to take depreciated money.

That last was a poser, when it is remembered that Chase advised Breslin to deposit the State funds in certain rotten concerns, by which a loss of thousands was incurred for which there is no redress.

One of the happiest rejoinders of the campaign was, when Mr. Dennison said he was born of the people, Judge Ranney said that he had not been of such miscellaneous parentage.

SENATOR DOUGLAS' MANIFESTO IN HARPER'S MAGAZINE.—The St. Louis Republican in noticing the article of Judge Douglas, published in Harper's Magazine, says:

As explanatory of the theory of our form of Government, and of American liberty, it is a valuable contribution to the political literature of the country. In this particular, it ranks, for the profoundness, sagacity and clearness of its views, with the best expositions of that theory from the pens of the framers and ablest defenders of the Constitution. After a paper so luminous and able as this it will be idle to sneer at Senator Douglas as a mere party politician and stump orator. His place is among the most profound constitutional lawyers and enlightened statesmen the country has ever produced.

As a defense of a great principle, and of his own course in its advocacy, it must have its effect upon all thinkers among us, as well as on the popular mind. The public at large will judge how successfully he has vindicated his course against much calumny; while those who take time to discriminate, will see in it evidence of intellectual power, and of sagacious foresight and enlightened wisdom, for which Mr. Douglas has heretofore had so little credit.

Mr. Douglas' political opponents are evidently aware of the power displayed in this well-written and able paper. Their journals are trying to weaken its force and impair its credit, by creating side issues connected with the Presidential election, hoping thereby to confound this exposition with a mere electioneering handbill. That they will succeed in so natural, but so discreditable an aim, we do not believe.

There is a portion of the politicians of the country—of the South more particularly—to whom this paper will be very distasteful. It conflicts with their plan for the next Presidential campaign. Not that they care so much about the principle involved in this question, for it is so near an abstraction that, a year or two hence, nobody will think of paying any attention to it, so far as the slave States are concerned; but they have entered for the next Presidential race on this idea, and they do not like to forego such an element in the struggle. Judge Douglas asks to be heard by the nation; and in the form in which he has appeared to the people, he will be heard, in the South as well as in the North and the center.

EX-SENATOR SOULE, OF LOUISIANA, AND JUDGE DOUGLAS.—The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican had a conversation with Ex-Senator Soule, of Louisiana, who lately passed through that city on his way to New York. He states that Mr. Soule, who is one of the most brilliant men in the South, and one of the leaders of the "Southern-rights" party, highly approves of Senator Douglas's manifesto as published by the Harpers, and says it will be indorsed by the National Democracy of the South. He doubts not the "Little Giant" will receive the Charleston nomination upon the Cincinnati Platform re-affirmed.

Isaac E. Morse, formerly a member of the House from Louisiana, entertains the same views. Douglas is very strong in that State. We were assured lately, by the editor of one of the leading Democratic papers in Louisiana, that there was no doubt its delegates to Charleston would be ardent friends of Judge Douglas, and would labor for his Presidential nomination.

Restaurants and Eating Houses.

ST. PAUL'S.—This famous hotel, in which our distinguished fellow-citizen, P. P. Rice, realized a fortune, is the white cottage ornee looking building, which stands invitingly opposite the west end of the Railroad depot. It is now delightfully kept by Jacob Haring and Anthony Wigand, the latter of whom was the attentive superintendent of the saloon under the former management. The salle a manger is under the especial care of "Jake Haring," whose experience and attention leave nothing to be wished for by his guests.—In the way of accommodations, travellers who miss connections, or are delayed at the depot, will always find the "St. Paul's" a capital house, and its proprietors liberal and capital hosts.

CAPITOL RESTAURANT.—This saloon, underneath the Goodale House, and which has prospered under the judicious and popular management of John O'Hara, and enjoys an enviable reputation, continues to furnish meals at all hours, save the "wee sma" ones, served up in the handsomest manner. Its popularity is well merited, for in addition to the excellence of the viands and fluids, and the unexceptionable cuisine, John is one of the manliest and best fellows that ever came from Cork or Tipperary, with a heart as big as an ox, and a proper appreciation of his visitors. Subterranean in front, where the votaries of "the rosy god" do their devoir, the eating-room is on the ground floor, spacious and airy in summer and well warmed in winter-time. The "Capitol" is deservedly a favorite resort, excellent though unostentatious in all of its appointments; and under John O'Hara's judicious and popular management, it will long continue so.

CHARLEY WAGNER'S.—Is "still the same," contiguous to the Post Office and very convenient. Combining the varieties and luxuries of the season, with every thing the market affords; oysters, fish, game of all descriptions, clams, lobsters, crabs, &c., it presents a market of the most inviting aspect in itself. The shelves are laden with provisions, sauces and condiments; delicious wines, cordials and wig-wags are struggling to look through suspiciously dark bottles, the finest flavored cigars are in his show case. In fine, Charley's is a "curiosity shop," possessing an assortment that would astonish Gulliver himself; and is sufficient to draw customers, in addition to those Harry drew before. The dining hall is opened for the season, and none who have partaken of the cheer to be found there, will be backward in repeating their visits. The Princess Bay shell oysters to be had there now are delicious and cannot be excelled. By the way, Charley has a stand at the County Fair Grounds. Be sure and give him a call; unless you are in the city, at lunch time, when you may as well look in at his table in the city.

DR.—GIVE US A BOX.—We cut the following from the Newark (O.) Times, and if our friend Coggswell is not already a millionaire he will soon be one:—

"DR. COGGSWELL'S SALT.—We are happy to find that the Antiphlogistic is gaining rapidly a wide spread reputation. One thousand Agents are now employed, and the demand for the Salt increasing.—D. C. Taylor & Co., are general agents for Penn., and six of the adjoining States.—They state that there is now a deeper interest felt in this discovery than at any previous time, in consequence of publishing several important testimonials in cases of rheumatism, neuralgia and fits. So sanguine of success is Mr. Taylor, that he has induced his father (a wealthy gentleman) to accept the agency of 6 southern States, and he has entered upon the work in good earnest, strong in the faith of its efficacy.

"It equalizes the fluids of the body—the want of an equilibrium being the whole cause of inflammation.—Boston Express.

Our neighbors of the Express are quite liberal in voluntarily copying the above editorial article, and then asking for a box of the medicine in payment. Meeting Dr. C. last evening, we told him we should go in for a Chronic Package, instead of a single box. "Well," said he, "you and all other publishers inserting that kind notice with your own remarks (sending copy) shall receive a Chronic Package, (post-paid.)" We can assure the Press that the doctor is as prompt as he is liberal—and we are happy to add that he is daily flooded with orders by mail and express for his popular Medical Salt. Success attend him.—Boston News and Mirror.

We, too, have speculated in Dr. Coggswell's "Salt," much to our satisfaction, and can bear testimony to his promptness and the efficacy of his wonderful medicine, which finds its way through the Post Office, as it does through the human system. If it could purify the one as it equalizes the other, there would not be so many complaints of the mails.

DOUGLAS IN TENNESSEE—A DEMONSTRATION.—A letter to the St. Louis Republican from West Tennessee says:

"There was an immense concourse assembled at Colliersville on Saturday last, where Governor Jones and others congratulated the people on the triumph of Democracy in Tennessee. At the conclusion of the Governor's speech, a number of garlanded school girls came upon the stand and presented him a beautiful banner, on which was inscribed: "Douglas and Cuba—1860!" If any thing could attest the feeling of the people, nothing was more calculated to do this than the outburst of applause which attended this unexpected demonstration. Douglas has his stronghold here in Tennessee, and from this point his name and influence will pervade the entire South. The people are for him, whatever may be the course of the politicians. There are now five papers in this Congressional District openly proclaiming their preference for Douglas. The Ledger of this city carries his name at its masthead; the Appeal is decidedly an anti-slave-code journal; the Quid Nunc is outspoken for Douglas, as the only man who can beat Crittenden, or Bell, or Seward in 1860. The Somerville Democrat adopts the Quid Nunc's editorial, and still another Douglas paper is soon to appear in Jackson, Tennessee."

☞ The Rochester papers have an advertisement stated that Shields, "the celebrated and world renowned jumper," will on Friday afternoon, Sept. 16th, leap from the banks of Niagara river, at the Falls, off a scaffold, a distance of 90 feet, into the river below, where the current runs at the rate of 10 miles an hour, and then swim to the shore without any assistance whatever.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1859.

Terrible Shooting Affray.

The Memphis Enquirer is informed, by a passenger on the J. H. Dickey which arrived at that place on the 5th inst., from St. Louis, of a terrible tragedy which was enacted on the Sunday before, at a place called Compromise. As the Dickey landed at Compromise, the Postmaster of the place, Mr. Sparr, approached the mail agent, and said to him: "We have had some bloody times here of late, and we have to go prepared," at the same time throwing back his coat and exhibiting a revolver. "Why?" says the agent. "Because our country is infested by a lot of thieves, such as this man," pointing to a man close by, named Shultz, who was the only one at the levee previous to the landing of the Dickey, beside the Postmaster. Shultz then remarked that he was almost infamous liar, and destitute of every principle of a gentleman. Thereupon the Postmaster placed his hand on his pistol, as if in the act of drawing it, when Shultz shot Mr. Sparr in the left side of his abdomen.

Shultz then retreated at a rapid pace about thirty feet, when Sparr fired four shots at him in rapid succession, but without effect. Sparr then took deliberate aim at him across a stump, but his pistol missed. Shultz immediately rushed back at Sparr and shot him twice more through his body. Then they had a hand-to-hand encounter, Schultz falling under, and Sparr pounding him about the head with his pistol. Prestince, a third party, came up with a double barrel shot gun to shoot Shultz through the head, but through the advice of the agent and others he did not.

Sparr soon became so weak that Shultz threw him off, and on his (Shultz) rising he was struck a powerful blow over the head with the gun, which appeared to craze him, and he instantly ran into the river up to his shoulders, and on his looking back and seeing the gun leveled at him, he dodged his head under the water, holding it there as long as he could without strangling, and on his looking up and seeing the gun pointing at him he held it again under water, and this process was repeated till he drowned. The Postmaster was alive when the informant left, but it was thought he could not recover.

From Arizona.—A correspondent of the New York Times writing from Tubac, Arizona, under date of Aug. 16th says:

Our Territory is yet suffering from Apache depredations. Some days since they met an American some miles from the line in Sonora, and stripped him of everything he had. A few nights later they came to the ranch of the Sonora Exploring and Mining Company, shot one Mexican and stealing two mules. The Mexican was sleeping in the door of a tent. The Indians were fired upon, but as the night was dark, none were hit. It was impossible for them to steal any of the Company's animals, as they are kept corralled and strictly guarded. Since the almost total disregard of the treaty, the Director has no confidence in their honesty, and now depends entirely on the resources of the Company, which is ample for the protection of their animals. One of the Apache chiefs lately said "the treaty was like smoke, no strength."

Yesterday some Mexicans in the employment of the Santa Rita Company, waylaid and murdered John Wrightson, a brother of the Superintendent. Mr. W. occupied the old mission of Tumacacori. Some time near dark a Mexican reported several animals missing, and induced Mr. W. to go out after them. This Mexican, with two others, followed him into a thicket of mesquite and killed him with lances, robbing the body and running off three or four horses, one of them the one on which Mr. Wrightson was mounted.

Capt. Stone's party are yet inactive on the Sonoita, anxiously waiting the arrival of intelligence from Capt. Stone, who is now in Washington. The prospects of "right of way" from the Gulf gives new impetus to business. If the negotiation is successful, it will be the making of this country. Mines now of no value will be profitably worked, and the profits of those now worked will be nearly double. It gives security to travel in Sonora, and, so far as the interests of this country are concerned, be better than annexation. We then get the transit without being obliged to take the people.

Dealings with the Dead.—A writer in the Albany Statesman, discussing the subject of memorial tombs, makes brief allusion to two specimens of interment he has visited, each having its own peculiarities:

One is the grave of St. Carlo Borromeo, beneath the marble temple of Milan. This venerated and popular archbishop of the sixteenth century, to whom Milan owes, among other things, the completion of its Duomo, was virtually mummified; he was then clothed with sumptuous archiepiscopal attire; the mitre was placed on his skinny scalp; the crosier in his withered gripe; a splendid ring upon his shrivelled fingers; and the whole was enclosed in a coffin of transparent chrystal. Whosoever will now pay a few francs for the sight, may have an opportunity of inspecting at leisure this lesson on the vanity of human greatness.

In contrast to this I may mention the curious practice of the Capuchin friars, who boil their dead in some strong antiseptic, bake them in an oven, then clothe them in a long serge gown, confined with a girdle of ropes, and having placed their well thumbed rosary on the withered fingers, arrange them in the open niches of a subterranean chapel. In one of the Capuchin monasteries in Malta there is a fine collection of these semi-cooked individuals. After a year or two they become unable to stand as they were at first placed; then, for a time, they are suspended, and, finally, in ghastly submission, they are doubled together and laid in their rags to moulder into dust.

A Fall of One Hundred and Twenty Feet from a Balloon.—The London Times, reports that on the 15th ult., a man named Hall ascended in a balloon from Newcastle-on-the Tyne. In about twenty-five minutes the balloon descended in the neighborhood of Bolden, about seven miles from Newcastle, and fell in a clover field. The grappling irons, however, did not keep hold of the ground, and some of the ballast having upset, the balloon suddenly rose again, when Mr. Hall, who was about to alight from the car at the time the balloon rose, and whose feet caught in the ropes, was whirled suddenly into the air. For a moment he hung with his head downwards, when the rope got disentangled, and he fell a distance, it is computed, of 120 feet. A farmer and son who were in a field close by came to his assistance, and he was found to be sensible, but he soon after became unconscious. He was removed to Scots-house, where he was immediately attended by a surgeon; and though he fell the fearful distance mentioned, there are some hopes that he will recover. After Mr. Hall was thrown out, the balloon ascended to a great height, and was last seen drifting out to the German Ocean. A little dog belonging to the aeronaut was taken up in the car.

The Productive Power of the Country.—If a man had commenced to measure grain fifteen hundred years before the making of Adam, and had worked constantly until this time, measuring a bushel a minute and working ten hours a day, he would only have measured the grain production of this country for the present year. If we the other hand the product of grain of this country for two years were piled into a column, of cubic feet, it would reach to the moon. Again, if we subdivide our grain product for one year into grains we would have 750,000,000,000,000—a number too great for the mind to comprehend, but seemingly only sufficient for our well-fed people. So much for the figures of our grain product!

The coal consumed in Manchester, England, and its environs, for motive steam power, is 40,000 per day, and is equal in power to 1,200,000 horses. The transatlantic steamers consume 700,000 tons per year, and the manufacture of gas 10,000,000 tons per year. It is estimated that England alone could furnish coal enough for the consumption of the whole of Europe for 4,000 years. Large as England's supply of coal is, that of the United States is much larger, so that the world is not likely to want for fuel, even if all the wood be consumed.

A profane country paper, alluding to the fact that Dan Sickles has decided to decline an invitation to himself and Mrs. Sickles to visit the Hon. Gerritt Smith, rudely remarks that Dan is right. Now, why? "Because," quoth the country paper, "Gerritt, though a terrible Abolitionist, is a much finer looking fellow than ever Phil. Key was." What a shocking man that editor must be!

Two servant girls in New York, on Sunday last, were burned to death by camphene. One attempted to light a lamp while the wick was ignited and the other to light a fire by pouring fluid on the fuel.

The Island of Bermuda is fast becoming a vast market garden for the city of New York. The export of potatoes for the last season to the city shows an increase of nine thousand bushels. The exportation of onions has reached over eight hundred thousand pounds; while that of tomatoes amounted to four thousand five hundred and ninety-two boxes. More than sixty vessels were engaged in carrying the above mentioned produce.

Advices from Jamaica of the 15th ult state that reinforcements to the troops on the island have been asked for from the Home Government, for the protection of the northern part of the island against the recurrence of negro riots.

The Montreal Herald thinks the Governor General of Canada is about to take his leave of the province. Lady Head postponed her usual reception, it was understood, in view of the anticipation leave taking.

The Canada papers are discussing the question of the separation of Upper and Lower Canada. The Canadien and Gazette de Sorel favor disunion. The Chronicle opposes it, and the Globe advises careful consideration of the question.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

Sackville, N. B., Sept. 8.—The news from the Peace Conference consists mainly of rumors, which state that some progress has been made, and it was probable that a successful conclusion would be arrived at early in September.

Sardinia refuses to accept even provincially the annexation of the Duchies without consulting the powers, particularly France. The Italians still maintain a firm attitude in relation to their national independence.

A telegram dated Berne, Aug. 24th, says that the French and Austrian plenipotentiary have regulated the settlement of the affairs of Lombardy, with the consent of the Sardinian plenipotentiaries, and the arrangement, it is expected, will be confirmed by the sovereign.

The affairs of the Duchies are to be treated directly between the Courts of Paris and Vienna.

Austria, it is said, has modified her original instructions to her plenipotentiaries.

The French and Sardinian representatives were on consultation on the 24th ult. On the same day Count Colerado had a slight attack of apoplexy. There are constant arrivals and departures of couriers at Zurich.

France.—The Paris Patrie having uttered strong anti-Austrian sentiment, has, in pursuance of officia' orders, informed its readers that it does not receive its inspiration from the government, but has expressed its own views only.

The Paris correspondent of the London Advertiser, says that engineers have been sent to survey the whole line of the coast between Cologne and Calais, to fix upon a spot for a sea port sufficient to contain a fleet of fifty transports, and the Minister of Marine has notified his subalterns that fifty transports, each being capable of containing fifty thousand men, must be ready off Dover by the commencement of the ensuing year. The writer also says that a full confirmation of this new order has been telegraphed to the English government. He conjectures that the altercation with Belgium will supply the pretext for a rupture with England. This whole story is regarded as a canard.

The French camp at St. Maur has been broken up. The question of free trade will receive due consideration at the approaching councils of the departments.

The Liberals of France are disappointed at the number of eminent men declaring to accept the amnesty. Their presence in France, it is contended, would be advantageous to the cause of liberty.

Italy.—The King of Sardinia, in returning thanks for a medal presented to him by a private society, said that his efforts were always concentrated for the great national cause—that he lived for it, and was ready to die for it—that though difficulties and misfortunes arise, they must be surmounted.

The London Times strongly urges the Tuscans to be prepared for the result of Austrian aggression, even if they have to fight.

At the Council of Ministers at Turin, at which the King presided, it was decided that before accepting, even provisionally, the Provinces which desire to be annexed to Piedmont, it was proper to consult the Allied Powers.

The object of the defensive league between Tuscany, Bologna and Modena is stated to prevent the restoration of the fallen governments, and to lay down a basis of assimilation in their institutions. The National Assembly of Modena was prorogued on the twenty-third ult., having previously voted a decree, confirming the dictatorship of Farini, and giving him full power to contract a loan of five millions, and providing for the erection of a monument to commemorate the vote decreeing the forfeiture of Francis the Fifth, and the annexation to Piedmont, and charging the dictator to negotiate with the foreign powers for the restitution of the political prisoners that Francis carried away with him.

Great Britain.—Nothing of political importance has transpired. The Queen was about to visit Scotland. She had determined on making the journey during the night at the uniform rate of speed of 40 miles per hour. The Board of Trade returns shows an increase of exports amounting to £9,816,000 for the seven months over last year.

The potato blight is said to be making considerable ravages in certain parts of Ireland.

The strike of shipwrights on the Tyne had terminated by their receiving increased wages.

Energetic efforts were being made to obtain a commutation of sentence of Dr. Smethurst.

A trotting race had come off near Liverpool, which was won by an English horse named Dew. The American horses Jack Rossiter, Mountain Bay and Dreadnought, had obtained the second, third and fourth places in a field of seven horses. Mr. Ten Broeck's two year old, Umpire, had won two more races at Stockton.

London, Aug. 27.—The supply of money is in excess of the demand. The best bills for sixty days are quoted at two and a quarter.

Vienna letters express apprehensions of difficulties arising out of the Italian question not to be settled by the Zurich Conference.

It is reported the furlough of the Austrian soldiers returning from Italy have been suspended, and seven of the corps d'armee out of twelve, are to be retained on a war footing. The Augsburg Gazette says the Austrian military schools will be completely reorganized on the models of those of France.

Russia.—The Cabinet at St. Petersburg is said to be divided in opinion on the Italian question; the German party oppose the independence of Italy, while the Emperor and a small minority manifest more liberal sentiments. It is denied that the visit of Constantine to England has a political object.

Turkey.—The Sultan is suffering from illness. Mussanea Pasha is empowered to settle the question of the principalities. Prince Vogorides is dead.

China.—The Hong Kong mails had reached London. The tea market was tending downward. Dealers are anxious to sell their old stock before the arrival of the new. The shipments of new tea from Foo Chow was taking place very early.

Advices from Canton say a fleet of 190 vessels will precede the English, French and American ambassadors of the Peiho, in case it is necessary to force a passage to Pekin. A general massacre of Christians had occurred at two towns in Borna.

St. Johns, N. F., Sept. 10.—The steamer Ocean Queen, from Southampton and Havre, for New York, passed Cape Race this morning. She left the Needles at two o'clock on the morning of the 1st inst. Her advices are four days later.

The Ocean Queen experienced heavy westerly gales for three days. Our Liverpool correspondent says the steamship Anglo Saxon, for Quebec, and Kangaroo, for New York, were detained till the night of 31st Sept., the stormy weather preventing her embarking her passengers.

The American ship Ben Holt, from Havana, bound to Falmouth, was wrecked at Bendas, on the 25th ult.

The whole amount of the Russian twenty million loan had been subscribed, and exchange on St. Petersburgh had fallen three per cent.

The Bavarian loan for the purpose of defraying the military expenses of the country had been issued at 98½ per cent.

There was nothing of importance known respecting the doings of the Zurich Conference.

Advices from Athens reports the dissolution of the Greek Chambers.

STATE OF TRADE.

Manchester markets firm and in some cases very slightly higher.

Liverpool Breadstuffs Market very dull. Richardson, Spence & Co. state that the weather had been stormy and unfavorable for crops, but the harvest was almost over. Flour was very dull and easier, but quotations unchanged. American 10s@12s. Wheat very dull; red 7s 5d@8s 1d; white 9s@9s 6d. Corn steady; mixed and yellow 5s 6d@5s 9d; white 7s@7s 6d.

The Liverpool provision market had a declining tendency, but heavy; holders were pressing on the market, Pork heavy and nominal, Bacon dull and nominally unchanged, Lard quiet but steady.

London.—In the London market wheat and flour were dull. Tea unchanged. Sugar and rice heavy. Coffee and tallow firm.

Farther Point, Sept. 12.—The steamship Anglo Saxon passed this point yesterday afternoon, but a storm that occurred during the afternoon and evening prevented the transmission of intelligence from her. The steamship Teutonia arrived at Southampton early on the morning of the 26th. The steamer Nova Scotia reached Liverpool at eight o'clock on the afternoon of same day. The crew of the ship Ben Holt, reported as wrecked, by the Ocean Queen, were saved; the vessel was insured in London. She was on the voyage from Trieste to London with a cargo shipped at Havana.

A late telegram from Bernis says reports of the proceedings of the Zurich Conference continue to be contradictory, but there is every reason to believe that the Sardinian plenipotentiary will not offer his signature to any protocol in favor of the return of the deposed rulers of Duchies.

The French Emperor remains in retirement in the Pyrenees. It is rumored that he will shortly proceed to Cherbourg and pay a second visit to the camp at Chalons.

The Paris Constitutionnel in a leading article says that the Emperor will loyally fulfil his Villafranca agreement for the restoration of the former reigning princes, but if he should not succeed in reuniting the princes and their people in mutual accord, it is not his intention to force either the one or the other.

Italy.—No change has taken place in Italian affairs. A deputation from the National Assembly of Modena has gone on a special mission to the Emperor Napoleon. The people are much excited in consequence.

The directors of the steamer Great Eastern have declined Mr. Levi's last offer, and their original programme must be carried out. The vessel has been closed to admission of the public, and was to leave the Thames in a day or two, and be ready to leave for Portland, Me., on the 15th of Sept.

Leigh Hunt, the celebrated author, died at London on the 28th ult., in the seventy-fifth year of his age.

Arrived at Liverpool from New Orleans, August 27th, ship Mary Anna. Arrived at Marseilles, on the 26th, ship Vicksburg from New Orleans. Sailed, August 27th, from Liverpool, ship Clara Wheeler for New Orleans. August 28th, ship S. R. Grant for New Orleans.

New York, Sept. 12.—The Steamer Star of the West from Aspinwall with California mails of the 20th ult., arrived here at noon to-day. She brings upward of two million in treasure, and 500 passengers. The California advices have been anticipated. The steamer Golden Gate with New York passengers and mails of July 20th arrived at San Francisco 13th Aug. and the Cortes opposition steamer on the 14th. The Star of the West left Aspinwall on the second and Key West on the 7th inst. the steamer Roanoke Corvette, Preble and Store ship Relief were at Aspinwall all well, the Frigate Fulton was at Key West to sail in a few days.

The principal consignees of specie brought by the Star of the West are Wells, Fargo & Co., 300,000; Freeman & Co., 60,000; American Exchange Bank 206,000; Duncan, Sherman & Co., 110,000; Metropolitan Bank 102,000 E. Kelly and Co., 106,000; A. Belmont 162,000.

There was a severe gale at Aspinwall on the 29th ult., doing considerable damage to buildings. One man was killed by the falling of the walls of his building. The Frigates Merrimac and Lerance and Sloop-of-war Vandalia would leave for home soon.

The Sloops-of-war St. Mary and Cyanne were on the Central America coast advices from Guayaquil, Ecuador, Aug. 19th state that the Peruvian fleet was preparing to Bombard that city, and all the upper class of citizens had removed, those who remained were preparing for a desperate resistance. General Castilla was momentarily expected with all his force from Callao.

A disastrous fire occurred Guayaquil on the 18th of July destroying a whole block of buildings.

The advices from Valpairiso are to the 1st and Callao to the 12th of August. The storehouse of Del Rio and Co. at Valpairiso was destroyed by fire, with 50,000 bushels of Vanegas wheat.

A new and rich copper mine had been discovered near Point Panda Aspecar. It was reported that the British minister had demanded the presence of ships of war at Valpairiso in consequence of the expected arrival there of American steamers to force a settlement of difficulties with the Chilian Government. The Spanish Minister had made an unsuccessful attempt to negotiate a peace between Peru and Ecquador, the latest accounts say that Peru had formally decided upon war against Ecuador.

The conflagration at Guayaquil was stopped mainly through exertions of the crew of the U. S. frigates Saranac and Ecquador.

The Government had made a public acknowledgement to Capt. Kelly of the frigate.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

Baltimore, Sept. 8.—The town meeting called by the merchants, mechanics, business and professional men of Baltimore, assembled this afternoon in Monument Square to deliberate upon and devise means for rescuing the city from its present condition, and restoring the supremacy of law and order. The square was densely packed, and all the avenues leading thereto thronged by masses of respectable and influential citizens. The meeting was organized, on motion of Charles D. Hincks, by calling to the chair Wm. Woodward, Esq., of the firm of Woodward & Co. The preamble and resolutions submitted, set forth in emphatic language, the social and political evils, so long endured by the citizens of Baltimore—condemns the existence of club rule, and proposes vigorous and effective measures to insure fair expression of the sentiments of the public at the ensuing election, by protecting the purity of the ballot box, and placing in nomination honest, able and fearless men in opposition to the nominees of the political clubs.

The resolutions also provide for the appointment of a committee to call on the Mayor and demand the appointment of reliable men as judges of the next election, and the appointment of a special police force to keep the polls clear, so as to allow the exercise of the electing franchise. The resolutions emphatically disavow all party ties, and empower a special committee to nominate, irrespective of party, the most respectable men for the offices to be elected. The resolutions were adopted unanimously.

The meeting was addressed by Mr. George Brown, a distinguished leader of the Bar; Jas. Hodge, Esq., merchant, of the firm of Hodge & Brothers, and George M. Gill. The speeches were received with shouts of approval. During their progress several efforts to interrupt them were made by members of the rowdy gangs, but they were promptly suppressed. After the adjournment of the meeting a body of rowdies calling themselves Regulators, &c., rushed upon the platform and one attempted to harangue the crowd still remaining.

The police interfered and promptly arrested the ring leaders, and carried some fifteen to the lock-up, amid the loud plaudits of the people and the waving of handkerchiefs by the ladies, who crowded the windows of the hotels and private residences. Thus, law and order has on this occasion been fully vindicated; and expression given to the most determined opposition to rowdyism and lawlessness, which has already overawed the majority of the most turbulent disturbers of the peace.

Zanesville, Sept. 8.—Twenty-one fire companies and the Newark gun squad were on parade at the Firemen's State Parade to-day. The number of firemen present was eight hundred. The display was very fine, everything passing off admirably. The crowd in the city was estimated at 20,000. Deluge Fire Company of Dayton, a first class engine, took the first prize, throwing 207 feet. Phoenix Company of Cleveland, a second class engine, took the second prize, throwing 213 feet and 4 inches. Neptune Fire Company of Cedarville, a third class engine, took the third prize, throwing 240 feet. America Hook and Ladder Company of Columbus took the prize, running a quarter of a mile, and having a man on top of a thirty foot ladder in one minute and thirty-two seconds. Hope Hose Company of Zanesville took the hose prize, running a quarter of a mile and laying out three hundred feet of hose, and having water through the pipe in a minute and fifty-five seconds. The best feeling prevailed among the different companies. Dr. Gally, editor of the Zanesville Aurora, delivered an eloquent address. Most of the companies left this evening.

Cincinnati, Sept. 8.—Mr. Douglas arrived at Dayton at twelve o'clock, and was escorted to the Phillips House, where it was expected a reception speech would be made, but Mr. D. was too ill, with a bad cold; he was taken to the residence of Dr. Edwin Smith, and went to bed. At eight in the evening he was up shaking hands with visitors. He leaves Dayton at four to-morrow afternoon for Cincinnati. Extensive preparations are made here to receive him to-night, and much disappointment at his detention. The Democracy from all parts of the State are here in large numbers; also from Kentucky and Indiana. The Democratic Executive Committee of this county made great exertions through telegraph to get him here to-night, but Mr. Douglas's friends replied, too ill. He speaks here to-morrow night.

Washington, Sept. 8.—About 1,100 muskets and rifles have been sold at auction, by order of the government; the former brought from $1.00 to $2.50 a piece; the latter from $1.00 to $4.00. The larger part of them were purchased by a citizen of New York, together with fifteen cannon.

Leslie, the actor in the recent swindle upon the Philadelphia ladies, started for Philadelphia this afternoon, in custody of a police officer of that city.

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 8.—The vote for Governor in 71 towns stands for Hall 12,814; for Saxe 5,123. The same towns last year gave Hall 11,405, and Keyes 5,148. Hall's gain, therefore, over last year's vote in these towns is 1,049. Returns from one hundred and sixty-five towns give the Republicans 144 representatives and Democrats seventeen; in four districts there is no choice.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.—In the race this afternoon, on the new Suffolk Park, between Flora Temple and Princess, Flora won three straight heats; time 2:24, 2:31 and 2:28.

New York, Sept. 8.—About half-past nine o'clock last evening, a girl named Elizabeth Parnal, at No. 358 Eighth avenue, was carrying the returns from the 20th precinct, stole a lamp filled with fluid which exploded, burning h— and her mother. She died during the night and her mother cannot survive.

This morning about two o'clock the Harmonia Hotel, in Hudson street, kept by Baez & Rapp, was discovered to be on fire in the rear over which was a billiard saloon and public hall. Mr. Baez and his family had retired to bed late, as a concert and dance had been given that evening. After the flames, which had not reached the front part of the house, had been subdued, and time allowed to examine the front part of the house, the firemen were struck with terror in finding the dead bodies of Mr. Baez and his three daughters, side by side.

Mrs. Baez, who now lies insensible, received serious injury in jumping from the window to the balcony. Her eldest daughter, Mary, was caught in the arms of a Mr. Herring, who had ascended a ladder to assist in their escape.

The association of the American Express, which was formed ten years ago, expires by limitation on the 1st of January next, and a meeting of the shareholders is called in this city for the 15th of November, to devise and advance the best means for forming a joint stock partnership with the good will and name of the present concern. No provision, it seems, was made in the original compact for such renewal or extension.

An execution has been issued in case of O. E. L. Rich & Co., of N. Y., against the city of Pittsburgh, on a judgment in the U. S. Court, for amount due upon coupons cut from bonds issued by the city to the Pittsburgh & Steubenville & Chartiers Valley Railroad Companies, and certain gas stocks owned by the city were levied upon.

New York, Sept. 8.—The bark J. W. Page, from Monrovia, Liberia, on the 1st of July, furnishes the following interesting news: Late papers from the west coast of Africa state that the small pox prevailed extensively in Monrovia, and a large public health meeting had been held in order to devise measures to arrest its progress.

The Quail, a new war steamer, presented by the English Government to the Republic, had arrived from Plymouth, and the journals are loud in their protestations of gratitude to Queen Victoria and Lord Palmerston, contrasting their liberality with the policy of the United States towards their country very unfavorably to ourselves.

President Benson immediately went on a visit to the chiefs of the leeward in the Quail. Everything was quiet at Cape Palmas. Independence Day was celebrated with great eclat, the two military companies in Monrovia turning out in grand style to hear with other citizens a fine oration.

The English cruisers were taking slave prizes on the coast.

A number of vessels from the United States had arrived at Monrovia, landing many distinguished African travelers, good cargoes, an iron sugar mill, a lot of bibles and a number of settlers from our Northern and Southern states.

Several native students had distinguished themselves at late high schools examinations.

Washington, Sept. 9.—The Washington correspondent of the Tribune says the case of Mr. Cook, Postmaster of Chicago, has not been yet passed upon, though the President's disposition to favor him is alleged by numerous partisans. Cook attributes whatever of wrong has occurred in his office to persons thrust upon him by the Department, whom he says he shall oust on his return, let the consequences be what they may. He says that he does not steal himself, nor do his associates.

Peter G. Washington has arrived here after several months absence in the north and northeast, which he has spent in urging the claims of Mr. Guthrie for the Presidency. It is assumed that Mr. Breckenridge is not to be a competitor in Kentucky if the senatorship is freely accorded to him.

The Washington correspondent of the Herald says the northwestern difficulty will doubtless become a matter for negociation between the Government of Great Britain and that of the United States, as the treaty settling the boundary has no provision for a settlement in such a case as has occurred. The State Department has had this matter under consideration, and General Harney will receive instructions to act with great caution until the Governments have compared views upon the subject.

Baltimore, Sept. 9.—Milton Whitney, esq., the State Attorney, has brought a suit of libel against the American newspaper of this city, for charging him with complicity with the outlaws. The damages asked are $10,000.

The American having started the new law and order movements has endeavored to bring all good citizens to its support, and to detach any resemblance of official complicity with the rowdy portion of the community. For this purpose an examination into the sympathies of the State and city officers was necessary, and Mr. Whitney complains of the result of these inquiries.

There is not one word of truth in the dispatch published in the Philadelphia Ledger to-day about the reporters of the Sun and Exchange of this city, having been fired at during the meeting held last night. The city has not been in such good order for 20 years, but it is unfortunately the victim of sensation reports.

Boston, Sept. 9.—Major-General Wool arrived in Camp Massachusetts last evening, where he was received by the Commander-in-Chief, and partook of supper at head-quarters. A large number of distinguished guests were present. A monster concert, by eighteen bands of music, took place in the evening. This morning both branches of the Legislature, escorted by the ancient and honorable artillery company, left for the camp. The grand review takes place to-day, and the tents will be struck at 3 P. M. to-morrow. The 2d Brigade will be reviewed on Boston Common by the Governor and staff.

North Bridgewater, Sept. 9.—Mr. Henry Volney, of the firm of French & Howard, of this town, was killed this morning by jumping from a steamboat train while in motion. Mr. V. was shockingly mutilated. He leaves a wife and child, who are now absent.

Burlington, N.J., Sept. 9.—Rev. Thos. Neal, an aged minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and grand chaplain to the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the State of N. J., died at 3 o'clock this afternoon, at his residence in this place.

St. Louis, Sept. 10.—A fire broke out this afternoon in the store, No. 161 Fourth street, occupied by J. J. Spore, as an Artists' Emporium, Baggs and Leathe's picture frame manufactory, almost destroying the store and stock. The china and glassware house of Gay & Co., on North, was also seriously damaged. The clothing establishment of Seleyman & Bros., on South, was considerably injured. Losses as far as ascertained are—Spore $13,000; Baggs and Leathe $14,000; Gay & Co. probably $50,000, upon which they had an insurance of $40,000. The total loss by the fire will be upward of $83,000.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 10.—The post office was robbed last night. All the letters were opened and rifled—three thousand dollars in money, and all the drafts and money orders were mutilated and rendered valueless.

Boston, Sept. 12.—The Grand Jury of Barnstable county have indicted Capt. Borland of the Brig Robertson, Gorham Gravelle the owner, and Capt. Bacon of the Schooner Elizabeth for kidnapping and returning to slavery, one Columbus Jones, who had escaped by concealing on board the Brig Robertson at Peninsula.

Baltimore, Sept. 12.—The forty-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Baltimore is celebrating to-day with great spirit. The streets are thronged with people, the whole military force is out on parade, and flags are displayed from all points, the old defenders will dine at Green Springs; there are several visiting military companies in the city, and one from York, Pa., the Worth Infantry.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 10.—A fire occurred here this morning, destroying the Odd Fellows' Hall, a block of stores on Main street, owned by A. Dean, and a dwelling and store owned by Dr. Moore, a store owned by Mrs. Brown, with several other stores and dwellings on Warren street. The amount of loss is unknown.

Boston, Sept. 10.—The bark America from Constantinople arrived here this morning, reports that while passing the straits of Gibraltar she was fired on twice from the Spanish Fort Tarifa, the first fire was a blank cartridge and the second round shot, which passed through lower main topsail.

Farther Point, below Quebec, Sept. 10.—There are no signs of the steamship Anglo-Saxon now due, with four days' later European news.

Bridgeport, Sept. 9.—A man named E. Chapman, traveling with Nixon & Co's. Mammoth Show, was accidentally shot this morning, while on the way from this city to Plymouth.

Augusta, Ga., Sept. 8.—Senator Toombs addressed a large audience in this city yesterday, on the political questions of the day.

New Orleans, Sept. 8.—Authentic information has been received that Minister McLane did not conclude the treaty with Mexico, and the matter still remains unsettled.

New York, Sept. 10.—The Herald's Washington correspondent says that Gen. Harney has sent troops to San Juan to protect the white settlers from the savages, who were committing most atrocious murders.

Nothing inimical to the British Government was intended by the late movement in the North-western boundary question. The jealousy of Gov. Douglass was needlessly excited. No collision with British troops or subjects is apprehended. The President was Secretary of State when the boundary treaty was negotiated under President Polk, and is perfectly familiar with all the circumstances attending it, and Robt. J. Walker was the only member of Mr. Polk's cabinet who opposed the 4th parallel as the boundary. They adhered to 54° 40' as our just limits. No doubt need be entertained that the title to San Juan will be amicably adjusted, as the President must be perfectly aware of our rights, and will ask for nothing more. The long connection of Gov. Douglass with the Hudson Bay Company doubtless causes him to view all the country in that vicinity as under the jurisdiction and protection of the British Government, at least if not actually the property of the company, and his interests may have rendered him excitable in temper and precipitate in action. The Cabinet was in session to-day on the whole subject, and the tenor of the instructions to General Harney, as stated yesterday, will be of the most conciliatory character.

Messrs. Norris, of New York, Brawley, of Wisconsin, and Brawley, of Pennsylvania, have the pork contract for the navy at $14 95.

The Republicans assert to-day that one G. Donaldson, a clerk in the land office, has been flooding Iowa with circulars dated Iowa Democratic Club Rooms, Washington, and speeches by Land Commissioner Hendricks, under franks of Senator Bright, who has been absent four months. Gov. Floyd is expected to return to his post about the 15th inst., his health is greatly improved.

The President has not yet accepted the resignation of the Hon. J. A. Hendricks as Commissioner of the General Land Office, but holds the matter under advisement.

The Hon A. B. Greenwood, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, will start on Sunday next on a visit to the Indian tribes of the West, with a view of observing personally the operation of our present Indian system before preparing his annual report.

The balance in the Treasury of the U. S. on the 5th inst., was $4,344,316, being an increase of $619,410 75 on the balance shown by the previous weekly statement.

Advices received by the General Land Office announce the completion on the 4th ulto. of the survey of the western boundary of Minnesota, and the placing of the corner stone at the intersection of the northern and western boundaries of that State.

The Times' Washington despatch says, much annoyance is felt here, both by the English Legation and the Secretary of State at the recent news from San Juan, in relation to the two governments having lately become most cordial and friendly. It is hoped the good sense of both powers may prevent any serious mischief in the premises.

It is understood that Mr. Wyke, the new British Minister, takes out to Central America positive instructions to propose a treaty, which, if the Central Americans refuse to accept, they will be held responsible by all the world for prolonging an unnatural state of things between themselves on the one hand and England and America on the other. The only wish of the British Government, and a wish most anxiously felt, is to come to a loyal understanding with the United States about Central America affairs.

New York, Sept. 10.—An Aerial ship, called the City of New York, intended for a transatlantic voyage, has been in the course of construction for some months past in the vicinity of New York, and is now so nearly completed that she will be ready to undertake the trip in October. The aeronaut who has charge of the enterprise is Wm. Lowe, of New Hampshire, who has made several successful ascensions. The dimensions of the ship are greater than those of any balloon previously built. The capacity of the gas receiver is is 725,000 cubic feet. The aggregate height of the balloon is upwards of 300 feet. The diameter is 130 feet.

Wm. Lowe proposes to go directly from New York to London in 48 to 64 hours.

Dropping below the basket is a metallic life-boat in which is placed an Ericcson engine. Its particular purpose is the control of a propeller, rigged upon the principle of the screw, by which it is proposed to obtain a regulating power. The application of mechanical power is ingeniously divided. The propeller is fixed in the bow of the life-boat, projecting at an angle of about 45 degrees from a wheel at the extremity. Twenty fans radiate. Each of these fans is five feet in length, widening gradually from the point of contact with a screw to the extremity, where the width of each is one and a-half feet. Mr. Lowe claims that by the application of these mechanical contrivances his Air Ship can be readily raised or lowered to seek different currents of air, that they will give him a rapid steerage way, and that they will prevent the rotary motion of other machines.

St. Louis, Sep. 10.—A special dispatch to the Republican says that dates from Salt Lake City of the 19th reached Acheson. W. H. Hooper, a Mormon, was elected delegate to Congress.

Lieut. Gray's party, consisting of 42 dragoons, surprised a band of 150 Indians, concerned in a late massacre of emigrants on the California road. Twenty Indians were killed. General Johnston sent reinforcements to Lieut. Gray, in anticipation of another attack from combined forces of Indians.

The store of Miller, Russell & Co., at Camp Flood, was burned—loss, $50,000.

The steamer Wm. Garrin sunk several miles below here on Thursday night.

The steamer Adriatic, which recently sunk near Memphis, was insured for $15,000. The cargo, consisting of flour, tobacco and grain, is almost entirely lost.

St. Louis, Sept. 8.—The steamer St. Mary sunk in the Missouri river above St. Joseph yesterday. The boat and cargo are a total loss. The boat was valued at $20,000 and insured for $13,000.

The Scandinavian Pills and Purifier.—The following flattering notice is taken from the Portsmouth (Ohio) Scioto Valley Republican of April 3, 1859:

Scandinavia.—A friend writes to us for our "real opinion" of Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies—where he can obtain them—and why they are called "Scandinavian," and we are frequently asked the same questions. Scandinavia is the ancient name of Sweden and Norway, and a Scandinavian, that is a Swede or Norwegian, affectionately calls his country "Scandinavia," in the same sense as we speak of "Columbia," or "The Union." By the way, there are over nine thousand Scandinavian families in Dane county, Wisconsin. Although a citizen of this country for many years, Dr. Roback is a Swede by birth; and compounds his Medicines of Swedish herbs. We think the name is very appropriate. We have the very highest opinion of the Medicines, and of Dr. Roback himself, who is not only a singularly skillful physician, but a gentleman of the Old School, as we know personally. Our advertisement columns will answer the rest of our friend's letter. —See advertisement.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. Four copies will be furnished for one dollar; and numbers supplied from the present time to the election—each subscriber being furnished with the full returns.

We hope that orders may reach us as fast as possible; as we intend to make the Campaign Press do yeoman service in the canvass. Let it go to every domicil, where its sound, unswerving, reliable Democracy will bring cheer to the household. Its motto is "Equal rights to all—Exclusive privileges to none."

THE SEVENTH WONDER.

Of the wonders, wonders famous,
We, throughout our land, have seen
None more useful, few astonish
More than SINGER'S Famed Machine.
Great success and universal,
Those who've tried them years have shown;
Favorites in domestic circles,
One should be in every home.
Thousands who, sad vigils keeping,
Oft in sorrows' night repine,
Hail with joy the dawn that's peeping—
Soon they'll see the better time.
'Tis they gladly hail and welcome
This great marvel of our day;
Wives and sisters, mothers, children—
All, their joyful tribute pay.
Thirty thousand now are using
These Machines throughout our land;
Stitching, felling, hemming, gathering,
All without the aid of hand.
Tens of thousands have intention—
And are using every means—
Soon to buy this great invention,
SINGER'S world-renowned MACHINES!
Stitching linen, cloth or leather,
On each side the work's the same;
More employed than any other,
Wonderful, indeed, their fame.
Late improved, with guides and hemmers,
Ornamented they have been;
Also, made in handsome cases,
SINGER'S NOW IS THE MACHINE! [aug18

McCoy's Commercial College.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in these branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June 23, 1859.

Prof. Samuel I. McCoy—

Sir: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that yours surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

N. SHAFFER,

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

E. F. Jennings, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

The Capitol Restaurant is centrally located, and its Proprietor John O'Hara is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

Fassig's Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made ours for the last two or three years.

Robbins & Dickinson continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "John" says that he don't care if flour is three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the corks fly.—Morgan deserves the liberal custom he has.

Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at Sonnhall's if you want a superior article.

Soda.—That marble fountain of our genial friend J. M. Dimon on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and sweet as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

IT NEVER COMES AGAIN.

There are balms for all our pains;
[illegible], the dream departs,
It takes something from our hearts,
And it never comes again.

We are stronger, we are better,
[illegible]
Still we feel that something sweet
Followed you with flying feet.
[illegible]

Something beautiful has vanished,
And we sigh for it in vain;
We behold it everywhere,
On the earth and in the air,
But it never comes again.

SMALL BEGINNINGS.

A panting kettle first attention drew
To steam's vast power: e'en Fulton might have toil'd
[illegible]
To Franklin's kite that drew from heav'n its fire
We trace the germ of telegraphic wire,
And two vast continents shall owe the joy
[illegible] to a paper toy:
From small beginnings vast conceptions rise;
If sound, the project lives, if hollow, dies.
So, from the humble plank of Thespis' cart,
First dawned the drama, rose the actor's art:
How vast a progress from the crude, first thought
Have mellowing Time and conqu'ring Genius wrought!

Twice Saved—A Traveller's Story.

BY WILLIAM EARLE BINDER.

In the year 18— I was in Texas, and one night met with an adventure which I now propose to relate.

I had been traveling a long way on horseback, unaccompanied. My road lay through a thinly settled, desolate region. The last house I had passed was many miles behind me, and I began to feel weary and depressed. The night was intensely dark. Neither moon nor stars were shining. The darkness, the silence, the long, lonely way, exercised an oppressive influence on my spirits, and though by no means a coward, I would have given anything for a pleasanter situation.

I spurred up my horse and dashed onward. In this way I proceeded several miles further. Suddenly, a low, rumbling noise attracted my attention. I listened, and in a few moments it was repeated. It was a distant thunder, and a storm was coming up. Here was a nice situation, and I shuddered in anticipation.

Again I spurred onward, hoping to find some place of shelter before the full force of the storm would burst over my head. Onward I galloped, but without any apparent success. Nothing in the shape of a habitation greeted my eyes.—I began to despair. All the time, too, the flashes of lightning were growing more frequent and glaring—the pealing of the thunder nearer and louder. Finally, the storm burst in all its fury. For a while I beat against it determidly, but the violence of the hurricane was at length too much for me, and I was compelled to stop and seek the shelter of a gigantic tree, much as I was opposed to such a course. However, I had no alternative, for to brave the storm I could not.

The deepest and most intense darkness enveloped everything. Except just when the heavens were lighted up by flashes of lightning, I could not see a foot beyond my nose, and every other sound was completely absorbed by the fierce bellowings of the tempest.

I dismounted and groped my way to the nearest tree. A flash of lightning showed me it was one of the largest magnitude. Beneath its far spreading branches I might be as comfortable, if not as safe, as I would beneath a roof.

After attending somewhat to my horse, I divested myself of my wet outer garments, and disposed my weary body to enjoy as much comfort as was compatible with the circumstances.

The tempest continued with no sign of abatement. Never before had I heard such thunder—never before seen such lightning. It was terrifying and I could not resist the temptation to shudder.—Ever since that night a thunder storm has occasioned me considerable uneasiness.

In this manner half an hour may have passed. Still the storm howled on in the most furious and terrible manner—still the loud thunder cracked and roared—still the lightning flashed with blindful brightness.

Suddenly I felt or thought I felt, something brush slightly against me. I leaped to my feet and quickly demanded:

"Whose there?"

I listened, but got no answer; and nothing was to be heard above the roar of the tempest.

The thought struck me that it might be some wild beast. If such should prove to be the case it would be almost impossible to guard against its attack under any circumstances, and it made my heart beat like a steam engine to think of the danger in which I was probably standing. I felt for my pistols—they were in the holsters, and I dare not move from the spot where I was standing for fear of provoking the attack which I dreaded, and which I was in such a poor position to resist.

Some minutes passed, and all of a sudden the weight of a strong hand or claw of a wild beast descended upon my right shoulder. Almost at the same instant, and before I had even time to think I experienced the same feeling on my left shoulder.

I drew my knife,—the only weapon I had about me,—suddenly stepped back a few paces, and without any thought or design, demanded who was there, if it was anything [illegible].

At that moment a vivid flash of lightning illuminated the surrounding darkness, and for an instant rendered everything visible. I was no longer in doubt. A few steps before me two ferocious and blood-thirsty looking men were standing.

Plainly enough they were cut-throats and thieves, or if they were not, their brutal appearance belied them most wonderfully. Two more diabolical looking wretches it had never been my ill-luck to encounter. That they meant me no good I had no earthly reason to doubt, and situated as I was, the prospect looked anything but pleasant.

Both the desperadoes held pistols in their hands, and the weapons were leveled at my heart.

All this I saw at a quick glance, and then again the deepest darkness enveloped everthing.

What should I do? I thought. Attempt to reach my horse and trust to Providence for my final rescue? To my mind that seemed the only chance, for in an encounter with two such brawny villians my prospect would be very slim. Whatever course I adopted, though, I must be quick, or the next flash of lightning would betray my purpose.

Quietly I stooped down to the ground, and prepared to crawl away in the direction of my horse. What the two cutthroats were doing I could not tell, for the din of the tempest prevented me from hearing any customary sounds. Their ears, however, must have been much sharper than mine, for at the very first movement I maid, a loud, coarse voice, [illegible]:

"Tain't no use stranger, fur yer can't cheat, no how, nor yer can't get away from bar till yo've paid toll. We steal for a livin', we do, an' kill for the fun of the thing, so yer may know what yer've got ter expect. Keep still, is my advice, or afore yer know it yer'll git a couple o' bullets into yer carcass.

For a moment I hesitated, and in that moment another flash of lightning lit up the surrounding scene.

There stood the two outlaws with their fiendish-looking eyes wickedly glaring at me.

"Must think we're a couple of ninnies, Jake!" I heard one remark to the other.

"That cuss don't know we're sorter owls, an' kin see better in the dark nor in the light," responded number two.

"Francis, he'll 'scape us, hi guess!" continued the first speaker. "Wal', ef he does, he'll be the first man ever did that sort o' thing."

"When he gets away, hi hope be'll let us know it," rejoined the other, confidently.

That I had unfortunately fallen into the hands of two of the worst sort of outlaws, everything more and more betokened. I know well that with such men the life of a human being was of no more account than the life of a dog, and inwardly resolved only to part with mine, if part with it I must, in an attempt to escape, however desperate the adventure might be under such circumstances.

It was now about time for another flash of lightning, and straightening myself up to avoid suspicion, I waited for it to pass.

The next moment it came, with almost blindness brilliancy.

The outlaws, had not moved a step, but remained as at first, closely regarding the spot where I was standing.

"Cum, stranger!" yelled the same one who had addressed me before "it's about time we had a better understandin' all aroun'. Yer see, we don't like to fool long, an' we've been playin' with you till we're about tired, we are. Yer money or yer life's what we want, an' if yer don't like that, we'll take both without askin'. What d'yer say, stranger—which shall it be? Ef yer fur a-fight, sing out, an' hi guess we kin 'commerdate yer. Fightin's our helement, an' we're always ready for a scrimmage. Now, ef yer don't do sumthin' at wunst, we'll fire a roun' inter yer we will, sartin!"

During the time occupied by the outlaw in speaking, I had been preparing myself for my attempt. Summoning all my courage, all my energy, all my determination, I assumed an attitude most favorable to my purpose. I had then but to wait for another flash of lightning, that I might assure myself of the exact situation of my horse—he was standing at the distance of not more than a half dozen feet from me, but was constantly changing his position—before I made the desperate attempt which my mind contemplated.

It came just as the outlaws fired their pistols—for fire they did, though without harming me—and as it passed away I bounded forward with the most desperate speed.

The outlaws uttered a loud yell, and soon let me know that they understood my purpose and were following in my tracks. But I expected that much, and consequently was not at all surprised.

Two muscular bounds placed me beside my horse, and with a single spring I vaulted into my saddle. I thought myself safe, then, but at that very moment I felt violent hands laid upon me. A flash of lightning soon showed me that if I had been quick my assailants had not been any behind me.

I desperately attempted to start my horse, but before I could do so the outlaws dragged me from my seat and bore me to the ground.

"No go, stranger!" cried one of them "yer can't git away from us, no how, yer can't, so yer'd better not try."

I was down upon the ground on my back; and the desperadoes were stooping over me with their knees pressed tightly against my chest. Still, however, I resisted, for I was not exactly the man to give up without a struggle, desperate as might be the chances, and at that moment they seemingly could not well have been in a worse condition.

My assailants grew furious and handled me in anything but a gentle manner, but desperation gave me new lease of strength, and they found me no mean antagonist.—By an effort of all my powers I at length gained my feet. Unfortunately I had lost my knife in the struggle and was entirely unarmed. Not so with the outlaws, for they had still their murderous dirks, which they were making every effort to use upon my person.

Meanwhile the tempest continued with all its original violence, and in the din of the storm almost every sound of the desperate conflict was lost.

At length my superhuman efforts began to weary me. I began to grow discouraged, too, seeing so little chance of my ultimate rescue. My protracted resistance tended only to excite the blackest passions of my deadly assailants. They tore at me, and cursed and plasphemed in the most terrible manner.

Suddenly I caught my right foot and fell heavily to the ground. The concussion stunned me, and before I could regain my feet the outlaws were again pressing me down.

"Kill him! kill him!" cried one, as he clutched me by the throat and drew back his arm.

"Cut out his heart, cut him!" rejoined the other, in furious tones.

"God have mercy on me!" I inwardly ejaculated, fully expecting to receive my death wound before the expiration of another moment.

The arms of the outlaws were about to descend, carrying death to me. I could not see it, but I intuitively felt that it was so, when the whole scene was suddenly lighted up by the most blinding flash of lightning I had ever beheld. Instantaneously with the lightning the deafening thunder pealed forth. That was all I knew at the time, for instantly I lost consciousness. When I recovered my suspended power, the storm had passed away, and the sun was shining brightly. I was lying upon the ground, and felt very weak and sore, but otherwise I was not injured. Beside me lay the two outlaws, buried in the sleep of death. They had been struck by the lightning, and just at that moment when their hands were uplifted to deprive me of life. The great tree beneath which I had taken refuge was shivered into atoms, and the whole scene was one of death and desolation.

Under such circumstances, my own escape seemed miraculous, and I humbly thanked God for his infinite mercy.—The lightning had saved me from the outlaws, and the Almighty had saved me from the lightning. I had been doubly preserved.

Strange as it may seem, my horse had also escaped, and, with a full heart, I mounted his back, and again started forward on my journey. That night in the wilderness I have never forgotten, nor is it likely I ever shall.

A PROFANE CROW.—Under this head we found the following in the Philadelphia Sunday Mercury, and give it to our readers as one of the best things of its class we have seen in a long time. The finale with the old woman beats the minister's "tilt" with "the bird of ill omen," all to nothing. Here's the "affair," and let none read it who may be injured by laughter:

Several years since, on a warm Sabbath morning, while the Rev. Dr. B—, of a well known fishing town in Massachusetts, was holding forth, a tame crow, which had been taught to utter one expression only, and that a wicked one, flew into the church, and alighting on the pulpit, saluted the minister with "G— d— ye;" whereupon the frightened and terror stricken parson "drew off" and gave "the gentleman in black" a winder that sent him to the floor. Nothing daunted by this, however, the crow was soon on his pegs, and looking up at the reverend gentleman, repeated his salutation with such an emphasis that he took to his heels, and together with his congregation—who were as much frightened as their minister—scampered from the sacred edifice in double quick time. One little old woman, whose seat was in a corner, did not see fit to follow the example of the shepherd or his flock, but firmly kept her position; upon seeing which the crow advanced to her, and hopping up on the seat in front of her, again gave vent to its favorite expression. The old woman, not a little astonished at this impudence, and evidently taking him for an evil spirit, in the form of a bird, yelled forth at him:

"G— d— you too! What do you G— d— me for? I don't belong to this church;" and giving him a wipe with her umbrella she cleared the coast, leaving the church to silence and to the crow.

☞ The following examination of a certain candidate for admission to the bar is decidedly a good one. The examination commences with the following:—

"Do you smoke?"

"I do, sir."

"Have you a spare cigar?"

"Yes, sir." (Extending a short six.)

"Now, sir, what is the first duty of a lawyer?"

"To collect his fees."

"What is the second?"

"To increase the number of his clients."

"When does your position towards your client change?"

"When making a bill of costs."

"Explain."

"When they occupy the antagonistic position I assume the character of a plaintiff and they the defendant."

"A suit described, how do you stand with the lawyer conducting the other side?"

"Cheek by jowl."

"Enough, sir—you promise to become an ornament to your profession, and I wish you success. Now are you aware of the duty you owe me?"

"I am, sir. It is to invite you to drink."

"But suppose I decline?" (Candidate scratches his head.)

"There is no instance of the kind on record in the books! can't answer the question."

"You are right, and the confidence with which you make the assertion shows that you have read the laws attentively. Let us have a drink and I will sign your certificates."

A SHARP YOUNG LADY.—A clerical friend while visiting us a few days since, related the following anecdote of Rev. Jedediah Burchard, a revival preacher, which is "too good to be lost." Burchard was hammering away at the sinners in the town of Orwell, Vermont, and as usual made more converts than he did Christians. A certain young lady was a regular attendant upon his ministrations, but stoutly resisted his most seductive eloquence. Meeting her one morning in the hotel, he approached her with the salutation:

"Good morning, thou child of the devil!"

"Good morning, father," she replied.

It is needless to say that the by-standers relished the retort. Burchard took it in good part, and laughed long and heartily.

VOTING IN MASSACHUSETTS.—An exchange gives the following as a probable scene at the polls in Boston, at the next election. Who wouldn't feel proud while exercising "the glorious right of suffrage" in the good old Bay State:

German Voter—I wish to deposit my vote, sir.

Inspector—How long have you been in the State?

German—Almost seven years.

Inspector—You can't vote.

Negro—Hello, Sam. Is you gwine for to vote to-day?"

Sam—I doesn't know, chile; I'se only been here free days.

Negro—Dat doesn't make a diff-a-bitterance; heah, jist go rite up and vote.

☞ At a late public meeting, the following "dry" toast was given, the author of which got "buttered" when he reached home:

"The Press, the Pulpit and Petticoats—the three Ruling Powers of the day.—The first spreads knowledge, the second spreads morals, and the last spreads considerably."

☞ An Irish housemaid, who was sent to call a gentleman to dinner, found him engaged in using a tooth-brush. "Well, Mary, is he coming?" said the lady of the house, as the servant returned. "Yes, ma'am, directly," was the laconic reply; "he's sharpening his teeth."

A THRILLING SCENE IN AN ENGLISH COURT.—The English papers received by the Africa are full of the proceedings of a most interesting murder trial which had just taken place in London, and the details of which possessed features as remarkable as the famous Palmer case, which excited so much attention a few years ago. The case was that of a physician named Smethurst, who committed bigamy and then poisoned the second wife to get her property. The London News says:

When the Lord Chief Baron put on his black cap, and was about to pass the sentence of death, the prisoners checked him by reading a speech. He spoke in a calm, composed tone of voice, and during the time he was speaking, which was nearly five and twenty minutes, he did not evince the least emotion. He commenced by saying:

"I swear to God that I am perfectly innocent of having administered anything wrong to the deceased. I admit that I acted illegally in marrying her when my wife was alive; but I did it for her sake. She was a lady of fortune and position, and her friends were very respectable, and I married her to protect her from self-reproach, until we could contract a legal marriage after the death of my wife, who is now 74 years old, and who could not in the ordinary course of events be expected to live many years. We loved each other with great attachment. During the time we were together, we never had an angry word, and we never had the least discomfort."

The prisoner heard the sentence without exhibiting the least emotion, and when the Lord Chief Baron had concluded, he exclaimed in a firm voice, "I declare Dr. Julius to be my murderer. I declare I am innocent before God."

☞ A London letter says the harvest in England will be probably above the average. The sudden and early ripening of the crop has caused an immense demand for labor, and better wages are now being given than have been for several years past.

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

INFLUENCE OF THE MOON ON PLANTS.—Vines, if pruned when the moon is increasing in light, will shoot out, spread, and grow fast, particularly if done in the second quarter—because, as the light of the moon increases, so does the sap in the tree.

Vines, if pruned when the moon is decreasing in light, will not grow nor spread fast—particularly if done during the last quarter, because the sap decreases with the light.

Timber cut down when the moon is increasing, will soon become rotten, particularly if she be in her second quarter.

Timber cut down when the moon is decreasing, will last for years, and the more durable it will be if cut down during the last quarter.

Peas sown during the moon's increase, will bloom to the last, and will be full and rich in flavor; and more certain if sown during the second quarter.

Peas sown when the moon is decreasing in light will be just in the opposite condition.

The age to which a pomegranate will live depends on the moon's age at the time of planting; it will live just as many years as the moon was days old.

Plants and shrubs shoot up and take little root, if planted when the moon is decreasing in light and in the zodiacal signs, Gemini, Libra, or Aquarious.

If planted when in the sign of Taurus, Virgo, or Capricornus, they take deep root and do not grow tall.

WHERE TO PLANT PEACH TREES.—Those intending to plant peach orchards would do well to consider the following before determining upon location:

After several years experience and close observation, the writer has found that those peach orchards planted upon an elevation having a hight greater than the surrounding lands, produce a crop of fruit each year; while those planted in ravines or depressions, or on level land, usually fail, at least two years out of three.

The cause of this difference in fruiting, I think, is this: Upon elevated locations the winds are more constantly in action than in depressions and on level lands, and, in consequence, evaporation is carried on more rapidly, drying up the humidity there. Therefore, the frost does not penetrate the vital part of the bud or the bloom. On the other hand, if water remains upon the buds, it congeals by only an ordinary frost—thus killing the fruit.

Some writers, I see, are recommending the planting of peach orchards on closely and densely surrounded by heavy forest trees; my observation would dictate the reverse. The day previous to the severe frost of the 22d of April, 1859, there was quite a quantity of rain fell in the morning; about twelve o'clock the wind commenced blowing quite severely, and continued until evening; upon the land where it had free access among the boughs, the orchards bid fair to yield an ordinary crop; but in other localities, where the wind was obstructed in its motion by adjacent forest trees or hills, and the water left upon the buds, the crop is almost an entire failure.

SOW WHEAT.—A friend who has lately travelled through a great portion of the county, reports that many farmers are neglecting their duty in the matter of wheat sowing. Disappointed last year, they despair of doing better next, and have resolved to devote their attention to other crops. Our friend thinks there will not be half as much wheat sown this year as there was last season. This is not the proper spirit; and the manifestation of it shows that our farmers are "of little faith." When seed time arrives, it is every man's duty to sow, no matter how unfortunate he has been in the past. In all probability the wheat crop of next year will be a large one. Whether it be great or small, this region will require bread, and it is the duty of every farmer to try to furnish it—to sow wheat, and trust to Providence for the harvest.

POTATOES.—Remember that one of the best preventives of rot, after housing, is perfect cleanliness. Many have observed that potatoes dug in muddy weather, with portions of the soil adhering to them, have been ruined during winter, while those put away clean have nearly or entirely escaped. It is, therefore, best select dry pleasant weather for digging, and if this cannot be had, the potatoes should be washed or allowed to drain or dry, before putting away. We have found Allen's potatoe-digging plough an important assistant in expediting the harvesting of potatoes in fine weather, in the same way that the horse rake is in the hay field.—Coolness and ventilation, as well as being kept in the dark, are important in preventing rot—hence they should rest on something like rack work or slats.

SEIZURE OF AN ISLAND IN PUGET SOUND BY GEN. HARNEY.—We learn from the head-quarters of the Oregon and Washington Military Department, that Gen. Harney has ordered a detachment of United States troops to take possession of the Island of San Juan, and establish there a military post. The right of ownership to this and other islands is in dispute between the English and American governments. Gen. Harney, it is to be presumed, acts under instructions from the administration, and as British interests have within a year acquired much importance in that quarter, it is not unlikely that trouble will grow out of the affair.

The treaty of 1846 provided that the line separating the British and American territories should commence at the summit of the Rocky Mountains, in latitude 49 degrees, to which point it had previously been brought from the East, thence run westward with the 49th parallel to the middle of the Gulf of Georgia, thence southward with the main channel to the Straits of Fuca, and through the middle of those straits to the ocean. Now, it so happens that between the point where the line leaves the 49th parallel and the point where it enters the Straits of Fuca, there is the Archipelago de Haro, through which several large channels run, the two main ones being the Rosario Strait and the Canal de Haro. The former is the one most used by vessels going from the ocean to the mouth of Fraser river, but the latter is the wider, though obstructed by some small islets. Both are wide channels, deep enough for the largest ships. Between them lie a dozen islands, the chief of which are San Juan, Lopez and Orcas Islands, and altogether they may include about 200 square miles of land, or 128,000 acres. San Juan Island is the most valuable, and has about 70,000 acres, much of it good soil, covered with fine grass. The British assert that the Rosario Strait is the "main channel" meant by the treaty, and the Americans say the Canal de Haro is meant; and the settlement of that dispute will determine who is to be the owner of the islands. Some British subjects already occupy San Juan Island as a sheep pasture.

There are about four hundred English soldiers scattered over British Columbia, and three men-of-war—the Pylades, Tribune and Satellite—at Victoria. With this force very little could be done, even if Gov. Douglas felt disposed to resort to extremities. The people in Washington Territory would, no doubt, be pleased at an opportunity which would enable them to enter the service of the United States, so there would, in case of necessity, be no lack of men.—Richmond Whig.

Important to the Ladies
—AND—
HEADS OF FAMILIES.
J. C. BAGNALL, on Hickory Alley, near North Fourth street, has invented a most effective and infallible
Hair Tonic,
For cleansing the hair and removing dandriff and dry scurf. It removes every particle of dirt with a gentle rubbing and leaves the surface cool and agreeable, with open pores and slightly but effectually stimulated. As a hair restorative, it possesses more virtue than high-sounding compounds; and what is far better leaves the head cool, and the hair thoroughly cleansed and free to grow.
Also a mixture for cleansing silks and satins, and preserving their original lustre.
Also Impression or Transfer Paper of the best quality and of every color, and of any size to suit the trade.
BAGNALL'S HAIR TONIC, for sale by the quart or gallon.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.
THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practised upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.
The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.
The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.
An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

DR. STEWART
WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of the most hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States, and Canada, where he has practiced.
He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling Impostors, (who stay perhaps a day in a place, and are the next hundreds of miles away,) should note the above fact.
Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.
Being naturally inclined to CONSUMPTION, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a malady, which under [illegible] treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.
Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Diseases should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, suffer themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!
Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.
DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and affections of the Eye.
CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.
Cases given up by others solicited. He will forfeit $100 for any of the following he cannot cure:
Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 20,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.
A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.
Office hours 9 a. m., to 6 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.
☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,
The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice,
Debility of the Nervous System,
Diseases of the Kidneys,
and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.
The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing
Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of Confirmed Consumption.
A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.
These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.
In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.
WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.
Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,
from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and Ladies of the highest respectability, [illegible] of the extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were Eye Witnesses.
These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following
Facts:
That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to Contain no Mineral;
That they cure the almost universal complaint,
Dyspepsia,
with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, [illegible] relieve Liver Complaint,
and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. That Sick Females,
who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual [illegible] are removed by their cordial and gently stimulating properties. That they recruit
Shattered Constitutions,
however they may have been tried with [illegible] to their direct tendency is to Lengthen Life,
and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly upon the [illegible] the blood, they Cause seen to Heal, and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or [illegible]. That they Recruit the Debilitated,
and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief and, (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.
Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They annihilate disease through every avenue and organ of the system, and to expel it thoroughly and permanently.
No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.
Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1, per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.
Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.
Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.
In difficult or complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

AYER'S
Ague Cure.
FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF
Intermittent Fever or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers; indeed for the whole Class of Diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.
No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such a remedy we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.
That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.
Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants, and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally, or daily, while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents, if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
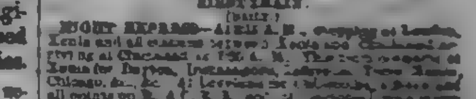
are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.
Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.
Do not be put off by unprincipled Dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else.



Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.
So wide is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS!
A Democratic Newspaper,
PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY AT COLUMBUS, O.,
By J. Birney Marshall,
At Two Dollars a Year, in Advance.

PROSPECTUS:

Believing that in the Democracy of Ohio, at this time, a publication devoted truly and solely to their interests, uninfluenced by personal ambition or the desire of gain, will be acceptable, I have established in the city of Columbus, O., THE PEOPLE'S PRESS, a large and elegant Weekly Newspaper, comprising the variety of political, miscellaneous and literary information necessary to make it a welcome visitor to every home.

THE PEOPLE'S PRESS will inculcate Democratic truths and its mission shall be characterized by frankness and honesty; its statements relied on for their unswerving veracity. Nor shall it be used for cliques or factions, but consistently pursue the object for which it is established, that of preventing the misdirection of public opinion, and contributing all in its power to the perpetuity of our institutions and the advancement of the prosperity and happiness of the people.

While it will advocate the cause of the Democratic Party, and resist everything like schism, or disruption, while it will support every Democratic measure with all the ability it can bring to the duty (it must refuse that is to be Democratic and not a false light held up to illude, perhaps to betray)—while it will support the present Administration, in all that is deemed consistent with true Democracy and the best interests of the party, THE PEOPLE'S PRESS presents the name of STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS as the first choice for the Presidency in 1860, and uses every effort consistent with duty to the Democratic Party for the promotion of his nomination and election.

As a Prospectus cannot be expected to enter into minute detail, it is believed sufficient has been said to indicate the character of the paper proposed. Relying confidently on the remunerative patronage, I respectfully offer the following

Terms and Inducements:

Single copy per year $2 00
A discount of ten per cent on clubs of ten; 12½ per cent on clubs of twenty; and on clubs of thirty and 15 per cent on clubs of fifty and upwards sent to a single address.
J. BIRNEY MARSHALL.
Columbus, March 23, 1859.
N. B.—Our friends of the press will confer an obligation, which will not only be appreciated but reciprocated, by giving this Prospectus a few insertions in their respective papers.

5. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future American State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government. [illegible]

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent of the States most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Governments of the States within whose dominions it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That, in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendency in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection [illegible] to the great outlets through which are emptied into the waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby reaffirm the platform of principles announced by the National Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 6th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, have the right to enact laws [illegible] the admission into the Union as States, and therefore, the people are entitled to the right of self-government, and the unrestricted regulation of their domestic institutions, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that all attempts by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, [illegible] the original doctrine of [illegible]; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories, as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and equally [illegible] whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who [illegible] of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, had our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States [illegible]; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those troubles which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, also [illegible] of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the [illegible] the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect equality of the confederation of free and slave States to act harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the welfare and prosperity of the Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; [illegible] in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and intention to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates of this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, had proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to the people of Ohio at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to all, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

BEAUTIFUL ALLEGORY.—Mr. Crittenden, of Kentucky, was at one time engaged in defending a man who had been indicted for a capital offence. After an elaborate and powerful defence, he closed his effort by the following striking and beautiful allegory:

"When God in his eternal counsel conceived the thought of man's creation, he called to him the three ministers who wait constantly upon the throne—Justice, Truth and Mercy, and thus addressed them: 'Shall we make man?' Then said Justice, 'O, God, make him not, for he will trample upon thy laws.' Truth made answer also, 'O, God, make him not, for he will pollute the sanctuaries.' But Mercy, dropping down upon her knees, and looking up through her tears, exclaimed, 'O, God, make him—I will watch over him with my care through all the dark paths which he may have to tread.' Then God made man, and said to him, 'Oh, man, thou art the child of Mercy, go and deal with thy brother.'"

The jury, when he finished, were drowned in tears, and against evidence, and what must have been their own convictions, brought in a verdict of not guilty.

YOUNG MEN IN DIFFERENT COUNTRIES.—Edmund About, in his book, "The Roman Question," makes the following comparison of young men of twenty-five in different countries. After describing the education of young Roman nobles, he says, in his flashy way:

"One fine day they attain their twenty-fifth year. At this age an American has already tried his hand at a dozen different trades, made four fortunes, and at least one bankruptcy, has gone through a couple of campaigns, had a law-suit, established a new religious sect, killed half a dozen men with his revolver, freed a negress, and conquered an island. An Englishman has passed some stiff examinations, been attached to an embassy, founded a factory, converted a Catholic, gone round the world, and read the complete works of Walter Scott. A Frenchman has rhymed a tragedy, written for two newspapers, been wounded in three duels, twice attempted suicide, vexed fourteen [illegible] the position himself. A German has [illegible] of his [illegible], swallowed sixty hogsheads of beer, and the philosophy of Hegel, sung eleven thousand couplets, compromised a bazaar, walking [illegible], smoked a million of pipes, and been mixed up with at least two revolutions.

"The Roman prince has done nothing, seen nothing, suffered nothing. His parents or guardians open a cloister gate, take out a young girl as inexperienced as himself, and the pair of innocents are bidden to kneel before a priest, who gives them permission to become parents of another generation of innocents like themselves."

The British Army at present consists of 246,443 men, of whom [illegible] are stationed abroad. This includes the whole available force, militia, volunteers, rifle corps, enrolled pensioners, &c.

—In the town of Canfield, Mahoning county, O., two extensive coal-oil factories are now in operation, and three more are being built.

—Mr. Phelan and Mr. Foley, a couple of Novices among Knights of the cue passed through Cleveland on Monday last en route for Chicago.

—F. Ulmer, a Cincinnati hatter, was painfully stabbed in Louisville on Friday by F. Fisher, who keeps the Empire house.

—The pickpockets en route to Chicago, on Friday evening last, were said to have adroitly abstracted $190 from the pocket of a gentleman at the depot in Toledo.

—On Thursday of last week the steam saw-mill of Mr. F. S. Bradford, at Norwalk, was burned, the fire is supposed to have originated over the boiler. Loss about $2,000, and no insurance.

—The Democracy of [illegible] county have nominated Alexander E. Grey for Representative; and in Preble county, the same party has nominated Abner Dunlap to represent their county in the next Legislature.

—The Republicans of Lake, Ashtabula and Geauga counties have nominated Col. John F. Morse, of Lake, for State Senator. Col. Morse was formerly speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives.

—The Republicans of Geauga county, have nominated Peter Hitchcock for the House of Representatives. Mr. H. represented that county in the Legislature of 1856–7. He is understood to be in favor of Gov. Chase for the successor of Mr. Pugh in the United States Senate.

—Evan Baker, of Darke, county, has been nominated for the State Senate, by the Democrats of Darke, Shelby and Miami counties, and Mr. Shideler has been nominated for reelection to State Senator by the Democracy of Preble and Montgomery counties.

—D. H. Cook, of Mansfield, is making a flying ship, which he has named "Queen of the Air," in which he expects to make a voyage next Summer to San Francisco, breakfasting here, dining there and returning the same day, making the entire trip in about twelve hours.

—Yesterday afternoon as the trucks men at the C. C. & C. R. R. Freight Depot were rolling on a gangway, a heavy cask of zinc, it fell, striking Henry Barths, who was standing on the planking between the cars and crushed his right leg to a jelly from the knee down. It also inflicted a severe gash upon his neck, and he complains much of a heavy pain in his side, as if internal injuries had been done.

TERRIFIC STORM AT CHICAGO.—The Times of the 11th inst. says:

A terrible storm of wind, rain and hail passed over this city yesterday afternoon. Its direction was from the northwest, a very unusual circumstance with storms in this region at any season of the year. The quantity of rain which fell in the brief space of half an hour was immense, and the wind blew with such tremendous force as to shake the heaviest buildings exposed to its full power. The rain was accompanied by hailstones of the largest size, one of them which we measured being over three inches in diameter.

The wind did considerable damage in various parts of the city. Ward's iron rolling mill, on the west side of the North branch, was damaged to the extent of from $500 to $1,000, over three-fourths of the roof of the upper compartment being blown off.

The roofs of Clybourne's slaughter house and cooper shop on the North branch, were blown off.

A window in the rolling mill store, kept by Patrick Dolton, was blown in.

A number of large trees on the North Side were blown down.

On the West Side, beyond Union Park, where the wind has a fair sweep over the prairie, its tremendous force was felt with great alarm by many of the inhabitants in the outskirts; but we have heard of no serious damage that was done. Several new houses, in progress of erection, were more or less shaken, but beyond this the fury of the storm probably passed without doing much harm.

A NOVEL IDEA.—GREAT [illegible].—Howes & Cushing's United States Circus Company are performing under canvas in Ireland, traveling through the country, and compelled, for the want of tavern accommodations, to encamp every place where they stop. A letter dated at Clonmel, August 23, from one of the proprietors, says:

"We have applied to the owners of the steamship Great Eastern to take us and one hundred horses to America on her first trip, and it is our intention to put a temporary ring on the upper deck, and give equestrian performances to the passengers in fair weather. The track of the ring will be made of India rubber matting, the same as is used in London theatres when circus performances are given on the stage; and the gymnastic tackle, the tight and slack rope fixings and the trapez apparatus, are to be attached to the rigging of the ship."

SLEEP OF PLANTS.—Plants sleep as well as animals; the attitude that some of them assume on the approach of night is exceedingly interesting to those who delight to study the beautiful phenomena of vegetable life. Some plants exhibit signs of sleep more marked than others. The leaves of clover lucerne, and other plants, close as the Sun approaches the horizon, and in the honey locust this characteristic is peculiarly striking and beautiful. The delicately formed leaves close in parallel rows at nightfall and remain so until the rising of the Sun in the morning, when they gradually expand to their fullest extent. It is in common garden chickweed (stellaria media) that the most exemplification of the conjugal love and parental care of plants is observed. At the approach of night, the leaves of this delicate plant, which are in pairs, begin to close towards each other, and when the sleeping attitude is complete, these folded leaves embrace in their upper surfaces the rudiments of the young shoots; and the uppermost pair (but one) at the end of the stalks are furnished with longer leaved stalks than the others so that they can close upon the terminating pair, and protect the end of the shoot.

A TAME COLLECTOR.—A gentleman from New York, who had been in Boston for the purpose of collecting some money due him in that city was about returning, when he found that one bill of a hundred dollars had been overlooked. His landlord, who knew the debtor, thought it a doubtful case, but added that if at all, a tall raw-boned Yankee, then dunning a lodger in another part of the hall, would "worry it out" of the same. Calling him up, therefore, he introduced him to the creditor, who showed him the account.

"Wal, 'Squire," said he, "'tain't much use o' trying, I guess. I know that critter. You might as well try to squeeze it out of Bunker Hill monument as to c'lect a debt out of him. But any how, 'Squire, what'll you give, spose I try."

"Well, sir, the bill is one hundred dollars. I'll give you—yes, I'll give you half if you'll collect."

"Greed," replied the collector, "there's no harm tryin', any way."

Some weeks after the creditor chanced to be in Boston, and walking up Tremont street, encountered his enterprising friend.

"Look o' here," said he, "'Squire, I had considerable luck with that bill o' yours. You see I stuck to him like a dog to a root, but for the first week or so 'twan't no use; not a bit. If he was at home he was short; if he wasn't at home, I could get no satisfaction. By the bye, says I. So I sat down on the door step, and sat all day and part of the evening, and I began early next day; but about ten o'clock he 'gin in. He paid me my half and [illegible]."

DR. DIONYSIUS LARDNER, in one of a series of Essays first published in the London Times in 1851, uses the following language:

"The Mississippi, and its tributaries have served the purpose of commerce and intercommunication for the comparatively thinly-scattered population of the Western States so efficiently, that many years will probably elapse, notwithstanding the extraordinary enterprise of the people, before any considerable extent of railway communication will be established in this part of the States."

At the time the Doctor wrote, there were in the States to which he alludes 1,285 miles of railway, costing about $40,000,000. There are now in those States 12,000 miles of railroad in actual operation, at a cost of construction of $420,000,000, and nearly six thousand more in process of building.

Post-Office Revenue—Tariff on Iron, &c.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—Ex-Senator Cooper has written an interesting letter in response to an application from a committee of Philadelphians, for his opinions relative to the movement at the last session of Congress, for an increase of the existing rates of postage. He says no measure of public policy adopted by the government since its foundation has ever met with such universal acceptance as the reduction of the rates of postage. All sections, all classes of the country united in expressing their approval of this wise and beneficial measure. Its effect was to quicken intellectual activity, promote public prosperity, facilitate intercourse between those whom distance had separated; thus maintaining the sentiments of friendship and kindred, as well as to the advantage and convenience of those engaged in various occupations of life.

If anything were wanting to prove how strongly the people are wedded to cheap postage, it would be found in the favor with which a large majority of them received the defeat of the Post-Office bill, at the late session of Congress; while no people in the world, are more averse than ours to any act, on the part of their representatives, tending to discredit or degrade the Government, or assist any of its departments, in the discharge of their constitutional functions, the defeat of the Post-Office bill was, nevertheless, hailed with general satisfaction; for, inasmuch as one of the provisions of the defeated bill was designed to increase the rate of postage, the authors of this defeat, instead of encountering the execrations of their constituents almost everywhere received their plaudits, although the Post-Office Department, during the whole of a long season, was left without means to carry on its business.

He recommends the alteration of the present law, so as to allow the sale of stamped envelopes at prices now paid for postage stamps, and adds, the only argument, as has already been shown against a reduction, is that, after applying the whole of the revenue derived from present rates to payment of the facilities afforded by the department, there remains an annual deficit of several millions of dollars to be supplied from customs and other sources. This is undoubtedly a fact, but is a poor argument against a reduction of the rates of postage.

If any difficulty existed in raising an amount of revenue sufficient for all the legitimate purposes of the Government, including the deficit in the Post-Office Department, or if such amount could not be raised without detriment to the interests of the country, the argument would be a plausible, if not a conclusive one; but when it is shown, that by a properly discriminated system of duties upon foreign merchandise, an amount of revenue sufficient for all purposes can easily be raised without detriment to commerce or any other interests, the argument is stripped of all its force, and at this moment, when in consequence of too great reduction of duties, and the ad valorem principle on which they are levied, the domestic interests of the country are suffering from the flood of imports poured in upon us from abroad, it is quite manifest so far from being injured by an increase of duties, such increase would be a means, and perhaps the only means, of averting another great commercial revulsion threatened by the enormous amount of our foreign indebtedness.

My views on this subject were fully expressed a few months since in an address delivered in this city to the Iron Masters' Association. The iron trade of the United States, one of the most important, and destined, under a wise and judicious legislative policy, to outstrip in magnitude every other interest of this country, is at present depressed and paralyzed, under a system of low duties, levied on a principle which is obnoxious, to the objection that it leads to the perpetration of fraud, and affords the least amount of duties and protection, when most are needed. That an interest so vast, so national in its character, and on the prosperity and extension of which the commercial supremacy of the country depends, should not only be disregarded and overlooked, but viewed with an eye of jealous distrust by those whom duty and national pride should induce to foster and protect, is an evidence of unworthy and narrow prejudice which sometimes blinds men, who in other respects are just and liberal.

In the great race for commercial dominion, we are already treading on the heels of Great Britain, and it is a most encouraging fact, that if the present value of her exports in iron were subtracted from the aggregate of her foreign commerce, and added to that of the United States, the superiority would belong to the latter. In this contest, whether commercial and political supremacy shall remain with England or be transferred to the United States, will depend in a great measure on the policy of our own government.

Let Congress, then, use the power with which the Constitution has clothed it, to foster and encourage our own industry. Let the government continue the policy introduced by the late Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Guthrie, to discriminate in favor of American manufactures in the disbursement, as well as collection of the public revenue. Let the fiery spirit of sectional discord be quenched, and a just, liberal and national policy be pursued, and there will be an end of those periods of revolutions occasioned by an adverse balance of trade, the consequence of an influx of foreign goods more than commensurate with our natural means of payment.

By pursuing such a policy, the government will avoid a struggle with the difficulties incident to an empty Treasury. It will be no longer exonerated for withholding from the public creditor his just dues, nor be compelled to resort to measures so unwise and deeply distasteful to the people as some of those which lately characterized the administration of some of its departments. But if the government will not be wise, and Congress, influenced by party considerations, dictated by sectional prejudice, should refuse to enact laws for the protection of such branches of national industry as are engaged in an unequal struggle with foreign competitors, who have advantages derived from cheap capital and wages reduced to a mere subsistence, it will be the duty of those whose interests are neglected to devise a remedy adequate to the correction of the grievance complained of.

Such a remedy will be found in an organized league of the suffering interests. That a properly organized league or combination of those whose interests are neglected would have power to correct the evil, can scarcely be doubted by any one acquainted with the extent of the influence they are capable of exercising. The iron interest alone holds the balance of power between the political parties, both in Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and in certain contingencies in several other States of the Union.

In my address to the Iron Masters' Association already referred to, I recommend the organization of such a league in view of the application then about to be made to Congress for an increase of duty on iron, and a change in the mode of assessment. The recommendation, though received with favor by some members, was not acted on, nor was any increase of the duty secured. A committee of gentlemen amongst the most distinguished and intelligent in the State, possessing a large share of individual influence, were dispatched to Washington for the purpose of procuring the desired legislation.

For a while they were flattered with the hope of accomplishing something; but, inasmuch as they relied entirely on the justice of their cause, they failed in their object, as they will always fail, until the tone of supplication is changed to a tone of command, backed by an organization that will cause it to be obeyed. When this is accomplished, justice will be done to their interest, but hardly before.

I trust I have given enough to satisfy that any deficit in the revenue of the Post-Office Department, occasioned by a further reduction of postage, may be supplied from an increase of duties on foreign fabrics, and that this may be done; not only with advantage to the interests subject to competition to trade and commerce generally, by protecting them against the recurrence of those disasters, which have always followed close upon the heels of low duties, and inordinate importations which are a consequence of them.

There was a severe frost throughout northern New York on the night of the 14th, potatoes and all vines are cut to the ground. The degree of cold was so great as to form a hard crust on the ground. There was snow and hail storm during the day.

It may be interesting to note that during the siege of Sebastopol, extending over a period of eleven months, the enormous quantity of 3,775,360 lbs., or 11,239 tons of gunpowder, was expended by the English alone; 3,970 tons of shot and shell were fired from 476 pieces of ordnance, of which only 11 burst, and 389 rendered unserviceable.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Minister McLane was in official communication with the executive department to-day on business pertaining to his mission to Mexico.

Further and reliable advices from Vera Cruz, dated 31st of August, state that the Constitutional government had paid the full amount of the French claims out of the custom's receipts, being $140,000—this money came into the hands of M. Gabriac, the French Minister, who has failed to distribute it in a manner provided in convention; there was reason to believe in official quarters that he intended to invest it in a private enterprise with Miramon. Much indignation continues to be expressed against him by French residents.

It is said that the failure of the treaty between Mexico and the United States was owing to respective differences relative to the clause for the protection of the right of way proposed to be given to this government, the latter claiming to be the best judge when such protection should be undertaken by itself, and the Juarez Cabinet holding that the right should be exercised only in the event of Mexico being incompetent, and on her application for that purpose. In the language of a distinguished Mexican functionary, "the country is as it there were, and from the treaty will be peaceable."

The Picayune of New Orleans, of Wednesday, is furnished by the Southern mail. At the latest dates there had not been a single case of vomito at Vera Cruz. Miramon's soldiers had been without pay for months, in consequence of which there were numerous deserters. The El Progresso speaks of McLane as having a high sense of honor, and a friendly feeling towards the Mexican Republic. Mr. Lawrence, the Secretary of the Legation, had been left in charge of the archives. Business at Mazatlan was unusually good. On the 15th of July there were five large American vessels in port.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Commander Maury is still engaged as one of the consulting committee of the Atlantic Telegraph Co., examining the specimens of cable brought forward for an Ocean Telegraph. The bit of romance related by Willis in the Home Journal regarding the earlier days of Commander Maury in which it is said that when a midshipman, he was married to an Owyhee princess is contradicted.

The President has approved the sentence of the court martial held at Utah, dismissing Lieut. Lynde of the 10th infantry, for conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman.

A private letter from Lord Napier mentions his own arrival at the Hague.

The Brooklyn late from Vera Cruz now at Mobile, has been ordered to proceed to New York.

Assistant Secretary of State Appleton, has returned to this city.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13.—A Utah correspondent of the Democrat makes an expose of the late mule sale at Camp Floyd. He says the Quarter Master General received an order from the Secretary of War, to receive notes of Mr. Holliday as cash for all purchases made by him, and that the auctioneer received secret instructions to knock down mules to Mr. Holliday at certain figures. Under these circumstances Holliday purchased upwards of one thousand mules, paying in notes little more than half what other parties would have paid in cash. The writer also states that Holliday has the contract to supply the Government at Fort Dallas, Oregon, with one thousand mules at his own price.

ZANESVILLE, Sept. 12.—The State Fair grounds are now completed, and the directors say they are the finest grounds that the Society have have ever occupied. Ample stalls for cattle and horses and inexhaustible supplies of [illegible] provided. Seats for three thousand ladies are constructed. Exhibitors coming in very fast and the prospect is that the present will be the best and most successful fair the Society has ever held. The Cincinnati, Wilmington and Zanesville Railroad, have completed their track running directly to the entrance of the fair grounds.

FREEPORT, ILL., Sept. 12.—The Illinois State Fair closed to-day successful. The three thousand dollar prize for steam plow was not awarded on account of the condition of the ground when Fawkes made his trial before the Executive Committee. The trial now stands adjourned until Fawkes returns from the American Institute Fair, at New York, where he is now exhibiting.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—The corner stone of the Roman Catholic Church of St. Francis De Sales, was laid at Charlestown yesterday, in the presence of Bishops Fitzpatrick, of Boston, and Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati.

ST. LOUIS, 8 P. M., Sept. 12.—The Leavenworth and Denver Express of the 4th, with eight thousand dollars in gold, arrived this evening. Business is active.

HALIFAX, Sept. 12.—A tremendous conflagration occurred in this city early on Saturday morning. Two whole blocks on Granville street, numbering fifty buildings, and including thirteen dry goods establishments, were totally destroyed. The damage is not estimated, but it must necessarily be very large. It is reported that three men were killed at the fire.

BOSTON, Sept. 12.—The 8th annual session of the National Pharmaceutical Society will meet in this city to-morrow. Delegates are expected to be present from every State in the Union.

The town hall at Bedford was partially destroyed by fire on Saturday night; also the dry goods store of Jonas Coburn, provision store of James Gibson, and some other property.

PORTLAND, ME., Sept. 13.—The city government has made special arrangements to honor the arrival of the steamship Great Eastern. The programme includes a public dinner and a great military display, with other manifestations of rejoicing.

PORTLAND, Sept. 13.—An election was held in this State yesterday, for Governor and members for Legislature, the returns thus far received indicate the re-election of Gov. M. Morrill Republican for Governor, and an increased Republican supremacy in the State.

WHEELING, Sept. 13.—A Fair of the Western Virginia Agricultural Society opened to-day, the collection of stock which is from all quarters is finer than ever before on exhibition. A number of celebrated fast horses are entered for sweepstakes, Thursday and Friday, the city is fast filling up with visitors; the Fair is a complete success.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The State Department has received information from our minister at Berlin, that Christian Bernert, an American naturalized citizen who had been compelled by force to enter the Hanoverean army, that, upon the remonstrance of our government has been discharged from the service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The shipping list of this city reports the total receipts of the cotton crop of 1858 at all ports of the United States, at 3,851,481 bales, and total crop at 4,019,000 bales. The total exports is stated to be 3,020,519 bales, and the receipts at Northern ports by railroad from Tennessee at about 55,000 bales.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The steamship Ocean Queen from Havre and Southampton has arrived, her advices are to the 1st inst., but have been anticipated by dispatches from Cape Race, where she was boarded by the Associated Press Yacht, and by the report obtained at Farther Point from the steamer Anglo-Saxon.

ALBANY, Sept. 13.—Several Abolitionists and other friends of freedom met here yesterday, and formed a regular organization for the purpose of pressing the passage of a personal liberty bill through the next Legislature, and questioning candidates for the Senate, Assembly, &c., for which purpose a committee was formed, with A. M. Powell, of Ghent, N. Y., as President; G. E. Baker, of Albany, Secretary, and Lydia Mott, Treasurer. A petition for the bill is to be circulated through the State.

Senator Trumbull, of Illinois, leaves this evening, to speak in Cleveland, Ohio, on the 15th Thursday.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Flag officer Montgomery, of the Pacific squadron, writes to the Navy department that Capt. Kelly of the Saranac, reports that he could learn of no material interests of our citizens at Guayaquil demanding protection, that town was evacuated by its inhabitants and its bombardment by the naval forces of Peru threatened, that Republic being at war with Ecuador. Capt. Montgomery says unless otherwise directed he proposes visiting all the ports of Central America and Mexico, as far north as Mazatlan.

Information has been received here that the steamers Cass, Yrissarri and Mary Frances are at San Juan River, Nicaragua, and will be [illegible]

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 12.—The Fifty-third Philadelphia Trade Sales opened at Thomas & Son's, this morning. The attendance was unusually large, and bidding for the opening lots was spirited. The catalogue, consisting of 306 pages, contains a list of publications from the leading houses in the American book trade, including large invoices from all the publishing houses of this city. Among the New York lots are invoices from A S Barnes and Burr, F A Brady, Derby & Jackson, Dick & Fitzgerald, R M Dewitt, C S Francis & Co, W. T. Fry & Co, Johnson, Fry & Co, Leavitt & Allen, Mason Bros, J B Redfield, Rudd & Carlton, C M Saxton, Charles Scribner, D & J Sadlier & Co, E Dunigan & Brothers, and W A Townsend & Co. The Boston publishers on the present catalogue are John P Jewett & Co, Bazin & Ellsworth, Clark & Brown, Gould & Lincoln, W. Veazie, and James Monroe & Co. Some of the London publishers have invoices in this State, viz: The London Printing and Publishing Co, New York; Branch J Cook, and Willis & Latham. T. Wyeth, Harrisburgh, has an invoice, as also have John Lockon, Nashville, W B Sprague, Jr, Albany, and a number of publishers in other cities. The sale will continue until the end of the week.

The first religious ceremony in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul took place this afternoon, the occasion of raising a large gilt cross to its place, surmounting the pediment,—the cross having been previously blessed with appropriate religious ceremonies. The position it occupies is one hundred and fifteen feet from the pavement. The visitors to the Cathedral may now form some idea of its vastness and begin to comprehend without traveling, the grandeur of some of the great churches of Europe. Its dimensions are 220 by 136 feet; the heights of the nave is more than 100 feet; the great dome will be more than 188 feet above this, and the whole elevation of the grand cross that is to surmount this dome will be 250 feet. The massive walls and the solid piers of masonry that are to separate the private chapels, eleven in number, will surprise those who have been accustomed to the lighter buildings that prevail in this country.

Some idea of the magnitude of the work may be obtained when it is stated that in what is called the Drum of the Dome, from the top of the wall to its present elevation, half a million of bricks have been used. The work of building this great church has been going on for ten or twelve years, and it will take several years longer to complete it. The superb arcade on 18th street is the only part that can be called finished, and it is the admiration of every one that sees it. The edifice will be one of the greatest ornaments of Philadelphia, and will give enduring renown to the name of its architect, Mr. Lebrune.

There is now 14 passenger railway lines in operation in this city and vicinity, and three others daily completed in readiness for the cars.

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—The bank statement for the week ending Saturday, shows an increase of loans of $237,000; specie, $280,000; circulation, $20,000; a decrease of deposits of $110,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14.—The Press of Philadelphia in referring to vulgar and persistent abuses of the New York Associated Press, their agents, and American Telegraph Company, by one of its city cotemporaries, remarks with equal severity and justice. Having been read out of the Associated Press, the Ledger resorts to divers expedients to convey foreign news into its pages without paying for it. One day last week it delayed its city impression to insert foreign news from an early acquired copy of one of the morning papers. Yesterday it simply took what appeared in the second edition of Monday's afternoon papers. The Press of yesterday contained a full column of foreign news by the Anglo-Saxon, equivalent to a column and a half of the Ledger, while the stolen matter in the Ledger did not not amount to one fifth of that quantity. Omit the foreign news, and the fortune telling advertisements, and the Ledger will be like the play of Hamlet, with the part of Hamlet omitted by particular desire, yet the Ledger abuses the Associated Press while it steals its European news. In this connection it may make the of the Nova Scotia Telegraph Company. In its special arrangements with private news speculators, who secured the absolute control of the wires between Halifax and Sackville, for six hours consecutively from the moment the European steamers arrived in the port of Halifax. The American Telegraph Company to its everlasting honor, refused to sanction the news speculators arrangements, and insisted upon the only just rule of "first come first served." The managers of the Ledger were enraged at the conduct of the Associated Press and the American Telegraph Company, and hence the Ledger is obliged to resort to the disreputable conduct which one of its city cotemporaries exposed.

ST. JOHNS, N. B., Sept. 14.—The fire at Halifax, on Friday night, destroyed Watts building on Hallis street, occupied by M. Amhurst, auctioneer; Mr. Simmonds, Stove Store; and G. Hatt, Spice Dealer; Champlains, Store Store; Hunters' Flour Store; Taylors' Flour Store, and a similar establishment of Mr. Whitall, on Granville street, stores of Mr. Murdock, Dry Goods merchant tailor; Mr. Webb, Druggist; Mr. Rogers, Hatter; Mr. Richardson's Confectionery; Mr. Mackinley's, Boot Store; London's, Boot Store; Wilmore, Vaux & McCullough's Dry Good Store; Mr. McKenzie Watchmaker; Creighton & Waswells, Dry Good Store; Combs, Shoe Store; J. B. Bennett's Dry Good Store; also Duffy & Co., Delatire & Raynors, Roman Stone building; Mr. Gordon's, Woolen Ball; Mr. Chapmans, Dry Good Store; Mr. Skengs, Dry Good Store; M. Megnounia, Dry Good Store; Mr. Redmont, Hat Store; Mr. Creighton's Book Store, on Barrington street. There were also several house destroyed, including the Printing Office of Mr. Blockeader, and Messrs. [illegible] & Son. The destruction of property was immense; the damages will probably reach $1,000,000.

Later advices from the Dominican Republic, are received by an arrival from Port au Platt. Dissatisfaction with the Government of Gen. Santa Anna was becoming general, and a new revolutionary movement was looked for as likely to occur at an early day. Some American counterfeiters of Dominican currency who had been caught and shut up in prison at Santiago, had effected their escape. Business at Port au Platt was active.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14.—The Stockdale Mill, near Baltimore, the property of Col. Geo. P. Kane, was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss amounted to $14,000, which is fully insured. The fire was caused by an incendiary.

Gen. Scott leaves Washington this afternoon in obedience to a telegraphic summons.

The Vice-President of the town meeting to-day, pursuant to resolution, selected a committee to make nominations, composed of men of sterling character, excluding merchants and tradesmen. No doubt a strong ticket will soon be presented. The enemies of the movement are getting dismayed. The rowdies and club-leaders have nearly all disappeared from their accustomed gathering places, and the city is perfectly quiet.

The ship Duchess d'Orleans, which arrived here to-day, reports that on August 19th, in latitude 9 W. 42 S. W., longitude 44 W. 53 S. W., she passed a wreck burned down to the water's edge, apparently of same day.

PORTLAND, ME., Sept. 14.—Returns from 20 additional town indicate that Gov. Morris' majority will reach over 15,000; the Republicans have elected thirty out of thirty-one Senators, and nearly three-fourths of the Representatives. Official information is received here that the Great Eastern leaves Holyhead for Portland on the 15 inst.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The State Convention of the Democrats for nomination of candidates for State officers will meet at Syracuse to-day. The principal interests in the proceedings of the Convention will centre in the determination of a method of choosing delegates to the National Convention at Charleston. It is believed, however, that a considerable majority will be in favor of electing the delegates at once, instead of by the district system. Gideon J. Tucker, Secretary of State, will probably be nominated. Mr. Tucker declines a nomination.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—Since the stoppage at the Post-office of the documents purporting to have been franked by Mr. Covode, Mr. Blair, of Mo., and one or two other Republican Members of Congress, have been here in person to affix their franks.

The indication in official quarters in respect to the dispute about the Island of San Juan are not of an inevitable war character.

Lord Lyons, in his interview with Secretary Cass this morning, expressed confidence in the amicable settlement of the North-western question.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The Democratic State Convention met here to-day. There were two Conventions (soft and hard) organized in one hall. Thomas G. Alvord, ex Speaker of the Assembly, acted as Chairman of the Soft Convention, and M. J. Smythe, of the Regency, of the Hards. A scene of great excitement prevailed, and some terrible rows and fighting occurred among the [illegible]. Marshal Rynders was knocked [illegible]. The Soft Convention finally adjourned, leaving the Hards in possession of the hall. Fernando Wood then made a fiery speech, [illegible] the Softs as [illegible] of the Convention. [illegible] the regular committee, Mr. Smythe, the Hard Chairman, was knocked off the platform. The Hards finally adjourned, when Mr. Smythe again took the chair and organized the Convention.

The confusion incident to the time of meeting of the Democratic Convention approaches. Tickets of admission to the hall have been issued to all the delegates and contestants.

Fernando Wood, Jas. A. Green, Hiram J. Tucker, and other Hards, have been in session this morning, and resolved to [illegible] before the committee of the New York contested Seats, and agreed to [illegible] attempt to settle that question by compromise.

Mr. Dodge has advocated equal representation for Rozart and Lemandy on the [illegible] and councils [illegible]. Messrs. Rodgers of Pike, Scholl and Muller, do not act cordially with the Wood party. Stewart Cameron is here, and has been in consultation with Wood and Dickinson. The Convention will organize temporarily at noon. The Softs are vehement and talk of conciliation. The Wood men [illegible] insist on selecting all their share of delegates to Charleston Convention.

Before 1 o'clock the gallery was crowded densely with spectators. A large number of delegates were present, with numbers of outsiders. Immediately on the opening of it, Hiram C. Smith, of Monroe, jumped on the floor and moved that Tom. J. Alvord be temporary Chairman of the Convention. The vote was instantly put and carried. Immense excitement followed. A majority of the convention being taken by surprise, no motion to prevent any attempt at amendment. Instantly on the vote being declared, Thomas J. Alvord, who was on the platform, took the Chair and called the Convention to order.

A motion was then instantly made to name S. Packard of Cattaraugus and [illegible] of Schoharie, Secretaries. This was also carried amidst perfect panic on the part of the [illegible] O. D. Murray, of Cattaraugus who took the floor and moved the following:

Resolved, That regretting the difficulty in the Democratic party in the city of New York, this Convention will not decide upon the regularity of two existing organizations there, and hereby admits to seats both delegations from that city, with equal rights upon that floor.

Loud and overpowering shouts of questions, question, from all parts of the [illegible]. Mr. [illegible] took the floor, but for a long time his voice was drowned in shouts for the question, and most deafening uproar. Jumping on a table, Mr. Cochrane continued amidst [illegible], which continued until Peter Cagger [illegible] the platform and called the Convention to order, and nominated Jas. Smythe, of Rome, temporary chairman.

An immense riot followed, during which no word could be heard. That [illegible] Capt. Isaiah Rynders came forward in support of Mr. Cochrane, when he was [illegible] confronted by [illegible] and [illegible] were partially thrown, when [illegible] a New York boy, sprung at [illegible] "I must stop this fight."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—The indications in official quarters in respect to the difficulties at the Island of San Juan are not of an inevitable war character.

From all that can be ascertained in well informed circles, it is apparently to infer that no serious difficulties are likely to result between the two countries. If any danger is apprehended it is in consequence of the [illegible] character of General Harney.

Coaster Rowing [illegible] to-day [illegible] John Gregory [illegible] left for New York [illegible] with dispatches [illegible] Majesty's [illegible].

The death of a [illegible] Rico being reported [illegible] and surprise in official quarters [illegible] time, minister from that [illegible] for New York, to meet ex-President [illegible].

Col. Cutterly left Washington to-day for the command of the military depot in New Mexico.

Mr. Hendricks' resignation as Commissioner of the Land Office takes place to-morrow.

The President has appointed Wm. J. Kemp, of Nebraska, as agent for the Indians in the Omaha Agency, vice Wilson, resigned.

Commander Bent has been ordered to the Washington Navy Yard, and Commander Thatcher to the Boston Navy Yard. Lieut. Watson has been ordered to relieve Lieut. Rablin, commander of the store ship Fredonia, at Valparaiso. Lieut. Murray has been ordered to the naval rendezvous at Norfolk, and Thomas Walker and Davidson to the naval academy.

The New York Herald's special Washington correspondent says General Scott's arrival is required relative to the San Juan Island difficulty, and will have arrived for a meeting of the Cabinet which will be held on Thursday, for the purpose of reading over the last dispatches from General Harney, and taking up the general bearings of the affair. In this light General Scott's opinion is considered absolutely necessary by the President.

The Administration are a good deal concerned in regard to the present aspect of affairs growing out of the seizure of the Island of San Juan. They are fearful that a collision will take place before dispatches recently transmitted can reach Gen. Harney.

Nothing has been received from Commissioner Campbell who has been engaged for upwards of two years arranging the boundary.

Mr. Preston, our minister to Spain, will doubtless return home as soon as he learns of the death of Governor Wickliffe. Our government at the request of his family have written to him, giving him leave of absence, provided he desires it.

The dispatch from St. Louis in yesterday's papers in regard to the sale of mules at Camp Floyd is a tissue of falsehood from beginning to end.

The Peruvian Minister had a long interview with the Secretary of State to-day, in reference to affairs now transpiring between the two governments.

Peru has recently manifested a disposition to settle a number of long standing [illegible] held by our citizens.

NEW YORK, September 14.—The system of the West Point Cadets by Lieut. Gen. Scott was fixed for to-day, being the twelfth anniversary of the entrance of the American army into the city of Mexico. Arrangements have been made by Superintendent Col. Delafield and his hospitable wife to make it quite a gala day, and many persons from this city and elsewhere had arranged to temporarily visit the Point last evening. However, General Scott was summoned by telegraph to proceed to Washington, and the honored chief, always ready for duty, started at an early hour this morning from the Point, under a salute from the battery; not so early, however, but that he was before sunrise serenaded by the West Point band, at his quarters at Cozzens' Hotel. The disappointment at the Point to-day, among visitors and others, is great, and they are all for the moment disgusted with the invention of telegraphic communications.

CHICAGO, Sept. 14.—The weather continues favorable. The books closed yesterday, up to which time upwards of 2,000 entries were made, including nearly 1,500 mechanical and agricultural implements. The receipts the first two days, including fees for exhibition of articles, were nearly twelve thousand dollars. The number of visitors at the ground to-day were estimated at 50,000. Flora Temple and Princess arrived to-day and are entered for the chosen's purse of one thousand dollars. Fawkes's steam plow from New York, and Waters's from Detroit, were brought into the grounds to-day and were exhibited, and were the special feature of the forenoon.

NEW YORK, Sept. 14.—The steamer Philadelphia, from Havana, with dates to the 8th inst., arrived at this port this evening. There is no news of importance. The weather continued hot, and the public health was no better. Sugars were still dull, though there was a trifle more doing. Molasses was without operation.

Freights very dull and nominal.

Exchanges were firm on London at 14@15 ℔ cent. premium; on New York 3@4 per cent. premium.

Douglas in the Ascendant.

What more is wanting to show the sympathetic beat of the great heart of the people with and for the Illinois statesman? The severest criticism follows him in every line he writes. The expenditure of oratory and eloquence in answering his true, natural, and national logic, is absolutely amazing. Even the valiant Lincoln, who followed him like a sleuth-hound, scenting blood at every step, urged and applauded by unscrupulous and "bought minions of power,"—he who had won reputation by being the gladiator who was brought into the arena to face the champion of the people, he, the valiant Lincoln, has been here! Even the prestige of having contested, inch by inch, through an unparalleled campaign, the true interpretation of the Constitution of the United States, the sovereignty of the people, the history, nature and essence of our government, the restricted powers of the Federal Government, and the sovereignty of the people, whether as States or in the more limited form of Territories—even this renown, could not draw a crowd of people to hear his annihilation of the "Little Giant."—In vain did the drums beat and the bugle send forth its stirring notes; in vain did banners and placards strive to do their duty. It was no go. The people were not there! After a delay of an hour, and when in compassion for the meagre assemblage, Democrats were induced to swell the insignificant gathering that might have been easily crowded into the City Hall, (and really we do not wish or mean to disparage the meeting, which was an intelligent assemblage, though neither numerous nor enthusiastic,) Mr. Lincoln was introduced—a tall, what might be called gangling, though not unintelligent looking personage. His personnel was rather in his favor, for, looking at the shape of his head and the quizzical expression of his face, as he knitted his brows, and his mouth braced itself up for that inimitable smile, as if it was ready to say something overwhelmingly good, or severe, the spectator was led to anticipate that there was a regular broadside in reserve, and ready to be discharged into the adversary. But vain were any such expectations. The very committee appointed to meet and chaperone him, appeared (not entirely ashamed, but) timid in the discharge of their office. How unlike the Douglas demonstration here, when men rushed in from all quarters to hear from his own lips those national ideas which compose the political creed of Mr. Douglas! In point of size, the Lincoln gathering did not exceed one-tenth of that which was addressed by Mr. Douglas, and there was not the slightest enthusiasm.—As a demonstration, it was evidently a failure, although a number of claqueurs were busy in impressing upon those whom they held by the button, that Mr. Lincoln was a very great man, and absolutely was demolishing Mr. Douglas!

Mr. Lincoln re-asserted his idea, appropriated by Mr. Seward, that freedom and slavery are in internal antagonism, and that the free and slave States cannot remain in harmony in the Union—that they must be all slave or all free. To this doctrine many of the Republicans in this meridian cannot subscribe. They believe rather with Mr. Douglas, that, as in the past, they can be of the same family, if each will attend to its own business, and let that of others alone. The National Era, the leading Republican organ, in a reply to Gerrit Smith assumes the same ground. It says:

"Mr. Smith is quite mistaken in representing the Republican party as admitting the legality of slavery in the slave States. When and where has it been admitted? No proof of the statement can be produced."

Is it not very apparent from Lincoln, and Seward and the Era, that Republicanism intends to break down all constitutional restraint and make war upon the institution of slavery, not only as regards the Territories, but in the States themselves, where it exists? What but civil commotion and internecine war would be the result, should their policy prevail?—For, [illegible] and internal commotions are always the most deadly.

Will the so-called Republicans of Central and Southern Ohio, accept the proposition of Messrs. Lincoln and Seward and the National Era? Will they acquiesce that the legality of slavery in the States has not been admitted by the Republican party? Are they prepared to go a long stride beyond the steps already taken, but in the direction of which their policy is irresistibly tending?

The signs of the times are ominous of the ascendancy of Douglas. He is greeted with enthusiasm wherever he goes.—The great heart of the people beats in harmony and sympathy with his.

Mr. Smith an Independent Candidate for Clerk.

It was with sincere regret we saw this announcement in the Daily Fact. It is in defiance of the rules of party organization, and will doubtless subject the "independent candidate" to severe animadversion, from some of those who had cordially supported his nomination at the Primary Election. As a basis for that extraordinary step he has taken, Mr. Smith says:

"I declared prior to the Primary Election, that I would neither accept a nomination nor submit to defeat, procured by other than regular Democratic votes; and I shall keep my word."

After such a declaration, is it not singular that he should place himself in a position where he cannot expect to be elected by Democratic votes, but must succeed, if he succeed at all, through the instrumentality of Opposition votes. While we admit the right of every individual to run for office, as the saying is, "on his own hook," still we very much question the prudence of any such step, after submitting one's name to the choice of either a Convention or Primary Election. A man may be able to leap from a house-top, at the imminent peril of his neck, but it would not be wise to try the experiment. Mr. Smith says he would not have any but Democratic votes at the Primary Election; how is it with him now? Will he restrict himself solely to Democratic votes? Or will he consent to borrow a few from the adversary? We do not want to widen the breach that must grow between Mr. Smith and his late party—nor do we affect any severity of comment upon his conduct. He is a gentleman of character, and entitled to the regard and respect of his fellow-citizens. He certainly has ours, and therefore while we fully sympathise with him under the disappointment and mortification of defeat, we cannot but feel that he has planted himself in a false position which must estrange from him many of his earnest and ardent friends. We should have been pleased to use every endeavor in our power to secure his election, had he been nominated; but as we are satisfied that his competitor fairly won the "call," we shall insist that the Democrats stand by their regularly nominated candidate.

Great Meeting at Columbus.

The announcement of a speech from Senator Douglas at Columbus, on Wednesday last, drew together an immense assemblage from different parts of the State. Hon. H. B. Payne called the meeting to order. Col. Manypenny, editor of the Statesman, presided. The speech of Mr. Douglas occupied about two hours, and was listened to with marked attention.—The report of the speech, as published in the Statesman, and which may be found on the outside of to-day's Sentinel, is unexceptionable in temper and spirit.—Cadiz Sentinel.

Which do you mean was unexceptionable, the speech or the report? The latter was a syllabus, probably obtained from Mr. Douglas, and was not a production, to the credit of which the Statesman was entitled. Knowing the attitude in which he and his paper stand here, there was no little disgust entertained for the obsequious manner in which Manypenny waited on the "Little Giant." He is one of the great men, formed of small materials, who look considerably smaller the nearer you approach them.

A DEMOCRATIC SPEECH.—E. B. Hutcheson, Esq., of Cincinnati, addressed a Democratic meeting at the City Hall on Friday evening last. His remarks were principally directed to 'Old Line Whigs,' and were not only couched in eloquent language, but irrefragable. For that reason, the State Journal, instead of assailing the speech of Mr. Hutcheson with fair and manly criticism, applied meaningless and stupid terms to Mr. Hutcheson, which were harmless from their very coarseness. We have heard no speech in the State canvass which possessed more interest or merit. It was sound, eloquent and logical; and the necessity of every man who called himself "a Whig—a Henry Clay Whig," uniting with the Democratic organization to resist the threatening wave of Abolitionism, was most conclusively shown. Mr. Hutcheson's remarks, written out, would constitute one of the best and most formidable documents for the campaign.

POSTPONED.—The discussion which was to have taken place on Tuesday between Messrs. Ranney and Dennison, at this place, was postponed in consequence of the severe indisposition of the former, until the 4th of October. Mr. Dennison, himself, was not in good plight, and readily acquiesced in the arrangement. Ridiculous stories were immediately put in circulation, such as that "Ranney has played out," or "broke down," but they had a short run. The people were not to be fooled by such stuff. Several hundred had come in from the country to hear the discussion, and were much disappointed; but when informed of the cause of the postponement, only felt regret that the health of Judge Ranney would not permit him to speak.

ALTON.—This thriving and lively village has instituted a debating club, which is very generally attended, and is maintained with great spirit by the citizens.—It is called the "Independent," and discusses political and practical, as well as metaphysical, questions.

MISSOURI FOR DOUGLAS.—We have within the last week or two received private letters from the Western part of Missouri, which speak most enthusiastically of Mr. Douglas. There can be no doubt of the State being for him

The County Fair.

The Agricultural Fair of Franklin County was held last week. The cattle and horses were more numerous and of better stock than we have seen here before. The vegetable offerings were very fine, and no exhibition of fruit, made previously, could compare with the display on this occasion. In the pomological department, the show was truly magnificent.

Among the amusements which were quite as attractive to the numerous visitors, as the agricultural display, were Goodrich's Juvenile troop of Minstrels, whose performances were not only unexceptionable, but in many instances were models of their kind. Little Charley McEwen has wonderfully improved, and presents the smallest and best specimen of a finished dancer—an artist beyond question or cavil—on record. We understand that this troop will be at Zanesville, during the State Fair, and we have no hesitation in recommending them to our friends there, who delight in artistic performances; as theirs is one of the best exhibitions of the kind now in any part of the country.—Little "Charley" is a most accomplished dancer, and their songs and harmonies, burlesques and facetiæ are given with great point and piquancy.

The managers of the Fair, in the hurry and bustle of business, pay too little attention to the newspaper press; nor are the awards always the most judicious.—We heard some complaints, and not without reason. Kissing goes by favor, and in awarding premiums, persons are sometimes subjected to the mortification of having an inferior article, or animal, preferred over their own, upon which peculiar care, regardless of expense, has been lavished.

The specimens of penmanship established by Mr. S. J. McCoy, of McCoy's Commercial College, of this city, were beyond comparison, the finest we ever saw at any exhibition. The piece prepared for exhibition at the State Fair cannot be excelled. There was no attempt at competition at the County Fair; nor can it be disputed, with any regard to veracity, that Mr. McCoy has no rival in penmanship here or elsewhere. It gives us pleasure to be able to state that his school, opening to Fall classes, promises unusually large numbers. The ablest assistants are engaged, and the finest order and system prevail. Professor Worley and Geo. Andrews still remain attached to their respective departments, and in imparting a knowledge of what they are engaged to teach, have been eminently successful.—We congratulate Mr. McCoy upon the permanent basis upon which his Commercial College has been erected, and the successful progress which has distinguished its past history.

Among the agreeable institutions on exhibition at the County Fair, was the eating saloon of Eph. Beller, which was conducted in the handsomest style. And for neatness, attention, and appointments, it was not excelled by any hotel in the city. Mr. Beller is the urbane and popular host of the Galt House, which has had considerable influence in increasing the population, business and importance of the North-End. His house is an agreeable place of sojourn—his table unsurpassed in the city, and his guests were never known to complain.—We hope "Eph." made a good thing of his impromptu hotel at the Fair, for he deserved to "put money in his purse."

Mark Keightley, our old friend who has been the most successful vender of agricultural implements, for years, whom we have known, was there with a model of the combined mower and reaper, which struck us as being a most perfect and valuable invention. The application of machinery to agricultural purposes, has greatly reduced the labor of the farmer, and enhanced the value of his occupation. We should not be afraid to buy any article which had Mr. Keightley's judgment, for he is not only experienced, but is just and fair in his dealings.

The Fair was more successful than on any former occasion; and went off with considerable eclat. In many of its details there might be improvement.—The division of labor might be advantageously extended, and much of the hurry and bustle, and consequent confusion avoided. But we do not set ourself up as censor, and congratulate those who manage the County Fair, upon the successful termination of their labor for 1859.

WILL IT PUBLISH?—Will the Statesman publish the review of the article in Harper for September, by Judge Douglas, which has been attributed to the pen of Attorney-General Black, and which the Washington Constitution calls "a masterly pamphlet?" The fight goes on.—The President, Cabinet, "little dogs and all," are barking at the heels of Mr. Douglas. The hireling presses through the country, bought up or established by government patronage, are echoing the "hue and cry." Is it not the duty of the Statesman to follow, en suite? Will President Buchanan consent that it shall stand acquitted of obsequious attention to Mr. Douglas, on the occasion of his recent visit here, unless the amende is made by publishing this "masterly pamphlet?" It was whispered here, a day or two since, that another change was contemplated in the Post Office at this place.—Surely "Tom" has a hard time of it, "in and out."

THE STATE FAIR.—The selection of time, just at the Equinox, was most unfortunate. Although it does not always happen, still storms and untoward weather may generally be anticipated about the time the sun passes the line, or its annual winter tour. Yesterday was as gloomy for an "opening" as well could be imagined; and with the preparations for a most magnificent display in every department, unless there be speedy improvement in the weather, the enjoyment must be measurably curtailed. The hospitality of Zanesville is said to be most generous and genial; but even that, while remembered with gratefulness, cannot repair the disappointment many must undergo.

Hon. Stephen A. Douglas in Cincinnati!

[We give the conclusion of Mr Douglas's speech in Cincinnati, the first part of which appeared in our last issue.]

There can be no peace on the slavery question; there can be no truce on the sectional strife; there can be no fraternity between the Northern and Southern States so long as Congress is permitted to interfere with the local and domestic institutions of any Territory of this Union. That question was decided distinctly in 1850, when the Compromise measures were passed. You all recollect that during that struggle, there was a Southern party demanding Congressional intervention to maintain slavery in opposition to the wishes of the people, and, on the other hand, there was an ultra-Northern Anti-slavery party demanding Congressional intervention to abolish and prohibit slavery, regardless of the wishes of the people or the local law. These two ultra parties, these two interventionists, the one Southern and the other Northern, disturbed the harmony of the country, and perilled the existence of the Union.

In that great struggle, the immortal Clay, who had performed his mission on earth, and retired to the shades of Ashland, to prepare for a better and a happier world, soon, in his retirement, heard the rumbling, harsh, discordant notes of sectional strife and sectional controversy, and came forth from his home to resume his seat in the Senate—that great theatre of his great deeds—to see if he, by his experience, by his wisdom, and by the renown of his famous name, could not do something to calm the troubled waters, and restore peace and fraternity to a divided and distracted country. (Cries of "Glorious," "Hear, hear.")

From the moment that Henry Clay made his appearance in the Senate, all party strife was hushed; all partisan controversy ceased; the voice of discord was no longer heard, and Clay was recognized and proclaimed the leader of all the Union men North and South, Whigs and Democrats—for the period of six months we assembled in caucus every day, with Clay in the chair, Cass upon his right and Webster upon his left hand, and the Whigs and Democrats ranged on either side, promiscuously, supporting and sustaining Clay in his efforts to devise a plan to restore peace and harmony to the country.—(Cheers.)

You all know the result of these deliberations—the Compromise Measures of 1850 were adopted, peace was restored, and the country was again reunited. Now, let me ask you upon what principle does the Compromise rest? Examine the bills, and search the records, and you will find that the great principle which underlies those measures is the right of the people of each State, and each Territory while a Territory, to decide the slavery question for themselves. (Three cheers.) Mr. Seward, Gov. Chase, Mr. Sumner, and the leaders of the Republican party, united with the Southern fire-eaters in resisting the Compromise Measures of 1850, because they asserted the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty.

We passed those measures over their heads. The Union men, Whigs and Democrats, Clay, Webster and Cass, supported and sustained by the young men of the two parties, passed the Compromise Measures, and adopted the principle of non-intervention and popular sovereignty over the heads of Northern Abolitionists and Southern Interventionists. (Three cheers for Douglas.) I care not where the Interventionist lives, by what name he calls himself, or on which side he intervenes, he is an enemy of Democratic principles if he is intervening at all against the peace of the country. (Cheers.)

This great principle must be met and must be decided in the Presidential election of 1860. (Cries of "You are our choice," "Hurrah for Douglas," "He's the man," &c.)

Mr. Seward, who is the most eminent and authoritative expounder of Republican principles, according to the modern designation of the party, tells you there is an "irrepressible conflict" between freedom and slavery, free labor and slave labor, free States and slave States, which must continue to rage until the States all become free, or all become slave. (A voice, "The star-spangled banner.") Mr. Seward is undoubtedly a man of eminent ability—he is the most authoritative expounder of Republican doctrines; but when he uttered that sentiment he ought to have felt bound by a sense of justice and courtesy to have acknowledged that he borrowed the sentiment from an eminent leader of his own party. (Laughter.) Three months previous to Mr. Seward's Rochester speech, Mr. Abraham Lincoln, of Illinois, in making a speech accepting the nomination of the Republican party of his State, had announced the same principle in more explicit and emphatic language. He told the people of Illinois that "agitation would not cease until a crisis should be met and passed;" that "a house divided against itself could not stand;" that "this Union, separated into free and slave States, would not endure permanently, and that the contest must go on until the States should become all free or all slave—all the one thing or all the other."

Did you ever hear of a Republican that dissented from the position of Mr. Lincoln, in that canvass of Illinois. (A voice, "Never.") Does not the Republican party throughout the land acquiesce in and endorse the doctrine of Mr. Seward in his Rochester speech, or the similar sentiments of Chase, in Ohio? (A voice, "We are satisfied.") The doctrine of the leader of the Republican party is, that the States must become all free or all slave; that they can not endure part free and part slave; that the contest must continue and increase in fury, until the one class of States has been annihilated by the complete triumph of the other. Such is the real purpose of the Republican party.—Now, when do you expect to have peace on the slavery question? When do you expect to have harmony between Cincinnati and Covington, between Ohio and Kentucky, if you wait until the States become all free or all slave? (A voice, "When they change their politics.") A Republican in the crowd says he expects that harmony when freedom triumphs. There you find an indorsement of the position of Seward and Lincoln, that the States must be all free, in order to have harmony. (A voice, "Hit him again.")

Let us examine for a moment this doctrine of uniformity contended for by the Republicans on the slavery question. Is that doctrine consistent with the genius and principles of our Federal Constitution?

I assert that the framers of the Constitution neither contemplated nor desired uniformity in respect to the local and domestic institutions of the several States.—They knew that in a country as broad as this, with such a variety of climate, of soil and of interest, there must be, necessarily, a corresponding variety in the local laws and domestic institutions, adapted to the wants and interest of each locality.—(Cries of "Hear, hear," and "That is it.") They knew that the laws and institutions which were well adapted to the granite hills of New Hampshire, were unsuited to the Tobacco plantations of Virginia; they knew that the laws and institutions which were adapted to the wheat-fields and corn-fields of Ohio, were not well adapted to the sugar plantations of Louisiana; they knew that the laws and institutions which would suit the prairies of Illinois, would be unsuited to the gulches and placers and gold-mines of California.

Knowing these facts, they framed a system of government composed of independent States, each with a legislature of its own, with sovereign power to make all laws and all institutions affecting their internal policy, to suit themselves, without the interposition of Congress or any other power on Earth. (A voice on the skirts of the crowd—"Hurrah!")

But let us suppose for a moment that this new doctrine of uniformity in the domestic institutions had prevailed when the Constitution had been framed, what could have been the result? Bear in mind that the Union was then composed of thirteen States, twelve of which were slave States, and one only was a free State. Suppose Mr. Seward or Mr. Lincoln had been a member of the Convention which had framed the Constitution, and had risen and fixing his eyes upon the immortal Washington, who presided over the august body, and said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand; this Union composed of free and slave States cannot endure; there is an irrepressible conflict between freedom and slavery, free States and slave States, which must endure until slavery shall be abolished every where, or established every where, throughout the Republic."

Suppose they had succeeded in impressing this new, modern Republican doctrine on the Convention that framed the Constitution, do you think that slavery would have been abolished in all the States?—Do you think that one free State would have outvoted the twelve slaveholding States in that Convention, and abolished slavery every where? Or would the slave States outvoted the one free State, and finally established slavery on every inch of the American Republic, by an irrepealable Constitutional provision? (Applause.)

Thus, you see, if this modern doctrine of uniformity on the slavery question had prevailed when the Government was founded, we would have been a united slave-holding nation, with slavery fastened on the people of Ohio to-day, beyond the power of resistance. (Voices, "That is so," "That is the truth.") At that day the friends of freedom and the enemies of slavery only asked that Congress should not interfere; that the Federal Government should not wield its power either for or against, but that each State should be left free to decide for itself.

The Convention acted upon the principle asserted in that moral triumph of the day, that error could be tolerated as long as freedom of opinion was preserved to combat it. They were willing to leave each State as they found it, free or slave, with the right to continue slavery as long as they chose, and to abolish it whenever they pleased. Our system of Government was established on that principle, the principle which they had inherited from the Colonies, which they had achieved by the blood of the Revolution. The principle was not new to the framers of the Constitution. They knew that the first serious point of dispute between the American Colonies and the British Government had arisen on the slavery question; they knew that the American Colonies, before the Revolution, always claimed the right to decide the slavery question for themselves as a local, domestic question affecting their internal policy. They knew that this Government had denied that right to the Colonies, and, in lieu of that right, reasserted the doctrine that Parliament possessed sovereign power over the Colonies, and could bind them, in all cases whatsoever, including the slavery question, the same as the modern Republican party and the interventionists, North and South, claim that Congress possesses the sovereign power over the Territories, and hence may intervene, in violation of the wishes of the people and the sanctity of the local law, to overrule local legislation and control the domestic institutions.

Our fathers, before the Revolution, claimed that it was the birthright of Englishmen—the inalienable right—when formed into communities, to decide all local questions to suit themselves, and the battles of the Revolution were fought in defence of that principle.

Now, let me ask you if it is the birthright of all Englishmen before the Revolution to decide those local questions to suit themselves, did it not become the brithright of all Americans after the Revolution, by virtue of it, to settle all such questions to suit themselves? (A voice—"That is so!") In other words, are not the people of the American Territories, being American citizens—our brethern and kindred—entitled to as many rights of self-government as British subjects were before the Revolution? (A voice—"They ought to be.")

The Democratic party only claim for the Territories those identical rights which our fathers claimed and maintained at the point of the bayonet for the American Colonies. You must bear in mind that our fathers were not contending for the rights of the sovereign States; they were struggling for the rights of the Colonies—of Provinces—of Territories—their exclusive right to govern themselves in respect to their local and internal policy, and because Great Britain would not permit them to exercise their right they then struck for independence, rather than give up the inestimable privileges of self-government.—(A voice—"That was all right.")

I stand to-night as I have stood for ten years, vindicating this great and inestimable right of local self-government in all political communities—States as well as Territories. (A voice—"We'll make you President; another—"You have got your baggage checked and a through tickett.") That is the mission of the Democratic party to maintain this inestimable right. It was once the joint duty of the Whig and Democratic parties, according to their respective pledges, to maintain that principle, independent of party creeds. In 1850 that doctrine was incorporated into the Territorial policy by the joint action of the two great parties.

At that day it was unfair and unjust to claim the doctrine a peculiarly Democratic or peculiarly Whig to the exclusion of the other party, for it was the joint work and common property of both parties; accordingly in 1852, when the Whig party assembled in National Convention, at Baltimore, and nominated General Scott as its candidate for Presidency, they incorporated into the platform a resolution declaring the purpose and pledge of the Whig party in all time to come, to adhere to the principles of the Compromise Measures of 1850 as the rule of action in the organization of Territories and the admission of new States. When the Democratic party assembled in National Convention at the same place, one month afterward, and nominated Gen. Pierce for the Presidency, we asserted the same principle and gave the same pledge. Thus the two great parties—the Whig and Democratic—in 1852 stood pledged to stick to doctrines of non-intervention and popular sovereignty.

When, at a subsequent term, Mr. Seward and Gov. Chase and Mr. Sumner and others concluded to strangle the old Whig party, and abolitionize its Northern forces, they found it necessary to abolish the party, to dissolve its organization and change its name before they could repudiate the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty. They appealed to all the old Whigs of the country to remain steadfast in their hatred to Democracy and their hostility to the Democratic organization, while they tied cords around their hands and feet, blindfolded them and led them into the Abolition camp for father Giddings to christen them in the Abolition faith.—(Laughter—a voice, "Hit him again, he has no friends here!") Even to this day, whenever an old line Whig has stood by his faith and by his integrity, and refused to join the Abolitionists, or to be enrolled in the Republican ranks, he is called a deserter. Deserter from What? Did he ever belong to a sectional party. (A voice—"No, sir; was a Whig ever an Abolitionist?")

But yet every old Whig who stands to-day where Clay stood in 1850, and at the time of his death, asserting the doctrine of non-intervention and popular sovereignty, and acting with those who stand firm by that doctrine, is abused by the Republican party as a turn-coat and a traitor.—To all men who make that charge against old line Whigs, I will remind them of the last speech of Henry Clay before the Legislature of Kentucky, in which he told them that if the day ever came, as he apprehended it must soon, when the Whig party would be reduced to a miserable abolition faction, that he would join the Democracy and uphold the Constitution. (Applause.) Clay, to the last, stood forth as the embodiment of union principles, union measures, conservative views, which would keep united, as bands of brothers, all the States of this Union, and make the republic perpetual.

The Whig party was pre-eminently a conservative party. Since that Whig party has been dissolved, and the sectional men that belonged to it have gone over to the Opposition and become the interventionists either in the North or South, there was nothing left for the conservative Whigs except to join the Democracy, and by our joint efforts if possible, maintain the peace of the country and the perpetuity of the Union.

I assert to you again, peace and fraternity can not be maintained between the different sections of the Union except on the great principle of non-intervention and popular sovereignty. Hence, let us unite as one man in favor of these doctrines.—(A voice—"Good boy!") Let not any personal jealousy nor personal rivalry, nor personal hatred, disturb the harmony of the only party that can preserve the Union. (Applause.)

In regard to former disputes, and the animosities growing out of them, "let the dead bury the dead." (Applause.) Remember those disputes only for the purpose of profiting by them. While I would make any sacrifice, personal to myself, to preserve the unity and harmony of the Democratic party in its time-honored principles, never, never would I yield one iota, one jot or one tittle of those principles to gain the Presidency. (Applause.)—The Democratic party has a higher duty, a nobler province, and a more honorable aim than merely to carry an election, and get possession of the Government.

The mission of the Democratic party is to maintain inviolate those great principles of State equality and popular sovereignty and local self-government, on which our entire political system rests. We should remember that the great characteristic feature of a free government is obedience to law. There can be no liberty without law and there can be no law unless there is implicit obedience to the constituted authorities within their legitimate spheres. (Applause.)

The Constitution of the United States has declared that that instrument and all laws passed in pursuance of it, are the supreme law of the land, and any thing in the constitution and law of any State to the contrary notwithstanding; and that all the State Judges are bound thereby, (a voice—"Now for Swan;" another—"Give us a little talk about Swan,") and whenever the people of Ohio, or any portion of them, elect a Judge of the Supreme Court of this State, before he can enter upon the the discharge of the functions of his office, he is required to lay his hand upon the holy evangelists and appeal to the ever-living God for the sincerity of his vow, that he will support and maintain the Constitution of the United States, any thing in the Constitution and laws of Ohio to the contrary notwithstanding. (Applause.)

Yet I have heard that of a political party who desire a man Judge who (a voice—"Now we got it!") would stand pledged to violate the very oath which he was compelled to take as a condition to taking office, before he should be qualified to decide upon your rights. (A voice—"Take his scalp off.") Let me say to you that obedience to the constituted authorities, within the sphere of their local and constitutional duties, is the first and highest duty of an American citizen.

If a law be an unwise one, or unjust, submit to it until the next election, when it is your duty to elect men who will repeal it. If the law be repugnant to the Constitution of your country it is null and void, and that Constitution has created a Supreme Court as the proper and only tribunal to ascertain that fact, and you and I and every other citizen is bound by their decision. The Democratic party therefore stand by the Constitution as our fathers made it; by the laws as they are recorded on the statute-book; by the decisions of the Courts, until they are reserved; and by the constituted authorities, against mob-law and violence. (A voice—"That is so, by George, whether it is Know-Nothingism or any thing else.)

Now, my friends, what safety or security is there for a citizen who is not willing to abide by the law and constituted authorities? The only alternative is mob law and violence. You have had a specimen of that upon the Fugitive-slave Law. A political party has arisen which declares that their consciences will not permit them to obey and execute the law which they disapprove of. Did you ever find a law-breaker who approved the law that imposed a penalty upon him? Whenever you allow a man to interpose his conscience against the laws of the land, your law is subverted and all constitutional authority is destroyed.

Then in conclusion, I appeal to you, as American citizens, as lovers of liberty, as members of the only national party which can preserve the Union, to stand by the Constitution, the law and the constituted authority.

My friends, I owe an apology to you for inflicting upon you so long a speech under the circumstances that rendered it impossible for me to do justice to myself, or to the subject, or to you.

The patience and marked respect with which you have listened to me, only increase my obligation. Never has a public man had so many opportunities to feel grateful to an enlightened people as I have since I left Washington on my road home to Illinois. Wherever I have been, I have been received with open arms, and apparently with warm congratulations (a voice—"You deserved it.") I have not vanity enough, nor will I do you the injustice to suppose that all of these testimonials are intended as personal compliments to myself. I have reason to know (and I feel proud in that knowledge, and I thank God that it is so) that you intended these demonstrations as a mark and as an emphatic approval and indorsement of your devotion (a voice—"To S. A. Douglas—to yourself,") no, sir, to the great principle which declares, in the language of Mr Buchanan, that "the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

Naturalization and Suffrage—No. 4.

The Hamilton Telegraph publishes weekly a memorial to the Legislature of Ohio, signed by thirty-one of the most prominent Republicans of Butler county, asking the Legislature;

1st. To immediately take the necessary constitutional steps to so alter or amend the Constitution of this State, as to STRIKE OUT THE WORD "WHITE" in the first section of the fifth article.

2d. To so alter or amend the first section of the ninth article of the Constitution as to STRIKE OUT THE WORD "WHITE" in that article.

3d. ALSO, TO REPEAL ALL LAWS AND ALL PARTS OF LAWS WHICH MAKE DISTINCTION ON ACCOUNT OF COLOR.

The objects contemplated by the above amendment of the Constitution and laws of Ohio are palpable and easily understood. It is to give to the negro an equality of rights with the native and naturalized citizens; to amalgamate the races. It can be readily demonstrated that the Republican party are in favor of placing the negro on terms of political equality with the whites. They favor the negroes; and the negroes, if allowed to vote, would vote the Republican ticket in every non-slaveholding State in the Union. It is the interest of the Republicans therefore to extend the voting privilege to negroes, who already vote in Massachusetts and other States, and by the Republican construction of the Declaration of Independence, the negro may justly demand the right to vote; and as conclusive evidence that the Republicans are in favor of the amalgamation of the races, we show that the party in Ohio, in the platform adopted at their very last State Convention, assert the negroes' right to vote, and make demand for the negroes' right to vote. We extract from the 4th resolution of the platform in these words: "We claim for all citizens, native and naturalized, liberty of conscience, equality of rights, and the free exercise of the right of suffrage." The Republicans claim that negroes are, and ought to be, citizens of Ohio and of the United States. They are [illegible] amalgamationists, and in favor of placing the whites and the blacks on terms of political equality. Are the free white men of Ohio willing to adopt the Republican creed? If so, we shall soon have it announced "that Mr. Sambo is a candidate for Governor," &c. We have always contended that the practical operation of the Republican creed would be to place the negro, in a political point of view, above the white alien. They assert that 'all men are free,' but by the laws of Ohio the white alien and the negro have the same degraded position; neither can vote or sit in the jury-box. The Republicans favor changing the law so as to elevate the negro, and leaving the white alien statu quo. We favor a change of the Ohio Constitution, making an alien a citizen sooner than is now provided for, and leaving the negro in his present position, so long as he remains in Ohio, and would be glad he would remove to some other country, where he could become free. We are opposed to the amalgamation of the races.

HAMILTON COUNTY.

The Popularity of Senator Douglas in the South.

The Bates County (Mo.) Standard says:

"If the Democratic platform of 'Congressional non-intervention' remains unchanged, and Mr. Douglas should receive the nomination of the Charleston Convention, he is just the man for whom the great popular heart of the South, regardless of the dishonest 'stratagems' of the designing politicians, would leap up to embrace and support with all its proverbial ardor and acclamatory enthusiasm."

The editor of the Mobile (Alabama) Register, Mr. Forsyth, writes a letter from New York, under date of September 2, in which he thus speaks of the platform to be adopted and the candidate to be nominated at Charleston:

"The man and the platform? The platform and the man! these are the simple questions for that Convention to decide. To my seeming, if reason, patriotism and the desire of victory alone govern the decision, nothing is easier than to arrive at it. The platform of 1856 'pure and simple,' free from all hair-splitting interpolations, and new, mischievous and barren theories. The man should be he who is strongest before the country, and whose name is the synonym of ability, statesmanship, high courage and glorious constancy. There is but one such man before the public eye. There is only one man who is seriously thought of by the American Democracy, from Maine to Texas and California, for the Presidency. Nominate him and let the South accept him cordially, and there will spring up a furore of popular enthusiasm in the Western and Middle States that has not been witnessed since the days of Andrew Jackson. Will the South take him? The politicians say no. But mark my prediction: the people will say 'yes.' You may think it bold to say so, but there are truths which, impalpable to the sight, and to be realized only in the fulfillment of the future, force themselves upon the mind and before a part of its nature—ineradicable. I cannot prove it by data and figures, but I feel that Stephen A. Douglas has a strong and deep hold upon the hearts of the people of the South—that very people among whom, owing to the outcry of politicians, his name has only been mentioned with 'bated breath,' as if pestilential treason lurked in it. Let not the people's voices be stifled. It is a time to speak out—mistakes now are dangerous. Why, I know political presses at the South which, falling in with the fashionable current of Douglas disparagement, are edited by men who are privately in favor of his nomination."

BIG WIGS.—If the learned Bar and Bench of our State were wigs, Collier would be the very man to furnish them. He has sent a case of his beautiful work to the State Fair, and we shall be very much mistaken if it does not meet with universal admiration from all who "wear hair."

[illegible] Romance.

About ten years ago there lived in the Empire City a man and his wife, who moved in the medium circles of society, were content with their lot, and lived happy together. At that time they were the parents of two children, the youngest of whom had seen the light of but [illegible] days. At that time, as it [illegible], the gold fever raged to a great extent in the Eastern States, and but little else was discussed at the breakfast, dinner and supper table, than the probable merits or demerits of this newly discovered gold-field. "In the course of events" the paternal member of the small family to which we have alluded became infected with the disease, and resolved that, "let others do as they will," he would go and dig. Accordingly, he [illegible] up and started, first taking the precaution to provide for the temporary necessities of his wife (who, we will say, was pretty and amiable,) and children. Arriving at the new Eldorado, his first care was to write home and inquire after the health of those he held near and dear to him, although they were separated from him by plains and prairies. He sent to his wife the sum of five hundred annually for some years, but as fortune favored him more and more he gradually increased it to the handsome amount of $1,000 per annum. But the snow of four winters had scarcely melted ere some young man, with handsome looks, pleasant manner, other accomplishments, natural and acquired, stepped in and took from our gold-digging friend the idol of his heart.

—In other words, while the fortune-seeking husband was playing the "pick and shovel," with all his might, in the mines of California, she who had promised to be the sharer of his joys and his sorrows "until death should them part," was promenading Fifth avenue, walking up Broadway, and sporting her figure on Taylor's [illegible], having a "good-looking" gentleman to accompany her "through all her devious ways." Well, the natural result of a courtship is a marriage, and, this being the case, of course the gold-seeker's wife and this New York gentleman were united in the holy bonds of wedlock. This transpired, as before stated, in four years after the departure of the husband for California. Some time after this marriage, the guilty couple came to our fair city, where they have since resided. The unsuspecting, but very much deceived, husband continued unremitting in his attention to the wants of his unfaithful partner, and scarcely a mail was permitted to depart from the scene of his gold labors without containing a letter for her. The thousand per annum came regularly, and was willingly received by his wife, who answered all his letters, and took particular care to keep him in the dark as to her transactions with her new lover. But, "to make a long story short," the man returned to New York a short time ago, having amassed considerable wealth, hoping that the wife and children, whom he left ten years ago, would meet him in health and spirits, resolving, with the money already accumulated, to embark in some business, which would yield him a very respectable livelihood.

But alas for human hopes and expectations! He arrived there and found that the place that once knew him, now knew him no more. He searched and inquired for his wife, and at last ascertained that she numbered one of the population of St. Louis, for which place he immediately set out. Here he arrived, and found that she who once promised to love, honor and obey him had become the wife of another, and had borne him three children. Thus ends the bad fortune of the Californian adventurer. He now desires to get his children to himself, and is willing to let his wife "slide." The name of the gentleman who "cut him out," while away from home, is said to be Everett. He is a merchant tailor. This is another proof of the folly of leaving a handsome young wife in the great city of New York to the mercy of fast young men, false mustaches, patent-leather boots, choker collars and gold chains.—St. Louis Republican.

MAN'S INHUMANITY.—Says the Louisville Courier of yesterday:

"Considerable sympathy was excited in behalf of a poor sick woman, with two helpless children, on the wharf yesterday. It appeared from her statements that she got on the 'Modern' at Cincinnati to go to Memphis, but on reaching this port she was unceremoniously put ashore, as she had no money, or didn't have enough to take her to Memphis. The city authorities should take charge of the woman and her children until the boat returns, and then consign them both, together with the bill of costs, against the boat."

The original "Modern," savage as he was, would never have done that act.—Cin. Enq.

Who did that? "Modern" and "[illegible]" were two distinct personages.—Why, "the original Modern" was a gentle being who loved her Conrade "passing well," and gazed o'er the billowy sea upon which his bark proudly rode, counting the minutes in his absence, and hushing the anguish of her lonely heart, in the fond hope of his return—what "Modern" a savage! Did not the bones of Byron rattle at the barbarous imputation!

Hayti Wants Emigrants.

F. E. Dubois, the Haytian Secretary of State, has published an appeal to the colored citizens of the United States, urging them to emigrate to Hayti. After an eloquent preamble, the appeal proceeds as follows:

"For those among you who have capital, it will be easy to gain a position with us. The country offers immediate resources. They can count upon the [illegible] of our government and upon its special protection. Our society is ready to adopt them and offer them a fraternal welcome. They will here enjoy all the consideration they may merit; they will occupy here the rank to which their respectability will assign them, and all the privileges which a blind and barbarous prejudice refuses them in countries inhospitable to our race.

"Indigent emigrants will receive all that their situation requires. The government will attend to their earlier necessities, and will take proper measures to assure them an honorable and tranquil asylum, as well as to facilitate their efforts to obtain employment. They will obtain gratuitously food and lodging on their arrival here.

"The Government is at present engaged in arranging matters so as to offer to each emigrant on his arrival, either as private property or on Government works, plenty of remunerative labor. Every individual of African blood can, on his arrival, become naturalized, and after one year's residence in Hayti be will to become a citizen, enjoying all the civil and political rights. Emigrants will not be compelled to give military service, but their children, when of age, will be required to do this service conformably to the laws of the country, that is for a limited period, and according to selection by lot. This exception will not, however, constitute in their favor a derogation from the law of the National Guard, of which every citizen must be a member. Emigrants will have perfect freedom in religious matters."

The Secretary also announces that he will shortly establish agencies in the United States to further the emigration of colored people to Hayti.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.
WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1859.

The Primary Election.

The supposition that the Primary Election of the Democracy in this county was carried by fraud of numbers, is not based upon sound [illegible]. We will admit that [illegible] of the candidates may have been aided by treachery, and at least one succeeded by similar means. But the number of votes cast by [illegible] disproportioned to the excitement of the occasion, or than the full strength of the party would warrant. The Statesman claimed that there were some 1600 or 1800 Democratic votes who did not participate in the election. The Fact put down the number at 2000. Both intimated, or rather charged, that masses of Republican votes were fraudulently received. We are inclined to think differently, and consider the [illegible] at fault in any such guess.

How is it possible for a party majority to be increased?—how men to alter their opinions, if they are not permitted to change sides? Many who have heretofore acted with the Republican party, may have helped at the Democratic Primary Election. They had a right to do so, if, as we believe, they intend to vote the Democratic ticket at the October election.

What became of the separation of many Republicans from the organization with which they have heretofore acted, if there was an unexpected increase of the Democratic vote, at the Primary Election, when exciting causes called out the Democratic strength? We had reason to expect that the decapitation of Judge Swan would give us a large accession. We think it has; and that it is bad feeling, chagrin, or a want of assimilation with the people, to place the large vote at the Primary Election on any other ground than the strength of Democratic opinion.

OUR DISTRICT NOMINEES.—Just as we were going to press, we received a telegraphic dispatch from Columbus, stating that the Senatorial Convention which met in that city on yesterday, nominated Hon. A. L. Perrill, of this county, for re-election to the Senate for the Senatorial District composed of the counties of Franklin and Pickaway; and Mr. A. G. Hibbs, of Franklin county, was nominated by the same Convention, for the Board of Equalization.

Mr Perrill was the able and popular Senator for this district in the last Legislature. He is too well known to the people of this county and district, to need any encomiums at our hands. He was one of the most valuable members of the last Senate, and will be returned by a rousing majority.

With Mr. Hibbs, we are not so well acquainted, as to be able to speak; but are assured that he is one of the most substantial citizens of Franklin county—a man of good judgment and proper discretion.—Circleville Watchman.

Mr. Perrill is doing "the State some service and they know it;" entitled himself to the honor of a nomination by the Democratic party. He is faithful to his trust, understand his trust, and executed it like a fair, candid, frank man, as his course in the Senate stands of record. If any one deserved the honor of a re-nomination, he did. His fidelity to his constituents, was such that none could cavil at it, save those who would sacrifice the public interests to their selfish purposes. Mr. Perrill is a man, and will represent the people, for he is one of them. His election may be considered sure by a large majority.

The Watchman is right in its appreciation of Mr. Hibbs. He is a business man—active, energetic, and in every respect qualified for the position to which he has been nominated.

MURDER AT WHEELING.—JAMES STEWART, of the firm of W. and J. STEWART, engaged for a number of years in Foundery at Wheeling, was found stabbed to the heart and dead near his own store on Thursday evening. It appears that the parties, who were brothers, had on the day of the murder both been drinking and quarrelling considerably, and for some time after the discovery of the body of JAMES, WM. was not suspected of the deed. A coroner's jury was summoned and an inquest held, during the sitting of which suspicion attached the horrible crime to WILLIAM, who was arrested and lodged in jail. The jury rendered the verdict as follows:

"That the said James Stewart came to his death by a mortal wound inflicted on the left breast and penetrating to the heart, which said wound was, in the opinion of the jury, made by some sharp instrument in the hands of William Stewart."

The deceased was a married man and the father of an interesting family. The Times, referring to the unfortunate occurrence, says:

"Here we have two brothers engaged in the same business as partners, respected by the community, their business advancing prosperously, one of them the father of a large family, and nothing apparently to mar their happiness. Intemperance insinuates itself into their midst, and gradually assert its power, until, in an evil hour, in consequence of a trival matter between them, one imbrues his hands in the blood of the other. We trust that there may be some mistake, and the accused may be enabled to prove himself innocent of the charge."

American Locomotives in Chile.

The New York Herald gives an entertaining description of a trial of strength and speed between two locomotives, two American and two British, constructed for the Great Southern (Chilean) Railway. There has been quite an excitement in Chile during the last two years as to the relative merits of the iron horses made by John Bull and Brother Jonathan. The English operatives turned up their noses at the bright, well-kept Yankee machines, while our people levelled their jokes at the ponderous, black-looking English locomotives.

The engines were at length put to the test. The heavy machine for the carriage of freight was completely exhausted by a load which the American locomotive carried with ease. After several trials the English machine performed in eighty minutes the work which the Yankee accomplished in less than half the time.

Mr. Bull's passenger carriage was defeated in a similar manner. The American locomotive ran at the rate of sixty miles an hour, with a train weighing two hundred tons, and with gradients of fifty-five feet to the mile. The English could not run over thirty miles an hour with the same train on the same track. The trial was made under the supervision of an English engineer.

The [illegible] near Black [illegible], in New York, two or three years ago, cut through the banks of the State Canal, producing a flood which swept away a neighboring saw-mill and its stock of logs. The owner brought a claim against the State for not keeping its embankment in better order, and after much perseverance he has just got it allowed. Damage awarded—$4,800.

A Distinguished Exile.

JUAN RAFAEL MORA, the exiled President of Costa Rica, is now sojourning in the City of New York. He had filled the office of President of the Republic for two terms, and was last May elected to a third term of six years, by a large and nearly unanimous vote.

By one of those sudden revolutions so common in Central and South American Republics, he was seized, deprived of his official robes, and sent into exile. This was done, it is said, by [illegible], without the knowledge of the people of Costa Rica. We extract from the New York Herald a paragraph setting forth the view of the causes which led to the conspiracy against President Mora:

President Mora refused to enter into the treaty stipulations with Sir Gore Ouseley which the latter required in regard to the Mosquito shore. He was asked to recognize by formal treaty, the fact of the existence of a Mosquito King and nation, and to consent to pay an annual subsidy to that suppositious and shirtless monarch, in return for what? For a renunciation by Great Britain, as his protector, to his assumed rights and sovereignty over a portion of the territory of Costa Rica. The President very naturally answered that he knew of no such rights, and that, so far as he was aware, there was not a single Mosquito Indian within the territorial limits of Costa Rica. He declined, therefore, peremptorily, to make the humiliating concessions and admissions required by the British Envoy.

We are told that the exiled President regards his political misfortune with commendable philosophy. He attributes the movement against him to the direct and immediate influence of money, and expresses himself sanguine of a speedy reaction, and of his own recall to assume the executive power. The result of the movement will probably soon be determined one way or the other. In the event of his failure to regain his official position, President Mora is confident that he will shortly be permitted to return to Costa Rica to enjoy his private estates.

The Zurich Conference.

The Zurich Conference, if we may judge from the silence in our foreign despatches respecting it doings, must be either dead or in the last stages of dissolution. The only, or, at least, the principal point it had to determine was the restoration of the exiled Italian forces under the treaty of Villa Franca. That question has, however been decided by the votes of the people in the Duchies. It now remains to be seen whether Austria will be content with this decision, or insist upon the restoration of the exiles in opposition to the clearly expressed will of their late subjects.

LOUIS NAPOLEON has shown by his declarations, both to the Italian delegates and to the English Government, that he has no intention to use force to affect the re-establishment of the old dynasties in the Duchies. If the arrangement entered into at Villa Franca in this regard cannot be carried out without incurring civil war, it must, so far as the French Emperor is concerned, fall to the ground.

It is reported that he has even assured the Mayor of Parma that he will not permit any other Power to use violence to promote its political views in Central Italy. It would seem, then, that this alternative remains for Austria, either to make war again upon Italy—or submit to the settlement of Italian affairs by a general European Congress. Such a Congress is favored both by Russia and France.

THE LATE MURDER NEAR PIQUA.—The name of the person found murdered near Piqua on Friday morning is supposed to be N. Manning, from marks discovered on several articles of his wearing apparel. We glean the following additional particulars from an extra issued by the Piqua Register:

The deceased had two wounds in the neck; one made by a ball passing upward and backward, from near the angle of the jaw on the right side, and out at the back part of the head; the other made by a knife from the point of the entrance of the bullet across the neck—the point of the knife passing out on the left side, dividing the carotid artery, jugular vein, trachea and esophagus.

On his person was found a white silk handkerchief, marked Manning—so also was the shirt which he wore, which was entirely new, never having been washed.

His undershirt was also new—in his drawers [illegible] a common [illegible], [illegible] in his pockets were found fourteen percussion caps, two balls, (undoubtedly placed there by his murderer,) a rusty knife, marked "N. M.," a tooth brush, two combs, some chewing tobacco and a pipe.

He measures five feet six inches, is well made, has finely moulded features, dark hair, very fair complexion, very well dressed—fine cloth coat, satin vest, (single breasted) and fine grey cassimere pants, with seam stripe. He had on a pair of fine calf-skin boots—new—marked A. Phillips, boot and shoe maker, two doors east Montgomery House, Dayton, O.

FURTHER CONCERNING THE FAILURE OF MESSRS. WILSON & STUDEBAKER.—We made mention yesterday, of the failure of Messrs. Wilson & Studebaker, the former of whom is the well-known proprietor of the Ohio White Sulphur Springs, but omitted to fully state the cause. It seems that the firm of W. & S. were, and doubtless would have remained, in a solvent condition, had not Mr. Wilson, with the full approbation of his partner, withdrawn from their assets a large sum of money, and given the firm's paper, payable to a considerable amount, for the purchase and improvement of the Springs. Mr. Wilson, having expended a large amount, over one hundred and forty thousand dollars, in lands and buildings, and in ornamenting the grounds, felt quite confident he would be able to negotiate about one hundred thousand dollars, in bonds, secured by mortgage on the entire premises. Had he been able to do this, the firm would not, as we have said, have suspended. All the friends of Mr. Wilson, who are very numerous, will regret that his great efforts to build up one of the finest watering-places in the country, for health, comfort and luxury, should have resulted so disastrously to himself; but we still have hope he will be able to negotiate the bonds to the extent referred to, and that parties who are able to take them will not hesitate to do so. The bonds will be issued in sums of $100, and the plan proposed by Mr. Wilson for their redemption, is such that the whole will be paid back, in installments within five years.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

GRAIN STACKS IN WISCONSIN.—Threshing machines have work to do in the Rock River region of Illinois and Wisconsin, between Beloit and Janesville, 12 miles; a few days ago there were 738 stacks of grain within sight of the prairie road, and a considerable portion of the grain along the route had been threshed when the count was taken. Fourteen hundred and ninety-four stacks can be seen from the top of Brockway College at Ripon, Wis., with a telescope. The Star states that there are 3,000 stacks in a square of ten miles, with Ripon for the centre. Farmers estimate a stack at from 100 to 300 bushels, making full one million bushels of grain in the ten miles square.

NARROW ESCAPE OF FOUR YOUNG LADIES FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH.—A day or two ago a party out riding stopped at one of the hotels in Copake, Columbia county, N. Y., when four ladies, in company, repaired to an out-house in the vicinity, where they had no sooner entered than the floor gave way, and the whole party were precipitated into the vault below. They were unable to extricate themselves from their unpleasant situation, and must have perished, had not their cries attracted the attention of some men who were near, and who went to their assistance, and rescued them.

A curious case, involving the crime of treason has come to light at Berlin. A workman in the royal manufactory of the percussion mixture used in the preparation of the cartridges for the needle gun, was induced to betray the secret to, it is said, a French agent. He attempted to forward a quantity done up as bales of paper. At the railway office attention was attracted by the extraordinary weight of the packages, which were opened and found to contain a large quantity of detonators. An agent of the secret police was at once despatched from Berlin, and both the workman and his tempter are said to have been secured. The composition is a secret, and all the employees in the manufactory are required to take oaths of allegiance and secrecy. His betrayal of trust is thus a case of high treason.

☞ The militia of the United States, as just reported by the Secretary of War, numbers 3,766,726. This immense army, with two weeks' drill, would be quite as efficient as either of the fighting forces at Solferino.

SPAIN.—Accounts from Madrid state that Spain had withdrawn her consul from Tangiers, and decided to demand satisfaction of Morocco for the outrages at Ceuta. Orders had been given for the formation of an expeditionary corps of ten thousand men. It is suggested in the London papers that the firing on the steamer Indus was for the purpose of bringing her to, in order to learn the state of affairs at Ceuta.

ITALY.—The First National Assembly at Romagna was opened at Bologna on the 1st of September by the Governor General, who in his speech congratulated the people on the alacrity with which they had hastened to the Electoral Districts to record their votes. He had, he said, provided for the defence of the country against aggressions from all sides by forming a league with the neighboring States.

A letter from Bologna states that at the popular elections, the priests deposited their votes as freely as the citizens, and that the result was that an immense majority had gone in favor of the Liberal ticket which goes against the re-establishment on any condition of the temporal power of the Pope. The aristocracy were at the head of the movement. The finances of Romagna were in excellent condition, and there was no doubt that the new government would be able to go on without a loan.

Since the overthrow of the temporal power of the Pope, the bandits and smugglers who had infested Romagna had entirely disappeared.

Advices from Italy state that people were becoming impatient at the inactivity of the Zurich Conference and the various contradictory reports touching their doings. It is also stated that Piedmont demands from Austria, cession of Mantua and Peschiera.

A Paris letter says that there is no doubt that the Zurich Conference disagree about many points touching the peace of Villa Franca, and the opinion is growing stronger every day that a Congress of the great powers must be held.

RUSSIA.—Advices from Russia state that the expedition into Daghestan has been completely successful.

A company had been formed in St. Petersburg for the construction of a commercial Port there on a large scale.

The government had ordered the first corps d'armee under Prince Gortschakoff to be placed on a peace footing.

FRANCE.—A letter from Paris says that the Queen of Spain had sent to the various Courts of Europe a protest against the expulsion of her Bourbon Cousin from Parma.

Colossis Chance, and Barbes refuse to receive the benefits of the Emperor's amnesty. The former has written a letter of furious invective against Napoleon.

The arrival of the Newfoundland mail at Paris had brought the announcement of the full triumph of the French admiralty over the English in the question concerning the fisheries.

GREAT BRITAIN.—The intelligence from England is not important. The strike in the building trade was approaching an adjustment.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The Persia arrived from Liverpool, this morning, where she left on the 3d inst. She broke her crank pin on the 5th, and lay to for repairs.

The steamer Arabia and City of Manchester arrived out on the 3d.

The Persia passed the City of Baltimore on the 5th, and the Africa on 10th.

The Zurich Conference was expected to come to an abrupt close.

The Pontifical troops were threatening the Legation.

The latest accounts from Italy say the advance of the Pontifical troops into the Legations appeared imminent, although the Moniteur contradicts the rumored aggression. The Roman government rejects all reforms.

The sailing of the Great Eastern had been postponed to the 29th.

Manchester advices are favorable; the market closed firm and advancing.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET, Sept. 2.—The market closes dull at a slight decline for all descriptions except corn which is steady. Richardson and Spence report flour very dull, and quotations nominal at a decline of 6d per sack. American is quoted at 9s 7d@12s per Cental. Wheat has declining tendency, and holders are pressing on the market; white at 9s@9s 3d. Corn is dull but steady; mixed and yellow 5s 6d@5s 9d, white 7s@7s 6d.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET, Sept. 3.—Provisions have a declining tendency, but are dull; holders pressing on the market at a slight decline. Pork dull and quotations nominal. Bacon heavy; at a slight decline. Lard dull but steady.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.—The money market is slightly more stringent.

THE LATEST.

LIVERPOOL, Saturday, Sept. 3—Noon.—Breadstuffs close very dull, provisions are also very dull.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 3—Noon.—Consols closed at 95½. American securities are generally unchanged.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—A gentleman who came as a passenger aboard the steamer Persia describes the storm in which the Persia was disabled as most terrific. Her crank pin was broken on Monday evening about ten o'clock. She lay to until the next afternoon in hopes the storm would abate so that she could repair, but finding no improvement in the weather, it was decided to put back to Cork. After proceeding in that direction one hundred miles, the weather moderated. The breakage was repaired and the steamer put about again, when reaching again the same latitude in which the disaster occurred the Persia encountered a storm more terrific than the first one, but she ploughed her way through uninjured, except in the crushing of one of her wheel houses. The Persia has the heaviest freight she ever brought to this port.

DANGEROUS [illegible].—There is a young girl in jail who is as crazy as a bed bug. She was found by James Peery, on the Independence road a few days ago, and committed to mention these particulars, in order that her friends, if she has any among our readers, may recognize her.—Morgantown, Va., Star.

SUDDEN DEATH.—A man named A. Pier, aged about 65 years, a resident of Newark, Licking county, in this State, dropped dead in the bar-room of a hotel in Philadelphia on Thursday.

Says Dan Rice: "I will venture to assert that not one in twenty of the business men of New York pay as much attention to the moral and religious instruction of their apprentices as I pay to that of the children whom I educate to appear in the arena."

Telegraphic Dispatches.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—Denver City advices of the 8th inst. reached Leavenworth yesterday. Returns from Denver City and Auraria of the election on the 5th give a majority of 333 against the State Constitution and in favor of territorial organization. Returns from the mountain districts were not received.

Large numbers of miners leaving the mountains for the valleys in consequence of the prevalence of the rain and snow storms.

TROY, N. Y., Sept. 17.—A large brick building on Ida hill, owned by the estate of Benj. Marshall and occupied by the Troy Hosiery Co. and Empire Machine Co., was partially destroyed by fire at ten o'clock this morning. The building was filled with goods and valuable machinery. Loss estimated at $36,000. Insured in the New York, Philadelphia, and Hartford companies. The fire originated in consequence of one of the hands putting cotton into a stove.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 16.—The Convention unanimously instructed the delegates chosen at its session last night to represent the State at the Charleston Convention, to act and vote as a unit. Augustus Schell, Dean Richmond, Isaac V. Fowler, and Delos D. Wolf were chosen delegates at large, with John S. Taylor, D. F. Tieman, Schuyler Crippen, E. A. G. Disby as alternates.

The following delegates and alternates to the Charleston Convention from the Congressional districts have been selected:

1st district, W H Ludlow; 2nd, H McLaughlin; 3d, John Y Savage; 4th, John Kelly; 5th, Isaiah Rynders; 6th, Jno Cochrane; 7th, Nelson J Waterbury; 8th, Edward Cooper; 9th, Governor Kemble; 10th, Benjamin H. ALTERNATES.—1st District, Daniel G Bergin; 2nd, Francis B Spinola; 3d, Wm Warner; 4th, M B Brennan; 5th, Edward Driggs; 6th, Anthony Dugro; 7th, W A McIntyre; 8th, A Fremont; 9th, Edwin Croswell; 10th, Jno C Halley; 11th, George Beach; 12th, Henry Steele; 13th, Moses Warren; 14th, Peter Cagger; 15th, Charles Rangelli; 16th, Sidney Lawrence; 17th, L Carroll; 18th, Daniel E Packer; 19th, Alexander H Bahana; 20th D P Bissell; 21st, Henry S Randall; 22nd, Sidney T Fairchild; 23rd, Allen O Beach; 24th, John I Peck; 25th, [illegible] Griswold; 26th, D. S Ogden; 27th, Charles Hulett; 28th, D S Abbott; 29th B F, Elkison; 30th, Henry J Glawnek; 31st, A Hensman; 32nd, Alpheus Prince; 33d Hiram J Nowar.

The Convention adjourned with hearty cheers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Yesterday afternoon a disgraceful riot took place on board of steam tug Moses Taylor, one of the tugs employed to take passengers and baggage on board the Galway steamship Jason, during which the captain of the tug had his head cut open by rowdies and the tug made a wreck. The passengers escaped without injury.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Sept. 16.—Mr. S. M. Brooks, of St. Louis, ascended in his balloon Comet, from the fair grounds in this village, at six o'clock yesterday afternoon, and descended eleven miles east at 20 minutes after six. Five thousand persons witnessed the ascension.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—Official information from Utah states that the troops are principally employed in protecting the overland emigrants from Indian attack.

The President has recognized Franz August Hirch as Consul for the Kingdom of Hanover at Boston.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The Washington correspondent of the Times says that reliable information in official circles leaves but little doubt that Sir Wm. Ouseley was a party to the revolution in Costa Rica.

VINCENNES, Ind., Sept. 16.—Thom. Pending, charged with murdering a man named Morton in this city some two months ago, was to-day found guilty in the second degree by the Davis County Court, and sentenced to the Penitentiary for life.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—The Herald's Syracuse correspondent says Wood and his men completed their ticket, and returned home this evening. The Benicia Boy and other "short boys" accompanied him. Wood is very bitter in his denunciations of Dickinson, Schell and others, and says he will slaughter them in the News. He made a strong Douglas speech at the Voorhes House, and is now bound to develope the little giant's interests in the State. Dickinson says he has understood the measures of Wood to draw him into his snare, and has therefore avoided him.

The New York Times' Washington correspondent sends to-day some very interesting as well as new and authentic figures on the current and prospective finances of the Federal Government. It appears that Secretary of the Treasury on a revision of his estimates of revenue for the fiscal year of 1860, ending June 30th next, claims that his customs will yield at least $62,400,000, instead of $58,000,000 as he before estimated, and that with other resources he will be able to reimburse or purchase the public debt to the extent of $1,751,000, without reducing his working balance below six millions at the end of the year. He has already determined that no Treasury bills falling due after June last will be received, or in any way renewed.

The amount then subject to renewal was less than five millions. Since then the sub-treasury in New York, and other parties for the government, have disposed of about two millions. His revised budget for 1860 is thus presented: to provide for all wants for the year $63,331,000; with cash balance, June 30th, $4,339,000; treasury bills, $4,953,090, loan of January 24, $138,000; together $10,672,000. Customs of the year, $62,400,000; lands and miscellaneous $4,000,000. Total, $77,072,000; leaving a surplus, June 30, 1860, of $13,751,000.

WORCESTER, Sept. 15.—The State Democratic Convention is in session, and the attendance is unusually large. Much feeling is exhibited between the Douglasites and their opponents. The former want the Convention to make an expression favorable to Douglas. Francis Barker, a Douglasite, is the temporary chairman. Resolutions, pledging the Convention to Douglas and the Popular Sovereignty doctrine, were laid on the table, as being out of place.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Sept. 15.—At the firemen's parade, held here to-day, a serious riot occurred between the firemen and gamblers. Several buildings were partially demolished, and other property destroyed. The gamblers used their pistols, but were finally driven off. Two houses occupied by them were gutted. The mob next attacked the American House and Museum building, breaking the windows.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—As yesterday's four o'clock afternoon train from Jersey City to Middleton on the Erie Railroad was turning the curve between Hilers and Paterson, two men were discovered walking on the track. They did not heed the ringing of the bell, nor the whistle, but their indifference indicated that they supposed themselves on the right track. Before the train could be stopped they were run over, one of them, William Smith, an umbrella vender, was instantly crushed to death; the other, James Jenkins, of Paterson, survived only about an hour.

SYRACUSE, Sept. 15.—The State Democratic Convention met again this morning, and nominated the same ticket as that nominated by ex-Mayor Wood's party, with the exception of the Clerk of the Court of Appeals. The resolutions reported for the consideration of the Convention strongly affirm the rights of American citizens, native and adopted, all over the world, and declare that Congress has not power to legislate slavery into the territories, or enact a slave code for the territories, or to prohibit the South from a just share in the benefit of a territory. They also indorse moderately the course of the National Administration.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—The Rochester Democrat says that on Tuesday Messrs. Terry & Erickson, wool dealers, sold to a Massachusetts manufacturing company 100,000 pounds of N. Y. State fleece wool, and to a firm in Boston 40,000 pounds of pulled wool. The terms of these two sales are private, but the transactions amount to nearly $125,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 15.—A stranger was found dead at the White Bear Hotel to-day, aged about 60. From papers on his person, he is supposed to be A. Pier, of Ohio.

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—A correspondent of the Traveler, writing from Camp Floyd under date of August 18th, describes the assassination of First Sergeant Ralph Pike, of the Tenth Infantry, who was shot in front of the Salt Lake Hotel by a woman named Spencer. The murderess had escaped. Pike's funeral was attended by three regiments of infantry, the officer of each regiment being in full uniform, and by General Johnston. Several other assassinations are charged on the Mormons and great excitement existed.

BUFFALO, Sep. 19.—Hon. Albert H. Tracy, a wealthy resident of this city, died to-day.

WORCESTER, Mass., Sept. 15.—The Democratic Convention nominated Gen. Benj. F. Butler, of Lowell, for Governor, and Stephen O. Barnes, of Springfield, for Lieut. Governor. The following nominations were also made: Secretary of State, Saml. W. Bowen Adonis; Treasurer, Geo. Demorest; Auditor, James E. Esterbrook, of Worcester; Attorney-General, D. H. Mason, of Dedham.

Caleb Cushing, Isaac Davis, Oliver Stevens, and Jas. S. Whitney are chosen delegates to the Charleston Convention. It is said that all favor the claims of Senator Douglas for the Presidency.

The resolutions adopted recognize the principle of popular sovereignty though endorsing the present administration.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Sept. 16.—The steamship Kangaroo, from Liverpool on the 31st ult., put into Halifax at six o'clock this morning, being short of coal. She obtained 150 tons and resumed her voyage. She will be due at New York on Monday.

The Kangaroo has 160 cabin and 250 steerage passengers. We are expecting a days later news received by her at Queenstown by telegraph from Liverpool and London.

ATTLEBORO, Sept. 17.—The building of the Attleboro Steam Power Company was mostly destroyed by fire to-day, together with several adjoining buildings. The Steam Power Co.'s building was occupied by O. Wheelock, thread manufacturer; Thompson & Co., jewelers; Haywood & Briggs, jewelers; C. Luther & Wm. Blackington & Co., hop skirt manufacturers. A large building on the north, occupied by F. Bailey, carriage manufacturer, was also destroyed, most of his carriages were saved. The buildings on the south side were also burned, and were occupied by Everett, Dean & Co., jewelers; Sturdy and Bros., jewelers. By this fire nearly all the manufacturing business in the place is suspended and three hundred are thrown out of employment. The loss is estimated at $75,000, the amount of insurance is unknown.

RACINE, Wis., Sept. 17.—The stabling attached to the U. S. Hotel caught fire this morning. The stables were occupied by the horses attached to Dan Rice's circus, and twelve of them were smothered. These last, however, were most of them team horses, and his loss will not exceed $5,000. The fire originated through the carelessness of a driver, who let a fluid lamp fall, causing it to burst and scatter the flames among the combustible contents of the stable. The damage to the hotel was trifling.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—The steamer De Soto has arrived from Havana with dates of the 13th inst. A royal decree had been promulgated, giving the Cubans a nearer approach to popular representation. The weather was cool, and the health of the city so much improved that there was scarcely any sickness in port. The sugar market was stagnant.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—A storm which set in last night from the North-east has continued with great violence all day. But little damage is thus far however reported, except to the bark Marcey Ellen, from Buenos Ayres, which dragged her anchor in the East River and went ashore on Governor's Island.

This P. M., a five story warehouse in progress of erection on Duane street was partially blown down, demolishing a tenant house adjoining, and burying the inmates in the ruins. Several have been rescued badly injured, and others are said to be under the rubbish.

The steamer Arago, which sailed to-day for Havre, took $619,000 in specie.

The riot at the tunnel on the Erie Railroad was in full force this P. M. No cars had been permitted to pass, and at last accounts the rioters were hard at work blocking the road more effectually.

The through mails have been sent back to this city to be dispatched over the Hudson and Central.

At noon to-day, two regiments of militia were ordered to the scene of riot. Postmaster Fowler has obtained a requisition from the Government for the dispatching of troops from this city. The rioters, it is said, have procured a cannon which they have loaded with spikes, for use in case they are attacked. One of the ringleaders was arrested this morning.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—In consequence of the Erie Railroad being blocked up at the Bergen tunnel by the laborers, who refuse to let any trains pass until the arrears of their pay are forthcoming, the company have dispatched a steamer to Piermont, to carry thither the passengers destined for the west, and to bring to this city those detained there that have arrived by the trains from the west.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 17.—The equinoctial storm which commenced yesterday has greatly increased in violence. The wind blew a heavy gale all night from the east, accompanied with torrents of rain, which still continue.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Mr. Davis and wife of Orleans, while crossing the track of the Worcester R. R. in a carriage yesterday, was struck by a locomotive. Mrs. Davis was thrown over a two story building close by, and instantly killed. Mr. Davis was severely injured.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—The most disastrous conflagration that has visited our city since the great fire of '57, occurred last night.

The fire broke out about nine o'clock, in the stable of F. Mehring & Co., entirely destroying it, together with its contents, including four valuable horses.

The flames then communicated to the blacksmith shop, No. 45 Canal street, spreading thence in different directions, consuming the entire block bounded by Clinton, North Canal, West Lake and Fulton streets.

From this block the fire communicated to Blatchford's Lead Works, thence to the Hydraulic Mills. These, together with the block bounded by North Jefferson, Clinton, Fulton and West Lake streets, were entirely destroyed. From the northwest corner of Fulton and Canal the fire communicated to the Lumber yard of Ryerson & Miller, consuming nearly three million feet lumber, valued at $40,000; thence to Dall's yard, adjoining, consuming two million feet of lumber.

Mason & Co.'s machine shop on the corner of North Canal and Carroll, was totally destroyed.

From Ryerson's yard the fire communicated to the Vulcan Works of Warrington & McArthur; thence to the Vulcan Boiler Works destroying the block bounded by Fulton, Carroll, Clinton and North Jefferson streets. Two blocks adjoining were partially destroyed.

The principal losers are J. W. Cochrane, Audubon House, loss $60,000, insure for $30,000; Batchford, lead works, loss $60,000, insured for $40,000; Cochrane & Baker, Cleveland House, loss $37,000, insured for $27,000; Avery & Co., loss $40,000, insured for $35,000; Hydraulic Mills, loss $10,000, no insurance. Walter Loll, lumber yard, loss $30,000, insured for $5,000; B. A. Backer, planing mill, loss $7,000, no insurance.

The total loss will probably not be less than $500,000. The total insurance will not exceed $250,000, of which the greater part is in New York, Providence, Hartford and Springfield companies. A large number of the buildings destroyed were dwelling houses and but of little value. The origin of the fire is not ascertained. Two firemen were slightly injured by the falling walls.

In addition to the losses at last night's fire, reported this morning, are Warrington's Vulcan Foundry, loss $30,000, insured for $10,000; Mason, McArthur & Co., boiler works, loss $6,000, insured for $3,000 in Cleveland; Masonic Lodge, occupying the upper story of Blatchford's building, loss $3,000, no insurance; B Bernauer, liquor, loss $3,000, fully insured; Reformed Presbyterian Church, loss $2,000, insured for $1,000; also about one hundred frame dwellings, valued at from $500 to $1,500 each. A large amount of furniture was saved, but in a damaged condition.

The Hope Steam Engine Company, who are here as guests, turned out with their engines, doing good service.

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—The principal object of interest at the fair to-day, as yesterday, was the exhibition of steam plows—both Fawkes' and Waters' attracting the attention of immense crowds in attendance. The number of visitors is estimated from 35 to 40,000. The receipts yesterday were over $10,000.

The trot this afternoon, over the Garden City Course, between Flora Temple and Princess, was won by the former, in three straight heats. Time—2:31, 2:30 and 2,26½.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—General Scott left here this P. M. for New York, and will sail in the steamer of the 20th for the Pacific.

The present delicate and complicated state of affairs at San Juan, growing out of General Harney's movements, requires great care and caution on the part of our Government to prevent a collision. The President in conferring with General Scott in regard to the matter, suggested the propriety of sending some one there who was less impetuous and more prudent than General Harney. General Scott at once informed the President that he would go, and as soon as his instructions were prepared he would be ready to sail.

The instructions are partly prepared, and considered in cabinet council to-day. They will probably be completed to-morrow, and forwarded immediately to New York.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—A strike of men working on the New York and Erie tunnel at Bergen, N. J., took place yesterday, in consequence of non-payment of wages. The laborers obstructed the track and stopped all trains. The military were held in readiness for orders, but it being impossible to find the Sheriff, the troops were dismissed. The strikers remained victorious.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—The troubles on the New York and Erie Railroad have been settled, and the obstructions on the road have been removed, and forty of the rioters have been arrested. The trains are now running regularly. A strong force of police and military remains on the ground to prevent any renewal of the disturbance.

THE SCANDINAVIAN PILLS AND PURIFIER.—The following flattering notice is taken from the Portsmouth (Ohio) Scioto Valley Republican of April 3, 1858:

SCANDINAVIA.—A friend writes to us for our "real opinion" of Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies—where he can obtain them—and why they are called "Scandinavian," and we are frequently asked the same questions. Scandinavia is the ancient name of Sweden and Norway, and a Scandinavian, that is a Swede or Norwegian, affectionately calls his country "Scandinavia," in the same sense as we speak of "Columbia," or, "The Union." By the way, there are over nine thousand Scandinavian families in Dane county, Wisconsin. Although a citizen of this country for many years, Dr. Roback is a Swede by birth; and compounds his Medicines of Swedish herbs. We think the name is very appropriate. We have the very highest opinion of the Medicines, and of Dr. Roback himself, who is not only a singularly skillful physician, but a gentleman of the Old School, as we know personally. Our advertisement columns will answer the rest of our friend's letter. —See advertisement.

A Campaign Paper.

We call attention to the subjoined Prospectus which our friends can cut from the paper and use. It is the cheapest campaign paper in the State, and will be found particularly advantageous for general circulation. CITY NOTICES.

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

[illegible] COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June [illegible], 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in [illegible] young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your's surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

Formerly teacher of [illegible] in [illegible] College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, Town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of MUSIC have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

☞ E. T. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in Warm weather.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ Hats are of various patterns and styles—Some like one kind, while others admire different variety. Call at [illegible] if you want a superior article.

☞ FARMERS.' [illegible] on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure [illegible] boots and shoes. They have [illegible] for the last two or three years.

☞ [illegible] & [illegible] continue to furnish their customers with delicious [illegible]. "[illegible]" says that he don't care if [illegible] is three cents a pound more, he will stick to the [illegible] brand.

☞ The Billiard Rooms on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as good as a drawing-room, which it is, when the [illegible] MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our gentlemanly friend J. M. Dennis on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious [illegible], and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the [illegible] Block!

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the [illegible] styles, would do well to call at the [illegible] J. C. [illegible] on High and [illegible] street. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

☞ [illegible] & [illegible] are the agents of Knabe & Co.'s celebrated pianos, which are becoming known all over the world as unsurpassed.

☞ DR. J. STEWART has returned to the city from his successful visit to the summer part of [illegible], and may be consulted at the [illegible] House where he has rooms.

☞ CHARLES [illegible] [illegible] the handsomest suits we have seen. [illegible] of the Spring style for summer wear [illegible].

INVENTION.

THE STORY OF RICHARD MILLER.

Some years ago in a little city in the West, lived Richard Miller, an honest, industrious, sober shoemaker. He had emigrated from Philadelphia a few years previous to the opening of my story, with his wife and child; and by economy and the closest attention to business, he managed to lay up six hundred dollars. This sum he would have undoubtedly increased, so as to place himself and family beyond the reach of want in a few years, had it not been for that insidious monster, consumption. The fell destroyer came to him, as usual in such cases, in a bad cold, and for a long time he flattered himself into the idea that it was only a bad cold; but like a skillful sapper and miner, it soon undermined his constitution, and he began to have some glimmering of his real condition.

There was no use staying any longer in the West, so he sold out his stock and fixtures, and returned to Philadelphia, where he took up his permanent abode. Having become entirely too weak to work, he spent his days in that inactive, but petulant state so common to consumptives.

One day he took it into his head to consult an eminent physician—one of the professors of a medical college—in order to ascertain his true condition. He called upon him, stated his case, and underwent the customary examination.

"Young man," said the professor, "your lungs are badly affected, and I am only dealing frankly with you when I say, that in my opinion you are not long for this world!"

Miller's heart sank within him when he heard his doom. He had the most implicit confidence in the professor; and, as he thought of his wife and child, he felt very much as if for the future the world would be a blank to him.

"Did you ever drink whiskey?" inquired the Professor as he paced the room.

"Never, except upon one, or perhaps two occasions," said Miller.

"You can keep yourself alive two years—probably three—by the moderate use of whiskey. It is a dangerous prescription; but in giving it to you, I have reason to believe that you will not let it obtain the mastery over you. Get the best whiskey you can buy, and drink a pint of it a day."

Poor Miller, ready to grasp at any natural shadow of relief, went to a liquor store and purchased a demijohn of Bourbon whiskey, and commenced taking doses of it at intervals throughout the day.

A year rolled away, and Miller was much improved. His cough was easier, and the stimulus seemed to impart a kind of artificial strength to his body; but I regret to say, his appetite, which never before craved alcoholic drinks, had assumed an abnormal condition, to appease which it now required not less than a quart per diem. He felt that he was not doing much toward [illegible] down to the grave; but the [illegible] stimulants [illegible] the future with a feeling of obliviousness that was quite [illegible] to his melancholy [illegible] over [illegible] himself.

When in this state, Miller loved solitude, and he frequently walked as far away from home as he possibly could [illegible] generally in the neighborhood of the brick-yards, in the south-western part of the city.

One day having extended his walk beyond his usual limits, and being overtaken by a thunder storm when he reached the brick-yards, he took shelter under the shed of one of them. Having drank an unusual quantity of liquor during the day, he fell asleep upon the wheelbarrow on which he was resting, while the storm was still raging, nor did he wake till the dawn of next day, a mild, beautiful, June morning. At first he was mystified, but soon recalled to his recollection the storm and the brick-yard, and feeling somewhat drowsy, he composed himself for another nap. It is uncertain how long he slept—probably not over half an hour—but during that time he had a remarkable vision. He dreamed out the principle of a machine that would in a great measure supercede hand labor. Every wheel, cog, or casting, passed through his brain, and in his dream he even saw the machine in practical operation. When he awoke it was quite light, and he hastened towards his home. His mind was entirely taken up with the machine, his dream having evidently made an impression upon him as indelible as any idea ever conceived in his most wakeful hours. Long before he reached his home he had resolved to carry out the [illegible] of his dream. After breakfast he made the necessary preparations to work out a model. The obstacles that interposed were legion, but he overcame them all. Tools that he could not borrow he bought, and it was now that he went to work most patiently and perseveringly, paying very little attention to the whisky, as his whole soul seemed wrapped up in one grand object.

His wife, from the beginning of the work, thought that his mind was giving way; and the poor, patient, enduring woman, finding their stock of money rapidly decreasing, took in sewing, while he sawed, planed and chiseled at his model. He grew morose, and seldom spoke. Sometimes he would gaze abstractedly upon the model for a long time, and then, as if reassured, he would go to work again with renewed energy; and so he continued for many long and weary weeks until the model was finally completed, and stood before him perfect in all its parts. As he worked it in the presence of his wife, a gleam of satisfaction sat upon his countenance and he smiled. It was the first smile that had illuminated his features since he had been to work upon the model. He carried it off to a finished mechanic, who engaged to make a fine duplicate for $20; and when he had finished his job the wife saw him take that amount from their slender store more in sorrow than in anger, but she knew the utter folly of protesting.

Richard Miller now for the first time consulted a friend in the matter, and that friend, having had some experience in procuring patents, gave him the benefit of his knowledge. To procure the patent would cost him thirty dollars more. This alarmed Miller; but the patent must be had, and that amount went. In due time letters patent arrived, and he had the rough model and document—nothing more. Out of them it would be next to impossible to realize. No, he must have a machine capable of working. He felt satisfied that nothing short of a machine would enable him to dispose of his right. But how to get a machine built was a question that puzzled him sadly. No one capable of making a perfect machine would undertake the job for less than one hundred dollars. Alas! he had no longer that sum of money in the house.

Miller was almost bordering on despair, when one of the mechanics to whom he had spoken, called upon him in order to make a more minute examination of the model. He was eminently a practical man, at the end of which he declared his firm conviction was that the machine was a great invention. At all events, he would be willing to build one on a contingency. If it failed to work, he would charge nothing; but if it answered the expectation of the inventor, then he would charge two hundred dollars for machine and risk.—This was virtually taking an interest in the success of the invention, and Richard closed with him. The mechanic was prompt and energetic, and putting his whole force to work, in a few days turned over to Miller a complete machine.

His next business was to give the machine a trial. He went over to Camden, where he had an acquaintance in the brick business, and prevailed upon him to let the trial take place at his yard, next day, at 11 o'clock. The proprietor had very little faith in the machine, but as he had a large lot of brick for sale, he was willing to submit to almost anything to attract attention to his yard. To this end he slyly inserted an advertisement in several of the daily papers of Philadelphia, announcing the trial of a wonderful patent brick machine, naming the time and place, which, of course he thought would only be another addition to the long catalogue of failures in that line of inventions.

Next day Miller partook of an early breakfast, and then possessed himself of the last dollar in the house to pay current expenses. He bade his wife be of good cheer—that he thought he would return before night with not less than five hundred dollars. The poor woman thought it more likely that he would return dejected, broken-hearted, and ready to die; but she said nothing.

From this house he went direct to the machine shop, and had his invention taken to the ferry-boat, and had it safely landed, put up ready to operate at the appointed hour. He knew nothing of the advertisement in the papers, and was therefore a little surprised to see upwards of a hundred people congregated in the yard. He did not like it, for in case of failure the mortification would only be the greater; but he consoled himself with the belief that in case of success competition might spring up to enable him to realize one thousand dollars for his right, instead of five hundred dollars, at which moderate figure he held it.

The clay having been elevated, the horse was started, and the machine moved.—It was a moment of intense anxiety to every one, and painfully so to Richard Miller. Eureka! it was a triumph! mould after mould of beautiful brick were carried from it, until in an incredibly short space of time a thousand were finished and drying in the yard.

There stood Richard Miller gazing upon his invention. It was the full realization of his dream in its minutest particulars. It was the happiest moment of his life. He was just on the point of offering the right of making and vending the machine in the United States to the highest bidder, when an old Yankee tapped him on the shoulder.

"Young man," said he, "that's a very good machine of yours, but I see where a very important improvement can be made. Under such circumstances, I will give you fifty thousand dollars for your right, title and interest in it!"

Miller grasped one of the levers of his machine to keep him from falling. No! it could not be; the whole thing must be a continuation of the brick-yard dream.

"How much did you say?" asked Miller in doubt.

"Fifty thousand," said the man, evidently ready to increase the amount if Miller demanded it.

"I'll take it!" gasped the inventor, who still could not believe the evidence of his senses.

"Then come with me."

A few minutes more, and they were on their way to Philadelphia; and in crossing the river Richard Miller paid the last sixpence he had in the world, for ferriage. Once arrived in the city, they went directly to the office of a lawyer, where the necessary papers, a full assignment, were drawn up—Miller all the while doubting the possibility of the man having anything like the amount of money he offered; but he still resolved in his mind that he was safe if he got but a single thousand in cash, and the balance in worthless promissory notes. At length the assignment was finished and signed, and the man handed Miller a check, payable at one of the principal banks, for the entire amount, on the back of which the attorney certified to Miller being the owner of the check.

The patentee was still incredulous, but satisfied that if the check was worthless, it would be evidence of fraud, and the sale not valid, the papers were exchanged, and he left the office. He hastened to the bank, and presented his check to the paying-teller. That gentleman scrutinized it a moment, and then asked how he would have it.

Richard Miller was again nonplussed. He stood like a statue gazing upon the teller until the question was repeated.

"Gold and silver!" said Richard.

"Gold and silver!" said the teller, in surprise—"have you a dray?"

"Beg your pardon," said Miller. "Let me have a bag of a thousand dollars in gold and silver, and the balance in bank notes!"

A bag with that amount in mixed coin was soon placed before him, and forty-nine packages of one thousand dollars each were laid on the counter. Miller had by this time in a measure regained self-possession, and after stuffing the notes into his pocket, he shouldered his bag of coin and left the bank.

As soon as he saw an omnibus he hailed it, and rode to within two squares of his home. When he reached the latter he staggered in beneath his load, and walking directly to the bed, he emptied the bag of glittering coin upon it, to the infinite amazement of his wife. But what was her astonishment when he drew from his pocket package after package of bank notes. He contained himself until he had thrown the last package upon the bed, when he gave way to the wildest and most extravagant feelings.

"Ha! ha! ha!" he laughed hysterically—"my dream is out! The machine works! Fifty thousand. Ha! ha!"

Then snatching up his child he continued pacing the room—

"My boy, you are no beggar! Fifty thousand! ha! ha!"

In this way he raved, shouted and stamped. Large beads of perspiration stood upon his brow, his face looked haggard, and his eyes had the wild glare of a maniac. In vain his wife tried to calm his agitation, he raved until he ruptured a blood-vessel. He sank down in his chair with his child in his arms, the blood gushing from his nose and mouth. He drew back his head to indulge in another hysterical laugh, but it was choked with a gurgling noise, and the next moment Richard Miller was a corpse! His spirit had passed away, in the language of Longfellow:

"Like a glorious roll of drums,
In the triumph of a dream."

The reader will note that we have used fictitious for real names. The machine, which went under the name of the purchaser, made him an independent fortune and is still in use.

A Prolific Negro Family.

The Memphis Avalanche has discovered a most prolific and certainly well-branched family. Such a family wouldn't take much time to stock all the plantations of the South with "hands."

The head of this family is now living in Chickasaw county, Mississippi, on the plantation of Colonel Duncan Hubbard, and is now considerably over one hundred years of age. She was a woman and a mother during the war of the Revolution. Her name is Patsey. (Put that down Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe.)

It is related of the old woman that, a few Sundays ago, becoming impatient at the slow progress made by some of the younger negroes in hitching up a team which was to convey her to church, some two miles distant from her master's plantation, she started off on foot at a brisk rate, walking the whole distance, and reaching the church before others who started with her.

The number of her descendants is truly astonishing, she having no less than three hundred and one living children, grandchildren great grandchildren, and great-great grandchildren. A large number of the descendants—perhaps one-third of the whole—have died. Her oldest son, a robust healthy man, died recently at the age of ninety years, and her youngest living child is over seventy years old. One of her sons, "Uncle Billy," is the father of sixteen children, and these children have now living eighty descendants. Patsey, the maternal ancestor of all this army of men, women and children, still lives in the enjoyment of a ripe old age, surrounded by every comfort which a kind and indulgent master can bestow, and respected by all who know her, whites as well as blacks.

CINCINNATI—AS SHE WAS, AS SHE IS.—We are indebted to the Price Current for the following item:

"Seventy-one years ago, in the town of Lexington, Ky., which is still a town, there was a newspaper published called the Kentucky Gazette, by a Mr. James Bradford. On Saturday, Sept. 6, 1788, there appeared in that paper the following advertisement:

'The subscribers, being proprietors of a tract of land opposite the mouth of Licking River, on the North West side of the Ohio, have determined to lay off a town upon that excellent situation. The local and natural advantages speak its future prosperity, being equal, if not superior, to any on the bank of the Ohio, between the Miamies.

'The in-lots to be each half an acre, the out-lots four acres. Thirty of each to be given to settlers, upon paying one dollar and a half for the survey and deed of each lot.

'The fifteenth of September, is appointed for a large company to meet in Lexington, and mark a road from thence to the mouth of Licking, provided, Judge Symmes arrives, being daily expected.

'When the town is laid off, lots will be given to such as may become residents, before the first of April next.'

MATHIAS DENMAN.
ROBERT PATTERSON.
JOHN FILSON.

These three men have passed away from earth, but many still live who had attained the age of manhood, when this advertisement appeared in the Kentucky Gazette. How suggestive is this notice! The "marking of a road," and the liberal donations to settlers, all carry the mind back irresistibly to the land of the forest and the aboriginal, to the time when all this country West of the Mountains, was a dreary unbroken wilderness.

The parties met pursuant to this notice, and laid out a town, which they first called Losantiville, but subsequently Cincinnati. The course of the Streets was marked on the trees. There can be no doubt that this was the origin of Cincinnati, and upon the ground then laid out, by these adventurous spirits, is now located the third city in the Union, with a population of 250,000, the most extensive provision market in this or any other country, famous for the skill and enterprise of her mechanics, the extent of her manufactures, and the wonderful progress and magnitude of her commerce, now reaching, probably, to a hundred millions annually.

AGES OF OUR PUBLIC MEN.—President Buchanan will be 68 years old on the 15th of November next; Vice-President Breckinridge will be 39 years of age on the 16th of January next; Lewis Cass is nearly 77 years old; Stephen A. Douglas was 46 years of age on the 23d of April last; Simon Cameron is in his 60th year; Jefferson Davis is 54 years old; Caleb Cushing is in his 60th year; Howell Cobb will be 44 years old on the 7th of September next; Wm. H. Seward is in his 58th year; Franklin Pierce is 54 years old; Robert Field Stockton is nearly 60 years of age; John Charles Fremont was 46 years old on the 7th of January last; John Bell is 62 years old; John J. Crittenden will be 72 years old in September next; Alexander H. Stephens was 47 years old in February last; James L. Orr was 37 years old on the 12th of May last; Jesse D. Dickinson will be 59 years old on the 11th of September next; Horatio Seymour is about 50 years of age; John E. Wool is about 65 years of age; John Slidell is in his 66th year; Nathaniel P. Banks was 43 years old last January.

The Paris papers tell an interesting incident which brings out "an old lady of the good old time." Thus it runs: "The Commissary of Police of the district of the Rue Vivienne, Paris, was the other day called in to record the sudden death of an old lady named Freville, occupying a room on the Boulevard des Italiens, and to his surprise he learned that she was not less than 104 years of age. It is believed that her death, which took place very quietly, was hastened by the fatigue she underwent in remaining for a length of time at her window, on the 14th, to see the troops pass; but in spite of all that could be said to her, she persisted in seeing the spectacle to the end, because, she said, it reminded her of the triumphant entry into Paris of Gen. Bonaparte and the army of Italy, upward of 50 years ago."

Marshal McMahon, Duke of Magenta, on arriving at his home in Monteresson, a few weeks ago, was received with a grand public demonstration, got up by the townspeople. A triumphal arch with flowers and evergreens was erected; the Sub-Prefect of the arrondissement and all the authorities were assembled to welcome him; and the Marshal, as he passed along, was hailed with enthusiastic cheers.

CIGAR MAKING MACHINE.—We have recently examined a most ingenious machine, the invention of Mr. Louis Beucha, of Paris, for making cigars. Patents have been taken out in Europe and in this country, as well as in some portions of South America and the tropics. At an examination of the machine at Madrid, made by royal order, the commission reported that it made 42 cigars in ten minutes, or 252 an hour.—Scientific American.

The magnetic telegraph is slowly wending its way westward and has already reached Atchinson on the Missouri river. From the Pacific side the wire is extending to Salt Lake city. It will not be very long before the two, uniting, will give a complete telegraph connection between the Atlantic and Pacific.

FARMERS' DEPARTMENT.

THE FEEDING OF HOGS.—The hog fattens most rapidly in such a state of atmosphere as is most congenial to his comfort—not too hot or too cold; hence the fall months are best for making pork.—The more agreeable the weather, the less is the amount of food required for the waste of life. During the spring and summer months, it pays well to set apart a clover field for hogs, where they can have free access to the water and sour milk and swill from the house. It is generally conceded that food in a fermented state contains more nitrogen than in a sweet or unfermented state. It has been found advantageous after the clover fails, to have a patch of oats or peas to turn the hogs into; after that commence cutting up corn in a green state, or when it is in what is termed roasting ears, as the hog thrives faster than when the corn becomes hard. It is also found, by experiment, that the hog fattens very fast on the Sorghum Cane, cut about the time it has its growth, and thrown to the hogs in a clean pen or on a grass plat. For later feeding, when the corn becomes dry, have it ground, as it is a wasteful way of feeding whole corn to hogs, after it has matured. Then collect together all your perishable articles, such as unripe fruit, small potatoes, pumpkins, beets, carrots, &c., and steam the meal with any of these articles, and double the pork can be made on the same quantity, than if fed on a raw state, and the hogs can be fattened in less time. It is the best way to fatten a hog to give him at regular hours all he can eat up clean, so as not to have an overplus for him to swallow in, that is, when he is fed in a close pen.

When hogs are confined in close quarters, in order to facilitate the process of fattening, they should be provided with a good house, well covered, made reasonably tight, with a good floor and troughs, with the sleeping apartment separated from where they are fed. A little salt, ashes, charcoal and rotten wood add to their health and facilitate their fattening.

The philosophy of increase of fat in animals is, that the digested food not needed to supply waste in the system, is laid up in the form of fat around the muscles, ready to be absorbed again into the circulation if needed. Waste is induced by exercise, or use of the muscles, and also by combustion in the lungs, of the digested food, to supply animal heat. Hence, the same amount of food given in warm weather will, if digested, afford a greater surplus of fat than when fed in cold weather. Hogs or other animals intended for fattening should be shut up this month. Many advocate making the size of the fattening pen so small that the animal will have but just room to stand or lie. While confinement favors rest and a disposition to fatten, too close quarters are not healthful for the animal, which needs moderate exercise to promote digestion. The quality of the flesh produced must be somewhat impaired by any confinement that interferes with the health. The appetite may be kept up by change of food, a frequent supply of green vegetable, such as corn, cabbage leaves, pea vines, and the refuse of the garden. Cooked food digests much more easily than raw, and is in a condition to yield more nourishment, and is also better relished by most kinds of stock. Cleanliness in the fattening pen should not be overlooked. Although pigs proverbially are filthy, they are not really so; they do not delight in the effluvia of their own droppings, as any one can see by noticing that they generally appropriate one portion of the pen to filth. An occasional washing and scrubbing with sop suds will conduce much to their thrift—all animals keep in condition more easily when the skin is kept clean and healthy.

CERTAIN CURE FOR BOTTS IN HORSES.—"Livery Keeper" writes thus to the Kentucky Farmer:—When you find your horse complaining and looking around at his side, and lies down pretty often, and is not swollen, you may very readily come to the conclusion that he has the botts. Lose no time in giving him a quart of sweet milk and molasses, and just as soon as you let his head down, after he swallows the drench, slap him several times on the side of which he complains most, with a paddle about two feet long, six inches wide and two feet thick, striking him pretty hard; this process jars the botts loose from him, and they take hold of, and feed in the milk and molasses. In ten or fifteen minutes after striking him with the paddle, give him a quart or half gallon drench of strong sage tea; this accomplishes the object by killing the botts, and the horse is relieved.

WATERING TREES AND PLANTS.—When it is necessary to do this, do not just sprinkle the surface of the ground; this is "only an aggravation" to the thirsty roots, and leaves the ground in a bad state—hard and dry. Instead of this, remove the surface soil several inches deep, then return the top soil, and mulch it with straw, leaves, tanbark, or any such porous material. This will prevent the baking of the ground, and will keep the soil moist for a long time. The usual method of dashing water on the ground is almost useless. Very little of the water so applied, reaches the roots of the trees. But carefully put into the ground as we have mentioned, it will answer some purpose.

A pious Irishman, living in a neighboring town, says the Bridgetown Reporter, not long since, in exhorting in a conference meeting, sinners to repent, let his remarks take an analogical turn. "Me beloved friends," said Pat, "all cannot be parts of the same building. Some have to be posts, some rafters, &c., and, me friends, if there were not already too many sleepers in this house, I would be willin' to be a slaper (sleeper) meself."

An impetuous volunteer, while practising the military science alone in his garden, tumbled backward into a ditch.—His wife hurried to his assistance and implored him to say whether or not he was hurt. The reply was:—"Go away, woman, what do you know about war?"

—One of the wheel mills of the Cleveland Powder Company blew up about 10 o'clock this morning, injuring one man severely. The mill had ceased operating a short time before, and the injured man was in the act of changing the charge, consisting of about one hundred pounds of powder. Damage from two to three hundred dollars, which will be repaired in a few days. The other mills are in operation.—Cleveland Herald, Sept. 14.

There is a field of broom corn this season in the vicinity of Rockford, Ill., of nearly 800 acres. The seed was planted by machinery, the corn being drilled in rows two feet nine inches apart. The whole crop is contracted at $85 per ton. Ordinarily, three acres will produce a ton. The crop this year will come to $20,000.

James Gordon Bennett has been the particular favored guest of Mr. Buchanan every day since his arrival in Washington.

The Sumner (Kansas) Gazette names Henry C. Carey, of Philadelphia, for President in 1860.

Fever and Ague,

from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed. We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflictive disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitations, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.

This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habited to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in, and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, nor in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which peculiarly distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs, not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included, which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold, the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue, and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories, and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservation of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and, by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in the maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose domains it lies. We can, under no circumstances, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendancy in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 6th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States, and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population, for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the law passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the paramount interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

The Mission of Gen. Scott.

The object of Gen. SCOTT's mission to the Pacific coast is said to be to settle the dispute which has arisen between Great Britain and the United States as to the ownership of the Island of San Juan. But how this object is to be accomplished by sending Gen. SCOTT on this long journey of four or five thousand miles, seems to be a matter of some uncertainty.

The War Department could order Gen. HARNEY, who has taken possession of the Island, to return or abandon that possession until the question was finally settled. There is no prospect of a collision between the British and American troops, and if a collision should arise, it will be ended long before Gen. SCOTT will reach his destination. It is therefore inferred that his mission cannot be a military one.

The New York Times affirms that the General has been unquestionably sent out to decide the controversy, and to assign possession of the Island, either to Great Britain or the United States. The query then arises whether he is to pronounce that decision under instructions, or whether the whole matter is submitted to his own discretion. The Times thinks that if he is to act under instructions, a less dignified messenger would have answered the purpose quite as well; but that if he is to consult his own judgment, and to decide the question upon his own construction of the treaty, it is singular that he should have been selected for that special purpose.

If a decision in favor of the United States is anticipated, the Times indicates that the Administration would hardly have selected a political opponent to reap the credit of it. It says that the movement looks very much as if the Administration had already decided that the island is to be surrendered; and as if they preferred to throw upon Gen. SCOTT the responsibility of such a [illegible] rather than assume it themselves.

PROVOKING A ROBBER.—The correspondent of the Journal writes that on Wednesday night a citizen of Zanesville, after retiring for the night, heard a noise as of some one attempting to enter the window. The gentleman arose, seized his pistol and approaching the window fired, killing the robber instantly. An old detective attending the Fair recognized the corpse as that of a notorious hotel thief from New York.

A YOUNG WIFE DIES BROKEN HEARTED.—In the obituary department of the Journal, published at Palmer, Mass., we find the following announcement:

"DIED.—Mary, aged 20, wife of De Witt Clinton Packard, of Providence, R. I."

In the editorial column there is a sad and touching story, relating to the announcement which we annex below. It's a lesson from the tomb, to the young and thoughtless, and told so eloquently that it cannot fail to make an impression for good, on readers of every age. It says:

"In another column we record the death of a young lady who died of a broken heart. We do not like to trespass upon the sacredness of domestic grief, to unfold the details of her sad story; but when the privacy of affliction becomes public feeling, it is not improper for the Press to place the events on record. It is not necessary to repeat names or relate minute particulars. It is enough that we draw the outlines of a picture for the reader to paint with appropriate colors. Many months ago, in the neighboring town of Belchertown, a young man sought and received the promise of the hand of a young lady, whose home was in the lap of luxury, whose mental and personal attractions made all pleasant around her. Like to many confiding ones of her sex, she trusted man's unhallowed promise, and yielded all to him. From that hour he estranged himself from her, and removed to a distant State. When it became evident that he had exposed himself to the penalty of the law, at the request of her friends he returned to her to fulfil the vows he had long before made. They were married in one of those hasty, unceremonious ways, which occupy but little time or attention. Late in the evening they returned to her father's house, where he left her in the street, promising to return in a short time. But that promise was never fulfilled. She wrote to him, and received encouragement that he would soon provide a home for her, but delay followed delay, till her letters and entreaties were unheeded and unanswered. At length a pledge of woman's love to her husband came into the world to open new fountains of affection to the young wife. Still the husband and father came not.

"The mother recovered from confinement; but after repeated letters to her husband found no answer, the idea that she was deserted by him forced itself upon her, and she gave way to despondency and despair. The child, partaking of its mother's grief, soon died. There was nothing that she could live for now, and though suffering from no disease, she sank upon a dying bed. Then the swift wings of lightning bore to the distant husband the intelligence that she was dying. He still hesitated, but at length set out to meet his expiring wife. Conscious that her hours were few, she only wished to live long enough to see her husband; he was still all to her. Her last words to her friends were: 'Tell him that I still love him—that I died for him.' When evening shadowed the earth the husband came. As he approached the bedside of his injured wife, he was recognized, and the words 'He's come,' burst from her lips. Already had the wing of the death angel cast its shadow over that dwelling, and she was entering the dimness of the dark valley. Next morning, in that room, lay the corpse of a beautiful young wife, on which the husband had looked for the last time, and departed.

"Last Sabbath afternoon, the funeral of the young wife took place under her father's roof. Her neighbors and friends, to the number of five hundred, were present; but the husband who had left her to die for him was not there. A deeply affecting address was made by her former pastor, and just as the sun was sinking behind the western hills, four young ladies of her acquaintance, clad in garments of white, bore her to a grave in the garden, where the green turf was laid gently over her. Such is the story of one who died broken hearted.—The grave is a quiet place for the injured wife, but where in all the world can there be peace for him who would thus bring sorrow and death upon her? The story has its moral, but we will leave the reader to apply it; it is full of warning, and we leave the young to heed it."

Affairs in the Papal States.

A Bologna correspondent of the London Times, writing under date August 27, says:

I write to you in the midst of the great agitation which now pervades the town on account of news from Rimini. It is said that a corps of Pontifical troops amounting to 8,000 men of all arms, and commanded by General Kalbermatten, had left Pesaro and was near Cattolica, preparing for an engagement. An attack is consequently expected here. The government, to allay the agitation, has just issued a notice which neither denies or affirms the fact, but advises the people to have confidence in the measures adopted by the authorities, and cautions them not to be alarmed by exaggerated statements propagated by the enemies of the present order of things.

So far as I have been able to learn, the following are the arrangements made with a view to an attack. In the first place there is no corps of 8,000 men, but simply 3,000 Swiss with several pieces of artillery, who have come from Pesaro and halted about two leagues from Cattolica. However, dispatches received by the government state that the force is only the advanced guard of the Pontifical troops which are to attack the Legations, and that these troops are composed not only of Romans, but of many of the Duke of Modena's men, of some Swiss from Naples engaged by the Pope, and of a certain number of Austrians who have been landed at Ancona, clothed in the Papal uniform, and then introduced into the native regiments to complete their effective, or more probably to keep watch over their new comrades. This collection of mercenaries is said to form an army of from 10,000 to 12,000 men, intended to restore the Papal authority in the revolted provinces.

THE POTATO DISEASE IN IRELAND.—The Cork papers will have it that the blight in its oldest and worst form has attacked the potato crop in that quarter. The fact of its actual appearance there has been several times noticed in the local journals, but now the tale is told more circumstantially than usual, and is no longer set down as a flying rumor. The Examiner says:

"We regret to say that so far as has come under our observation, in the rural districts for many miles around the city, potato disease is becoming very general. In one instance that has come to our knowledge, a splendid field of of fifteen acres, excellent land and highly cultivated, the crop on which was at one time expected to realize £500, is now become absolutely worthless. In many cases half and even two-thirds of the crops have been lost. A correspondent informs us that the blight has set in with dead virulence along the coast from Kinsale to Clonakilty. The crop in that district this year was about the same average breadth as it has been for the last three years, but in yield and quantity it had been greatly superior. Unfortunately, however, in no year has the tuber been so rapidly destroyed. The potato melts away almost when attacked. Whole fields have been abandoned as not being worth the cost of digging. With regard to the other crops in that district, the same correspondent states that wheat has been found not nearly so productive as in 1858, oats, on the other hand, much more prolific, and barley less in produce, but far better in quality and condition."

PROVISIONING THE RUSSIAN ARMY IN THE CRIMEA.—General Sattler, who was intendant of the Russian army in the Crimea, has published in the Invalide an account of the provisioning of the Russian army during the late war. It appears from this that the Russian troops in the Crimea at the commencement of the war amounted to 250,000 men, with 100,000 horses, and those of all the troops for whom the intendance had to furnish provisions during 1855 were 545,000 men, with 187,360 horses; and for 1856, 796,973 men, with 183,570 horses. The intendance had to contend with immense difficulties—the price of cattle, provender, and all kinds of necessaries having increased fivefold, and oftentimes more than tenfold, particularly from the middle of 1855 until January, 1856.

COLORED PERSONS IN LOUISIANA.—Two colored sailors have been arrested in New Orleans for coming there contrary to the new State law. They have sued out a writ of habeas corpus to test the constitutionality of the law, which it is alleged, is in contravention and violation of the Constitution of the United States and the treaties and acts of Congress regulating commerce between foreign nations and the several States of the Union.

— On Monday, a man, named Joseph Barrico, was brought before the Police Court at Cincinnati, charged with petty larceny. He was recognized as a convict, who escaped some time since from the Ohio Penitentiary, and forthwith marched off to his old quarters.

— A woman named Davis poisoned herself and child near Lebanon, on Saturday night last. The dead bodies of both were found by some of their neighbors in a wretched hovel which they occupied, on Sunday morning. The cause of this terrible act is said to be desertion by an unfeeling husband.

— Miss Betsey Sanders, aged fifteen years, daughter of Mr. John Sanders, of Peru, Huron county, was burned to death on the 14th while ironing clothes. Her garments took fire from the stove, enveloping her entire person in flame, burning the flesh from her arms and part of her body. She lingered in the greatest pain for about fifteen hours when she expired in extreme agony.

— We learn from the Dayton Empire that Mr. James Sisco, of Troy, Miami county, was knocked down by two men on the track of the Sandusky railroad, three miles from Dayton, on Thursday evening, and stamped until he became unconscious, and breaking two of his ribs. While in this condition they robbed him of $60, and what else of value he had on his person. There is no clue to the perpetrators of this outrage.

LIABILITIES OF HOTEL KEEPERS.—The Court of Appeals of Md. has recently given a decision in the case of JOHN H. GILES, vs. SEVEN FAUNTLEROY, the facts of which were as follow:

A guest at a hotel paid his bill at 12 o'clock, which payment entitled him to the use of his room for the entire day; he then informed the clerk he intended leaving, and requested the latter to send his trunk, at four o'clock on the same day, to a particular steamer, and left with him money for the portarage fee; the clerk undertook to do this, and delivered the trunk to the porter usually employed for such purposes, with directions to carry it to the steamer named by the guest, and paid the porter his fee.

The Court in this case decided that the proprietor of the hotel was responsible for the loss which resulted, from the fact that through the negligence or mistake of the clerk or porter, the trunk was taken to the office of the wrong steamer, and there broken open and its contents stolen; also, that an innkeeper is responsible for the baggage of his guest; but a Colt's revolver and silver teaspoons are not embraced in the term "baggage" nor are surgical instruments, unless the guest is a physician or a surgeon, or a student of medicine.

DESTITUTION—RELIEF BY THE SONS OF MALTA.—Yesterday a family consisting of a father and six children, in a wretchedly destitute condition, were landed in the Union Depot from the Madison train. They were penniless, ragged, cold, and so broken in spirits that they seemed utterly helpless. They had started on foot with one other member, the wife and mother, to walk from North Carolina to a place near Greencastle, in this State. On the road the mother died, and was buried, but with failing health and strength the father and his little children kept on their weary way. Arrived at Madison, they appealed to the officers of the Madison road for a free passage to this place, and not in vain. Some Sons of Malta whose business is in and about the Depot, among them we may name David Lang, John Bussey, and David Hays—soon noticed their condition and took them in charge. Food and warm clothing were obtained, and comforts provided for them, that they had long been strangers to. In a few hours the squalid and half-frozen children were lost in the bright eyed and warm clad girls and boys, looking hopeful and happy. A pass was obtained for them over the Terre Haute Road to Greencastle, and Mr. E. T. Knightly, the treasurer of the Lodge at that place, pledged the Sons to provide for them when they arrived there, and see that they were safely landed at the place they started for.

The Sons of Malta may be a little too noisy in their lodge-room, and we sometimes think they are, but the next time we feel like grumbling as the sound of their drums and horns and gongs floats into our sanctum, we will think of the distressed family made happy, and tell them to thump away.—Indianapolis Sentinel, Sept. 21.

Billiards—A Challenge.

SEEREITER, the great champion billiard player, publishes the following card in the Chicago Press and Tribune:

CHICAGO, Sept. 15, 1859.

To the Editors of the Press and Tribune:

I have visited Chicago to meet the billiard celebrities of the country, in the hope of being able to make a match. I have been disappointed: I will play any man in the world for the sum of $5,000 a side, the American four ball carom game, with two and three eighths balls, two thousand points up, and will give or take expenses of the game. To be played within ninety days.

JOHN SEEREITER.

Some of the San Francisco papers have published portraits of Mr. Greeley. They seem to have taken for this purpose such woodcuts as they had on hand, and instead of adopting the portrait to the original, they content themselves with adapting the description to the portrait. It was found necessary in one case to make him a "stout, burley, dark complexioned man, with black hair, and a good deal of black whisker."

The other day, a lady fell off the Brooklyn boat into the East river; a poor Irishman sprang over and rescued her. When she was safe on deck again, her husband, who had been a calm spectator of the accident, handed the brave fellow a shilling. Upon some of the bystanders expressing indignation, Pat said, as he pocketed the coin, "Arrah, don't blame the jintleman—he knows best; mayhap if I hadn't saved her he'd have given me a dollar!"

The Leigh, Pa., Chronicle states there were recently interred in Tydesley Church yard the remains of a very ingenious, useful, but somewhat eccentric person, named Hallwell, who, for half a century, practised dentistry, along with many other descriptions of business. He willed, in due testamentary form, that the whole of the teeth extracted by him should be buried with him. In deference to his wishes, his executors saw that done, and in the grave in which he lies, were deposited 30,000 human teeth of his own extraction, in the period mentioned.

Bowen, a notorious horse-thief, and celebrated in New Jersey as a preacher, died in the jail at Frederick, Md., on Sunday.

It is said that among all the varieties of figures which have been dug up from the Chiriqui graves, in New Granada, there is not one which resembles either a horse, cow, pig, dog, cat, or any other domestic animal, which is strong proof that they were made by a race which existed prior to the introduction of these animals into this continent.

It is said that the Mormons have determined to occupy the Island of Paque, in the eastern Archipelago, separated from Australia by Torres' Straits, as the seat of their future empire. It is a well timbered, productive spot of 200,000 square miles area, inhabited by Malays and negroes, who report having found gold.

The family of Thomas G. Chappell, in Dinwiddie, Va., consisting of his wife and six children, were poisoned on Monday last, there having been arsenic introduced into their coffee. Mrs. C. is still ill, but the children are convalescing. A slave, suspected of the crime, has been arrested.

Wm. Stewart, charged with the murder of his brother and business partner, James Stewart, at Wheeling, had a preliminary examination on Saturday. Several witnesses testified that they saw William strike the deceased several times with some instrument. The deceased was remanded to jail to take his trial.

A stabbing affray occurred in Boston on Saturday, the parties to which were the well-known Dr. J. C. Ayer and Mr. Fay, Secretary of the Middlesex Mills Company. Some words passed relative to the financial affairs of the Company, when Dr. Ayer stabbed Mr. Fay, inflicting a wound which it is feared may prove serious.

A San Francisco writer, of late date, says the following are about the rate of wages now paid: Carpenters, from $4 to $7 per day; bricklayers and masons, from $4 to $6; blacksmiths, wheelwrights, machinists, painters, tinsmiths, from $3 to $4 50; common laborers, $3; farm hands, from $30 to $40 per month, and found; servants, from $25 to $40 per month, and found; cooks, from $30 to $60

The Grand Jury in Baltimore has indicted Mr. Fitzhugh, one of the proprietors of the Daily Exchange, for assault with intent to kill Paul Placide. The circumstances of the affray were noticed several days since. Placide is a noted rowdy in Baltimore, who took offence at certain comments of the Exchange, and revenged himself by drawing a pistol upon Mr. Fitzhugh in a stage coach.

The latest English Court gossip is that the Duke of Rutland has offered marriage to Princess Mary, sister of the Duke of Cambridge, who had accepted him; but that the head of the family, viz: the Queen, forbids the match. Both parties arrived at "years of discretion" years ago, but Princesses, less fortunate than dairy-maids, cannot marry the man of their choice. It is stated to be the settled policy of the Crown to have no marriages in the Royal Family except with other Royal Families.

The Bostonians were deprived of a splendid fete on Saturday by the severity of the equinoctial storm. Extensive preparations had been made for the ceremony of inaugurating the Webster statue, which had been erected in front of the State House, but the whole ceremonial had to be adjourned. Mr. Everett, who was the appointed orator on the occasion, delivered his address in the Music Hall.

At Sacramento, Wis., on Tuesday of last week, a little girl, ten or twelve years of age, was carried off by a drunken Indian, in the absence of her parents. Missing her on their return, they started in search of her. The search was kept up till near midnight and then abandoned. During the night the girl returned. It appears that the Indian carried her into the woods a distance, but being too drunk to proceed, lay down and went to sleep. Taking advantage of his condition, she fled, and found her way home.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Sept. 21.—The steamer Arabia, from Liverpool on the 10th, arrived at Halifax last evening. Her advices, which are one week later, were forwarded hither by horse express. The Liverpool breadstuffs market continued dull. Provisions were tending downward.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Consols are quoted at 95 [illegible]

SACKVILLE, Sept. 21.—The dispatches received per steamer Arabia furnish the following items of news:

The sessions of the Zurich Conference have been suspended.

The Assemblies of Parma and Romagna have definitely resolved on annexation to Piedmont.

The National Assembly at Bologna on the 7th adopted a resolution declaring that the people of Bologna desire annexation to Sardinia. Bologna will illuminate in honor of the event. The Assembly also authorized the President to present an address to the Emperor Napoleon and King of Sardinia expressing its sympathies for Venetia, and offering to make pecuniary sacrifices in her favor.

The Pope had been attacked with fever, and was forced to suspend all audiences for several days. He was, however, recovering. He was about to proceed to the Castle Gondolf.

A deputation was about to leave Tunis on a mission to the French Government. It is supposed that the Papal army is not in a condition to act against the force of the Romagna, led by Gen. Garibaldi.

The National Assembly of Parma opened on the 7th inst., with great solemnity. M. Farini, the dictator, delivered an address, in which he reviewed the history of the Bourbons, and terminated amid cries of "Viva Victor Emanuel." The city presented the appearance of a great fete.

Several French journals have been prohibited in Sardinia in consequence of advocating the separation of Savoy from Piedmont.

Proposals are pending in the National Assembly of Parma, confirming Farini, as dictator and declaring the termination of the Bourbon dynasty.

SPAIN.—The Madrid journals say that the Emperor of Morocco has declared as traitors the tribes on the coast who insulted the Spanish flag, and promises to inflict exemplary punishment on them. The Spanish Government, however, doubts the fulfillment of this promise, and continued the preparations for an expedition to revenge the insult and murder of their subjects.

The English Government has presented a note drawn up in a friendly style, requesting explanations as to the object of the concentrating of Spanish troops at Algiers, in the immediate vicinity of Gibraltar.

FRANCE.—The Independence asserts that France is making vigorous naval preparations for the coast defences. At the meeting of the Paris Conference the Ottoman ambassador announced that the Sultan had agreed exceptionally, and for this time only, to grant an investiture to Couzear, as the hospodar of both Moldavia and Wallachia. The government of these places, however, to be conducted separately.

On motion of the Russian plenipotentiary another year was allowed for the settlement of the question of convent property in the principalities.

The Austrian and Turkish ministers were called on for an early statement of the decision they had come to regarding the navigation of the Danube. They were not prepared with the required information, and promised to communicate the observations of the Conference to their governments.

The Paris correspondent of the London Herald contradicts the report that twenty frigates have been ordered to be built at Cruest. It says the rumour arose from an immense order given for iron plates, which are intended for the embrasures at Cherbourg.

The Moniteur publishes agricultural statistics of Algiers, showing that the recent harvest in that country has been satisfactory.

Two additional prominent French exiles published in the London Times their views of the late amnesty. M. E. Quinet declines to accept it, denying the right of the Emperor to proscribe or pardon him. Felix Pyatt declines as a matter of policy to accept the amnesty and return to France, where he thinks patriots may do more good than by remaining aloof.

Prince Napoleon had gone to Switzerland, and it was supposed his journey had reference to the intended interview between the Emperors.

M. De Laguerroniere had gone to St. Sauveur. His mission refers to the intended liberal reform of the press laws.

The monthly returns of the bank of France show an increase in cash of 1,750,000 francs.

It was reported in Paris that France had notified the Porte that she does not intend to treat the Suez canal affair as a political question.

A letter from Paris published in the Independence Belge, says the Emperor of France made peace merely for the purpose of putting down the naval supremacy of England, and unless she submits quietly there must be war.

King Victor Emanuel received the Tuscan delegation of the 3d inst. In reply to their address he thanked them for their expressed wish for annexation, but said its accomplishment can only take place by the negotiations which are about to begin. In the affairs of Italy he would support the cause of Tuscany before the powers, and hoped that Europe would not refuse to practice towards Tuscany that work of redressing grievances which it, under less favorable circumstances, practiced towards Greece, Belgium and the Danubian principalities.

The vote in Parma on the annexation to Piedmont resulted in its favor by 63,000 against 500.

The Paris journals praise Victor Emanuel's speech to the Tuscan Legation. They conclude that it is almost certain that a Congress will assemble. The French ambassador, of Florence has been recalled.

A new Sardinian loan of five million dollars was expected to be soon announced.

The Central Association of master builders at London had determined to declare all their yards open to workmen on the 12th inst., provided the workmen abide by the declaration against trade combinations. This it was presumed, would scarcely alter the situation of affairs.

The London Times editorially re-alluding to the talk of American slaveholders with regard reviving the slave trade, points to the renewed activity on the part of the United States about to put down the slave trade, as the best answer to the outcry.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says much importance is attached to Metternich's mission to St. Sauveur. One of its objects is said to be the formation of an alliance between France and Austria, the success of which is calculated to endanger Italian liberty, and menace Europe.

It is asserted that the papal troops continue to threaten the legations. From 8,000 to 9,000 troops, with twelve pieces of cannon, were assembled at Pesaro.

The Belgian Senate had adopted the first article in the bill, providing for the Antwerp fortifications, by a vote of 34 against 15.

A SCAMP—PASS HIM AROUND.—On Monday last, a chap by the name of S. D. Latham, claiming to hail from Franklin county, Ohio, came to this place, and put up at the American. During the day, he called in at the Post-Office, where he got quite a number of papers from Mr. Algie, stating that he wished to take them to his room in the hotel, as he intended to subscribe for some paper, and merely desired the loan of those for a few moments, to select from, when he would return them. Getting the papers, he left town, laboring under a fit of absent-mindedness so strong, as to prevent him from returning the papers, or paying his board-bill at the American.—He'll do to travel, so pass him along.—Delaware Standard.

FEROCITY OF RATS.—A child in Pawtucket was badly bitten by a rat while sleeping. The animal had opened an artery on one of the fingers, and the cradle and night clothes of the infant were found deluged in blood. The rats in the stables of the West Philadelphia Railroad gnaw the hoofs of the horses until they reach the quick, and sometimes disable the animals.

The Leavenworth (Kansas) Times, Sept. 14, states that a number of indictments against parties charged with a violation of the Fugitive Slave act, were stolen from the County Clerk's Office a few days since. The indicted parties are believed to be guilty of the theft, and no trace of the delinquents has been discovered.

The Virginia papers advocate a general celebration of the battle of Yorktown on the 19th of October next.

State Fair—Premiums Awarded.

ZANESVILLE, O., Sept. 23, 1859.

The Fair is rapidly drawing to a close. Yesterday should have been the day of the Fair, but for an almost continued rain, which made everything so disagreeable, that many were deterred from coming. Notwithstanding, however, the receipts were fair, showing a total amount of $10,500 which would undoubtedly have been $12,000 if the weather had been favorable.

I will here give you the premiums on live stock awarded yesterday, and would say that the several committees found much difficulty in making up their reports, from the fact, that the exhibition of stock was very large and fine, nearly every animal in the different departments was highly commended.—Many items of interest took place to-day, which space will not permit me now to give.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—The health of the Secretary of War is represented as improving at Old Point Comfort.

The receipts into the Treasury last week amounted to $861,000, the drafts issued to $1,158,000 and the amount subject to draft $4,466,000.

The President will to-day resume his residence at the White House.

All the documents ordered by the last Congress, with the exception of the mechanical part of the Patent Office Report, have been printed.

Senator Bigler's report right here was with reference to the affairs of his brother, who is minister to Chili.

In the event of a collision between the United States and Great Britain growing out of the San Juan affair, General Harney can put the Government in possession of the fact in fifteen days, by an express from Vancouver's to Salt Lake city, and from thence to Leavenworth. The time may seem incredible, but there is no doubt that it can and will be accomplished in case of collision.

The Committee from Portland, Maine, arrived here yesterday for the purpose of inviting the President and Cabinet to attend the celebration of the arrival of the steamship Great Eastern. The President informed the Committee that it would be impossible for him to accept their invitation. The pressing engagements of the Cabinet also render it impossible for them to accept it.

Jefferson Davis has arrived here, his health much improved.

MAUCH CHUNK, PA., Sept. 23.—Rain has fallen steadily during the whole week, and the Lehigh River has risen eight feet. The creek running through the town has overflowed, and the streets are covered with water, varying in depth from six inches to 7 feet. Almost all the cellars are full of water, and the residents are constructing Coffer Dams to protect their houses. The inhabitants have been at work night and day to provide for the safety of their property. It is impossible to estimate the amount of damage done. To move about the town, it is necessary to do so in boats or take to the hills.

EASTON, PA., Sept. 23.—The Lehigh and Delaware are both rising rapidly. A serious break in the Delaware Canal at Yardleyville is reported, forty feet of the embankment being washed away.

HARRISVILLE, Sept. 23.—J. McBride, conductor on the Cincinnati Wilmington & Zanesville Railroad, was killed last night. He was missed from his train at Zanesville, search being made for him, he was found to be dead at Andersons bridge eight miles from here.

It is supposed he struck the bridge having been on top of a car collecting. The train being crowded with people returning from the fair. He resided at Washington, Ohio.

FREDERICKSBURG, VA., Sept. 22.—Mr. Pryor has been nominated by the Democratic convention in the Fourth Congressional district by acclamation. George W. Hopkins, the Representative in the last Congress, was not a candidate before the Convention.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21.—Joseph W. Thornton, who shot Joseph Charless in the street on the 3d of June last, was convicted to-day of murder in the first degree.

MONTREAL, Sept. 21.—The English cricketers have arrived here. They are in fine condition, and ready to play immediately.

BOSTON, Sept. 23.—The steamship James [illegible] sailed from St. Johns on Wednesday evening for Galway.

DECISIONS OF COURTS ON RAILWAYS.—Decisions are becoming very general all over the country that railroad companies are not bound to fence against cattle, and that they are only required to use ordinary care not to destroy cattle upon the track. This will undoubtedly be the rule of action with all the courts. In the densely populated countries of Europe, Railroad companies realize the necessity of fencing their tracks for the safety of their passengers, and the general economy of their operations. In time this will be the rule in our country, but at present, our roads of immense length compared with European roads, travel for hundreds of miles through sparsely settled districts, and the cost of fencing and keeping it in order would be enormous.—The obligation consequently falls upon farmers and graziers to take due care themselves to keep their cattle off the Railroads. The human or moral obligation to do this as because human life and the property of others is apparent and incontestible; and the owner of cattle who has not done this, and by whose neglect life and property are destroyed, incurs an accountability that reaches beyond the limits of law and the incidents of trade.

AN AMERICAN RIVAL TO THE GREAT EASTERN.—Saunders's News Letter, of Dublin, says that the ship nearest in size to the Great Eastern arrived in England from America about thirty years ago. She was called the Baron of Renfrew, was 300 feet long, and was composed of large logs of timber clamped together in the roughest manner. It was predicted that she never would steer, never would cross the Atlantic; but she did, and immediately upon her arrival was broken up. Indeed, she was nothing more than imported timber, having been patched together to avoid the timber duty, which was then exceedingly heavy. She fulfilled her mission in every way, but the Government was down upon the new design, and prevented any repetition of the experiment.

At New Orleans on the 21st, a Coroner's jury acquitted Mr. Toledano for shooting Dr. Graham. The verdict was that he shot him in self-defense.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, whose arrest for stabbing a Mr. Fay, in Boston, has already been noticed, is the same individual who, for years, has been making and vending Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

The number of emigrants arrived at New York up to September 21, for the present year, was 55,656, showing a decrease of 4,[illegible] when compared with the arrivals up to the same period in 1858.

In the country from Fort Wayne to Warsaw, Indiana, the corn is an exceedingly good crop. The ears are so long they cross in the rows. Potatoes are also good, and selling for 30 cents per bushel.

Cornelius Wood, of New York—the man who knocked Mr. Stryker off the platform, at the Democratic State Convention at Syracuse—has been dismissed from the Public Service and sent into private life.

W. W. Wright, Esq., of Gettysburg, Pa., has been chief engineer of the contemplated Honduras railroad, in Central America, at a salary of $11,000 per annum. The estimated cost of the road is $15,000,000.

An aeronaut, Mr. Pusey, who made a balloon ascension from Poughkeepsie on the 19th, came down upon the town of Pleasant Valley at 5 P. M., with such violence that he narrowly escaped with his life.

A national horse fair is announced to be held in Boston, beginning on Tuesday, October 4th, to continue two weeks. It will be on the Agricultural Fair grounds, and it is stated that upwards of $10,000 will be awarded as premiums.

Benjamin Kimball, a lawyer of Bangor, Me., is under arrest, charged with forging a deposition purporting to be made by Joseph Greeley, Jr., of Sutton, N. H., and a magistrate's certificate to the same, by which he (Kimball) obtained a divorce from his wife. He was held in $2,000 bail for trial.

Ned was arguing in favor of giving women the elective franchise. "Why shouldn't women vote, as well as men? are they not capable of forming correct opinions on political subjects? Many a woman knows more than her husband." "That may be," said Jim, "but do you suppose I'd have rascally politicians come electioneering with my wife?"

Hamilton County Nominations.

The Democratic ticket is a very strong one. In looking over the names, we perceive the names of several of our personal friends. There was not a purer or better or more intelligent man in the last Legislature than Joseph F. Wright, of Mount Healthy, and Capt. Pat. Rogers of the city is a pilot worthy of the ship of State.—They have been nominated for re-election, with Jos Jones a veteran Democrat of the days of Moses Dawson, when the broad banner of General Jackson was waving.—Then there is Wm. J. Flagg, a gentleman of fine accomplishments, deeply concerned in the interests of Hamilton county, and John Schiff of the most liberal and genial character, warm and cordial, and Dr. W. Jones, and W. S. Jessup, of Sycamore and [illegible], whom everybody, in their respective neighborhoods, admire and respect. These gentlemen have been selected for Representatives, and their election may be set down as a thing to be. They are men calculated to represent Hamilton County and its varied interests; honest, capable and faithful. For Senators, the Democracy have chosen Thomas M. Key, Geo. W. Holmes, and E. A. Ferguson—a strong array of talent and true Democratic sentiment. Mr. Holmes was in the Senate before the last, and took a prominent part in the discussions, although one of six in the minority. A more genial gentleman never was sent to represent a people, or one more worthy to be their representative. Judge Key and "Aleck" Ferguson are astute lawyers, capable of grappling with any legal question that may be proposed, and as alterations and amendments of the "code," and questions concerning the jurisdiction of Justices, form the predominating topics of legislation, they are just such men as should be in the Senate to consider and explain the questions that are sure to come up. Besides, they are men of ripe intellect, good scholars, who are of and with the people, understand and appreciate their wants, and will use both industry and eloquence in relieving them. We shall be gratified in the highest degree, to greet these gentlemen as Senators next January, and feel not the slightest apprehension that we shall not have that pleasure.

The Board of Equalization presents a a front that cannot be excelled—Dr. John L. Vattier, Israel Brown, and J. Dan Jones—men who have grown with the growth of Hamilton County, and who have been frequently honored with the suffrages of its citizens, and been clothed with important trusts, to which they were always faithful.

For Treasurer an office of such transcendent merit, that there is always a scramble for it, an honest and honorable gentleman from the county, R. E. D. Cruikshank, has been called upon to assume the load of responsibility and emoluments—the duties of the office he will discharge with fidelity, and give no cause for regret that he was selected to fill an office of such trust and importance.

For Judge of Common Pleas, Isaac C. Collins, who distinguished himself in the last Legislature, (for his able and eloquent arguments on important subjects of legislation) in which he bore a conspicuous part, has been nominated. Genial in disposition, active and energetic, thoughtful and studious, a lawyer in full practice, he possesses the highest qualifications for the station, and will bring to it, a mind of quick perception, careful and investigating, and all the qualities of a man who should be invested with such a responsible office.

For Commissioner, honest John N. Ridgway has been nominated. For years he acted in that capacity, and while thousands and tens of thousands passed through his hands,—and while the arduous duties devolving on him were assiduously performed, there was no complaint, even from his political foes, of his fulfilment of every duty. No one could be more clear in office, or more generally respected.

For Director of the Infirmary, Samuel Bown, of Green township, a man of high character, plain, earnest, and capable, has been selected. His standing with his neighbors, and influence as a man of intelligence, procured for him a nomination to a place of considerable importance, demanding no little of his time and attention.

This is the Democratic ticket presented to the people of Hamilton County for their suffrages. It is in every respect unexceptionable. It is composed of men of ability and character. We will not speak of the weak and piebald thing put up by the fusionists, under the direction of the Republicans. It is not satisfactory to themselves, and is exceptionable not only to those who did not succeed in securing fusion nominations, but to their friends, who are numerous and a considerable number of "the rest of mankind." It is not necessary to enumerate them. They will soon be heard of no more. "A few days," and their supporters will be called upon to ring the doleful ditty,

"Why should we mourn departing friends," as they take their respective positions on a scow bound for Salt River.

We shall indeed miss our esteemed friends, Langdon and Thomas, and the venerable Wm. S. Hatch, from their accustomed seats in the Senate, but we presume they did not desire a re-nomination. They were legislators of whom their constituency had reason to be proud, and it will be a source of true gratification to be assured that they will be succeeded by such men as Key, Holmes and Ferguson.

Among the fusionists, Prebasco has already retired from the field, and his place has been supplied by the Republican Committee, without at all mending the matter. The fact is, the American wing of the "Opposition" finds itself sold, and remonstrate against the terms of sale.—The consequence is readily foreseen—the Democratic ticket will have an easy victory.

Mr. Douglas in Ohio.

Conversing with a prominent member of the State Central Committee, who does not fraternize with the Chairman of that Committee, he readily admitted that had the policy recommended by the PEOPLE'S PRESS, been adopted, of giving Stephen A. Douglas the voice of Ohio, by acclamation, and using his name in the State canvass, as the inevitable choice of Ohio, the Democratic State Ticket would have been elected by from 10,000 to 20,000 majority. But the stupid policy recommended by the Statesman, of keeping the name of Judge Douglas out of the canvass, and giving no token that he is more to Ohio than hundreds of other prominent Democrats, prevailed; and there really has been comparatively little or no enthusiasm except the spontaneous outbursts of applause as their great champion traversed the State. We believe the State State ticket will be elected. Republicanism is withering like Jonah's gourd. It is tottering on its last legs in Ohio, and the name of Douglas is the talisman to send it to speedy oblivion. The editor of the Statesman desired no public reception of Judge Douglas at this place. As chairman of the State Central Committee, into which prominence he was foisted through the contrivance of Tom Miller, and for which he has not the slightest capacity, he took Mr. Douglas under the shelter of his wing, and proved a wet blanket indeed to dampen the ardor and enthusiasm of the reception.

The people have not forgotten it yet, and their mutterings are repeatedly heard as they condemn the dignified dullness and stupidity, or intentional meanness of the editor of the Statesman on that occasion, who was, perhaps, apprehensive that it might not suit "Old Buck" if he should be forward in procuring any public demonstration in behalf of Mr. Douglas. To preside at the great meeting to hear his matchless oratory, was too glittering an honor to be avoided; and after leaving the arrangements so made that the speaker could be heard to the least advantage, he accepted the honor tendered him by the always ready and complaisant Col. Payne. Had there been somebody else at the head of the Committee the reception of Mr. Douglas at Columbus, would have been what it was all along the line,—not a mere ovation but a complete triumph. There is no name like his to awaken enthusiasm. The hearts of the people are with him. Despite the cold shoulder of politicians, and the slanders of enemies, he holds his place in the affections of the people, who will not be content until he is seated in the chair of Washington and Jefferson and Jackson.

HON. H. J. BOEHMER.—This able and honest man was nominated by acclamation, at Toledo, on the 15th inst., for Senator, in the Putnam and Lucas district, as the Democratic candidate for the State Senator. There is no nomination we have heard of this year more fit to be made.—Mr. Boehmer is a German by birth, has resided in this country twenty-six years, is well acquainted with our institutions, and acquitted himself well when a member of the Legislature in 1856-7. He is a gentleman of cultivated mind, of large information, an excellent business man, and an able thinker and speaker. He is indeed a representative man of the adopted citizens of the North-West.—Lima National.

We take great pleasure in adding our testimony to the above, having known Mr. Boehmer during the Legislature of 1856-7, and being on terms of intimate association with him. A sounder Democrat and a more amiable and intelligent gentleman did not have a seat in the House. In all matters of legislation he was thoroughly posted, and while ever attentive to the interests of his constituents, he was liberal and just to others. Although unobtrusive, when he had occasion to speak, he handled his subject judiciously, and in a frank, straight-forward manner. We shall hail his election as Senator with unfeigned pleasure, and congratulate Putnam and Lucas upon having a Senator who will do good service and reflect credit upon the sound discretion of his constituents.

MR. DOUGLAS IN INDIANA.—The Indianapolis Sentinel says: We understand there is in circulation for signatures in every county of the State, an invitation to Senator Douglas to address the people of Indiana, upon the political topics of the day. That for this county is already signed by some two hundred substantial citizens and Democrats, irrespective of the past or present differences entertained by them upon the Territorial government or slavery issue. Mr. Douglas will probably visit Indiana about the middle of next month.

"A Word from an Honest Democrat."

Such is the title of an article in the State Journal of Tuesday, but whether placed there by the editor, or the writer of the article, we are at a loss to determine. It is full of falsehood and perversion of truth. If the "Democrat" had been honest he would not have run to the State Journal with his communication, but sought some other channel to let it see daylight. Nor would he have stepped aside to misrepresent, and color the misrepresentations, those with whom he has been politically agreeing, or at least acting.—The article has been attributed to Mr. Smith, but we can hardly think that he would descend to such devices. If he had any reflections to make on the PEOPLE'S PRESS, or its editor, we should certainly and cheerfully have given his article an airing, with such comments as we might deem proper to make.

This "honest Democrat" who, perhaps, fancies that he has all the Democratic honesty bottled up in his own precious person, charges us with having been a Know Nothing, or at least, tampering with the outside sentinel. We explained in the Statesman, whilst editor of that paper, that we had been induced, by false representations, to enter a Know Nothing Council, but perceiving the nature of the organization, immediately retired. After this explanation, when the charge was reiterated in the State Journal, we plainly told the editor that he lied. When the charge was made in the Statesman, since we retired from that paper, we referred its editor to what the Statesman's columns charged against the State Journal. We leave the "honest Democrat" to contemplate the same thing.

As for bolting Cox, we did. We had no confidence in him—have none. We should not support him now were he a candidate. We regard him as indissolubly connected with Tom Miller; an instrument to carry out his selfish purposes, and unsafe to be trusted. Such is our opinion, and we do not acknowledge any binding obligation that the party can impose upon us to support him. But there is a wide difference between bolting such a man, and offering as an "independent candidate," after having been fairly beaten. The Primary Election was as fairly conducted as Primary elections ever are. It was unusually spirited. The county and city were thoroughly canvassed. In the effort of Tom Miller and his men to defeat Phillips and Sparrow, Martin lost many votes, and Judge Rankin was defeated. If any fraud or deception were practised, it was by those operating under Post Office instructions, and Mr. Smith had the full benefit of any fraudulent votes that were cast. Because the bungling Statesman, that hardly knows the candidates yet, absurdly contended that gross frauds had been perpetrated, and 1800 Democrats had not participated in the election, this "honest Democrat" insists that the nominations were dishonestly made, and ought not to stand. Why is it not shown where the fraudulent votes were cast, and by whom? Vague charges are unsubstantial things, and will not aid either the Republicans or independent candidates. Let the figures be given. In their absence, it is mere idle prattle about "swindling nominations." The action of the Republican Convention was hardly more satisfactory to the Republicans than the Primary Election was to disappointed Democrats; and the State Journal might find itself profitably occupied in taking care of its own fluttering wounded.

The Mare's Nest of the Journal.

The Ohio State Journal has been most successfully imposed upon, or is attempting to perpetrate a ridiculous fraud, which would be base but for its absurdity, in its efforts to produce the impression that there is a new secret order in the Democratic organization in this city. We give it the most unqualified contradiction.—There is nothing of the sort, and has been nothing of the sort. On a single evening prior to the Primary Election several Democrats, not exceeding five, met to consult for the benefit of the party, and to ascertain who among the candidates was least tainted with Millerism. They agreed to support certain candidates before the people, and there their mission ended, except some of them used their individual exertions, as every one had a right to do, at the election. The only secret junta in this county is that which has its meetings at the Post Office, and which when a Primary Election is to come off, sends its runners to the townships with army orders; or if a nominating convention is to be held it is at once made the scene of the most unblushing wire working and thimble-rigging by "the Miller and his men." If there is any secret organization that has been or is at work, it is either in the Republican ranks or under the direction and control of Tom Miller and Sam Cox. The jeremiad of the Journal, over Squire Bruck, is truly pitiable. At the meeting we have alluded to above, he was the unanimous choice, and that he did not succeed is due to his own non-action, the activity of his opponent, and the free use of stimulants to bring out the vote, with some pretty industriously circulated slanders thrown in. But no secret organization, as the Journal says, unless under the direction of Cox and Miller, the latter of whom sits in the Post Office and gives orders.

The holy horror affected by the State Journal at the prospect of importing votes and practising frauds at the polls, is about as ridiculous a piece of affectation as has ever been our lot to mark. The reference to the law which the Republican party intends to see executed! It had better see the law to prevent negroes from voting executed. The Republicans guardians of the law! Shocking! Get out!

LUNCH.—Charley Wagner sets a free lunch every day, just about the time the Cincinnati mail arrives. The other day he had oyster soup, pigeons, ducks and other luxuries. Last evening was received a lot of fresh lobsters, soft crabs, &c.

A Mistake Corrected—What the Supreme Court of the United States Decided in the Dred Scott Case.

One of our Southern Democratic cotemporaries, in noticing the resolutions of the Democratic State Convention in Massachusetts, says:

"They leave to the people of the Territories the right to establish and regulate their domestic institutions under the general principles of the Constitution, and they add the most important declaration—as decided by the Supreme Court of the United States."

"This is a clear and unequivocal adoption of the Dred Scott decision, which leaves the people of the Territories free to regulate their own domestic institutions, including slavery, but fixes the time when they may exclude the latter as the period when they form their State Constitution."

The author of the above has evidently never read with any care the decision of the Supreme Court in the Dred Scott case, and in that respect is like most of the spouters and declaimers in the South who are so disturbed about the doctrine of Territorial Popular Sovereignty. The Supreme Court no more decided that the people of a Territory could not prohibit slavery before they became a State than they decided in what part of the Polar Regions the remains of Sir John Franklin's party may be found. The Supreme Court decided that a negro was not a citizen of the United States, and it also decided that Congress could not prohibit slavery in the Territories.

No other point was involved or argued in the case, and no other was decided. It never declared that the people of a Territory could not exclude slavery until they formed their State Constitution. We defy any man to prove the assertion of the extract we have copied from a Southern cotemporary. We have too high a respect for the intelligence and learning of the Court to believe that it will ever give such a decision, which deprives the people in the Territories of the right of local self-government. Judge Campbell, of Alabama, in his opinion in the Dred Scott case, expressly declared that he would not pass upon the question of how much power a Territorial Legislature possessed, as it did not come properly within the province of the Judiciary. The attempt to array the authority of the Supreme Court against the doctrine of Territorial Popular Sovereignty is a failure. That is the true theory of the Constitution, and it will, without doubt, be sustained by the Supreme Court, if it should ever have to be decided by that tribunal.—Cin. Enq.

Those who have never read or pretended to read the Dred Scott decision, have been led to believe that it is an "omnium gatherum" of diabolical monstrosities.—Any one who will read Mr. Douglas's speeches in which he alludes to the decision, will perceive at once that the President misconstrued the decision of the Court and fell into an egregious error, that the Constitution carried slavery into the Territories, which his friends and partisans attempted to sustain, but have signally failed. The fact is that a master may take his slave into a Territory, but how long he will be able to keep him there depends upon the slave himself and the local law. There is no solution for this question except that of Mr. Douglas. It is a mere abstraction at best, so far as the slave and his master are concerned; for no master will take his slave where he is in danger of losing him, but the people will tolerate no interference with their rights of determining for themselves, as Mr. Buchanan once said, in a Territory as well as a State, their own institutions.

QUERY.—Will some kind Abolition philanthropist inform us if they know of any other means by which a number of negroes equal to the black population of the United States, could have been raised from the barbarism of Africa to a like degree of civilization, except by the relation of master and slave?

"Ah!" says one, "I see that you would make God responsible for the transgressions of southern task-masters—for the sale of children from their mothers' breasts!" &c. Nay, but what do you say when the arms of your own sweet child have been loosened from your neck—its prattling hushed, and its body laid away forever in the grave? "The Lord has given, and the Lord has taken away!"—you gather up the little shoes and toys,—and with an aching heart, you add: "Thy will, O Lord, not mine, be done!"

We once heard an infidel, in attempting to controvert the doctrine of salvation through Christ, remark, that nothing could be more absurd than the proposition that a God of infinite justice, and also of infinite power, could devise no other means to accomplish the end proposed—save the sacrifice of an only-begotten son, in whom there was no guile.

We make the quotation simply to illustrate the possibility that a divine and inscrutable Providence, looking to the regeneration of Africa, and his own glory, might have ordained, instituted and perpetuated the system or plan of American slavery. At all events, it is wiser and safer to adopt this idea than to join the rebellion of Smith, Phillips and Garrison, and clamor for an Anti-Slavery Constitution, an Anti-Slavery Bible, and an Anti-Slavery God! T. H.—Logan Gaz.

SENATOR DOUGLAS ON THE STUMP.—Some of the Opposition journals, together with a few prints pretending to be Democratic, are giving currency to the idea that Senator Douglas has been guilty of great impropriety in addressing public meetings, because, forsooth, he is a Presidential candidate. They seem to think that all those who have been mentioned in connection with the Presidency, should put on airs of dignity and be above mingling with the people in their primary capacity. This mock dignity and mock propriety we repudiate most emphatically. The people are the sovereigns of this country, and none of their public servants are lowered in dignity by the most cordial communion with them. It is an old Federal idea, and opposed to the spirit of true Democracy. The Federalists raised a clamor against Thomas Jefferson after he became President because he insisted on hitching his horse himself when he was out riding or driving. They thought he was lowering the character of his office just as the Opposition and pretended Democrats conceive that Senator Douglas is guilty of impropriety in making speeches while he is a Presidential candidate. Away with such stuff! Have the Opposition forgotten that General Harrison made speeches all over the West after he had been nominated for President by them in 1840?—The people, by their votes, approved of his course, as they will that of Judge Douglas in 1860.—Cin. Enq.

☞ It will be seen from the advertisement that Mr. Cornelison will warrant the pianos under his tuning, as being more perfect in the nice arrangement of sound, than those attempted to be tuned by any other in his line in the State. He'll do it, too!

President Monroe's Veto Message.

President Monroe had resolved to veto the Missouri Compromise of 1820, and was only restrained by the urgent appeal of the absolute necessity of some measure, constitutional or otherwise, to allay the terrible excitement which demagogues had raised throughout the country. The following is extracted from the first draft of the message, as it is still preserved in President Monroe's own handwriting:

"The proposed restriction to Territories which are to be admitted into the Union, if not in direct violation of the Constitution, is REPUGNANT TO ITS PRINCIPLES, since it is intended to produce an effect on the future policy of the States, operating unequally in regard to the original States—injuring those affected by it in an interest protected from such injury by the Constitution, without benefitting any State in the Union."

JAMES MADISON [illegible] REPUBLICAN LEADERS.

Everybody knows that the present sectional conflict is a renewal of the pernicious and unpatriotic strife of 1820.—Read the following extract of a letter from James Madison to President Monroe, dated Montpelier, Feb. 20, 1820:

"I find the idea is fast spreading, that the zeal with which the extension [so called] of slavery is opposed, has, with the coalesced leaders, an object very different from the welfare of slaves, or the check to their increase; and that the real object is, as you intimate, to form a new state of parties founded on local instead of political distinctions."

Neither the welfare of the slave, nor the restriction of the number of slaves, is any part of the purpose of sectionals of to-day, any more than of their prototypes forty years ago. It is simply a desire to maintain and perpetuate the sectional contest which their evil machinations have begun.

JAMES MADISON TELLS WHY THE ANTI-SLAVERY PROVISO WAS INCORPORATED IN THE ORDINANCE OF 1787.

In the letter from which we quote above, Mr. Madison says:

"I have observed, as yet, in none of the views taken of the Ordinance of 1787, interdicting Slavery Northwest of Ohio, an allusion to the circumstances that when it passed, the Congress had no authority to prohibit the importation of slaves from abroad—that all the States had, and some were in full exercise of the right to import them; and consequently that there was no mode in which Congress could check the evil, but the indirect one of narrowing the space open for the reception of slaves.

"Had a federal authority then existed to prohibit, directly and totally, the importation from abroad, can it be doubted that it would have been exerted, and that a regulation having merely the effect of preventing the interior disposition of slaves actually in the United States, and creating a distinction among the States in the decrees of their sovereignty, would not have been adopted, or perhaps, thought of."

We hope that gentlemen who now strive to make "distinction among the States in decrees of their sovereignty," will remember that James Madison one of the fathers of the Constitution, has said that the prohibition in the Ordinance of 1787, would never have been thought of if all the States had the full right, and if many of them had not been engaged in the full exercise of the right to import slaves from Africa. As they have no such right now, and have not had for fifty years, of course the prohibition of slavery, "having merely the effect of preventing the inferior disposition of slaves actually in the United States," ought not to be thought of.

WHAT MR. JEFFERSON THOUGHT OF THE MISSOURI COMPROMISE.

In a letter to President Monroe, dated Monticello, March 3, 1820, Mr. Jefferson expresses his well-known hostility to the policy of settling questions by geographical lines, in the following strong language:

"The Missouri question, by a geographical line of division, is the most PORTENTOUS one I have ever contemplated."

Portentous—ominous—foreshadowing ill;—and yet our Republican friends, who discovered a few months ago that they were disciples of Jefferson, go blubbering yet about the repeal of the Missouri Compromise.

The whole North opposed the Compromise of 1820, when adopted. They chopped off, the political head of every member of Congress, save only one, who voted for it. And now they boo-hoo because the "sacred covenant" is repealed.

It was repealed in fact, in 1850. And yet the country prospered remarkably until 1854, when Mr. Douglas told Messrs. Chase, Seward, &c., that the Compromise was repealed for four years before. It was the first they knew about it! The country was ruined, the slave oligarchy was triumphant, freedom was in the dust, the sacred covenant was broken; and yet Wade, Chase, Stanton, &c., never surmised that a catastrophe had befallen the country, until the lapse of four long years, and would not have known it then, if Douglas had not told them about it.

HEAR GENERAL HARRISON.

In a letter to President Monroe, dated North Bend, June 16, 1834, General Harrison gave this opinion of the slavery agitation:

"I am persuaded that the obvious tendency of interference on the part of the States which have no slaves with the property of their fellow-citizens of the others, is to produce a state of discord and jealousy that will in the end prove fatal to the Union. I believe in no other State are such wild and dangerous sentiments entertained on this subject as in Ohio."

THE UNIVERSAL SENTIMENT.—A correspondent of the Freeport (Ill.) Bulletin, writing from Bucyrus, Ohio, on the 16th inst., in writing of the Fair at Chicago, incidentally says of Judge Douglas, on his way to Wooster:

"Wherever the cars stopped the Judge was greeted with the most hearty applause. If it is safe to estimate the public sentiment of the almost universal expression, in favor of an individual, there is no man who would so truly represent the Democrats of Ohio as Judge Douglas. His popularity is constantly on the increase."

PIANO TUNING.—Mr. E. Cornelison, beyond question, the most competent and thorough tuner of pianos and organs in the city, and who occasionally wanders as far as Chillicothe, in his grand rounds, visiting the intermediate country, may be generally found at the music store of Messrs. Seltzer & Webster, where orders left will reach him. He cleanses the keys, and removes dust from the internal arrangements of the instruments. From his hands, a piano or organ is just as good as new.

The Chameleon.

Our friend Jere. Williams of the Monroe Spirit of Democracy, compares the Republican Party to the Chameleon—a species of lizard that is said to take its hue from whatever object it may be crawling upon; growing green, black, blue and white in an incredibly short time. He claims that the Republican Party in Ohio is the veritable chameleon of fable, and exhibits the miraculous changes ascribed to the reptile by modern naturalists. He says:

"It has, it is true, taken another name, still it is the same animal. It is now known by the name of the "Republican Party," or "Opposition." It belongs to the serpent tribe; and infests all parts of the State; but more especially the Northern parts. It feeds principally upon the "public treasury" and "niggers." It has become rather troublesome to the people of the State, and preparations are now on foot to destroy it on the second Tuesday of October."

To show that "the animal" is really possessed of the wonderful faculty of changing color, not exactly in different lights, but in different latitudes, Jere. has gathered a few notes by the way-side, and furnished his readers with the following kaleidoscopic flowers, which it must be confessed, form a charming boquet:

"And provided further, That any person lawfully held to service in any other State or Territory of the United States, and escaping into either the Territory of Kansas or Nebraska, may be reclaimed and removed to the person or place where such service is due, under any law of the United States which shall be in force upon the subject."—[The Dunn Bill. Voted for by Giddings, Wade, Campbell, Stanton and other Republicans of Ohio, in Congress, July 29th, 1856.]

"We demand the repeal of the Fugitive-slave act of 1850, as it is subversive of both the rights of the States and the liberties of the people, and contrary to the plainest duties of humanity and justice, and abhorrent to the moral sense of the civilized world."—[Republican Platform 1859.]

"In disregarding this (the Fugitive-slave Law) the prisoners did right—Their error consisted in sparing the lives of the slave-catchers. Those pirates should have been delivered over to the colored men, and consigned to the doom of pirates which should have been speedily executed. You are aware that this is the doctrine which I proclaimed in Congress. I adhere to it. * * * * *
But in rescuing their fellow men from the fangs of those blood hounds, the prisoners, did right."—[Father Giddings.]

"The Fugitive-slave law IS constitutional and it must be OBEYED.

"If it is resisted it is felony; if resisted with armed force, it is treason, and those who resist it must be shot—must be hung."—[Tom. Corwin.]

"I do not object to your giving utterance to your sentiments. I only object to your representing them as the sentiments of the Republican party. I as one of that party detest the Fugitive-slave law. I would stay any slave catcher who should pollute my residence to recapture a fugitive."—[Giddings to Corwin.]

"If I am elected Governor of Ohio—and I expect to be—I will not let any fugitive be returned to Kentucky or any other slave State, and if I cannot prevent it in any other way; as commander-in-chief of the military of the State, I will employ the bayonet, so help me God."—[Wm. Dennison, Jr.]

He asks me, is the Fugitive Law constitutional? Will I obey it? I answer him squarely—if I am elected to the office of Governor, so long as it is declared constitutional by the Judiciary, I shall feel it my duty to obey it. Odious as it is, I shall regard it my duty to obey it, until it is repealed.—[Wm Dennison, Jr., in answer to Judge Ranney.]

"He now receives the support of the Republicans as an anti-slavery man, a PRACTICAL ABOLITIONIST, occupying a position that differs from Judge Swan's.—[Republicanism North.]

"I HAVE NO DOUBT JUDGE GHOLSON WOULD HAVE DECIDED THE CASE JUST AS JUDGE SWAN DID."—[Cincinnati Republicanism.]

"I long ago pledged myself to vote for no man, for Supreme Judge, who would assist in the slightest degree, in carrying out the provisions of the Fugitive-slave Law."—[Judge Spaulding.]

"Tom Corwin laid down true Republican Doctrine at Belmont."—[Chronicle.]

"I do not think a single member of the Committee expected Corwin to utter such doctrines."—[Pap. Gid.]

"Any attempt to foist a man with the avowed sentiments of Mr. Corwin upon the Republican party, can result in no good, and may do much injury. * * *
The old contest for freedom and free principles had its Benedict Arnold, the new has its Thomas Corwin—and "a few more of the same sort!"—[Ravenna Democrat.]

THE ALTON DEBATING CLUB.—We briefly adverted to the fact that a genuine debating society had been formed at the village of Alton, in this county, to which the Altonians devote two evenings of each week. The officers of the society last elected were: President, Thomas Johnson Hutchinson; Recording Secretary, Wm. F. Coggswell; Assistant Secretary, Nicholas Harrington; Prosecuting Attorney, John Elliott. One of the subjects of recent discussion was a comparison of the respective merits and services, to their country, of Henry Clay and General Jackson, in which the political history of "twenty years ago," and leaves of still older date, were turned over. Our old friend, Major Basil Riddle, a devoted friend and admirer of Mr. Clay, who worships the very shadow of his name, opened upon the side of General Jackson, and portrayed his character and sketched his services in a masterly manner. The discussion lasted to a late hour; the distinguished exploits of both champions, the one in the battle-field at the head of armies, and at the head of the American government; and the other leading his forces to brilliant feats and strategems on the floor of the Senate, keeping up an unbroken interest from first to last. These debating societies are very useful when properly attended to. They not only employ leisure hours profitably, and improve the mind, but they employ hours that might be wasted dissipation and low indulgence. We shall be pleased to hear of the prosperity and progress of the Alton Independent Debating Club.

☞ Mr. Healey arrived at Washington Wednesday, with a full-length portrait of the President. He is to give it some finishing touches before passing it over to the Government.

The State Fair.

The State Fair for 1859 is over, and we regret to have to record, was unsatisfactory in its results, and was far from gratifying during its continuance. The weather was unpropitious, but the attendance was considerable—much beyond the capacity of Zanesville to entertain, and consequently there was much inconvenience and grumbling. Besides, complaints have been urged that there seemed to be a general disposition to make the most of the crowd, and fabulous prices were demanded for every thing. Such is a certain consequence of drawing together a crowd to a place unprovided with sufficient accommodations, and where one must pay dear for his whistle, if his arrangements have not been concluded in advance. The people of Zanesville did no more or less than the people of any other small place, unused to crowds and unaccustomed to accommodate them, would have done. The exhibition of stock, agricultural implements, and productions, machinery, &c., was very fine—the entries being more numerous than on any former occasion. Had the weather been fair, the "show" would have been excellent, but the want of accommodations would still have been experienced, and a probable loss to some extent, perhaps not so great as was, would have been incurred.

We hope that this will be the last of the moveable Fairs. Being a State institution, it should naturally be located at the Capital. This is the most convenient place, and at one time there was a most liberal offer of land and money, for its permanent location here, which probably cannot be realized again. There are no means of guarding against losses, while it is beating about the State, first at one point and then another, incurring the expense of moving lumber and equipments, and bearing a more temporary character and appearance, wherever it may be. The amount on the wrong side of the balance-sheet at the recent Fair at Zanesville, would erect a magnificent pavilion around the show ground or circle, capable of sheltering and accommodating from 10,000 to 20,000 people. The losses that have been sustained from first to last would have embellished the grounds to an extent that could scarcely be imagined by those who have been accustomed to the State Fair exhibitions since first instituted. We hope the experience of the past may be of service in the future and that however clamorous this or that place may be, the Board will proceed to permanently locate the State Fair at Columbus, until which is done, satisfactory results need not be anticipated.

CHASE.—Chase speaks here to-day.—He will be advised to conceal his Abolitionism, and discuss other things. When he forgets Sambo, his speciality seems to be the Defalcation in the State Treasury. He labors hard to fix the responsibility of that great crime on Breslin and the Democratic party.

The public mind is pretty well made up that Bliss, Breslin and Gibson are about equally implicated in that stupendous villainy.

But suppose, for the sake of a supposition, that Breslin is the sole perpetrator of the robbery. What then?

Is the Democratic party responsible for Breslin? Yes, says Mr. Chase. How so, Mr. Chase? Because, he replies, they elected him with the votes of their party.

But, Mr. Chase, did not you, also, vote for him, and exert your influence to elect him? Assuredly you did. Then why arraign the Democratic party for doing the very act which you yourself did? If they are guilty, are you not also guilty?

But, Mr. Chase, there is an additional responsibility upon you. Not only did you vote for, and help to elect him, but you were so obliging as to recommend the City Bank of Cincinnati, as one of the depositaries of the public money. Mr. Breslin adopted your advice; put the people's money in that bank; and he never saw it more! The Democratic party never recommended a rotten bank as a depositary; and therefore you are personally implicated in this nefarious business to that extent more deeply than the Democrats of Ohio.

But this is not all, Governor Chase.—The fact is, that of the two men, Gibson is a greater villain than Breslin. The whole history of these men, in conjunction with the public money, as revealed by the committee of investigation, demonstrates this truth. Of the two, Gibson was the more shrewd, the more avaricious, and the more unscrupulous. And you, Gov. Chase, also, helped to elect Gibson. The Democracy are guiltless of this. They had no part in placing Gibson in the office of the Ohio Treasury.

Now, let every man remember, who hears you to-day, in denunciation of the Democracy, as chargeable with Breslin's crimes, that by the same rule you are yourself responsible for the iniquities of both Breslin and Gibson; and that the former, at your suggestion, sunk nearly a hundred thousand dollars in your favorite banking house!—Logan Gazette.

DOUGLAS IN NEW ENGLAND.—The Hartford (Conn.) Post thus speaks of the "Little Giant:"

Those who attempt to decry the immense popularity of Senator Douglas, are either disposed to misrepresent his hold upon the people, or else are too bitterly prejudiced to understand the signification of those great popular gatherings that greet Senator Douglas wherever he goes. It would be difficult to name another man, among all our politicians, who could thus call forth the masses to hear him; and this arises not more from the personal character of the man, than from the inherent truth of the doctrine which he advocates—a doctrine which he has so nobly vindicated from the attacks which have been made upon it, and which he has lately put before the country with an ability and logical precision that defies dispute or refutation; and not only is Mr. Douglas popular North and West, but despite the croakings of time-serving politicians, or interested partisans, he is daily growing in favor with the South. The South have always admired an honest, manly course, and when leading men and leading journals of the South are bravely defending him from misrepresentation and aspersion, we may truly say that the ground of his opponents and detractors is rapidly crumbling away from beneath their feet.

☞ We understand our very polished and polite cotemporary of the State Journal insists that there is a secret organization here. If there be, it is in the Republican ranks, who are busily organizing to sustain a Republican candidate for Clerk to be brought out at a late hour, in the hopes of catching a house divided against itself.

A Glance at Our County Fair.

As we anticipated, there was a very large attendance at the County Fair on Friday. People from all sections of the county, men, women, and children, flocked in and crowded the grounds. We spent part of the day circulating around and taking observations. The vegetable and grain department was tolerably well represented—melons as large as beer-kegs, cabbages of mammoth size; potatoes that would throw an Irishman into extacies; beets that couldn't be beat; apples and pears, huge and luscious. In the domestic department we observed various home-made fabrics, carpets, needle-work, pictures, &c., including a fine display of ladies' goods from the enterprising dry-goods house of Poetrey & Farrar. Chief among the attractions here were the fair daughters of Madison, who thronged the building as dense as crinoline and hoops would conveniently admit of. A small temple, in which Mrs. P. C. Palmer was operating with a sewing machine, attracted no little attention. A fine display of domestic fowls was to be seen in this vicinity, including ducks, guinea fowls and chickens of all varieties, from a full fledged Shanghai to the diminutive Bantam.

In the pens were some fine sheep; Mr. Cowling's Cotswolds and R. D. [illegible]'s Spanish Merinos, with fleeces as soft as silk and as fine as gossamer. Mr. W. is a heavy wool grower, and is justly proud of his stock. The number of swine in the pens was not large but of fine grades.

The greatest share of public attention was directed to the cattle stalls. In this branch of live stock, Madison county will compare with the entire State. Several imported animals were exhibited, and others of various grades. Messrs. J. G. R. G. and W. A. Dunn, Robt. Read, [illegible] James [illegible], of this county, and James Fullington, of Union, were among the chief exhibitors of blooded stock. Quite a number of fine horses were also on exhibition. Mr. Fullington's black and grey stallions, and Robt. Read's "Mickey Free," all imported, were very much admired. A number of match-horses, fast nags and blooded mares, together with oxen, and jacks, and mules were on the ground.

The parade of prize stock in the ring, on Friday afternoon, was one of the finest displays of the kind we have ever witnessed. The premiums reached almost round the arena, and thousands of people crowded to the barriers to admire the bovine, equine, [illegible] of the red and blue cards.

The proceedings during the three days of the Fair were enlivened by most excellent music, furnished by the London Sax-Horn Band, [illegible] by Mr. Ly Brand, their instructor, and Mr. Wold and others of the Tarlton Band.

The only sale of stock we heard of was by Maj. Cowling, of this place, to James Fullington, of Union co., of six Cotswold sheep, (three lambs, two ewes and a buck) for $70.

The receipts during the Fair were as follows:

Family and Exhibitors' Tickets	[illegible]
Single Entrance Tickets	[illegible]
On Entrance Fees	[illegible]
Rents	[illegible]
Total	[illegible]
Last years total receipts	[illegible]

Thus it will be seen that the receipts this year fall short $44.50 over those of last year, but as the expenses are great this season, it is hoped there will be sufficient funds to liquidate all indebtedness, including the deficit of last year of some $200.

Altogether the Fair was a decided success, and the Board and officers of the day deserve much credit for the masterly manner in which every thing was conducted. London Democrat.

SOUTHERN OHIO ARGUS.—This is the title of a paper, the second number of which we have received; published at Georgetown, Brown county, by our young friend, John G. Doren, formerly of the Hillsborough Gazette, assisted by his brothers, H. H. and L. S. Doren. Mr. Doren purchased the Democrat and Standard and blended them in one, which will be more acceptable to the Democracy of Southern Ohio, than two that were rather in the way of each other. We did not see the first number, and some friend politely removed the second before we read it, and therefore we do not know if the Argus stands with the PRESS in urging a resistance to every encroachment on Popular Sovereignty, such as has been made by Judge Black and the Washington Constitution. Doren is a prudent politician, a clever writer, a good Democrat, and with the aid of his brothers, who are good printers, will make a capital paper.

MR. DOUGLAS'S SPEECH AT COLUMBUS.
We have been repeatedly asked for the republication of the masterly and unanswerable speech made by Mr. Douglas in this city. We are most reluctantly compelled to postpone it until our next issue. The copy in our possession was mutilated. It shall be followed by his scathing reply at Wooster, to Judge Black's review, and the patriotic and unanswerable essay upon the Government and the People, which appeared in Harper for September. We regret that our facilities and ability will not permit us to keep up with the pressing and important matter crowding upon us.

☞ It occurs to us that the Statesman forgets that the Philadelphia Convention expunged the order of secrecy in the K. N. organization, which very much assisted the veracity of Republicanism in wiping it out. The Statesman is quite antediluvian in the following:

"The story that this man or that man was once a Know Nothing should have no weight whatever. If we understand the ritual of that Order, as the same has been published, it required secrecy under the most horrible and terrible oaths, and no man can divulge its doings, or the secrets of the Order, without the guilt of moral perjury on his soul."

The "Order" is defunct and most men are ashamed that they ever belonged to it, and therefore are willing to preserve the secrets.

HETTESHEIMER'S.—Who has seen the beau ideal of a Swiss fete that "Volley" has had spread upon his walls? The "King of the Caroose" is well carried through.

"Switzerland!
It is a land of beauty and gardens, lads,
Where looks the cottage out on a domain,
The palace cannot boast of."

"Switzer ease," and all the "appurtenances," the best of "genuine" and "lager," and a nice social chat can be always had at Hettesheimer's.

☞ Mr. Alonzo Hitchcock, of Chicago, claims to have been the inventor of the Armstrong gun, for inventing which an English man was honored with a title of nobility.

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1859.

THE TOBACCO TRADE.—We desire to call especial attention, particularly of the trade, to the advertisement of Messrs. Ranger, in which it will be seen that they have brought on a most extensive and unprecedented variety of cigars, in which they have been long and largely engaged. [illegible] and their assortment of cigars conclusively show that at Ranger's there is no motto but "Excelsior." The luxury of a cigar can only be appreciated by those who have been initiated. Mitchell might expatiate upon the curling vapor that eddied upward, in his reveries; and the venerable crone might enjoy his "crow's foot," "little Frederick," "Raleigh," or some such [illegible], down in home-fashion, "in the chimney corner," but the fragrance of the real Havana was never wafted to olfactories in brighter glow [illegible] than from the delicious and gracefully turned [illegible] in Rangers' advertisement. Mr. Ranger will visit Kentucky soon, and we take this occasion to commend him to our friends there, who are engaged in [illegible] genial business.

[illegible].—The "American Saloon," in the subterranean excavation immediately beneath the American Hotel, (better known as "Kaisey's,") has been renovated and handsomely prepared for the winter campaign. The busy hand of liberal improvement is visible everywhere. The floors have been newly carpeted, and everything has a neat and comfortable appearance. The Cooking Range of Messrs. Heller & Young, of Cincinnati, which he has just had adapted to his premises, is the most complete apparatus for culinary purposes we have ever seen, and will always enable Mr. Lasher to serve up hot meals, roast, broiled, stewed, boiled or fried, at the very shortest notice. "Cooney" still remains a fixture and retains the good will of the old customers for his quiet and unobtrusive attention. "Lasher's" is an "institution," and no mistake. He has made his arrangements for fresh shell oysters every day, with game from the lakes and prairies, and will soon be ready to "serve up," in elegant style, every delicacy of the season. His saloon is always supplied with choice liquors, and one need never fear of getting poisoned there, for "Ned" is a judge!

"SWAIN'S."—Those who were accustomed to visit the "Alhambra," under the charge of Joseph Swain, (not "the chilling Swain," not yet stolen Cole, but "honest Joe,") will never forget the nice little [illegible]—quail, duck and plover, woodcock and grouse, with the most apt and delicious trimmings, 'tis the little back parlor." Well, Joseph has withdrawn from Broadway, and betaken himself to the west side of Market, where he is not only convenient to the market people, whom he abundantly supplies with creature comforts, but to his old friends, who know where they can be hospitably and generously accommodated on their "grand rounds." He has both "bed and board" to offer to those who back their wagons, or have their "stand"-points in that vicinity; and they will always find him here, like every thing else, "in the right place."

CHICKERING & WEBSTER.—There had been the intention, we understand, to have several descriptions of pianos at the State Fair, among which were those manufactured by Chickering, and by Steinway, but when it was learned that Seltzer & Webster had shipped their Grand Square Piano of Knabe's manufacture, there was no longer a desire to enter the field of competition. It obtained the first premium, and deserved it, as we do think we never heard [illegible] more magnificent instrument. They also took the first premium for their portable organ, with stops in imitation of reed instruments. Messrs. S. & W. have a splendid assortment of instruments, all the new and fashionable music, as well as the standard songs of the past. [illegible]

McCOY TAKES FIRST PREMIUM.—At the State Fair, our fellow-citizen, S. I. McCoy, exhibited his splendid specimen of penmanship, which attracted such notice and was so much admired at our County Fair. Of course he took the first premium, for there is no rival about. In the use of the pen he stands alone, and is, as Bulwer says in Richelieu,

"The pen is mightier than the sword,"

he is a most formidable champion indeed. By the way, this is just the time to matriculate for a full course of instruction in McCoy's Commercial College, one of the best institutions in the land, and where a thorough commercial education may be obtained. The professors are competent in their respective departments, and will be found faithful teachers, and agreeable gentlemen.

MAKE KNIGHTLY.—Well, our old friend took the first premium at the State Fair with his combined Reaper and Mower, one of the most superior agricultural implements we have yet seen. We thought he would. We saw his model at our County Fair, and could not perceive how anything could be more complete.—Mr. Knightly has had great experience for many years in the sale of agricultural machinery, and we have yet to hear the first word of reproach or dissatisfaction uttered against him. He is this week at the Madison Township Fair. Of course he is.

BARBER AND MERION.—The large and commodious sale stables in the rear of the Goodale House have been for some time past, in charge of these gentlemen, who have given entire satisfaction to their numerous customers. Their stock is fine, and kept in "good condition," and their charges uniform and moderate. They give their personal attention to their business, and it is not wonderful that it is a success. Transient persons can have their horses fed and attended to, and may rest assured that it will be honestly done.—There cannot be found in the city a handsomer turn-out than at Barber and Merion's stable.

The Occupation of San Juan Island by the Americans—Lord Palmerston's Opinion of the Difficulty.

We confess that we cannot view without some apprehension and distrust the possible occurrence of another boundary dispute between this country and the United States of America. By the last mail we learn that "Gen. Harney has taken possession of the island of San Juan, or Bellevue, as the British call it, which lies in Puget Sound, and is claimed by both nations. The island is important, as it commands the entrance to Fraser river." We do not know whether Mr. Buchanan, whose term of office is about the expire, is anxious to imitate, or rather, we should say, to surpass the high-handed policy which Mr. Polk pursued in 1845 towards this country. At that time the vast regions which extend from the back of the United States proper and Canada to the shores of the Pacific were comparatively of little political or commercial importance. The discovery of gold had not then attracted the enterprise and cupidity of Europe and of America to that part of the world, and all that was known of the territory was to be collected from the accounts of voyagers who had visited the coast, and from the statements of the employees of the Hudson's Bay and North-western Companies, who, in the pursuit of peltries, had traversed this huge hunting ground. The treaty by which England recognized the independence of the United States did not mark out the boundaries of the two countries west of the Rocky Mountains. The subject, however, did not escape the attention of the British and American governments. In the years 1818, 1822 and 1826, Lord Castlereagh and Mr. Canning endeavored to decide the claims of England and the United States to the territory which bore the name of Oregon. After some discussions, a temporary arrangement was first made in 1818, and subsequently indefinitely continued, by which the subjects of the two countries were to have a kind of joint occupation of the territory. Three years after "the Ashburton capitulation," by which England, without any consideration, surrendered to the United States a valuable district, and which now forms a portion of the State of Maine, Mr. President Polk was pleased to assert that "the title of the United States to the whole territory of Oregon was clear and unquestionable." Lord Aberdeen, then Secretary of State, forgetting that the award of the King of the Netherlands on the subject of the Maine boundary had been contemptuously ignored by the Cabinet at Washington, offered to refer the Oregon dispute to arbitration. This offer was refused, angry and menacing language was held in America towards England, and war was mentioned in the British Parliament as a not improbable alternative. Lord Aberdeen, however, gave way. The mouths of the Columbia were ceded to the United States, and a line following the parallel drawn from the Lake of the Woods to the coast near Fucas Straits was determined upon as the future boundary of the dominions of the two countries. This line has never been marked, but at the present time a [illegible] of royal engineers is engaged in surveying the country and fixing the boundary. The only persons who derived benefit from the Oregon Convention were the shareholders of the Hudson's Bay Company, who were quite willing to receive a million of dollars from the United States for the surrender of British territory, the value of which as a hunting ground they had long before exhausted. The discovery of gold in California and in British Columbia has, however, given a new interest to the entire north-western portions of North America; and if some ten or fifteen years ago the Cabinet at Washington was determined to enforce its extreme rights over territories then comparatively valueless, no one can imagine that the occupation of an island which commands the entrance to the Fraser river, and therefore the gold regions of British Columbia, is not an indication of that constant policy of aggression which dates from the enunciation of the celebrated Monroe doctrine. The Americans have asserted that the line, if extended beyond the continent, would include not only this island but the mouth of Fraser river. If the assumption as to the mouth of Fraser river be correct, and it is one which cannot be determined until the astronomical line has been actually marked, free access by means of a special Convention must be accorded to the subjects of this country. But the right of England to an island which lies off the coast must depend upon discovery and occupation. If the title of England to the island of San Juan, or Bellevue, has to be determined, the Convention of the Escurial, the ancient claims of Spain, and the present rights of England will have to be considered. The boundary of the United States must of necessity have a termination on the Pacific coast. The whole territory of New Albion, or New Caledonia, now called British Columbia, was first added to the British Crown by Drake; formal possession of the same territory was next taken by Cooke and Vancouver, and against this the Americans have only to adduce the visit of Captain Gray, who merely commanded a merchant vessel, which in no sense represented the nationality of the flag under which he sailed. Knowing the sensitive jealousy of the American people, we are afraid that English diplomacy may be incompetent to deal with that national aggressive spirit which has ever marked the policy of the United States. The occupation of an island, the sovereignty of which is still sub judice, and which must form the subject of negotiation, is an exercise of power to which the British government cannot tamely submit. We trust that the matter will engage the early attention of the Foreign office, and that no concessions will be made which are inconsistent with the dignity of the country or with the security of those gold regions which will, we believe, be the means of extending British liberty, British institutions, and British commerce on the northwest coast of the continent of North America.—From the London Post (government organ) Sept. 9.

AN ARCHBISHOP'S CARRIAGE.—A Mexican correspondent gives the following description of the carriage of the Archbishop:

We will go out into the street, take a view of the Archbishop's carriage, called the "Coche de su Divini Majestad." The coach, with four piebald mules, stands in the street ready to receive his Holiness. It is built somewhat after the fashion of the day, massive, and exceedingly flashy in paint, silver and gold. The ground of the panels and wheels is mazarine blue. The hubs appear to be tipped off with silver. There is a large golden glory, with an eye in the centre, affixed to the rear and the front. The glass is of the thickest and finest plate; the interior is lined with heavy drab-colored brocade silk, sumptuously stuffed. A large arm-chair, trimmed in the same style, occupies the entire back part as a fixture. In the front there are seats for two. The panels are covered with an exquisite little painting, representing the Archbishop's arms and other holy devices. I looked all over the carriage, in search of a representation of the Savior riding on an ass, but found nothing of the kind.

THE DELUGE TO COME AGAIN.—Yes, this has been decided by a famous scientific—The Deluge of the great Deluge is to come again. We have it on the authority of a Parisian named M. Victor Mennier. He has just discovered that the great Deluge which we have been accustomed to regard as a unique event sent by the Almighty for the chastisement of mankind, was a periodical inconvenience to which the globe is destined to fall a victim after the lapse of a certain number of years. Thus the next Deluge will take place in 6,500 years. And of this he is as sure as if he already felt the waters rising to his feet. M. Victor Mennier declares that this unpleasant event will be caused by the sudden rush of the South Sea over the Equator, which will cause the submersion of the globe and the return of Chaos to his watery bed, which we are now occupying. It is fortunate that Monsieur Victor Mennier gives us such timely notice of the catastrophe. Six thousand five hundred years is fair warning, enabling us to take our precautions without any undue haste or perturbation.

WEATHER ON THE WHITE MOUNTAINS.—The Coos (N. H.) Republican says, on Thursday and Friday the White Mountains were covered with snow, apparently as fully as in January, and the occupants of the Tip Top and Summit Houses, descending Mount Washington on Friday, found snow to the depth of six inches, with drifts of considerable magnitude. Throughout Thursday the air was piercing cold, like the latter part of November. The old residents say that never since 1816 and 1817 has there been weather of equal severity at so early a period in the season.

THE GREAT EASTERN—HEAVY PREMIUM FOR INSURANCE.—We find in our English files the following paragraph relating to the Great Eastern:

"The transactions on Thursday at Lloyds in insurances on the Great Eastern, were few and small in amount. The risk has been taken very sparingly for the voyage out and home, including the trial trip, at six guineas per cent. against total loss. The same price has been accepted for all risks, excluding the running down clause. Without this exception, the rate may be quoted at eight guineas per cent.

The Senate have not yet voted upon the matter.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

FATHER POINT, Sept. 25.—The steamship North American, from Liverpool, with dates to 14th inst., has passed here on her way to Quebec.

The overland mail brings important news from China. The war with the English and French forces having been renewed, the allied squadron having attempted to enter Peiho with the English and French Ambassadors, the Chinese assembled in great strength and defeated the attempt. Nearly five hundred British are reported killed and wounded, five of their gunboats being lost. The allies were finally forced to retreat.

It is reported that the American Minister had reached Pekin unmolested.

An accident has occurred on board the steamer Great Eastern, which will prevent her from starting on her trip to Portland for about three weeks.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET, Sept. 12.—The market exhibits an advancing tendency, all qualities having improved with the exception of corn, which closes steady. Messrs. Richardson & Spence quote flour firm, at an advance of 6d per sack. Wheat had advanced 2d per cental. Corn remained quiet but steady. The [illegible] no quotations.

PROVISION MARKET.—Beef steady. Pork firm. Bacon quiet and firm. Lard dull.

LONDON MARKETS, Sept. 13.—Breadstuffs dull. Tea unsettled and market closed excited, prices having advanced 1@1½d. Sugar heavy at a decline of 6d@1s.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, Sept. 13.—Consols were quoted at the close of the market, to-day at 95⅛@95¼; the market is generally unchanged.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—The explosion on board the Great Eastern occurred on the 9th inst., when off Hastings. The funnel was blown into the air, tearing to pieces the grand saloon, injuring five firemen, so as to cause their death, and wounding others, and doing great damage to the internal fittings of the vessel. The guests on board had just left the saloon, and all fortunately escaped injury. The explosion was terrific, but the ship resisted the shock, the frame sustaining no injury. The accident made so little difference in the movement of the ship that her engines were not stopped till she reached Portland, her place of destination. The coroner's inquest on the firemen killed showed that the supply of water to the boilers through the water jacket was stopped, because of the failure of the auxiliary pumping power; secondly, that a tap in the stand pipe which acts as a safety valve was turned, apparently intentionally, so that the pipe was useless. The injury to the fittings will be repaired at an expense of about £500.

The new Reform movement in London, under the auspices of Mr. Cobden and others, was in progress.

Some of the building firms of London had yielded to the demands of the men.

CHINA.—Admiral Hope arrived off Peiho river on the 17th of June, and found the entrance barred. An attempt was made on the 25th to force a passage, when suddenly batteries supported by twenty thousand men were unmasked and opened a destructive fire. After a severe action the squadron was forced to withdraw with the loss of the gun-boats, Cormorant, Lee and Plover. Four hundred and sixty-four were killed and wounded. The French had 14 killed out of sixty.

The Plenipotentiaries had returned to Shanghai. Seven officers were killed and seventeen wounded—among the wounded was the Admiral. The details say that the mouth of the river was raked by the fire from the newly constructed forts, amounting to 90 or 100 guns. At 1:30 P. M., the signal for action was run up. The gun boats Opposum and Plover pushed in close to the first barrier. The guns of the forts then opened fire, and the action became general.—The fire of the Chinese in weight and precision was such as had never before been experienced. Every shot told, while those of the British did comparatively but little damage.

The troops were ordered to land as soon as the first boat touched the shore. The forts poured out a perfect hurricane of shell, balls and rockets, which mowed down the men as they landed. The ship supported them as well as possible. Of the thousand men who landed, barely a hundred reached the first of the wide ditches, situated 500 yards from the river, and only 50 reached the third ditch. They would have made an attempt to scale the walls, but the ladders were either broken by the shot or stuck in the mud. With one of the ladders that remained, ten of the men sprung forward—three of whom were killed and five severely injured.

Orders were at last given to retire, and while in retreat the men were shot down like birds. Many of the boats were swamped by the balls, and not enough remained to carry off the survivors. Several fall of wounded men were struck and swamped.

Russian features were distinctly visible among the men manning the Chinese batteries.

The Americans towed up several boats to the scene of action, and afterwards took a number of men to their respective ships.

BELGIUM.—The King of Belgium had gone to see the Emperor Napoleon—it is supposed in reference to the difficulty between France and Austria.

FRANCE.—The late article in the Paris Moniteur came direct from the Emperor. It is rumored that France and England had agreed to an European Congress on Italian affairs, and if necessary the Zurich plenipotentiaries will have occasional meetings.

ITALY.—The National Assembly of Parma had voted the expulsion of the House of Bourbon and the annexation of Parma to Sardinia. It is said that Victor Emanuel is disbanding his army, but that the men are furnished with passports to Tuscany and Modena, where they will swell the army of Central Italy.

CIRCASSIA.—Schamil, the noted Circassian leader, it is said, has been made a prisoner and sent to St. Petersburg.

AUSTRIA.—Austria is making great concessions to the Protestants.

INDIA.—Signs of dissatisfaction continue in the Madras cavalry at Hyderabad.

AUSTRALIA.—The Australian mails to the middle of July have been received. The supply of gold is increasing.

The English and French Secretaries of Legation to China returned home in the mail steamer. The news created much sensation, and the violation of the treaty in such a treacherous manner called forth a loud demand for vengeance. The Times says, henceforth negotiations must be carried on at Pekin, where no one can doubt Europeans will soon be as much at home and as safe as at Paris. It concludes the article with the following reflections on the American Ambassador:

"The American Ambassador, without force of arms, is said to have been admitted at Pekin. Of course he had a peculiar claim to this exceptionable privilege, on account of the assistance given to the Chinese mandarins to deprive us of the just fruits of the late successful war. Whether this or some new claim of the same character rendered him more admissable than those who had opened the way to him, does not appear. If Americans can open China by peaceful methods let them do it; but thus far they seem better able to help themselves than gun-boats do anything for the world at large."

LATEST.

LONDON, Wednesday.—The China mail has arrived, bringing complete accounts of the Peiho affair, which resulted in the total defeat of the British forces, with no less than five and a third of the force engaged.

The mouth of the river was barred by iron stakes and booms. This bar was raked by the fire of the forts on the other side of the river, mounting 80 to 100 guns.

Admiral Hope's appearance in the first instance was pacific. A solitary man-of-war boat carried in his first message, the ferry and two other gun boats being left outside the bar, while the rest of the squadron was lying thirty miles off.

The Ambassadors finding no proper officers to receive them, decided to remove the bar and pass up the river. Six or seven hours, however, were spent in vain endeavors to effect this, and during that time not a gun was fired from the forts, although the gun-boats were at a distance of 500 to 700 yards only, and some of them had got aground. At 1:30 P. M. the signal for action was run up, and the Opposum and Plover pushed in close up to the first barrier. Suddenly about 2 p. m., the guns in the fort opened fire, and the action became general. The fire of the Chinese, both in weight and precision, was such as was never before experienced at their hands.

In about two hours the fire of the Chinese began to slacken, and was soon afterward almost silenced. Although every shot of theirs told, while the British guns did comparatively little damage to the mud walls—at about 5 p. m. the signal was made for the troops to land, and there were then no doubts of a speedy victory. Just as the first boat touched the shore, the forts opened a perfect hurricane of shell, balls and rockets, which mowed down the men as they landed. The ships threw in as heavy a covering fire as they possibly could.

The enemy's fire continued so heavy, and the mud on landing being sometimes to the waist, that out of one thousand men who landed, barely one hundred reached the first of the three ditches, which, after some five hundred yards of wading through the mud, presented themselves of the gallant forces who got through the mud, scarcely twenty had been able to keep their rifles or ammunition dry.—Nevertheless they boldly faced the ditches, and some fifty of them, including a crowd of officers, succeeded in getting as far as the third ditch.

They would certainly have made a good attempt to scale the walls, but their ladders had either been broken by shot, or had stuck in the mud. With the one, however, which remained, ten devoted men sprang forward, three of whom were immediately shot dead, and five wounded.

A vertical fire of arrows fell, as a constant fusilade was kept upon the select band who now crouched in the ditch waiting, but in vain, for reinforcements.

ST. JOHNS, Sept. 24.—The steamship City of Baltimore passed Cape Race on Wednesday evening, furnishing Liverpool dates of Wednesday, the 14th.

There will probably be another postponement of the sailing of the Great Eastern in her first trip to America, and Mr. Scott Russell has required three weeks to fit her out ready for sea.

The English and French fleets are reported before Pekin at last dates.

The English and French fleets before Pekin number two ships of the line, seven large steamships and ten gun boats. It is believed, however, that nearly one year must elapse before anything decisive can be attempted, owing to insufficiency of land forces. It is supposed that there will be no interruption of the China trade.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—The steamship Vanderbilt arrived at this port this morning from Southampton, with London dates to Thursday, the 15th inst., one day later than furnished by the steamer City of Baltimore and North American. She brings 365 passengers; among these are Rev. Dr.'s Bethune and Hordenburg, Capt. S. D. Comstock, and Maurice Strackosch. The latter gentleman is accompanied by an operatic troupe of twenty-two artists, including Mademoiselles Cravelli, Adelais, Sponkna and Cramermans, and Signors Borcardo, Stigelli and Vecia Ferris, all of whom are engaged for the Academy of Music; also, Manager Loge, of the French Theater, with twelve Parisian comedians.

The Vanderbilt reports that from longitude 40° to 45° she encountered heavy southwesterly gales.

She passed yesterday afternoon the steamer Kangaroo hence.

The steamship Bremen hence touched at Southampton on the 15th inst.

It was stated in London that Spain has returned an evasive reply to the question from England touching, the concentration of troops in the neighborhood of Gibraltar. The governments of France and England were to take immediate measures for inflicting chastisement on the Chinese.

The Florence correspondent of the London Times says it is reported that Pope Pius had received extreme unction, or the sacrament administered to the dying.

Advices received at Madrid from Tangier state that in consequence of the agitation caused by the death of the Emperor of Morocco, all foreign consuls at that place had barricaded their houses and armed their dependants. Also, that all Christians in the empire were leaving in haste.

Another account says the families of consuls had taken refuge on board a Spanish steamer.

The Florence correspondent of the London Times says a treaty was signed on the 26th of August between the Papal Government and the Queen of Spain, by which the latter engages to occupy the Roman States with troops when the French forces are withdrawn.

A dispatch from Parma says the [illegible] Assembly on the 14th inst. unanimously voted the confirmation of Signor Farini as Dictator.

The China mails had reached London, bringing full details of the conflict near Pekin.

The Times prints full lists of the killed and wounded. The proportion of officers among them is very large. Rear Admiral Hope was wounded very severely.

The London Times of Thursday says that the Government has decided on dispatching immediately to China several additional steam and sailing frigates, together with a large reinforcement of troops.

Orders have already been dispatched to naval commanders for enlisting men, and in order to expedite matters, the Coast Guard were to be called to volunteer.

Great improvements have been ordered in the fortifications at Dover Castle in order to place it in an efficient state of defense.

THE LATEST.

LONDON, THURSDAY, Sept. 15, A. M.—The London Times Paris correspondent says it is rumored that 12,000 French troops are ordered to be held in readiness for China. Gen. Nyfen was spoken of as commander.

Consols are quoted at 95⅛@95⅜ for money and 95¼@95⅜ for account. The American corvette Portsmouth was at Cape Palmas on the 17th ultimo.

LONDON, Wednesday Eve, Sept. 14.—The funds opened with renewed firmness this morning and closed with a further improvement in consequence of the notification that France and England will act in concert against China.

There was less excitement in the tea market after the delivery of the China letters, but prices showed increased firmness.

Mercantile letters from China generally concur in view that the renewal of hostilities will not cause any material interruption in trade. The natives of Shanghai were much annoyed at what happened and consequently no ill feeling was anticipated there, but still it was believed that England would have to send out a very large naval and military force, and perhaps the blockade of the various ports, in order to bring the Emperor to submission.

Sir Wm. Eyre, the late Commander of the forces in Canada died on Tuesday.

Some of the Madrid journals publish articles on the necessity of taking Gibraltar from the English no matter by what means.

SCHOOL-HOUSE BLOWN UP.—The Beech Hill school-house, in the north part of the town of Westminster, was totally destroyed on Wednesday night last, about half-past nine o'clock, by being blown up with powder. This school-house has lately been removed from its first location, and great excitement has been produced in the district and town by the fickleness of the inhabitants of the district as expressed in their action respecting it.—*Worcester (Mass.) Telegraphic Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Perry McD. Collins, Esq., commercial agent at Amoor river, Asiatic Russia, has arrived in this city, and expects to sail in the course of a few days on his return thither by way of St. Petersburg.

It appears from his statement that American commerce on the Amoor is steadily increasing, several ships having sailed from the United States to participate this year in its rich trade. They have taken out assorted cargoes of merchandise, including cotton goods, wines, liquors, ship stores and chandlery, all kinds of hardware, machinery, steam engines, &c.

There are now in the waters of Amoor five steamers built in this country. A Russian officer, Capt. Davandoff, at present in New York, is superintending the construction of steam engines and machinery to be placed in gun boats to be constructed on the Amoor, which is navigable for steamboats at least 2,500 miles. The climate is similar to North-west Canada, and the agricultural productions about the same. The principal value of the country as yet developed is for its furs and mines; but when steam communication shall be fully established the trade will be immeasurably increased in other productions, and Siberia and Tartary will add its treasures to those of the Amoor country.

From Moscow to the head of the Amoor, a distance of four thousand miles, there are upwards of five hundred cities and towns. The Amoor Company this year sent to the Amoor river three or four vessels, with full cargoes, together with iron steamers; to initiate their projects, namely: to unite the mouth of the Amoor with Siberia by a regular line of steam packets, the recent ukase of the Emperor of Russia permitting Siberian exiles to emigrate to the Amoor, with a view of settling the shores of that river, and developing the resources of the country.

The construction of railroads is contemplated, and also lines of telegraph, connecting with Moscow and other distant points. All these movements of the Russian government are regarded with great interest, as they cannot fail to open to American commerce a valuable market to many of our manufactures, considering our diversified interest, including those of whaling on the North Pacific, and contagious to Siberia and the Amoor. The opinion prevails that we should have a Consul General instead of a Consular, officers of comparatively an insignificant grade, with an insufficient salary.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Colonel Rankin, formerly of Philadelphia, the Register of the Land Office at Olympia, Washington Territory, has arrived here from the Island of San Juan. He reports that if the intentions of Gov. Douglas had been carried out, there would have been a collision between the British and American forces, as her British Majesty's ships Satellite and Plumper had orders from him to fire, but Bayne opportunely arrived, and superseded him in command of the English ships of war, five in number.

The misunderstanding was with the Hudson Bay Co., the interests of which were represented by Gov. Douglas. The Island of San Juan had been in the occupancy of Americans for at least 18 months, nobody seeming to question their rights, and for a longer period had been considered and treated in all respects as belonging to Washington Territory. It was not until Gen. Harney applied to and was informed by the boundary commissioners that our title to the island was clear and certain, that he dispatched troops thither at the earnest request of the residents, who claimed protection from British aggression, and especially from the predatory incursions of the Northern Indians, who had even taken and held possession of a lighthouse for three days, and against whom private expeditions had been repeatedly sent to chastise them.

Col. Rankin says that the people of Washington Territory and the Pacific States are unanimous for our retention of the island, and such is their enthusiasm that if the United State troops should be directed to vacate it, private parties in formidable numbers would immediately occupy that important position, and not surrender without a severe struggle.

It is not supposed in this city that our troops will be withdrawn, as this would be considered as an admission that our title is clearly disputed. It may not be generally known that the Government has recently confirmed a bluff of land containing 3,060 acres for a military reservation, if anything even situated farther north than San Juan.

Our Government having sent a minister of full grade to Vienna, that of Austria has raised Mr. Hulseman to equal rank. The latter will soon return to Washington.

The whole amount of the public land survey as returned to the General Land Office during the year ending with the present month is about 53,000 miles, or about 150,000,000 of acres.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 25.—The Denver City correspondent of the Republican gives a statement of the receipts and shipments of gold in various forms by prominent business firms in Denver, and Auraria, which aggregate is as follows: Receipts, seventy-three thousand; shipments, forty-five thousand. The valuation is at the gold rate, seventeen dollars to the ounce, which is much below the real value. The amount of gold brought to the States by private individuals is not included in the statement. Gregory left Denver on the 14th for Georgia, with about twenty-five thousand.

MONTREAL, Sept. 25.—The first innings of the Canadians at the cricket match played yesterday, were 25; the "All England" men then commenced, but did not finish their play. The play will be resumed on Monday, and be finished on Tuesday. The "All England" players are sanguine of success.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26.—The disagreement between Mr. Cass and Baron Stoekel is not as serious as was at first pretended. It grew mainly out of alleged attempts on the part of local authorities in the northern Pacific to restrain American traders and whalers within the limits imposed by Nicholas the First, previous to the annexation of California. The present government of Russia will offer no impediments, it is confidently trusted, to free trade on the part of American vessels with the growing population on the banks of the Amoor river.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 26.—The procession of the Odd Fellows this morning was a grand demonstration. The splendid weather promoted a large turn out, and the new wing of the hall recently completed was dedicated with the imposing ceremonies of the Order.

Several large cars, filled with orphan children, supported by the Order, formed an interesting feature of the display.

CINCINNATI, Sept 26.—An accident took place on the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, on Saturday night, twelve miles from this city, which was occasioned by a broken rail. One car was thrown off the track, injuring twenty passengers. Fortunately, only one was killed.

NATIONAL TASTES.—The English affect stimulant nourishment—beef and beer. The French excitants, irritants—citrons oxide, alchohol, champagne. The Austrians, sedative—hyoscyamus. The Russians, narcotics—opium, tobacco and bang.

THE SCANDINAVIAN PILLS AND PURIFIER.—The following flattering notice is taken from the Portsmouth (Ohio) Scioto Valley Republican of April 3, 1858:

SCANDINAVIA.—A friend writes to us for our "real opinion" of Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies—where he can obtain them—and why they are called "Scandinavian," and we are frequently asked the same questions. Scandinavia is the ancient name of Sweden and Norway, and a Scandinavian, that is a Swede or Norwegian, affectionately calls his country "Scandinavia," in the same sense as we speak of "Columbia," or "The Union." By the way, there are over nine thousand Scandinavian families in Dane county, Wisconsin. Although a citizen of this country for many years, Dr. Roback is a Swede by birth; and compounds his Medicines of Swedish herbs. We think the name is very appropriate. We have the very highest opinion of the Medicines, and of Dr. Roback himself, who is not only a singularly skillful physician, but a gentleman of the Old School, as we know personally. Our advertisement columns will answer the rest of our friend's letter. —See advertisement.

CITY NOTICES.

McCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated: and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June 29, 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. McCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that your's surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have unrivaled home, and but few equals in the country.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of Music have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

☞ E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the corks fly.—MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our poetical friend J. M. DENIG on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. C. THE RIGHT ARM; OR THE PATRIOT AND TRAITOR.

Fifty years ago a terrible storm shook the city of London. At the dead of night, when the storm was at its highest, an aged minister living near the suburbs of the city, was aroused by an earnest cry for help. Looking from his window, he beheld a rude man, clad in the coarse attire of a sweep of the public streets. In a few moments, while the rain came down in torrents, and the raging storm growled above, the preacher leaning on the arm of the scavenger, threaded his way through the dark suburbs.

That very day a strange old man had fallen speechless in front of the scavenger's rude house. The good hearted street sweeper had taken him in, laid him on his own bed—he had not spoken once and now he was dying.

This was the story of the rough man.

And now, through dark alleys, among miserable tenements, that seemed to topple down upon their heads, into the loneliest and dreariest suburbs, they pass. That white haired minister and his guide. At last in a narrow court, and up a flight of stairs that creaked beneath their tread, then into the death room.

It was in truth a miserable place.

A glimmering light stood on a broken chair. There were the rough walls, there the solitary garret window, with the rain beating through the rags and straw, which stuffed the broken panes—and, there amid a heap of cold ashes, the small valise which it seems the stranger had with him.

In one corner of the coarse straw of the ragged bed, lay the dying man. He was but half dressed—his legs were concealed by military boots.

The aged preacher drew near, looked upon him. And he looked—throb—throb—you might hear the dead watch ticking in the shattered wall.

It was the form of a strange man, grown old with care rather than age.

There was a face that you might look upon once, and yet wear it in your memory for ever. Let us bend over the bed and look upon that face.

A bold forehead seamed by one deep wrinkle between the brows—long locks of dark hair, sprinkled with grey—lips firmly set, yet quivering as if they had a life separate from the life of the man—and then two large eyes vivid, burning, unnatural in their steady glare.

Ah, there was something so full of unnatural loneliness, unspeakable despair—that the aged minister started back in horror.

But look, these strong arms are clutching at the vacant air; the death-sweat starts in drops upon the brow—the man is dying!

Throb!—throb!—throb!—beat the death watch in the shattered wall.

"Would you die in the faith of a Christian?" faltered the preacher, as he knelt there on the floor.

The white lips of the death-stricken man trembled but made no sound.

Then, with the agony of death upon him, he arose in a sitting posture. For the first time, he spoke:

"Christian!" he echoed in that deep tone which thrilled the preacher to the heart, "will that faith give me back my honor? Come with me—with me far, far over the water. Ha! we are there! This is my native home. Yonder is the church in which I knelt in childhood—yonder the green on which I sported when a boy. But another flag than that waved when I was a child. And listen, old man; were I to pass this street, as I passed when but a child, the very babes would raise their tiny hands and curse me. The graves in yonder churchyard would shrink from my footsteps, and yonder flag would stain a baptism of blood upon my heart."

That was an awful death-bed. The minister has watched the "last night," with a hundred convicts in their cells, yet never beheld a scene so terrible as this.

Suddenly the dying man arose. He tottered along the floor. With those white fingers, whose nails are blue with the death chill, he threw open the valise. He showed the military coat trimmed with silver, an old parchment, a piece of cloth that looked like the wreck of a battle flag.

"Look ye, priest, this faded coat is spotted with blood!" he cried, as old memories seemed stirring in his heart.—"This the last coat I wore when I planted the banner of the stars on Ticonderoga.—That bullet-hole was pierced at the fight at Quebec; now—I am a—let me whisper in your ear."

"Now, help me, priest," he said in a voice growing suddenly tremulous; "help me to put on this coat of blue and silver, for you see,"—and a ghostly smile came on his face,—"there is no one to wipe the cold drops from my brow; no wife, no child—I must meet death alone; but I will meet him in battle, without fear.

While he stood arraying himself in that worm eaten coat of blue and silver, the good preacher spoke to him of faith in Jesus. Yes, of that great faith which pierces the clouds of human guilt, and rolls them back from the face of God.

"Faith," echoed the strange man, who stood there erect, with the death-light in his eye. "Faith, can it give me back my honor? Look ye, priest, there over the waves sits George Washington, telling his comrades the pleasant story of the eight year's war—there in his royal hall sits George of England, bewailing in his idiotic voice the loss of his colonies. And here am I—I—who was the first to raise the flag of freedom, the first to strike the blow against that King—here I am dying like a dog!"

The awe-striken preacher started back from the look of the dying man while—throb—throb—beat the death-watch in the shattered wall.

"Hush! silence along the lines there!" he muttered in that wild absent tone, as though speaking to the dead; "silence along the lines! Hark, you Montgomery, we will meet in victory or death! Hist! silence my man, not a whisper, as you move on those steep rocks! Now on, my boys, now on! Men of the wilderness we will gain the town. Now up with the banner of the stars; up with the flag of freedom though the night is dark and the snow falls! Now—now—" shrieked the death-striken man, towering there in the blue uniform, with his clenched hands waving in the air—"now—now! One blow and Quebec is ours."

And look. His eyes grow glassy. With that word on his lips, he stands there—ah! what a hideous picture of despair, erect, livid, ghastly! There for a moment, and then he falls! He is dead! Ah! look at that proud form, thrown cold and stiff upon the damp floor. In that glassy eye there lingers, even yet, horrible energy, a sublimity of despair.

Who is this strange man, dying here, alone, in this rude garret, this man, who, in all his crime, still treasured up his blue uniform and faded flag?

Who is this being of terrible remorse? This man, whose memories link something of heaven and more of hell!"

Let us look at that parchment and the flag.

He unrolls that parchment. It is a Colonel's commission in the Continental Army, addressed, BENEDICT ARNOLD!

And there in that rude hut, while the death-watch throbbed like a heart in the scattered wall—unknown, unwept, in all the bitterness of desolation, lay the corpse of that patriot traitor.

O, that our own true Washington had been there, to sever the good right arm, and embalm it among the holiest memories of the past.

For the right arm had struck many a gallant blow for freedom, yonder at Ticonderoga, at Quebec, Champlain and Saratoga—that arm yonder, beneath the snow-white mountain, on the deep silence of the dead, first raised into sight the banner of STARS!

It was during the renowned expedition through the wilderness to Quebec, that Arnold encamped for two or three days beside the River of the Dead, near a snow white mountain, which rose in lovely grandeur over all other mountains into the autumnal sky. A single soldier ascended the mountain with the hope of beholding from its summit the rocks and spires of Quebec. When he came down Arnold took from his breast, where, for four days in privation and danger, he had carried a blue banner, gleaming with thirteen stars. He raised it into the light, and for the first time the Continental Banner floated over the solitudes of the Dead River. This is a fact attested by history and corroborated by tradition.

Anecdote of Douglas.

In the year eighteen hundred and forty-six, the excitement against the Mormons at Nauvoo reached its hight. The people of the surrounding country determined to drive them away; The Saints resolved to defend themselves. A civil war seemed imminent. Governor Ford dispatched a regiment to put down both belligerents.—This regiment, consisting of 450 men, was under command of Col. John J. Hardin, the old political opponent, but warm personal friend of Mr. Douglas, who held the post of Major.

As the little body of troops approached Nauvoo they saw the Mormons, 4000 strong, drawn up to oppose their advance. Every man of them was known to be armed with a "seven shooter" and a brace of Colt's "revolvers"—twenty-one shots to a man besides a bowie-knife.

Hardin halted his troops just out of rifle range and addressed them:

"There are the Mormons, ten to one against us. I intend to attack them. If there is a coward here who wishes to go home, he may do so now. Let any man who wishes to go step to the front."

Not a man came forward.

"There were, I dare say," says Mr. Douglas, "just 451 of us, including our Colonel, who would have been glad to have retired; but not one of us had the courage to own that he was a coward."

"Major Douglas," said the Colonel, "will take 100 men, will proceed to Nauvoo, arrest the Twelve Apostles and bring them here!"

"Colonel Hardin," asked the Major quietly, so that no one else heard, "is this a peremptory order?"

"It is."

"Then I shall make an attempt to execute it. But I give you warning that not a man of us will ever return."

"The Apostles must be taken, Major Douglas," replied the Colonel.

"Very well, Colonel. If you will send me alone you will be much more likely to get them,"

"But you will lose your life."

"I will take the responsibility. If you send me alone I will pledge myself to reach the city. As to bringing in the Twelve, or getting back myself, that is quite another question. I will try."

"Major Douglas," said the Colonel after reflecting a few moments, "will proceed to Nauvoo, taking such escort as he sees fit."

The order was hardly given when the little Major—for he was not then a "Little Gaint"—dashed off at full speed. As he approached the Mormon Legions General Wells came forward to meet him; and after a brief conversation escorted him through the hollow square of troops into the city. He was not long in finding Brigham and the Twelve. All of them were old acquaintance of his. Most of them had, in fact, been before him for trial, as Judge, upon some charge or other.

The Judge is famous for his taking manners; and in a very brief time he succeeded in inducing Brigham and his associates to accompany him. They all packed themselves into the "Apostolic Coach," drawn by eight horses, and presented themselves in the camp.

The fighting was postponed, and negotiations for the removal of the Mormons were entered upon, Judge Douglas being chief negotiator on one side. Brigham himself said but little; and at length said he would go out for a while, directing his associates to settle the terms. These were soon informally agreed to by the Twelve, and they were committed to paper.

Brigham returned, and asked how matters had succeeded. He was told that everything had been settled.

"Let me look at the terms," said Brigham, quietly.

He read them over hastily.

"I'll never agree to them—never!" he exclaimed.

The vote was formally put, and the whole Twelve without a dissenting voice declared against them, though they had as unanimously accepted them not five minutes before.

The negotiations were then renewed between Brigham and Douglas. New terms were settled; and when the vote was taken the Twelve agreed to them at once. The treaty was duly signed, and the Mormons prepared to leave the State.

☞ As a steamboat was about to start from Cincinnati, the other day, a young man came on board leading a blushing damsel by the hand, and approaching the polite clerk, said in a suppressed voice:

"I says, me and my wife have just got married, and I'm looking for accommodations."

"Looking for a berth!" hastily inquired the clerk—passing out to another passenger.

"A berth! thunder and lightning, no!" gasped the astonished man; "we hain't but just got married; we want a place to stay all night, you know, and—and a bed!"

An Editor's Dream.

A bachelor editor, out west, who had received from the fair hand of a bride a piece of elegant wedding cake to dream on, thus gives the results of his remarkable experience:

We put it under the head of our pillow, shut our eyes sweetly as an infant, blessed with an easy conscience, and soon snored prodigiously.

The god of dreams gently touched us, and in fancy we were married! Never was a little editor so happy. It was "my love," "dearest," "sweetest," ringing in our ears every moment. Oh, that the dream had broken off here! But no! some evil genius had put it into the head of our ducky to have a pudding for dinner, just to please her lord.

In a hungry dream we sat down to dinner. Well, the happy pudding moment had arrived, and a huge slice almost obscured from sight the plate before us.

"My dear," said we fondly, "did you make this?"

"Yes, love," don't you think it is very nice?"

"'Tis the best bread pudding I ever tasted in my life."

"Plumb pudding, ducky," suggested my wife.

"Oh, no, my dearest wife, bread pudding. I was always extremely fond of 'em."

"Call that bread pudding!" asked my wife, while her lips slightly curled with contempt.

"Certainly, my dear—reckon I have had enough at the Sherwood House to know—bread pudding, my love, by all means."

"Husband, this is really too bad; plumb pudding is harder to make than bread pudding, and more expensive, and a great deal better. This is plumb pudding, sir!" and my pretty wife's brow flushed with excitement.

"My love, my sweet, my dear love," exclaimed we, soothingly, "do not get angry. I'm sure it is very good, if it is bread pudding."

"You mean wretch," replied my wife in a higher tone, "you know it's plumb pudding."

"Then, ma'am, it's so meanly put together, and so badly burned, that the devil himself wouldn't know it. I tell you, madam, most distinctly and emphatically, and I will not be contradicted, that it is bread pudding, and the meanest kind at that."

"It is plumb pudding!" rose above the din, as we had a distinct perception of feeling two plates smash across our head.

"Bread pudding," we groaned; in a rage, as a chicken left our hand, and flying with extremely swift motion across the table, landed in madam's bosom.

"Plumb pudding!" resounded the war cry from the enemy, as the gravy dish took us where we had been disposing the first part of our dinner.

"Bread pudding forever!" shouted we in defiance, unsuccessfully dodging the soup tureen, and falling beneath the greasy contents.

"Plumb pudding!" yelled the amiable spouse, as noticing our misfortune, she determined to keep us down by piling on our head the dishes with no gentle hand, then in rapid succession followed the war cry, "Plumb pudding," she shrieked with every dish.

"Bread pudding," in smothered tones came from the pile in reply. Then it was "plumb pudding," in rapid succession, the last cries growing feebler, until we just distinctly recollect it had grown into a whisper. "Plumb pudding, plumb pudding," resounded like thunder, followed by a crash, as my wife leaped upon the pile with both feet, and commenced jumping up and down. Then, thank Heaven, we awoke and found it was a dream.—This dream has determined us—we shall never marry.

Adventures of a Morning-Gown.

A lady was anxious to make her husband a present on the occasion of his birthday, and as it happened to fall in winter, and at that time a severe winter, she thought a comfortable morning-gown would be a most useful acquisition to his domestic comforts. She went to a shop and purchased a fine Persian Pattern merino and well-wadded morning gown. She had forgotten the exact height of her husband; but, to make sure of its usefulness, she thought best to purchase one rather too long than too short. The day was rather wet; her husband returned in the afternoon from his office, and she presented him with the knew article of comfort; and he fancied it indeed a great comfort after he had put off his wet clothes. But it was too long—about ten inches too long.

"Oh, never mind, my dear," said the affectionate wife, "I can easily shorten it to suit you."

They had a party in the evening; they were very merry. And after they had gone to bed, the wind was making such a noise, and the rain so dashing against the window, that the lady could not sleep; her husband however slept soundly. She arose without disturbing him, took the morning-gown, and commenced her work, cutting off about the length of ten inches—to make it suit her husband's stature—and went to bed again. She had to rise early next morning. The husband slept well, which is frequently the case after a merry evening party. Scarcely had the lady left the room, when her sister—a good-natured, elderly lady, who lived with them—stole into the room upon tip-toe, in order not to disturb her brother-in-law, and took the morning-gown. Hastening to her room, she cut off ten inches as she knew on the previous evening it was too long for him. An hour after, the master awoke, and was anxious to surprise his affectionate wife. He rang the bell; the servant came up and asked his pleasure; upon which he requested her to wrap up the morning-gown and carry it to his tailor to make it ten inches shorter. Scarcely was the morning-gown returned from the tailor, when the good wife stepped in.—The husband had just arisen, and proposed now to surprise his wife and enjoy his comfort. But how surprised was his better half to see her husband in a fine Persian pattern merino shooting-jacket, instead of a comfortable morning-gown.

☞ An Irishman, who had lain sick a long time, was met one day by the parish priest:

"Well, Patrick, I am glad you have recovered—but were you not afraid to meet your God?"

"Och, no, your riverence; it was the other chap I was afraid uv," replied Pat.

☞ A printer at a dinner table being asked if he would take some pudding, replied:

"Owing to a crowd of other matter, I am unable to make room for it."

His "inside" was already full.

☞ "Sambo, you black tief, Sambo, why you betray dat secret I told yer de oder day?"

"I betray de secret? I scorn de 'putation; I found I couldn't keep um, so I told um to somebody dat could."

☞ The fathers of two of the young ladies swindled by Leslie, alias Johnson, have published a card in the Philadelphia papers, in which they say that there were only nine victims, and not fifteen, as represented, and that one of the ladies are missing.

Old Virginia.

An Illinois Sucker took a great dislike to a foolish young Virginian who was a fellow-passenger with him in one of the Mississippi steamboats. The Virginian was constantly combing his hair, brushing his clothes, or dusting his boots—to all of which movements the sucker took exceptions, as being what he termed "a leetle too darned nice, by half." He finally drew up his chair beside the Virginian and began—

"What might you be from, stranger?"

"I am from Virginia, sir," politely answered the gent.

"From old Virginny, I suppose!" says the Sucker.

"Yes, sir, old Virginia," was the reply.

"You are pooty high up in the pictur thar, I suppose?"

"I don't know what you mean by that remark, sir.

"Oh, nuthin," says the Sucker, "but that you are desp'rate rich, and have been brought up nice."

"If the information will gratify you, in any way," says the gent, patronisingly, smoothing down his hair, "I belong to one of the first families."

"Oh, in course," answered the Sucker. "Well, stranger, bein' as you belong to the farst, I'll just give you two of the fattest shoats in all Illinois ef yo'll only find me a feller that belongs to one of the second Virginny families."

"You want to quarrel with me, sir," says the Virginian.

"No, stranger, not an atom," answered the Sucker, "but I never seed one of the second family, and I'd gin nuthin' to git a sight at one of 'em. I know you are one of the farst, cause you just look like John Randolph."

This modified the Virginian—the hint of a resemblance to the statesman was flattering to his feelings, and he accordingly acknowledged relationship to the orator.

"He, you know, descended from the Ingin gal, Pocahantas!"

"You are right, sir," he answered.

"Well, stranger," said the Sucker, "do you know thar is another queer thing allays puzzles me, and it's this—I never seed a Virginian that didn't claim to be either descended from an Ingin, John Randolph, or a nigger."

We need not add that the Sucker rolled off his chair, suddenly! They were separated until the Sucker got off at a landing place, near his house. As he stepped ashore, he caught sight of the Virginian on the upper deck, and hailed him at once with:

"I say, old Virginny, remember—two fat shoats for the first feller you find that belongs to the second Virginny family!"

Illustration of Law.

A good story was rife in our city lately, which serves to illustrate that "possession is nine points of law." A. is a rather sharp lawyer, and resides next door to B. The houses A. and B. occupy are similar in appearance, and as they adjoin are easily mistaken by a comparative stranger.—B. being out of coal, walks to the coal market, purchases a load for $3 30, and sends it home. The man of whom he purchased mistakes the residence of A. for that of B. and dumps the coal in A.'s yard. The lawyer's man sees the coal in the yard and gets wheelbarrow and shovel and puts it into the cellar. B. is in a "peck of trouble" this coal does not come, and goes out to find the man from whom he bought it.

"See here, my country friend, I bought a load of coal of you, and you have not delivered it," says B., as soon as he found the collier.

"You bought the load and paid for it, and I delivered it," said the coal dealer.

Here the thought struck B. that he saw coal in his neighbor's (the lawyer's yard, and immediately divined the mystery.)—He starts for the lawyer's office, and finding him, thus accosted him:

"Mr. A., suppose you should buy a load of coal, and the man should put it in the wrong yard, what would you require of the gentleman who appropriated the coal?"

"Well, sir," said the lawyer, "I should either make him return the coal or pay the amount I paid for the load."

"Very well," said Mr. B., just give me $3 30."

The lawyer gently drew thirty cents from his pocket and handed it to B.

"What does this mean, Mr. A? You owe me three dollars more," said the astonished B.

"Not at all," said the lawyer, "I charge three dollars for my advice."

THE APPROACH OF DEATH.—The article on "Death," in the New Encyclopedia, has the following: "As life approaches extinction, insensibility supervenes—a numbness and disposition to repose, which does not admit of the idea of suffering. Even in those cases where the activity of the mind remains to the last, and where nervous sensibility would seem to continue, it is surprising how often there has been observed a happy state of feeling on the approach of death. 'If I had strength enough to hold a pen, I would write how easy and delightful it is to die,' were the last words of the celebrated Wm. Hunter during his last moments. Montaigne, in one of his essays, describes an accident which left him so senseless that he was taken up for dead. On being restored, however, he says: 'Methought my life only hung upon my lips; and I shut my eyes to help thrust it out, and took pleasure in languishing and letting myself go.' A writer in the Quarterly Review records that a gentleman who had been rescued from drowning, declared that he had not experienced the slightest feeling of suffocation. The stream was transparent, the day brilliant, and as he stood upright he could see the sun shining through the water, with a dreamy consciousness that his eyes were about to be closed on it forever. Yet he neither feared his fate nor wished to avert it. A sleepy sensation, which soothed and gratified him, made a luxurious bed of a watery grave."

☞ "Vat you makes dere?" hastily inquired a Dutchman of his daughter, who was being kissed by her sweetheart, very clamorously.

"Oh, not much; just courting a little—that's all."

"Oho, dat's all, eh? I tought you vas vighting."

☞ It is proposed to introduce a reform into the British Navy, making retirement obligatory at a certain age, and thus secure the advancement of younger men to posts which their age and physical strength qualify them to fill. Of one hundred Admirals at present on the active list, thirty-nine are between the ages of seventy and eighty-seven, and only fourteen are employed. Of three hundred and fifty-eight captains, thirty-one are about the age of sixty; ninety are employed, and one hundred and eighty have never served afloat in their present rank.

☞ The Northern Railroad, leading north from Albany, N. Y., has been sold on behalf of the Second Mortgage Bondholders, for $25,000. It was bid off by Abijah Mann, who represented $400,000 out of the half million of the Second Mortgage. The original cost of the road was nearly two millions of dollars; while interest and floating debt, still remaining unpaid, swell the loss of this enterprise to something over three millions of dollars.

HEADS OF FAMILIES.
J. C. BAGNALL, on Slakey Alley, near North Fourth street, has invented a most effective and infallible
Hair Tonic,
For cleansing the hair and removing dandriff and dry scurf. It removes every particle of dirt with a gentle rubbing and leaves the surface cool and agreeable, with open pores and slightly but effectually stimulated. As a hair restorative, it possesses more virtues than high-sounding compounds; and what is far better leaves the head cool, and the hair thoroughly cleansed and free to grow.
Also a mixture for cleansing silks and satins, and restoring their original luster.
Also Impression or Transfer Paper of the best quality and of every color, and of any size to suit the trade.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.
THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practised upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.
The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhœa, Seminal Weakness Gonorrhœa, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self-Abuse. Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.
The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.
An admirable Report on Spermatorrhœa, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope,) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.
Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLIN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

DR. STEWART
WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT, also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of the most hopeless cases, in this city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. S. can refer to the best citizens, not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle States, and Canada, where he has practiced.
He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling impostors, (who stay perhaps a day in a place, and are then a great many miles away,) should note the above fact.
Columbus is a central location, is one of the finest countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.
Being naturally inclined to CONSUMPTION, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a malady, which under the old treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.
Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Disease should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, suffer themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!
Dr. Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic [illegible]
DISEASES [illegible] than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and Affections of the Eye.
CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.
Cases given up as hopeless solicited. He will forfeit $500 for any of the following he cannot cure: Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, Ulcers, Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 25,) Swelled neck, St. Vitus Dance.
A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.
Office hours 9 a. m., to 9 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.
☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.
WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character the sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and [illegible] before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these [illegible] Preparations. AYER'S
Ague Cure.
FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF
Intermittent Fever or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers; indeed for the whole Class of Diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.
No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such a remedy we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.
That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.
Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants, and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally, or daily, while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents, if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
FOR ALL THE PURPOSES OF A FAMILY PHYSIC
are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.
Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.
Do not be put off by unprincipled Dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.
So wide is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth, no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional, or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States:

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot, with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing, in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799, that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union:

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromise of 1850—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Conventions—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it; to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it is, and the Union as it shall be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in the maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to proclaim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose dominion it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendency in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the criminal doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress, with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who counsel the abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those cruelties which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretensions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party here in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizens residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro [illegible].

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the permanent interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the last Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to THE PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of open violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

Terrible Sufferings on the Plains—Two Men Subsisting on Grasshoppers and Buffalo Bones.

News recently reached Fort Riley by two soldiers, who came in on express duty from Prairie Dog Creek, that two men who had started for Pike's Peak were lying in a starving condition at one of the distant unoccupied stations of the late express company of Jones & Russel. The soldiers reported that if adequate means were sent to their relief, it was still possible that they might be found alive, although they were left in a delirious and feeble condition. First Lieut. Charles Griffith and two others were dispatched with what limited means the Quartermaster at the post could furnish. The philanthropic mission reached its destination the third day. Both father and son were found even in a worse condition than represented. They had been at the station eight days before they were relieved by the small quantity of tea, bacon and bread that the sergeant who first discovered them could spare, who gave strict injunctions to eat very sparingly, else death would ensue, they being so weak that they could scarcely stand up without holding on to the door.

It appears that they had lived on grasshoppers and mildewed corn, picked up from among the excrements left by the animals which had fed at the station. Providentially, a few young shoots of corn were found to be springing up about the station, and a dried skin of a buffalo had been thrown aside. They caught from twenty to thirty grasshoppers every morning, while the dew was on the grass, until they became too faint to procure this scanty supply of food, which they had to husband in order to make a stew of grasshoppers, buffalo hide and young corn stalks, in a small tin cup, to eat at night, to promote sleep and prevent delirium.

Thus they sustained life until they obtained the cupful of [illegible] (about a quarter of a pound), two loaves of bread; and a pound or two of bacon, left by the sergeant. When found by Mr. Griffin, they were too debilitated to be immediately removed. He accordingly left private Mechler to take care of them, and went on another day's ride to repair his wagon, which had broken at the camp at Prairie Dog Creek.

The father states that his name is Mr. W. Frost, that he is fifty years old, and that his son, Thomas Frost, who was with him, is seventeen years old—the eldest of six children—the five others being left behind at Pottsville, Pa. He is a shoemaker by trade. He started with $100, having left $60 with his wife. He paid his fare to Leavenworth city, from whence he started on foot.—Manhattan (Kansas) Express.

☞ The Scientific American says the Ericsson engine, which Mr. Lowe proposes to use in his huge air ship, for the purpose of working some sort of machinery to elevate or depress the balloon without letting out the gas, will accomplish that object as soon as it is able to lift itself by its own power, as a man might lift himself over a fence by the straps of his boots, and no sooner.

Aid for the London Builders.

A meeting of the Committee of Arrangements of the Stone Cutters' Association was held in New York City on Thursday evening. The Committee was appointed some time since to receive subscriptions from the stone cutters in the city and vicinity to aid their brother-workmen who are now on a strike in London. It was stated at the meeting that upward of $1,000 had been subscribed. The last news from Europe was that many of the employers had acceded to the demands of the workmen, and that a large number of the latter had returned to their shops. In view of this, the Committee concluded not to forward the funds collected until after the arrival of the next steamer, when, should news come, that the strike had been settled, there will be no necessity for sending aid. But should the news be to the reverse, the Committee were confident of being able to send their brother-mechanics from $1,200 to $1,500. A letter has been dispatched expressive of their sympathy.

THE ENGLISH DIFFICULTY IN CHINA.—The London Post of the 15th, the official organ speaking of the repulse of the English squadron before Pekin, says:

"But the most curious part of the narrative is that which attributes the admirable service of the artillery in the forts to European agency. It is quite clear that the defences were so constructed as to give flanking fire. It is stated further that our men were killed and wounded by bullets discharged from Minnie rifles—a weapon with which the Chinese is former wars were unacquainted. We know not what cupidity may do, for we have heard that insurgent Kaffirs have obtained arms from the manufacturers of Birmingham. The importation into China of Minie rifles may have been a successful speculation in the hands of some cute Yankee captain, but without European instructors such arms would have been as useless as the matchlock or the spear. The representation is, that Russians served guns at the mouth of the Peiho, and thus, by aiding the cowardly ambuscade of the barbarous Chinese, strove to wipe out the defeats which their country had sustained in the Crimean war. Better evidence must be adduced than the writings of excited correspondents before we can believe that the subjects of a friendly Power have contributed to an act of treachery, in comparison with which the Hango massacre is a venial and excusable offence. We must, before we leave the subject, do justice to the French, whose bravery is worthy of every commendation. Out of sixty men landed, four were killed and ten wounded, and among the latter the captain of the Duchayla. A tribute is also due to the Americans for the readiness with which they towed the British ships out of danger and rendered succor to the wounded. We know not what diplomacy may attempt to effect in the interval which might elapse before the arrival of reinforcements in the waters of China, but the people of England and France we are persuaded will never rest satisfied until the treacherous and perfidious Chinese have been taught a lesson, the effect of which neither time or distance can ever obliterate."

SONS OF MALTA.—Since the origin of Secret Societies, we have no hesitation in stating that no organization has extended its membership and its influence further than that of the Sons of Malta. There is scarcely a town or village in the Union of over five hundred inhabitants but the "Sons" have their organization, and in its membership may be found men noted for their benevolence, and all the essentials in character which make individuals not only good citizens but brethren. A body dwelling together in unity and relieving the distressed, the widow and the orphan in their own quiet, unostentatious way. We have evidence of many cases of this kind in our own city where the recipients of charity do not know, nor will they ever, whose hands were stretched forth in their hour of need and destitution. Such societies are and deserve to be popular.

In connection with this brief notice we would state that a lodge of this Order is to be instituted at London, Madison county, on Tuesday evening next. The brethren in this city have received an invitation to be present to aid others from different parts of the country in the installation of its officers.

ANOTHER DUEL ON THE TAPIS.—A special Washington dispatch to the New York Herald of yesterday says, a telegraphic dispatch has just been received here by the city authorities informing them that Mr. GOODE, of Virginia, brother of the late member of Congress, and Mr. PAGE, a Petersburgh, Virginia, editor, were on the way to this vicinity to fight a duel. The difficulty, it is said, arose out of the contest for the seat in Congress in the Petersburgh district, GOODE wanting his late brother's place, and PAGE being a warm partisan of PRYOR.

Later.—Mr. PAGE has been arrested and held to bail in $5,000 to keep the peace.

ANOTHER EXPLOSION WITH LOSS OF LIFE.—Yesterday morning, the boiler used for cooking purposes in the Girard House, New York, exploded with a fearful crash, instantly killing John O'Connor, a plumber, and injuring the fireman, John Collins, to such an extent that his recovery was considered impossible. The boiler was situated in the basement, and the whole building shaken by the explosion. Two barbers in their shop at the time of the occurrence, sleeping in barber's chairs, were thrown up to the ceiling, but escaped without injury. The building is much damaged. Another small boiler in the same room exploded. O'Connor had been fixing the boiler, and had just finished his work and seated himself near the fire. The cause of the catastrophe was unknown.

THE MISSING FAIRGOERS—RUMOR, &c.—The Troy, N. Y., Times of Tuesday evening says, a party, embracing Mr. EDWARD LA MOUNTAIN, brother of the aeronaut, several relatives of Mr. HADDOCK, and others, left Watertown, to follow the route of the balloon as far as it was seen, and, if possible, to terminate the dreadful uncertainty that exists.

FRESHLY AT HIS WORK.—On Thursday we briefly announced the arrival of HORACE GREELEY at New York, by the Moses Taylor, from California. It appears that Horace last spring promised to deliver an agricultural address in Wyoming county, N. Y., on the 28th, "if he was alive." To keep this promise he took the cars immediately on his landing—not even taking time to see his family. He delivered his promised address at the appointed hour. This is characteristic of the man.

Shakspeare may now be seen in a variety of shapes at some of the Parisian theaters; but by far the most amusing is a representation of Hamlet at the Imperial. One of the scenes is really laughable. Hamlet appears with an urn, which is supposed to contain the ashes of his father, walks about the stage woefully with it under his arm, and then placing it upon a table falls to blubbering over it like a schoolboy, exclaiming in doleful accents, "Oh, mon pere! mon pauvre pere."

☞ Late advices from Porto Cabello, Venezuela, gives an account of the capture of Laguayra by the Government troops, after twelve hours hard fighting; the capture of Maracay, and subsequent defence of the same by the Government troops against its enemies; the capture of two Dutch vessels with ammunition of war for the revolutionists, and the arrest of the British Consul for implication in the revolution.

The American, English and French Ambassadors in China.

The New York Journal of Commerce publishes a letter written on board the frigate Powhatan, which contains some interesting particulars in relation to the attempt of Mr. WARD, our minister to China, to reach Pekin, and also in regard to the unsuccessful attempt of the English and French Ambassadors to accomplish the same result at the same time. Mr. WARD reached Shanghai on the 28th of May, in a small steamer of light draft, adapted to the navigation of the Peiho. He signified his wish to the Chinese Imperial Commissioners at Shanghai to proceed immediately to Pekin. He suggested embarking on one of the Chinese steamers in the harbor, by which means they might reach Pekin in eight or ten days; but the Commissioners replied that traveling by sea was contrary to the Emperor's express commands. They suggested that it would be proper that the French and English Ambassadors should go first to Pekin as their treaties only contained an express stipulation confirming that privilege, and that, as they were soon expected at Shanghai, Mr. WARD had better wait and go with them.

The result was that an arrangement was made that Mr. WARD should go to Pekin with the first minister of any nation who did. The English and French ministers arrived at Shanghai soon after, and insisted upon proceeding at once to Pekin. The Commissioners set, out by the land route; the English and French Ambassadors proceeded by sea. Mr. WARD followed two or three days after in the frigate Powhatan, having his little chartered steamer in company. He reached the mouth of the Peiho on the 21st of June, and found the English and French fleet of twenty-one vessels lying there.

The Commander of the British fleet, Admiral HOPE, informed Mr. WARD of the obstructions in the river, and of the statement by the Chinese, that they were placed there not to prevent the French and English ministers from going to Pekin, but as a protection against incursions from the rebels. The Chinese had also added that this was not the mouth of the river which was to be found; it was some ten or twelve miles further north, and the Ambassadors must go to Pekin by that route. Mr. WARD told the English Admiral that he had no intention to force an entrance into the river, but as he was instructed to go to Pekin, he should cross the bar and proceed till fired on, or stopped by superior force.

Mr. WARD, accordingly, on the 24th of June, crossed the bar in his little steamer; but when near the forts she ran aground. A party was sent on shore; but everything was perfectly silent about the forts and breastworks. At length a few persons came out and stated that the officers were waiting for the ambassadors at the mouth of the north river. The steamer floated with the tide the next morning, and retired to a position outside of the line of the allied vessels, which were then preparing to attack the Chinese forts. The attack was made the same afternoon. When the English had got the worst of it, Admiral HOPE requested the assistance of the American steamer, in towing up the boats containing the party intending to land and attack the forts. Upon consultation between Mr. WARD and Com. TATNALL, this request was granted. Dispatches received by the Government at Washington, and published in our paper of last evening under the Telegraphic head, attempt some explanation of this movement; but it is not explicit or satisfactory. It amounts in substance to this, that the aid was rendered to the British Admiral by Mr. WARD and officer TATNALL, in consideration of the aid the Admiral had tendered them the day before, probably referring to an offer to tow off the American steamer when she was aground.

It seems that three or four days after the attack on the Chinese forts, it was found out that there was a northern entrance to the Peiho, such as the Chinese had described, with a town on its banks. To a letter addressed to him, the governor of the town sent a friendly reply on board the Powhatan, stating that orders had been received from the Emperor, that the American minister should be received at the northern entrance and conducted to Pekin. It is supposed that upon the strength of this letter Mr. WARD proceeded to the northern entrance; but how he reached Pekin [illegible] does not yet appear to be clearly understood.

ACCIDENT ON THE CENTRAL OHIO.—As the night passenger train on the Central Ohio was running west, near Blackham, it ran into a locomotive and tender, which with the engineer and fireman upon it was standing on the track. The damage to both locomotives and cars was considerable, and one engineer was slightly hurt, but we believe there was no other damage. Why the engineer with only a locomotive did not keep out of the way of the train is not easily understood.

The name of the engineer on the locomotive which was standing still is LAMSON, a [illegible] of family, residing at Zanesville, and who has always been prompt and reliable heretofore. On this occasion he had taken a freight train to Newark, for the Steubenville road, and returning to Columbus with his engine had stopped to wood, and having been in considerable trouble recently, and to some extent exhausted, he fell asleep on the engine, the fireman following suit. The night was intensely dark and Mr. SMITH, the engineer on the passenger express, was unable to discover anything on the track until too late to prevent the collision. In jumping from his engine at the time he sustained the injuries referred to. Both establishments made a lucky escape, and the only regret is that the overcome LAMSON so far forgot himself as to go to sleep on duty, but, as we have said before, the circumstances as related to us are of a nature to modify the neglect to a great extent.

THE LATE SHOOTING AFFRAY AT NEW ORLEANS.—A post mortem examination on the body of Dr. GRAHAM, recently shot by ROBERT TOLEDANO at New Orleans, showing that the deceased had received four wounds, one entering the right breast, near the seventh rib, passing through the spine and liver; the second entering the same side of the breast, but above the other bullet, and passing through the spleen and kidney; a third ball inflicting a flesh wound also in the right breast, passing out about two inches from where it entered; and a fourth ball entered the inner side of the left arm, below the elbow, and lodged there. A fifth bullet went through Dr. GRAHAM's coat behind, and which was, doubtless, the one that was found imbedded in the wall. Either of the balls that entered the body was sufficient to cause death.

THE LATE FAILURE OF PHILLIPS SAMPSON AND CO., THE BOSTON PUBLISHERS.—A meeting of the creditors of PHILLIPS, SAMPSON & Co. was held in Boston on Wednesday, at which the amount of claims allowed was a little over $100,000. A. H. RICE and HARVEY, jewelers were chosen assignees. The creditors present voted unanimously to leave the further publication of the Atlantic Monthly Magazine to the discretion of the assignees.

Habits of a President and a Premier.

A Washington correspondent of the Boston Journal, writing of the habits of President BUCHANAN, says that he is in perfect health, and that he has no marks of being jaded or careworn. He does not sleep in the city. Precisely, at half-past four, he may be seen starting for his rural home. He has a beautiful cottage near the Soldiers' Retreat, four miles from the city. He dines at five o'clock; at six he welcomes, in a quiet way, any gentlemen or ladies who may choose to call on him, and this ride is becoming quite a fashionable one, and any afternoon the President may be seen on the piazza of his beautiful cottage, with his friends, enjoying the air and the scenery as well as the graceful society that surrounds him. Few men have occupied the Executive chair who have understood so well how to lighten official care, and catch the passing comfort, as the burdens of the office are borne—and this accounts for Mr. BUCHANAN's good health.

A gossiping correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, in describing the [illegible] of Lord PALMERSTON, the British Premier, during the vacation, says that at Broadlands though no man tramps the stubbles or beats the cover with keener zest, or carries a surer double-barrel—and that, too, without spectacles, at 74—this is but the morning's amusement. By two or three o'clock, Lord PALMERSTON is in his room, elbow deep in dispatches, and walled about with office boxes. Visitors at the house see nothing of him till the late dinner at eight, and that dispatched—though there may be an adjournment to the drawing-room, and even the billiard room, where the perennial host still handles his cue like a master, and again without spectacles—Lord PALMERSTON is no more visible after ten, but the lights are burning in his private room till twelve or one o'clock or even later. In the intervals of this severe and protracted labor no one can be gayer or sprightlier than Lord PALMERSTON, or readier to take and pass the mot pour rire. Though Lord PALMERSTON declares he has no time to read "anything but manuscripts," he seems au fait of the current literature. Perhaps Lady PALMERSTON eviscerates it for him, and keeps him supplied with the essence for conversation.

STREET RAILROADS.—We are informed that an ordinance has been drawn up and will be presented to the Council on Monday evening next, providing for the establishment of three street railroad routes in this city. On and along High street from the northern to the southern boundary of the city; on and along Broadway from the eastern to the western boundary; and commencing at the northern end of State Avenue, thence southward on that avenue to Broadway, east on Broadway to High, south on High to Town, east on Town to East Public Lane, and south on East Public Lane to Friend street. The ordinance provides that within thirty days after its passage, the company shall file its bond in the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars for the faithful performance of all requirements on the part of the City Council therein prescribed, the same to be in full force and effect for twenty years and no longer. The work on route No. 1 must be commenced within thirty days after the passage of the ordinance, and the cars running thereon within ninety days thereafter; route No. 2 must be commenced within sixty days after the passage of the bill, and the cars running within ninety days thereafter; route No. 3 must be commenced within ninety days after the passage of the bill, and the cars running within four months thereafter.

The city will not be liable for damages occurring under any circumstances, and reserves to itself the right to obstruct the track for the purpose of laying gas pipes, sewers, drains, &c., wherever and whenever it pleases; also to impose a fine of not more than ten dollars upon all persons, whether connected with the road or otherwise, whenever such parties shall be deemed guilty of improper conduct toward passengers, such as charging over the regular fare, &c. The ordinance prohibits Sunday travel, and also the stoppage of trains on the street crossings.

THE ACCIDENT AT ALBION, N. Y.—NAMES OF THE KILLED.—A telegraphic dispatch yesterday brought us the intelligence of a melancholy accident, caused by the breaking down of a bridge by which a large number of persons were severely injured and many killed. The following is a list of the killed so far as known: Adelbert Wilcox, of West Kendall; Mr. Stilson, of South Gaines; Thomas Cady, of Albion; Jane L. Avery, of Albion; Sarah Thomas, of Carlton; Augusta Martin, of Carlton; Mr. Henry, of Carlton; Ransom Murdock, of Carlton; Mrs. Ann Nichols, of Barre; Thomas Handy, of Yates; Sophia Pratt, of Toledo; Perry Cole, of Barre; Sophia Harris, of Albion; Mr. Cornell, of South Barre. There were other bodies recovered, but their names were not ascertained.

THE LATE EXPLOSION ON THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO R. R.—The late explosion at Cameron, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, by which three persons were killed and several wounded, was caused by the carelessness of the engineer, neglecting to keep up a sufficient supply of water. Those who witnessed the accident say they never beheld a more powerful explosion, and that half a dozen kegs of gunpowder could not have been more so. The tender and two or three of the cars were entirely demolished, hardly two planks or boards remaining together, while pieces of the boiler were thrown to the distance of nearly half a mile.

Three of the men injured were on the fourth, fifth and seventh cars from the locomotive, and were hurt either by the collision of the cars or fragments of flying iron.

FRANKLIN COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The receipts at the fair of this Society are reported as follows:

Memberships and entry tickets, 1873, at $1	$1,873 00
Single tickets, 3,163 at 25c	790 75

ADVANCE IN ALMANAC LITERATURE.—We observe that the Astronomical Department of Dr. ROBACK's Scandinavian Almanac for 1860 was prepared by one of the first astronomers of this or any other country—Prof. O. M. MITCHELL, of the Cincinnati Observatory. It also contains numerous items of agricultural information from the pen of S. W. HAMILTON, Esq., President of the Cincinnati Agricultural Society. This would seem to be a decided advance upon the old humdrum style in this indispensable article of Almanacs.

AN "OLD BOY."—One of the takers of the school census in Cincinnati, in his perambulations through the city recently, went into a domicil, where he found a lady, who said she was one hundred and three years old. On being asked whether she had any children about the house, she replied that she had but one boy, who was at work in the other room, and was eighty-one years of age.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Sept. 27.—The steamer Circassian arrived yesterday afternoon from Liverpool, with dates to Saturday, the 17th inst., two dates later than received by the steamer Vanderbilt. She reports experiencing heavy weather. She saw the steamship Asia, which also sailed from Liverpool on the 17th, on Saturday afternoon last to the southward. The steamer Circassian has 300 passengers.

Nothing has transpired at Zurich in relation to the conference.

The sailing of the Great Eastern has been delayed to the 20th of October.

It is reported that the Princess Clothilde, as well as the Empress Eugenie, are enciente.

The King of Sardinia has received the deputations from the National assemblies of Modena and Parma, in relation to the annexation of those Duchies to Sardinia. He expressed his acquiescence and promised to urge the matter before the great powers. Expressing the hope that Europe having recognized the right of nations to form their own constituents, will not deny the same right to Italy.

Military movements are continued throughout Italy, indicating that the Italians are determined to redeem themselves.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 26.—The Fourth Annual Fair of the St. Louis Agricultural and Mechanical Association opened to-day, and although heavy rains fell this morning, the grounds are thronged, about 15,000 people being in attendance.

The first brigade of Missouri militia joined in the opening ceremonies, and were reviewed by Col. Sumner and Staff.

Nearly every State in the Union is represented, either by delegates, stock, or in the mechanical and agricultural departments. The number of entries already exceed 5,000, more than twice as many as any previous Fair, and many more will be made. The exhibition of stock is unprecedentedly large, and superior in quality.

The thousand dollar premium for best roadster, thorough-bred stallion and thorough-bred bull, have drawn here many of the most celebrated animals in the country.

In ring 20, draught stallions, to-day, the first premium was awarded to Charles S. Mack, of Lockport, N. Y.

The first premium for matched horses was taken by Wm. Reed, of Butler county, Ohio.

The city is densely thronged with strangers. Every train and steamboat comes laden with additional crowds. Should the weather prove propitious, the Fair will eclipse any Fair held in the Union.

LEAVENWORTH, Sept. 26.—Hon. F. P. Stanton delivered an address Saturday night, advocating the adoption of the Wyandotte Constitution. The people vote on the instrument October 4th. The indications favor its ratification. Gen. Lane is again on the stump, advocating the question of exempting 160 acres of land for a homestead to actual settlers, to be submitted with the Constitution.

The Republicans have called a convention at Topeka on the 12th of October, to nominate State officers.

MONTREAL, Sept. 26.—The cricket play was resumed by the English Eleven, at half-past eleven this morning. Parr and Caesar being at the wickets. Grundy, Hayward, Wisden, and Coffin went out with four [illegible] for sixty runs. The weather is very favorable, and the match is creating great excitement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The Herald's reporter had an interview yesterday with Capt. Comstock, lately of the Collin's steamer Baltic, who came home a passenger in the Vanderbilt.—Capt. C. commanded the Russian frigate General Admiral on her voyage from New York to Cronstadt. He has taken a great interest in the mammoth steamship Great Eastern from the commencement having visited her every few months while in course of construction, and on the invitation of Capt. Harrison, her commander, and the Board of Directors of the great ship's company, he accompanied her on her present trip, and happened to be on deck at the time of the fatal steam explosion off Hastings on the evening of the 9th inst. Captain Comstock is highly pleased with the steamer, and pronounces her a perfect success so far as navigation is concerned and is even enthusiastic on the subject of her performances. Many have the impression that the late trip was a trial trip for speed, but this is an entire mistake, the trip was made simply for the purpose of removing the ship from her position in the Thames to a seaport, where she can be coaled and put in proper trim for a trial trip. The Great Eastern is to be prepared for her trial trip as soon as the repairs necessitated by the explosion can be completed. Her trial trip will be from Portland to Holyhead, and according to present arrangements she will sail from Holyhead for Portland, America, on the 20th Oct. It has been fully determined by the Board of Directors that from Portland, United States, the Great Eastern shall come on an excursion trip to New York, by the way of Sandy Hook. This is positively settled, and was determined on shortly before the ship left the Thames. Capt. Comstock and Capt Harrison were both questioned on the subject by the Board of Direction and both concurred in the opinion that the ship can enter the Harbor over the Bar at Sandy Hook drawing twenty-four and a half feet of water with perfect safety.

The famous clipper ship Great Republic passed the Bar safely drawing some inches over twenty-five feet. It was then arranged that at Portland, United States. The Great Eastern shall be lightened to the required draft and then proceed on her excursion to this City via Sandy Hook. Captain Comstock is of opinion that the Great Eastern cannot cross the Bar safely except at Spring tide, which occurs once a fortnight and that even then she cannot bring much if any cargo. It would hardly pay to come to this ports. By Hellgate channel he thinks is impracticable not for want of water but because the channel is too crooked for a vessel of her immense length. Under very extraordinary circumstances the Great Eastern might be run between New York and some European port with profit, because she would not necessarily draw too much water to enter the harbor if she carried little or no freight, as a depot might be formed for her on the other side of Hellgate, which, after all, would be as near New York as many ships approach to the heart of London. A large number of the stockholders are directly interested in the Grand Trunk railroad, and of course would prefer to have the ship run to Portland; others on the Directory are India merchants, and desire, if she should prove commercially as well as practically successful, to make her one of a regular line of packets to India.

They talk of building five more steamers of similar monster proportions for the India trade, but, of course, that will depend upon the success of this great experiment. On the whole it is probable that the ship will be run regularly to this port.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—The New York Times' Washington correspondent says the report that President Mora designed returning to Costa Rica, and appealing to the people is without foundation, he remains in New York to await news from home. Instructions will be sent to Mr. Demetry on the 5th October, directing him to recognize at once the new government and open negotiations for the settlement of American claims.

Intimations received in diplomatic circles here would justify the belief that England and France will again be allies in a terrible war, and that China will be made to suffer severely for her late attack upon the English troops. The rumor that Russia had a finger in it is fully credited.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The sale of teas today was very excited and spirited; blacks rose full 10 per cent. in price and greens about 5 per cent. The following prices were obtained: Hyson, 33½@50½c; young hyson, 26@38c.—Gunpowder 33@61½c. Imperial 27@51c.—Twankay 30¼@30½c. Hyson Twankay 36@37c. Souchong 26@38c. Oolong 50@41c.—Hyson Pekin 35@36½c.

MONTREAL, MONDAY EVE., Sept. 26.—The International Cricket Match has been resumed to-day. The game was stopped at twilight. The sun shining in the faces of the Batsmen with four wickets to fall on the side of the Canadians. England's first innings, 43. The Canadians were 117. The Canadians second innings, 43. The Englishmen are to play in the morning to make 13 on their second innings. The "Twenty-Two" are laughed at by their friends, who believe 2 to 1 on the "Twenty-Two" of the St. George's Club. The "English Eleven" play splendidly, and it is a perfect picture to see them. It is believed, however, that they will find their equals in the "Twenty-two" at Hoboken. There were 60,000 persons on the grounds, and the military band played some fine selections. During the day there were many ladies, military officers and heads of Department present at [illegible] to the match.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—The cricketers are just going on the ground to finish the play. An exciting match has been fixed for to-morrow, between the six of All England and the six of the United Canada Clubs by each party selecting five others from among the outside cricketers.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—McAlpine, alias Marmaduke Reever, the woman swindler, was to-day sentenced to the penitentiary for five years.

A letter from China to the Evening Post asserts that the English fleet attempted to ascend the wrong mouth of the river, while the Chinese deputies were waiting for them at the right place. The writer also says that the commercial men of Shanghai all deprecate the hasty and ill advised proceedings of the English.

The steamer Moses Taylor from Aspinwall on the 18th arrived this morning with $2,042,363 in specie. The vessel was grounded in the entrance of the Harbor of Key West during an hour of intense darkness and storm in consequence of the light at the light house at that point being extinguished.

The concluding regatta of the New York Yacht club has come off at last, three schooners of the first class and two sloops, the Mallory and Narragansett, sailing in the race. The prizes fifty dollars each were won by the Kings and the two sloops above named.

The steamer City of Baltimore, from Liverpool on the 14th, arrived this morning. Her advices have been anticipated.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The Herald's correspondent on board the U. S. steamer Powhatan, in a letter dated 3d of July, gives the following account of the relations existing between the Chinese and the present American minister and says last Wednesday, June 30th, the Toeyuan went in search of another entrance to the river Peiho and returned with the report that they had landed with an interpreter at a small town near a stream and just had time to give the minister's letter to a Chinese official, when a troop of mounted cavalry was discovered galloping towards them some thousand strong. All hands very naturally took to Shank's mare as fast as they could carry themselves to the boat, returned and made a report of their failure which created some merriment. It was given up for a certainty that John Chinaman was not going to receive Mr. Ward. Yesterday, however, at 8 A. M., two large junks loaded with produce came within a short distance of us and anchored; a small boat was lowered from one of the junks, having on board a Chinese official bearing an answer to our minister's letter. The answer was in the highest degree favorable. It seems the party who landed from the Toeyuan had been mistaken for the English, and the cavalry which chased them to their boat was part of a guard 4,000 strong which was to have escorted Mr. Ward to Pekin, and had been waiting several days in expectation of his daily arrival. The produce, a present for our minister, consisted of 19 hogs, 18 sheep, 33 sacks of flour, 19 of rice, besides ducks, chickens, geese eggs and vegetables in great quantities. The answer to his letter stated that the Commissioner would send a pilot to bring his ship up the river eight miles. A great deal of correspondence has since passed between the officials, the English squadron lying in close proximity.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—The State Fair grounds were better filled to-day than they were on the first day. The entry book is nearly filled, a large number having been made today.

The champion yacht of the city, the George M. Hill, is on exhibition, and with all her sails set, looks smart and rakish. The cattle stalls are occupied by splendid specimens of all descriptions, and there are some very fine full blood horses in the exhibition. The regular playing of the steam and hand engines for the prizes offered by the Society will commence tomorrow afternoon. About sixteen companies in all will compete. A horn worth $250 will be the first prize. A steam fire engine company from Baltimore have signified their intention to participate.

The delegation of Pittsburg firemen were received this morning by a delegation of the Philadelphia department, and were escorted to Independence Hall accompanied by Beck's band. They were received by Gen. W. F. Small, in the absence of the Mayor, and tendered the hospitalities of the city. The city is crowded with visitors, every train bringing in large additions.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—A correspondent of the Herald says: "I am informed that some additional propositions to those already before our Government, have recently been submitted by Mexico in regard to the settlement of claims, and for protection or the manner of protecting the transit route. Among the proposed stipulations to be considered by Secretary Cass and the Mexican minister is an important one, relating to the settlement of claims of citizens of the United States upon Mexico, which requires that the claims be adjudicated by four commissioners to be appointed by the Presidents of each Government, and an umpire to be selected by the commissioners, or in case of their disagreement by the Secretary of State and the Mexican minister, and amount of such adjudicated claims over the two millions of dollars which the treaty has provided for the payment of them is to be settled by ten annual payments of equal amount with interest at six per cent. until paid. Bonds to be given for the amount, which will be receivable by the Mexican Government for, any export or import dues to that Government. It is proposed also, to obviate the objections of the Mexican Government to our proposition for the protection of the transit routes by the appointment of a Commissioner by each Government to reside at suitable locations, who in case of a disturbance of the peace upon any route are to make the necessary demands of the Mexican authorities for troops, which, if disregarded for a period of ten days, may be made up on the nearest land or naval forces of the United States, who after giving proper notice to the Commissioner, or if he be absent the nearest local authority shall proceed to the scene of disturbance and quell it.

As an evidence of the good feeling entertained by the liberal Government of Mexico toward the citizens of the United States, President Juarez has extended to a citizen of New Jersey valuable mining facilities in the State of Sinaloa, which were to expire on the 1st of October next, for two years longer.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—The number of visitors at the Fair to-day is estimated at thirty thousand. In the ring are thirty-six roadsters and stallions. The famous horse Silver Heels, owned by Gen. Singleton, of Quincy, Ill., took the first premium. A large number of Devon, Ayrshire, Herefords and Alderney cattle are also on exhibition. The prizes are fairly distributed among the various States represented. The art department is full and attracts much attention. It contains several views of the old masters and a number of fine spirited pictures of western scenery. The weather is clear and delightful. Vast crowds of strangers continue to arrive from all parts of the country.

MONTREAL, Sept. 27.—The play was resumed at 10 o'clock to-day. Smith who was in last night was bowled by Parr for 17 runs, which were got by very pretty play; the remainder of the score stood Smith b by Parr, 17 runs; Ellis b by Parr, none; Kerr and Caesar b by Parr, 2 runs; Prior and Coffin b by Parr, 1 run; Tilatine not out. None making the total of Canada's 22 Innings—63 leavings.

The 11 of England have 59 runs to get, to win. They were obtained with the loss of 2 wickets. The score standing Lockyer, B. J. Smith, 10; Hayward and Bonner, B. J. Smith, 17; Coffin, not out, 4; Diver, not out, 1; Byes, 3; Wides 57; total 39.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 29.—The Southern mail brings New Orleans papers of Sunday last. The Picayune understands that Dr. Holland has succeeded in obtaining an extension of time till 1869 for commencing the construction of the Honduras Interoceanic Railroad.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—The dispatches received by the government narrates with minuteness the recent events in China. Flag officer Tatnall says the British officer in charge of the gun boats having visited him and said nothing about aid, but his circumstances was powerful. Indeed during his five [illegible] he was on board the Powhatan, he would look anxiously at his Admiral and at the boats. After he left, continues officer Tatnall, I held a conversation with our Commissioner, Mr. Ward. He agreed with me perfectly, that under the circumstances of our position, with the English, and the aid the Admiral had tendered me the day before, I could do no less than tow the boats to his relief.

I made the offer, which was thankfully and promptly accepted. While the boats were making fast to the [illegible] I urged [illegible], I insisted on Mr. Ward's going on board one of the junks, for reasons, and he [illegible] the Toey Wah, which will be [illegible]. He at first reluctantly yielded and left us, but soon returned in one of the English boats, declaring that as the Toey Wah was his home, and going under fire with her [illegible] and [illegible], he would remain [illegible] and subsequently yielded to his gallant impulse.

Captain Tatnall towed the boats through the [illegible] line, to within shooting distance of the [illegible], where the flag was flying; [illegible] them off he retired to the [illegible] of the line, and anchored for the night. He took up this position as it might enable him to aid the wounded, and should the boats be sunk, to rescue their crews. In other words, to afford aid [illegible] consistent with neutrality. Having been informed by a British officer that the Admiral was dangerously wounded, Captain Tatnall went in a barge to visit him. When within [illegible] of the Cormorant a round of shot struck the boat, killing the coxswain, Wm. Hart, of Brooklyn, New York, and slightly wounding Flag Lieut. Trenchard.

They reached the Cormorant before the boat was entirely sunk. Capt. Tatnall say the Chinese commissioners had previously [illegible] Mr. Ward of their arrangements, and requested him to accompany the British and French ministers to Peiho. To this he consented, thereby to a certain extent assuming the [illegible] the latter. The neutrality of the [illegible] was much doubted at the time.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27.—The Santa Fe Mail of the 13th has arrived at Independence. Otero is re-elected to Congress by [illegible] hundred majority. A serious difficulty is apprehended with the Indians in the vicinity of Allison's Ranch, in consequence of the [illegible] of that trading post.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—The steamship Moses Taylor has arrived with California news of the 5th inst. and over two millions in gold. Her advices have been anticipated by the Tehuantepec steamer at New Orleans.

MADISON, IND., Sept. 27.—The steamer Belle Creole, lying near the [illegible] valley, was burnt at noon to-day. The [illegible] is an entire loss. The hull is not materially injured.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 28.—The principal features of the Fair to-day was the awarding the St. Louis prize, number one, of a thousand dollars for finest thorough-bred bull of any age, which was taken by Duke Airdrie, owned by R. A. Alexander, of Woodford county, Ky. This ring numbered fourteen entries, embracing many of the noblest animals of the country. The regular premium of one hundred dollars for four year old bulls was awarded to King Alfred, owned by J. H. Brown, of Sangamon county, Ill.

Of stallions of all work there were fifty-six entries. The first premium to Henry Clay, Black Hawk, owned by [illegible] county, Mo.

The weather continues delightful. The influx of strangers in the city is immense. The number of visitors at the grounds to-day must have reached forty thousand. The steam fire engine department had their annual parade to-day, and visited the Fair Grounds, they attracted universal admiration by their splendid display. To-morrow the thousand dollar prize for the best roadster stallion will be awarded.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Dates from Arizona to the 8th says the Superintendent has arrived, bringing news of the complete [illegible] of the Tontos Indians by Maj. Armistead. They acknowledge a large number of killed, and surrender a fine tract of land for the use of the Government, and promise never again to molest the whites. Gen. Armistead is on his way East, on twelve months leave.

He reports to Gen. Crafts that the Colorado river is a more suitable stream for navigation than the Red river, Missouri, Upper Mississippi or Minnesota rivers.

The new steamer George made a trip from Fort Yuma to Fort Mohave, on Gen'l. Crossing, two hundred and twenty-five miles, in five days.

The Overland Mail Company's station, sixty miles above Fort Yuma, was robbed of all the horses by the Mexicans. The station keeper was left for dead. A portion of the detachment on the Gila river determined to drive off all the Mexicans on the river in account of this outrage. A collision occurred, in which it is said six Mexicans were killed. There being no law or officers in Arizona, no arrest was made. The Mexican population at the Gila and Colorado mines are much alarmed.

Lieut. Mowry's election for delegate from Arizona was unanimous.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 27. Nothing is yet known of Professor La Mountain or Mr. Haddock who made a balloon ascension from here on the 22nd inst. Much alarm is felt for their safety. Their course when last seen was north-east.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 27—M.—The river continues to recede at this point at the rate of [illegible] inches per 24 hours. All the upper streams are falling. Weather clear and warm.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28.—Three New Orleans mails arrived here this morning, [illegible] of Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday last.

Commissioners with ready money and credit to a considerable extent appointed by the Governor of Louisiana have started for the United States to buy arms and munitions of war for the liberals.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—The Persia sailed at noon to-day for Liverpool with $670,000 in specie.

The steamer Granada arrived this morning with Havana dates to the 23rd inst. The news is unimportant. The city is healthy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—Gambard S. Brown, the designer of the Great Eastern who was prevented by sickness from going on the trial trip, has since died of paralysis.

Orders have been dispatched to India for the troops there to proceeded immediately to China in order to prosecute the war.

The French laws in relation to the Press are not to be modified.

The French Rentes closed firm on Friday at 69@26c on the Paris Bourses.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 28.—Major Chapman, attached to the Quartermaster's Department, has committed suicide. His body was found this morning on the beach outside of Fort McHenry, with his throat cut.

TORONTO, Sept. 27.—Intelligence has been received in this city that Mr. Head, a young gentleman seventeen years of age, only son and heir of Sir Edmund Head, Governor-General of the Canadas, was drowned while bathing in the river San Maurice.

ALBION, N. Y., Sept. 27.—A distressing accident occurred here to-day which resulted in severe loss of life. The Fair of Orleans county being in progress in this vicinity, during the afternoon a large crowd of the visitors gathered on the canal bridge on Main street. The bridge suddenly gave way under their weight and the whole party was thrown into the canal, and many were drowned before assistance could be rendered. The loss of life is estimated at eighteen, though it is supposed that many bodies are still in the water. A large number received considerable injuries.

NEW YORK, Sept. 29.—The Episcopal Diocesian Convention is now in session here. Bishop Onderdonk has withdrawn his petition to the House of Bishops asking for a termination of his sentence. This was done this morning in an informal manner. The withdrawal of the petition is looked upon by the opponents of the restoration as only an expedient to avoid bringing the subject up for debate, and to send the petition and memorial to Richmond without passing them in review here.

TRENTON, MASS., Sept. 29.—The Empire Fire Engine Association of Lynn, Mass., arrived here at noon to-day. They will remain a guest of the fire department of this city until half-past five o'clock to-morrow afternoon, when they will leave for Philadelphia in a special train.

NEW YORK, Sept. 28.—A dispatch has been received in this city from Mr. La Mountain, who ascended in his balloon on Thursday last, at Watertown, N. Y., announcing his safe arrival at Kingston, C. W.

The County Commissioner.

The Ohio State Journal, of Monday, has for its leader, a very commendatory article on Theodore Comstock, while Commissioner, and in a round-about way, attributes to him, a care for the County interests, an economy, a prudence, that paid all the debts and left a balance in the Treasury, while in some three years the county levy was reduced from the 3 to 1 7-10 mills. In an after part of the same article, our adroit diurnal cotemporary confesses that Mr Comstock did not accomplish all by himself, but only leaves the inference that he had aid. If we mistake not he had very considerable assistance, and the Journal does well to instance the untiring devotion of Ed. Lovington to the interests of the County. We have not a word to say against Mr. Comstock, as a man, public or private, although he did say that he would not be a candidate; even after he had been nominated. We thought nothing of this. We remembered that Benedick recanted and replied to the jeers of his companions: "When I said that I would die a bachelor, I did not think I should live till I were married,"—and so we thought Mr. Comstock had a right to change his mind. With that we we find no fault. He is a man of business and of integrity, but he goes on that ticket not that he wants the office, not that he desires to benefit the county with his experience, his abruptness, his attention, but to strengthen the ticket. That may be excuse enough for him with his own conscience, and those who expect to derive the benefit, but it is no excuse for a Democrat to vote for him. There is Sparrow, at least the equal in every thing pertaining to the office—a good man, a sincere man, a man of integrity and honesty, who could not be swerved a hair's breadth from what he considers right—a just man, an industrious man, who will not permit one particle of the county business to go unexamined. Nominated by his party for the long term, he is presented for office. The law makes no distinction in the candidates save in the number of votes received by the several competitors, giving to the highest the long, and to the next, the short, to fill the vacancy. It may be that the "clique" and those in their interest, may oppose Mr. Sparrow, to prevent his election. They hate him as men without principle hate those who have principle. Governed by selfishness, they can perceive no merit in self-abnegation, and regard a man unlike themselves, as one to be disdained if not feared. But Mr. Sparrow [is] clear-headed and cool-headed. He asks nothing that is not right and will submit to nothing that is wrong. In every office he has held, he has discharged its duties with honor and fidelity, and relinquished with clean hands. As a Commissioner, it is conceded, that he has had no equal in the office; (unless the illusory article in the State Journal of Monday was intended to elevate Mr. Comstock above him) and there is a feeling of security in the community, in connecting Mr. Sparrow with the office of County Commissioner, over which Tom Miller might howl ad infinitum, without disturbing the repose of the community.

☞ The speech of Mr. Lincoln in this city, wherein he labored to show that Senator Douglas was more reliable for the South and better friend of slavery than any Southern statesman, is having a great circulation in the press of the slave States. On account of the great service it is doing Judge Douglas in the South, the Nashville (Tenn.) Patriot of the 16th remarks that Senator Douglas ought to do something handsome for old Abe.—Cin. Enq.

We think he has already done enough for "old Abe." He has rendered him famous, by his famous controversy. One who crossed swords with the Douglas in that controversy, could not again sink into obscurity. But "old Abe" has a hard time in sustaining the reputation manufactured for him, on that memorable occasion, when the President's officeholders stood by, like a select squad of claqueurs, ready to plaud to the echo whatever "old Abe" might say.

We do not know that what he does say can have any particular weight in Mr. Douglas's behalf, either North or South. The record of the Illinois statesman is his shield, from the shafts of his enemies, and the blazon to rally the devotion of his friends.

Judge Black's "Observations" on Popular Sovereignty.

Judge Black, to whom common report ascribes the authorship of the paper which appears on the first side of this week's Union has expounded with marked vigor and clearness the imperishable doctrines of the Democratic party touching the issues of which it treats. His position is upon the rock of THE CONSTITUTION, and the storm of fanaticism and mad ambition will beat against it in vain. This able paper is an "end of controversy," and no Democrat, it appears to us, who will carefully and candidly read it, will withhold his hearty assent to all and every part of it.—Ashland Union.

The Ashland Union, like the National Democrat, of Cleveland, is a ready echo of the Washington Constitution, and follows that combination of bombast, puerility, and misrepresentation, in all of its capricious and eccentric meanderings. The Democrat was instituted to support the Administration in every thing and to hate Douglas, which the latter took an early stand against the Illinois Statesman.—We publish in our columns to-day the reply of Judge Douglas, from which it will be seen that "the rock of the Constitution" (newspaper) has been overwhelmed, and "the end of controversy" has been made very apparent. How any one, with half an idea, who has been educated in a Democratic political school—who accepted Mr. Buchanan's interpretation of the Cincinnati Platform, in 1856—who applauded his inaugural—who can distinguish between truth and error, could swallow the whole of Judge Black's inconsistent, prevaricating, unreliable concatenation of political misrepresentations, we cannot readily comprehend. That one who adopted the Constitution's new-fangled interpretation of the Cincinnati platform, that Congress should protect slavery in the Territories, whither the Constitution of the United States carries it, and that the people of a Territory have no power over the subject until they form their Constitution in anticipation of admission as a State, might very naturally swallow the heresies of Judge Black, in his "Observations." It is fortunate for the Democratic party that the number who are ready to follow the index of the Administration wherever it may point, are few in our noble State; and the Press ready to repeat the monstrous doctrines, indicated by its "weather-cock," not a corporal's guard. We regret to find the Ashland Union of the number, or that there is a paper in the State claiming to be Democratic, willing to pin its faith, where nothing but Punica fides is cultivated, and to those who would subvert the principles of the government, and drag in the mire, the institutions of the country, to crush out the popularity of a distinguished, honorable, and patriotic citizen, who, more than any other in our day, has striven to give peace to the Union, and crown the Democratic party with glory.

Mr. Smith and Mr. Parsons.

These gentlemen represented the county of Franklin in the Legislature of 1856-7. They were of different politics—at least claimed to be so, and were so nominated by their respective parties.—There were hard thoughts after the election, that somebody had been thrown off; and it is possible the circumstances may have not been forgotten. Be that as it may, they were there. They are now running on the same ticket for office, although the former does claim to be "independent!" Well, we read in the State Journal of Monday that great credit was due to Mr. Comstock, because the county levy was reduced from 3 mills to 1,7-10 mills while he was Commissioner; but after he left it had to be increased. One of the reasons may be explained. A bill was introduced by Mr. Smith, and engineered through by Mr. Parsons, as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, establishing the Superior Court of Franklin county, when the people of the county never asked for it, and did not need it. They did it too for a purpose, but were foiled in the election of another Judge from the one intended. The Court saddles the county with $1,000 per annum direct tax, and the State with $1,500, beside other incidental expenses. It was not needed—the people had not asked for it. It might satisfy the Bar, because in a multiplicity of Courts there is increased litigation, but it was considered the fifth wheel of a wagon. Judge Bates might be partially relieved, but even he would not have said it was essential. The Democratic Legislature refused to give a Superior Court to Butler, although persistently and eloquently urged by Hon. Robert Christy. They thought it unnecessary, and yet there were as urgent and potent claims that Butler should have such a Court. The people, too, asked for it—but a Democratic Legislature refused it. Now, does it not seem that Mr. Smith and Mr. Parsons may well run upon the same ticket, and without disparagement of one to the other, when they remember how cordially they acted together to saddle the county with $1,000 tax, and the State with $1,500, when the duties might have been otherwise discharged, although we have an excellent Judge, who discharges his duties faithfully, and there are some four hundred cases on his docket.

BABIES.—The State Journal affected to discover a "very small baby" in the PEOPLE'S PRESS of last week, in commenting upon our remarks respecting "a mare's nest" that the aforesaid State Journal had reason to suspect existed in this community, which it held up with all the horribles of "Gorgons and Chimeras dire," and which was to blot out "Millerism" first, and then obliterate the Democratic party, except that portion who might belong to its secret organization. The absurdity of the State Journal's story could only impose upon the most credulous and very weak. Every body here knew that there is nothing of the kind, save in the imaginative conception of the State Journal. If one were to look for babies in that paper, they could see an ebony phiz howling from under almost every paragraph. If we must have the paternity of babies, we prefer they shall be white—it is only the State Journal that delights in "nigger babies."

Views of J. C. Calhoun on Congressional Intervention.

On the 27th of June, 1848, John C. Calhoun advanced the following views in regard to "Congressional Intervention:"

"There is a very striking difference between the position on which the slaveholding and non slaveholding States stand, in reference to the question under consideration (the prohibition of slavery in Oregon.) The former desire, no action of the government; demand no law to give them any advantage in the Territory about to be established; are willing to leave it and other Territories in the United States, open to all their citizens, so long as they continued to be Territories, and when they cease to be, to leave it to their inhabitants to form such governments as may suit them, without restriction or condition, except that imposed by the Constitution as a pre-requisite for admission to the Union. In short, they are willing to leave the whole subject where the Constitution and the great and fundamental principles of self-government place it. On the contrary, the non-slaveholding States, instead of being willing to leave it on this broad and equal foundation, demand the interposition of the government, and the passage of an act to prevent the citizens of the slaveholding States from emigrating with their property into the Territories.

"I hold that justice and the Constitution are the easiest and safest ground on which the question can be settled, regarded in reference to party. It may be settled on that ground simply by non-action, by leaving the Territories free and open to the emigration of all the world. If a party cannot safely take this broad and solid position and successfully maintain it, what other can it take and maintain?"

It will be seen from the above extract that Mr. Calhoun fully endorsed Judge Douglas's views, and were he living to-day, would be foremost in support of the "Little Giant's" immutable principles.

The Opinion of Gen. Dodge—He is With Douglas.

Most extraordinary efforts have been made to misrepresent the opinions and views of Gen. Dodge, the Democratic candidate for Governor, and assisted by the bogus Democrats of the Chicago Herald and the Dubuque North West, we doubt not that many persons to-day have been induced to believe that Gen. Dodge is an adherent of the policy of the present Administration—that he would have supported the Lecompton Constitution, and that he does not endorse the doctrine that the people of the Territories can exclude slavery before they come to form a State Constitution.

Whenever Gen. Dodge has appeared before the people all such misapprehensions and misrepresentations have been settled, for during the canvass he has uniformly declared that had he been in the Senate of the United States when the Lecompton measure came up, he would have voted with Douglas and Stewart and Broderick. And he declares also that he would never vote for the admission of a State the Constitution of which had not been approved by a direct vote of the people.

In his speech at Dubuque, Gen. Dodge declared himself emphatically a Squatter Sovereignty man, and eulogized the Kansas-Nebraska bill and its author, Stephen A. Douglas.

We do not refer to these matters for the purpose of provoking a controversy with those who agree with the Administration, but for the purpose of putting him right before the people to whom he has been grossly misrepresented by Republicans and by a few Administration men. Nor should we refer to it at all but for the fact that the assertions of the Dubuque Post Master have been caught up and published by the Republican press.

To-morrow we shall publish a synopsis of Gen. Dodge's speech in this city, to which we call the attention of all honest and fair men.—Dubuque Herald.

☞ The Commercial very coolly proposes to the Republicans to adopt the Democratic platform of Popular Sovereignty, as expounded by Senator Douglas. It advises them to abandon their old Abolition doctrine of Congressional Sovereignty, and go in for the people of the Territories doing as they please on slavery.—We have no objection to the Republicans coming upon our platform, which they have so long condemned, and in fact would be glad to see it. It would be another tribute paid to the truth and excellence of the Democratic creed, which our opponents in the end are always fain to acknowledge. The Opposition, if they come over to the Democratic platform, must not expect, however, to crowd the Democrats off it.—Cin. Enq.

When the storm of Lecomptonism raged wildest and most furiously, the Commercial confessed that Mr. Douglas was the pilot, on whose firmness and skill the country relied in the exigency. It was boldly proclaimed then that he was the man of and for the times. His principles, maintained then with his accustomed ability and undaunted courage, are those which he maintains now, and which are echoed by the great popular heart. The Commercial is the ablest Republican paper in the west. It sees with prophetic ken that the popular idea must prevail, and that the power of Congress over the domestic institutions of the Territories will be scouted by the people as a relic of barbarism and tyranny. There are thousands of Republicans ready to go for Douglas, and stand with him upon the true Democratic platform, "that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, have the right to manage their domestic affairs in their own way."

A LECTURE PREPARED.—The Boston Journal, of a recent date, has the following notice of the preparation of our old friend "A. D." for the lecture season.—We don't like his politics, but have no doubt we should like his lectures. The Journal says:

"Mr. A. D. Richardson, our well known Western correspondent, will be prepared during the approaching season to deliver a popular lecture entitled "Out West," and probably another under the caption of "Pike's Peak." Mr. Richardson is a graphic and spirited writer, and a close observer; and his letters from Kansas and the far West, for the last two years, have won many encomiums, and been widely copied by the press of the country. He is now on a tour among the Choctaw Indians; through Northern Texas to El Paso; thence through New Mexico to Pike's Peak, designing to reach New England on his return, during the month of November. He is thoroughly conversant with the West, having traveled very extensively through it; and we doubt not that his lectures will combine much valuable practical information, with a rich fund of entertaining observations and amusing experiences. Letters proposing engagements for Mr. R. may be addressed to him at this office."

Speech of Senator Douglas at Wooster.

The following is the reply of Senator Douglas to the "Black Pamphlet," which appeared some time since, as a criticism on the unanswerable document of the "Little Giant," and which was written by Judge Black, and echoed by the Administration organs:

SPEECH.

It may not be inappropriate at this time to refer to a pamphlet which a friend handed to me in the cars this morning, and which I have had scarcely time to read through. It is entitled "Observations on Senator Douglas' Views of Popular Sovereignty, as Expressed in Harper's Magazine for September, 1859." As the pamphlet is anonymous, I have no authentic means of knowing its author, although I am informed that it is announced in the New York Herald and other papers as the production of Jerry Black—the same Jerry Black who wrote letters to Illinois last year to induce the federal officeholders to vote for "Abolitionists" in preference to the regular Democratic nominee for Congress. I am informed, also, by gentlemen who gave me the pamphlet, that he received it under the frank of Jerry Black and that large numbers are now being spread broad-cast over the country.

If this anonymous publication was designed and calculated only to effect me individually, I should not deem it worthy of notice; but as its object is obviously to injure and defeat the Democratic party in the Northwestern States, where elections are now pending, and the canvass is conducted on the platform of popular sovereignty, I deem it my duty to vindicate the Democratic party against the consequences of these malignant falsehoods.—The position which I occupy, in common with ninety-nine out of every hundred of the Northwestern Democrats, is so grossly and wickedly perverted and falsified in this pamphlet, as to preclude the possibility of its being the result of unintentional or innocent error. I will read the last paragraph first:

"We are called upon to make a contest, at once unnecessary and hopeless, with the judiciary of the nation. We object to it. We will not obey Mr. Douglas, when he commands us to assault the Supreme Court of the United States. We believe the Court to be right, and Mr. Douglas wrong."

And again on page six, referring to me, the writer says:

"In case he is elected President, he must see the laws faithfully executed. Does he think he can keep that oath by fighting the judiciary?"

In these and other passages it was evidently the deliberate purpose of the writer to convey the idea that I had assailed the judiciary in my article in Harper, and that I was actually engaged in a crusade against the Supreme Court because of their decision in the Dred Scott case. Now, whoever will take the trouble to read my article in Harper, to which this Black pamphlet purports to be a reply, will find that, instead of assailing the court, I refer to them and their decisions in terms of respect and commendation. As I rode through the streets of your beautiful town on my way to this stand, I saw the newsboys distributing several thousand copies of my article in Harper. I call on every man who hears me to read it, and mark particularly what I have said of the Supreme Court and the decision of the Dred Scott case. You will find that I fully endorse the decision, and quote freely from it to sustain my position in regard to the doctrine of popular sovereignty. The author of this Black pamphlet, whoever he may be, while professing to review my article in Harper, represents me as "fighting the judiciary," as making a "contest with judicial authority of the nation," and "assaulting the Supreme Court of the United States," with the full knowledge that I had not uttered one word of disapprobation, either of the court or of their decision. I defy the whole gang of anonymous conspirators, who are endeavoring to divide and defeat the Democratic party by assailing the doctrine of popular sovereignty, to show one word I have ever written or spoken against the Supreme Court or the Dred Scott decision. It is well known to the country that I have made more speeches in defence of the Supreme Court in connection with the Dred Scott decision than any other living man. During the Illinois canvass, last year, I made one hundred and thirty speeches in defence of the court and their decision against the assaults of the Abolition leaders, when they were supported and encouraged by those who are supposed to have concocted this Black pamphlet; yet, in the face of these well known facts, which no honest man will deny, this monstrous and wicked charge is made by a band of anonymous slanderers, and circulated under the official frank of the Attorney General of the United States!

I will not attempt to notice and expose all the falsehoods and misrepresentations in this Black pamphlet. It would not be just to the many thousands of people now present to occupy their time, which can be more profitably employed. I will, however, give one or two more instances as a specimen of the whole document.—On page 10, the writer, referring to me, says:

"He claims for the territorial government the right of confiscating private property on the ground that those governments are sovereign—have an uncontrollable and independent power over all their internal affairs."

This short sentence contains two palpable falsehoods:

1st. I never did claim for the territorial governments the right of confiscating private property.

2d. I never claim that territorial governments were sovereign, or that the Territories were sovereign powers.

The writer of the Black pamphlet convicts himself of having made this last charge with a full knowledge that it was untrue, for on his fifteenth page he quotes from my published reports, speeches, and letters in 1856, 1857, and 1858, in which I state that "a Territory is not a sovereign power!"

I will read the extract from my report in 1856, as copied into this Black pamphlet:

"The sovereignty of a Territory remains in abeyance, suspended in the United States, in trust for the people until they shall be admitted into the Union as a State. In the mean time, they are entitled to enjoy and exercise all the rights and privileges of self-government, in subordination to the Constitution of the United States, and in obedience to the organic law passed by Congress in pursuance of that instrument. These rights and privileges are all derived from the Constitution, through the act of Congress, and must be exercised and enjoyed in subjection to all the limitations and restrictions which that Constitution imposes."

Thus it will be seen that in 1856, 1857 and 1858, as well as now, I claimed that the people of the Territories are "entitled to enjoy and exercise all rights and privileges of self-government," under the Constitution, although the Territories are not sovereign powers. The Territories are not sovereign, any more than the American colonies were sovereign before the Revolution; and yet the people of the Territories are entitled to enjoy and exercise all the rights and privileges of self-government, subject only to the Constitution in the same manner, and to the same extent, as our fathers claimed the same rights and privileges for the colonies. It must be borne in mind that the Battles of the Revolution were fought in defence of the rights of dependent colonies, provinces, and territories, and not of sovereign States. We now claim for the American Territories only the same rights of self-government which our fathers claimed for the British colonies in America. Hence I re-affirm to-day all that I have ever said in reports and speeches referred to in the Black pamphlet, denying that the Territories are sovereign, and at the same time claiming for them all the rights and privileges of self-government in their internal polity.

I repeat, that the author of the Black pamphlet must have known that he was misrepresenting my position in regard to the sovereignty of the Territories, for the reason, that in another portion of the same pamphlet he quotes from two reports, two speeches, and one letter of mine, to prove that in 1856, 1857, and 1858 I held the opposite doctrine, without producing a particle of evidence that I had ever held or expressed any other opinion.

Not content with representing me as advocating the confiscation of private property in the Territories, the writer of the Black pamphlet imputes the same dangerous heresy to "the President, the Judges of the Supreme Court and nearly all the Democratic members of Congress," in respect to the confiscating of private property in all the States of the Union. The writer says:

"On the other hand, the President, the Judges of the Supreme Court, nearly all the Democratic members of Congress, the whole of the party South, and a very large majority North, are penetrated with a conviction that no such power is vested in a Territorial Legislature, and that those who desire to confiscate private property of any kind must wait until they get a constitutional convention or the machinery of a State government in their hands."

Aside from the false inuendo that I am in favor of confiscating private property by a Territorial Legislature this paragraph makes a charge as flagitious as it is false—that "the whole of the party South, and a very large majority North," including the President, the Judges of the Supreme Court, and nearly all the Democratic members of Congress, are in favor of the doctrine that the moment a Territory becomes a State, it may confiscate all the private property within its limits!

I deny this whole doctrine of confiscation. I brand it as a dangerous and wicked heresy. I deny that there is any rightful authority anywhere within the limits of the United States—Federal, State, or Territorial—which can confiscate private property of any law-abiding citizen. Private property may be taken for public uses, in pursuance of law, upon the payment of a just compensation, but not otherwise.—The Supreme Court has decided in the Dred Scott case that the Constitution "places the citizens of a Territory, so far as these rights are concerned, on the same footing with the citizens of the States." In that case, the Court, after referring to those clauses of the Constitution which guarantee the freedom of religion, the freedom of speech and of the press—the right of petition—the right to bear arms—and prohibit the taking of private property for public uses without just compensation—proceeds to say:

"The powers over person and property of which we speak are not only not granted to Congress, but are in express terms denied, and they are forbidden to exercise them. And this prohibition is not confined to the States, but the words are general, and extend to the whole Territory over which the Constitution gives it power to legislate, including those portions of it remaining under Territorial government as well as that covered by States. It is a total absence of power everywhere within the dominion of the United States; and places the citizens of a Territory, so far as these rights are concerned, on the same footing with citizens of the States, and guards them as firmly and plainly against inroads, which the general government might attempt, under the plea of implied or incidental powers. And if Congress itself cannot do this—if it is beyond the powers conferred on the federal government—it will be admitted, we presume, that it could not authorize a Territorial government to exercise them. It could confer no power on a local government, established by its authority, to violate the provisions of the Constitution."

I read this portion of the Dred Scott opinion from the pamphlet copy which was published under the authority of the Senate of the United States. I copied this same passage into my article in Harper for the purpose of showing that, so far as these rights of person and property were involved, the Constitution, under the authorative exposition of the Court, places the citizens of a Territory, so far as these rights are concerned, on the same footing with the citizens of the States; and, consequently, if the Territories could not be permitted to determine the slavery question for themselves, the States were forbidden to exercise the power.

In the face of this decision of the Supreme Court, and my emphatic endorsement of it in more than one hundred public speeches, as well as in my article in Harper's Magazine, the author of the Black pamphlet has the hardihood to charge me with advocating the doctrine that a Territorial Legislature may confiscate private property, at the same time that he attributes to the whole Democratic party South, and a large majority North, the monstrous and flagatious heresy that the people of a Territory, when "they get a constitutional convention, or the machinery of a State government into their hands," may, at their discretion, confiscate all private property within their Territorial limits.

Such a doctrine is subversive of the fundamental principles upon which all civil governments rest. I deny that it would be competent for any power within the dominion of the United States—whether Federal, State, or Territorial—to confiscate the private property of a loyal citizen, or to convert it to public uses, without just compensation, even if there were no constitutional provision upon the subject.

On behalf of the Democratic party, South, as well as North, I repel the imputation as a wanton calumny, that the people of a Territory when they "get a constitutional convention or the machinery of a State government into their hands," or at any other time, can confiscate the private property of a law-abiding citizen.—No State or Territory has ever yet attempted or claimed the right to exercise any such power, and I hope none will ever regard the Black pamphlet sufficient authority to justify legislative robbery by State or Territory.

The author of the Black pamphlet charges me with misrepresenting the position of those Democrats who are opposed to the doctrine of popular sovereignty, when I spoke of them as believing, or professing to believe that the Constitution establishes slavery in the Territories beyond the power of Congress or of the Territorial Legislature to control it," &c.

Upon this point the writer says:

"The Constitution certainly does not establish slavery in the Territories, or any where else.—Nobody in this country ever thought or said so."

Now, I submit to this intelligent audience whether it be true in point of fact that nobody said or thought the Constitution establishes slavery any where? Did not President Buchanan in his Silliman letter in 1857, say in substance that he thought so, and was greatly surprised that any body should have ever doubted it. Did he not, in substance, affirm the same proposition in his special message communicating the Lecompton Constitution to Congress, on the 2d of February, 1858? Has not the Washington Union affirmed the same proposition over and over again in every variety of form for the last two years, and denounced me and every other friend of popular sovereignty for denying it? I have not the Silliman letter nor a file of the Washington Union with me; but fortunately, I have the precise language of Mr. Buchanan in his Lecompton message. In that message he said:

"It has been solemnly adjudged by the highest judicial tribunal, known to our laws, that slavery exists in Kansas by virtue of the Constitution of the United States. Kansas is, therefore, at this moment, as much a slave State as Georgia or South Carolina."

The writer of the Black pamphlet attempts to shield the President from the responsibility of this declaration, by charging me with misrepresentation in saying that Mr. Buchanan had asserted "that slavery existed in Kansas by virtue of the Constitution of the United States," when he had only said that the Supreme Court had so decided!

Well, suppose we grant him the benefit of this miserable quibble! Does it not show that somebody in this country had thought and said that the Constitution had established slavery in Kansas? The President certainly said that the Supreme Court had so decided in the Dred Scott case; and on the supposed authority of that decision, declared that "Kansas is, therefore, at this moment, as much a slave State as Georgia or South Carolina."—Did not the President approve and endorse the Dred Scott decision as he understood it and explained it in his message? Did he not believe that the Constitution established slavery in Kansas? If not, how was it established there? By what authority was it established? And how did Kansas, therefore, become as much a slave State as Georgia or South Carolina? The President answered, "by virtue of the Constitution of the United States," and appealed to the Supreme Court for his authority, and then endorsed the authority and approved the decision. Of course the President was mistaken in supposing that the court had made any such silly decision, in violation of the plain meaning and express terms of the Constitution. It is now admitted by the author of the Black pamphlet that—

"The Constitution certainly does not establish slavery in the Territories, nor any where else."

I hope it will turn out that the author of the Black pamphlet was fully authorised to speak for all the persons included in the royal word "we," as it appears in the following sentence, on the concluding page:

"Yes, the Lecompton issue which Mr. Douglas made upon the Administration two years ago is done, and the principles on which we were then opposed are abandoned."

If the writer was really authorized to embrace the whole "Administration" within the word "we," when he declared that the "Constitution certainly does not establish slavery in the Territories or any where else," I could forgive him for many of the misrepresentations and false positions which he has so wantonly assigned to me. Since it is now so openly admitted that slavery does not exist in Kansas, nor any where else, "by virtue of the Constitution of the United States," and that Kansas is not, therefore, at this moment, as much a slave State as Georgia or South Carolina, it will only be necessary for those who are represented by the word "we," in the Black pamphlet, to take one step more to restore themselves to their former position in the Democratic party! That step is to accept and carry out, in good faith, the doctrine so clearly set forth by Mr. Buchanan in his letter accepting the Cincinnati nomination in 1856, in which he said: "that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."

That they were at one time solemnly and irrevocable pledged to this doctrine is as certain as that they did every thing in their power to elect Abolitionists to Congress in Illinois last year over the regular Democratic nominees!

I do not regard the assaults and malignity displayed in the Black pamphlet as directed against me alone. They are directed at all the friends of popular sovereignty and non-intervention wherever they may be found. The Illinois game of last year is to be played this year in all the Northwestern States where elections are now pending. It is well known that every Democratic candidate in Ohio, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Minnesota, where elections are about to be held, is openly committed and publicly pledged to the doctrine of popular sovereignty and non-intervention as it was explained and understood in the Presidential election of 1856.

In fact, there can scarcely be said to be any diversity of opinion upon this subject. Upon this point the Northwest may be said to be a unit, for at least ninety-nine out of every hundred Democrats are firmly resolved never to abandon the doctrine of the Cincinnati platform and Mr. Buchanan's letter of acceptance, "that the people of a Territory, like those of a State, shall decide for themselves whether slavery shall or shall not exist within their limits."—Judge Ranney, your own distinguished candidate for Governor of Ohio, who sits by my side, stands as firmly on that platform as I do, and consequently cannot fail to consider the assaults of this Black pamphlet as aimed at him, and intended to defeat his election! The gallant Dodge, who is fighting so glorious a battle, on the same platform, for the Governorship of Iowa, against the Abolitionists, will find this Black pamphlet ammunition in the hands of the enemy to be used against him and the Democratic party.

The indomitable Herbert who leads the Democratic hosts as the nominee for Governor of Wisconsin on the popular sovereignty platform, must regard this Black pamplet as calculated to help the enemy in their fight upon him and the Democratic party. So it is with Becker, Shields, and Cavanaugh, who are fighting a battle against the Abolitionists of Minnesota.—They stand fairly upon the Cincinnati platform, as explained by Mr. Buchanan in 1856, and boldly proclaim the doctrine of popular sovereignty and non-intervention wherever they go. These gallant leaders and faithful Democrats are all entitled to the sympathy and aid of every true Democrat in the land.

I regret that I am not able to comply with the urgent appeals which I have received from the State Central Committees of each of those States to come and help them. The Abolitionists in all the old States are sending their ablest men and best speakers to fight the Democratic party in the Northwest with the deadly ammunition furnished in this Black pamphlet.

My friends, you will pardon this digression from the thread of my argument, to which we will now return, without further notice of the misrepresentations contained in the Black pamphlet.

A correspondent of The Hamilton (Canada) Spectator tells the following anecdote about Wisden, one of the All England Eleven:

"At the St. Lawrence Hotel, at supper, some corn was served along with other dishes, and being offered to Wisden, he took some. But, how to eat it? Wisden looked round the table but there was none partaking of corn, so he was left to his own inventive resources. After some meditation, and a cautious survey of the table to see if any were observing him, he took it up boldly and stuck it between his teeth endwise. Imagine his disappointment at finding a cob in the middle of the luscious morsel."

Senator Toombs on the Territorial Question—Congressional Intervention, &c.

Senator Toombs, on the 23 instant, addressed the people of Georgia, at Augusta, on the political questions of the day, and we find the following synopsis of it in the Augusta Dispatch:

The question of slavery, Senator Toombs contended, had "been settled," and nothing now could be made of it. That at the time of the confederation all parties looked to a division into slave and non-slaveholding States; then it did not enter into national politics, and was not considered a question for federal legislation; but after the Constitution was formed, it became necessary to legislate. It was determined to be the duty of non-slaveholding States, to give up fugitives. That was settled.—They determined upon the per capita principle of representation. That was settled. As to the question of the African slave-trade, all the States except Georgia and South Carolina were opposed to it; they agreed upon the existing laws, and the trade was prohibited in every State.—That was settled. The American Congress had full and ample power to control it.

The Constitution was silent as to what should be the condition of new acquisition of territory, and out of this silence all the trouble had grown. The North west territory had been ceded by Virginia, with a section prohibiting slavery North of the Ohio. Tennessee, Alabama, and Mississippi did not contain the prohibitory section placed over the North-west. Louisiana and Florida, it was then seen, would fall into our hands just as naturally as it is now seen that Cuba and the islands of the Caribbean will. The principle that the South is entitled to an equal participation in territory acquired by the common blood and treasure will triumph if we maintain it. It was opposed by the King and the New England politicians. In the admission of Missouri a false and degrading discrimination against this right was assented to by a large Southern majority in Congress. Then came the acquisition of Texas by treaty with her and an independent government.

The territory acquired from Mexico next came up for adjustment, and the unanimous vote of the South was cast to extend the Mississippi line to the Pacific.—But in all those acquisitions the principle was not settled as to the power of the Territories over the subject of slavery, while in a Territorial condition. In 1846 there were but four men in Congress, Democratic or Whig, who did not hold to Congressional prohibition. This ground was abandoned in the settlement of the territory acquired from Mexico, and California settled the question for herself. Utah had been settled by the Mormons, who had adopted in the language of a distinguished Free-soiler—"the twin abominations of polygamy and slavery," and New Mexico had adopted a slave-code, protecting slave property, and it was as safe there as in Georgia.

In 1854 we overcame the prohibition existing against slavery in Nebraska and Kansas by coertion, and the Democratic party, with some exceptions, stood up to the repeal of the Missouri prohibition, and for this Northern Democrats had been denounced as slavery propagandists, and some of the Northern Democratic Senators had been stricken down for their manly fidelity to a great principle, in standing by the South on that question. The Democratic party of the North, is known at the North to be the ally of the South, and every man twenty-one years of age at the South knows it. A way-faring man, though a fool, can understand it. Nearly as many Whigs as Democrats, in 1850, voted for the principle of non-intervention in the Compromise measures; but in 1854 few save Northern Democrats stood by us, and they fell in the cause; and to-day we are told that the Democratic party is demoralised. In the State of Ohio, with nearly 450,000 voters, there was a majority of only 30,000 against the principle, and 200,000 Ohio Democrats are to-night battling in the same cause with you.

Whenever we come to a close place in this question, all the Opposition men in the South have to run into the lines of the Democratic party. Yet the Democrats are denounced, and at the South we find two-penny politicians going through the State crying "squatter sovereignty." They may abuse it from the stump, but as members of the Georgia Legislature they voted for the resolution declaring that hostility to the principle of the Kansas bill on the subject of slavery was hostility to the rights of the South; and in their party platform a few months later, they avowed that hostility to it rendered a man unfit to be a Know-Nothing—a curse too severe to be pronounced against a dog! But when Fillmore pronounced the Kansas bill to be a Pandora's box, they changed their tactics, and repudiated all their endorsements of it.

In the formation of a constitution in Kansas—though there is no doubt that a large majority did not want slavery—a clause was adopted sanctioning it. In the Senate, pending the vote to admit Kansas under the constitution, three Democrats—Douglas, Stewart, and Broderick—opposed it. In the House it was voted for by every Southern man but six Americans. Twenty Democrats also voted against it, and thirty-one voted for it. Had four of these six Southern Americans voted for the bill, it would have passed. And yet we are invited to look to the Opposition for a defence of the South. As well send to the priest to get extreme unction, as to send to that party for anything good. He explained and defended the English bill—it was identical with the Lecompton bill, except in its land clause. He repudiated with indignation the supposition that any Southern member of Congress would be bought. We are told by the Opposition, and by some of the Democrats that the Kansas bill contained squatter sovereignty. He regretted that his colleague, in the United States Senate, was of that number. Douglas stood just where he was in 1848, 1850, and 1854. He (Toombs) had differed with Cass in his views of squatter sovereignty.

The principle of non-intervention had all departments of the government in its favor; as for the future he was willing to leave the question where it is, under the protection of the Constitution and the Courts. If slavery is assailed, he would leave its protection to the Judiciary and Executive, and if we want legislative interference we can always have it.

This new demand for intervention was a divide to break down the Democratic party. While we have Executive, Judiciary, and Congress, we are safe. He would not pass a single law upon the subject; he would drive no man from the Democratic party who had fought free-soilers for 15 years. Douglas was not his choice for the Presidency—but he would support him sooner than any Opposition man in the United States. Douglas had been in error—but he is a bold, truthful, independent patriot.

— The Trumbull County Democrat says there has not been such a yield of potatoes in that region for many years. Not only are the potatoes large and numerous in the hills, but are much superior in quality to former years.

Naturalization and Suffrage—No. VI.

Many object to foreigners—aliens, Anglo-Saxons—enjoying the rights of an American citizen, until they shall have served an apprenticeship, learned the principles of our government. What nonsense! All men are entitled to freedom; the right is inherent. Scarcely any but Anglo-Saxons arrive in this country for the purpose of making it a permanent home, and they are the men of civilization and improvement, and understand the simple principles of a free government as well in Europe as America. To say otherwise in an age like this, of pre-eminent intelligence, with the school-master all abroad, with the universal diffusion of the press and the post, and on a question like this, of the first magnitude and least complexity, and whilst the people of all countries are continually traveling amongst each other, and engaged in discussing with one another in stages and steamboats, in cars and hotels, would be paying but a poor compliment to the understanding of men of your own race. But suppose they are foreigners, are they not entitled to their rights? What was the founder of Virginia, when a poor Indian girl threw herself between him and the war-club, and saved his life at the risk of her own? What were the Pilgrim Fathers, when the friendly savage met them with his little vocabulary of kindness, learned amongst the fishermen on the Grand Bank:—"Welcome, Englishmen." They are foreigners. Who were La Fayette, Montgomery, Kosciusko, Pulaski, De Kalb, Steuben? They were foreigners, and knew something about liberty, although born in foreign countries. We ought to learn a lesson of wisdom from the ancient heathen, whose words are, "Homo sum, humani nil a me alienum puto;" which, when repeated, the plaudits were reiterated, and the audience, though composed of foreigners, conquered nations, aliens and citizens of Rome were unanimous in applauding the poet who spoke, with such elegance and simplicity, the language of nature, and supported the native independence of man: "I am a man—nothing that is human is foreign to me."

But the Republican party wish to elevate the negro; yes, he may vote. All the pauper slaves occupants of the almshouses of Ohio,—perhaps four or five thousand,—may vote; but the foreigner, the alien, the Anglo-Saxon, must serve out his apprenticeship, five, seven or more years, learning "self-evident truths," before he can vote. The Constitution of the United States embraces three distinct and separate provisions in reference to slavery: First—In establishing a basis of representation, it includes in its enumeration of individuals that shall constitute that basis three-fifths of the slave population; Second—That Congress shall not interfere with or abolish the slave trade until the year 1808; And Last—In the second section and fourth article it declares that "no person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service or labor, but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due." We do not intend to comment on the whole of these provisions at this time, but believe that the people cannot be made too familiar with them, and have therefore called attention to them. Our Republican friends particularly object to the iniquity of the first and last provisions. The objection to the first is, that it gives to the South a vote equal to three-fifths of the blacks. But, on the other hand, in consequence of the existence of slavery in the South, the North has a monopoly of foreign emigration; so that the North has the vote and the power of near five millions of emigrants, against the political power which slavery now confers, and that is equivalent to a white population only of about two millions. The North has the advantage, too, of the free black population, which is enumerated and forms a part of the basis of representation in the free States. Our Republican friends are in favor of abolishing slavery. The basis on which this policy rests is the assumption that slavery is sinful and unprofitable. The means relied on to arrest its future progress is not the persuasion of the slaveholding States, but the numerical power of the free States, acting through the Federal Government. Suppose, now, the South had a majority of votes, and were to announce its determination to arrest the free progress of and manufactures, in consequence of their poverty, pauperism, crime and mortality, what would be the sentiment everywhere felt in the North? Why, one of indignation, scorn and rebellion. Such does the South feel now.—The North and the South have grown up together; together they have flourished; together they must falter and fall; together the institutions of North and South have marched harmoniously to that eminence and success which won the prosperity of both at home, and extorted the admiration of the world abroad. If either should fall by the hand of the other, the crime would not only be patricide, but it would be suicide; and over the mouldering ruins of both would deserve to be written the epitaph: "Here were a people who disputed about the capacity of the African for liberty and civilization, and did not themselves possess the capacity to preserve their own."

HAMILTON COUNTY.

VALUE OF LAND IN HAMILTON COUNTY.—The Cincinnati Commercial gave a table of the quantity and value of land in the several townships of Hamilton county, exclusive of the City. The whole number of acres is 244,380, and the total value with improvements is $19,207,227; without improvements, $17,173,845; the average value per acre without improvements, is $61 66; and with improvements $78 02.

FAIR [illegible].—We were reminded the other day that there was considerable dissatisfaction expressed in the awards at our county Fair, and there was some talk of partiality. We know that Emrich's colt was thought by a number to have been crowded out unnecessarily, and the gray filly of Mr. Saw Reed was considered by many to have been entitled to a premium, both for speed and action.—But the Judges threw her out because she had been switched, but gave a premium afterwards to a horse that was hip-shotten! There cannot be too much care and caution manifested in these awards. Let the public mind once perceive that partiality governs, and there will be an end of Fairs.

PETER CORNELIUS & BRO.—In his line there is not a more [illegible] business man than Peter. He furnishes the market with the most acceptable [illegible]. He makes the best "[illegible]" in the world, is a green grocer who may be relied on for the finest vegetables, and as a dealer in groceries is fair, just, and responsible.—He is at the same old place, near the corner of High and Friend streets, where his pleasant countenance may be seen every day.

NEW SHAVING AND HAIR-DRESSING SALOON.—Our old friend GAY, the courteous and gentlemanly VICTOR GAY, has opened a fashionable shaving and hair-dressing saloon on the corner of High and State streets, just opposite the Gazette office, and immediately under the Clinton Bank. He handles the razor like a magician; and those who have had a trial of his skill in the barber-ous line, need not be told to call again. Success, friend GAY—long may you—shave.

☞ The Lexington (Ky.) Association Races were to commence on Monday, and continue through the week. The meetings of the association are different from the most of racing. They are conducted for the benefit of stock, the association being composed of stock-raisers, and while the rules of racing are observed, the principal incitement is the test of fleetness, endurance and training. Under such auspices, it is a flourishing and lively "institution."

☞ WM. KENT, the popular auctioneer, has returned to this city, and permanently located himself in Columbus. His place of business is under the Old Exchange Bank, formerly occupied by Mr. Cushman. He is truly superb as an auctioneer, and never fails to give entire satisfaction.

☞ The Richmond (Va.) Whig, a bitter enemy of Douglas, in a late issue, says that Douglas stock for the Presidency is rapidly rising in Virginia. It declares that it has convicting evidence of the fact. There is no doubt that the Whig is correct in its statement. The feeling is becoming universal in the South that if they would certainly defeat the Republicans in 1860 they must do it under the lead of the Illinois Senator.—Cin. Enq.

That must be the universal sentiment both North and South. For it must be apparent to all who would not close their eyes and ears, that no man in the nation has such hold upon the affections of the people as Mr. Douglas, and there is no man whom they would so delight to honor by placing him in the Presidency.

AN OBJECTION NOT SUSTAINED.—Some of the Opposition papers think they have discovered a "mare's nest," and convicted Senator Douglas of inconsistency, and also of misstating the facts of history, because he and the rest of the Democratic Senators voted down an amendment of Senator Chase to the Nebraska Bill in 1854, which, in express terms, gave the people of the territories the right to exclude slavery, if they choose, by the action of their Territorial Legislatures. These papers affect to imagine that this refutes the idea that the Democrats intend that the people of the Territories should have that right under the Nebraska Bill. What nonsense! The Democrats voted down Chase's amendment because there was a section already in the bill which gave them that liberty. It was a superfluity. The only reason in the world why the Democrats repealed the Missouri Restriction was because it did not allow the people of the Territories to have their own way in regard to slavery. But for that it would have stood on the statute-book to this day. —Cin. Enq.

UNION FIRE COMPANY, No. 2.
COLUMBUS, Sept. 29, '59.

At a meeting of this Company held at their Engine House this evening, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Company are due to the officers and managers of the Central Ohio Railroad Company in general, and to Wm. Fell, Esq., also, Mr. John Brown, Esq., in particular, for their very liberal accommodations to this Company and to the Firemen of the State, on the occasion of the late State Parade.

Resolved, That in the Officers and Members of "Rescue Company, No. 5." of Zanesville, we recognise the genuine, the impulsive, the noble self-sacrificing spirit ever characterizing true firemen; that in all our intercourse with the Zanesville Firemen, generally, we were received and welcomed in a manner worthy of their City, their State, and their reputation as Firemen.

Resolved, That the action of the State Executive Committee, in the classification of Engines of the first class, so as to work 44 against 70 hand power Engines, and thus secure an advantage to a member of said Executive Committee, who is foreman of the only 70 man Engine in the State, admitted to competition, was a mistake in the management of the Tournament, and a wrong to the Firemen of the State; and that we envy no man or company the possession of a prize secured by the exclusion of equal competition.

Resolved, That we stand ready, at any and all times, to compete with any Button Machine in the State, of any capacity man for man.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK, Sept. [illegible].—The steamship Asia arrived at midnight; her dates are to Saturday, 17th inst., but have been anticipated by the Circassian, which arrived at St. Johns on Tuesday last.

The London Daily News states that the Government has decided on dispatching several additional steam frigates and corvettes, together with a sufficient number of sailing frigates to augment the squadron in China, and to send at once a military force from India. It is also expected that a force of 1,000 additional marines will be dispatched.

The London Times says there are about 5,000 rather wrong-headed soldiers in the vicinity of Calcutta, waiting a passage home, and the object should be to divert them from the west to the east, assuming however their re-engagement impracticable. There is still in India a force large enough to overcome the mighty Chinese power.

Conflicting accounts are published as to the state of the London builders' strike, but it is evident that great numbers of men are resuming work under the non-society terms proposed by the masters.

It is officially announced that the Great Eastern will leave Portland every month. Her next trial trip will be on the 8th October, and she will finally sail from Holyhead, for Portland, Maine, on 20th of October instead of 20th September. This delay is the time in which Mr. Scott Russell contracts to repair the damage occasioned by the explosion, and to put the vessel in the same condition that she was when she sailed from the Thames. The contract however does not include any repairs which the boilers may be found to require, and although they apparently sustained no damage, an investigation is said to have shown that the internal stays of the boiler most directly exposed to the force of the shock have either been displaced or greatly weakened, so that the boiler cannot be safely used in its present state.

Letters from Rome state that the health of the Pope was almost entirely restored.

The Austrian party is represented as triumphant in Naples, and no reforms are to be expected. A new anti reform ministry was spoken of.

The great land owners and officers in Venitia had signed an address to the Emperor of Austria praying him to take off the additional war tax as the annual revenue from lands cannot support such heavy burdens.

FARTHER POINT, Oct. 1.—The steamship Hungarian, from Liverpool, with four dates days later news than that received by the Asia passed this point early this morning and will be due at Quebec to-morrow.

The steamships America, Indian, City of Washington and Etna have have arrived out.

A cons piracy has been detected at Constantinople, having for its object the assassination of the Sultan of Turkey.

Provisions were steady at the close of Liverpool market on Tuesday.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Consols closed at 95½.

The papers by the Hungarian furnish details of a battle for championship which took place in [illegible], between Tom Sayers and Brettle. The fight lasted only 10 minutes when [illegible] the victor.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Consols closed at 95½@95¾ for money, and 95¾ for account.

The verdict of the coroner's jury in relation to the disaster on the Great Eastern attributes it to accident.

Many arrests had been made at Constantinople of parties implicated in the conspiracy to assassinate the Sultan.

Nothing later had been received from China. The political and general news is not important.

FARTHER POINT, Oct. 2.—The coroner's investigation into the cause of the explosion on board the Great Eastern had terminated.

The verdict is simple accidental death. It is considered likely that the accident may give rise to questions at law.

Sir James Graham, professor of modern history at Cambridge, is dead.

The Manchester Guardian, in an editorial on Gen. Harney's occupation of the Island of San Juan, says the American General's exploit seems to have been nothing more than one of those acts of piracy, by which lawless representatives of the United States are accustomed to settle disputes with their weaker and more barbarous neighbors, but which it is time they should be taught, they cannot safely indulge in against powerful and civilized nations.

The article concludes as follows: we trust the government of the United States will speedily disavow the act of its officer. Otherwise, the English government will be forced to take immediate steps for the vindication of the honor of the country, and showing the licensed ruffians of the Federal army that they must not appropriate British territory as cooly as if they were merely cutting off another slice of Mexico.

The London Post characterizes Gen. Harney's conduct as totally opposed to the first principles of public law, and hopes the American government will disavow it.

The British government is said to have made a contract for a cable of 1,200 miles, to be laid from Falmouth to Gibraltar in June next. This is to be succeeded by a cable to Malta and Alexandria, thus giving England an independent line free from Continental difficulties.

The speedy completion of the Indian line, and its extension to China, is loudly called for, in view of the new Chinese difficulties.

The Independence Belge says Lord Cowley and Count Walewski have been commissioned to arrange a basis of co-operation between England and France, in the prosecution of the Chinese war.

Three ninety-one gun ships were under orders for foreign service at Portsmouth, and four gun-boats were being prepared with all haste for China. The utmost activity prevailed in getting off ammunition, &c.

Money continues abundant and in moderate demand. Gold continued to flow into the bank in large quantities, the arrivals from America and Australia having been heavy.

LATEST.

FRANCE.—There was quite a gathering of politicians at Boarritz. In addition to the King of Belgium, Lord Cowley, Count Reist, and Count Walewski had gone there, and Count Cavour and the Duke of Malakoff were expected. The camp at Chalons had been suddenly broken up. It was rumored in Paris that the Emperor had requested the King of Sardinia to refuse to the deputation from the Legations their request for annexation to Piedmont.

The Times Paris correspondent says if the reports of the day may be credited, there is a possibility of a settlement of the Italian question, which should satisfy all parties, and the general impression was, that the political horizon was likely soon to be clearer than for [illegible] time past.

The Constitution had given prominence to an editorial in which it calls on England to side with France on the Italian question, and the article was regarded as an appeal to England to assist diplomatically in extricating the Emperor from the difficulties engendered at Villa Franca.

A ship of the line to be called the Magenta, and the largest vessel in the French navy, had been commenced at Brest. The Moniteur contains the following announcement in regard to the rumors of the modification of the press law: Several new papers have alluded to a decree, which it was supposed would appear, to modify the laws of the press. This news is without foundation. In France the press is free to discuss all acts of the government, and by so doing to enlighten the public mind.

It was reported at Paris that France will co-operate with Spain in an expedition against the Moors.

Rumors prevailed of a ministerial crisis, including the retirement of the Duke of Padoua from the ministry of the interior, and Chasseloup Laubert from that of Algeria and the colonies.

It is asserted in France that the conclusion of harvest shows that the crops have been 20 per cent. less productive than last year.

Forts were being armed in the bays of St. Maloes of Cancale. A plan had been prepared for arming the coast from Antibes to Port Vendres. The French outposts on the frontiers of Morocco had been several times fiercely attacked by the native tribes, but they had been repulsed. The government of Morocco was not implicated in these attacks.

ITALY.—The government of Tuscany had notified the plenipotentiaries of the Grand Duke to evacuate the palace within three days. In case of their non-compliance the property of the Grand Duke was to be sequestered.

There has been reports from home that the Pope's health was so shattered that he would probably soon resign, but the latest accounts says he had perfectly recovered.

Garibaldi had issued a letter publicly acknowledging his indebtedness to the patriotic population of the Italian Tyrol for their heroism during the war.

SPAIN.—Some of the journals say that Gen. Serano is to be Captain General of Cuba, vice Gen. Concha.

RUSSIA.—The Invalide Russe publishes a telegram confirming the reported capture of Schamyl, [illegible] by the Russians. [illegible]. Schamyl's sons, and many others were captured or killed. The Russians took five cannon, and their loss did not exceed 100 men.

TURKEY.—The Times publishes the following special telegram from its correspondent:

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 10.—A conspiracy to assassinate the Sultan has been discovered; 200 persons have been arrested here, among them the Pasha of Albrana, who was apparently chief. Some troops are suspected of participation. The affair originated with a political party.

INDIA.—The Calcutta mail of May 27 reached Aden Sept. 11th. The following news came by the Red Sea telegraph: At the legislative council to tax professions and trades in India cultivators of land were excepted. The special disarming act passed during the mutiny had been made permanent. The House of Delphi had been deprived of all titular distinctions and privileges forever.

CHINA.—A special telegram from China states that there had been large sales of goods both at Hong Kong and Shanghai. It was therefore inferred that political matters had not experienced any new complication.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFF MARKET.—Wheat steady; Western red at 7s 4d@8s 6d. Corn quiet at an advance of 6d per quarter. Provisions—Beef quiet. Pork steady. Lard quiet. Bacon dull and quotations nominal. Tallow unchanged; sales unimportant. Produce—Sugar steady. Coffee quiet.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Tribune's Washington dispatch says Col. Drinkard, acting Secretary of War, has, at the instance of the President, written to Gov. Floyd to remain at Old Point as long as is advantageous to his health. He has improved rapidly since his arrival there and has proposed reaching this city to-day. In the absence of Post-Master General Holt the President himself has given attention to the subject of the carriage of the California mails. The government has been strongly impressed with the necessity of getting that mail through too certainly, and hence the decision giving it to the bidder next lowest to Johnson. Great complaint is made by the merchants of New Orleans of the state of things precipitated by the failure of transports of mails from that point, whereby a week is lost to them, so far as California correspondence is concerned.

CHARLESTON, Oct. 1.—The Courier's special New Orleans dispatch gives the following additional items of Mexican intelligence: It was reported that the Bishop of Mexico is willing to guarantee a loan of five millions to Miramon in pledge for church property. The Archbishop and clergy bitterly oppose the policy of their superior. It was reported that General Vidaurri had joined the C[illegible] party.

An arrival furnishes Rio Janeiro advices to August 16th. The receipts of coffee were trifling, the crop being deficient. The new crop was considered to be good. There was a stock of 50,000 bags in port. The stock of flour amounted to 55,000 barrels, and the market was firm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A gasometer exploded last night at James Lightbody's machine shop in Jersey city, while Dr. J. S. Smith was engaged in testing a new invention. Thos. Carwell, foreman of the shop, was burned to death, and several others were badly injured.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—This afternoon a fire broke out in the hay press of Wm. F. Hughes, on the corner of Marriott's Lane and Jefferson Avenue. A quantity of new hay had been recently placed in the press, and the fire may have arisen from this cause. The press which has a front of about one hundred feet on Marriott's Lane, and about sixty or seventy feet on the Avenue, was totally destroyed with all its contents. The heat of the burning hay was intense, and when the flames broke through the roof the property in the vicinity became much endangered. Water was very scarce and for a while the conflagration looked as if it would sweep through all the narrow courts in the block. A number of dwellings were also destroyed. The loss will be heavy. A branch of the same property was destroyed on the 9th of June last, and at that time the water was very scarce.

LAFAYETTE, Ia., Oct. 1.—Last evening a fire broke out in a row of frame buildings on South Columbia street, occupied as grocery and provision stores. The prompt arrival of the firemen prevented the destruction of the large brick adjoining. While this fire was in progress four other buildings in as many parts of the town were discovered to be on fire, but in time to prevent their entire destruction. It is supposed that the intention was to fire the city for the sake of plunder.

ROCHESTER, Oct. 2.—The Democrat says De Lave's attempt to carry a man across the Genesee River on his back on a tight rope was a decided failure. He lost his balance, but fortunately both adventurers caught one of the ropes. Their perilous situation blanched every cheek among the spectators.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The most intimate friends of Senator Douglas authoritatively deny the truth of the prevailing rumor that he contemplates replying to the late review of his Harper Magazine article, and further say that none is to be published with his sanction or supervision.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Herald's Washington dispatch says, bids for the transportation of supplies to the army in Utah and New Mexico were opened at the War Department last Saturday. The Secretary of War being absent the President deemed it of sufficient importance to go to the department and have the bids opened and registered before him. This unexpected step on the part of the President created some surprise. It appears the old contractors, Majors Russel & Co. will not obtain any one of the three contracts, other bids being lower. It is understood that the bid of A. C. Irving & Co., will take the Utah contract at one dollar and thirty-four cents per pound per hundred miles. The old contract was one dollar and eighty cents. It is said the bids of Childs & Scott will take the two contracts for New Mexico. The magnitude of these contracts may be judged from the fact that the amount of the Utah contract, the first year, was over twenty millions of dollars. Orders have been sent from the Navy Department for the return of the United States Steamer Wabash, the flag ship of the Mediterranean squadron. The flag officer will turn over the command of the squadron to Captian Levy, now in command of the Macedonia.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The money article of the Herald says, private advices from England state that the crops both in that country and throughout Europe, with the exception of Prussia, is not threshing out as was expected, and that the actual yield of wheat will be very much below an average. In Great Britain, France and Russia, under the circumstances, considering the reported spread of the potato disease, some British houses write as though they looked for a fair export from this side. At present, prices do not permit of grain exporting to England at a profit. A small purchase was made on Friday for English account, and it is understood that some thousands of bushels have been bought for England at Baltimore, but a comparison of quotations shows that either our prices must fall, or the English prices rise before wheat or flour can be shipped profitably. There are indications of an advance in Great Britain, but the extent it is being anticipated in the west, and the object may thus be defeated.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The [illegible] Lager beer brewery of Messrs. Speyers was entirely destroyed by fire last night. The loss is estimated at $250,000, upon which there is an insurance of $[illegible].

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—A conflagration occurred yesterday in Sing Sing prison, destroying the file and auger shop, and the dye house. The loss is $80,000.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 29.—The Charleston Courier contains the speech of Senator [illegible] of Delaware, yesterday, at Camden. He favors southern unity, and the development of her resources; repudiates the agitation of the opening of the Slave Trade; and opposes the position of Senator Douglas about unfriendly territorial legislation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Postmaster Fowler to-day received an order for one million of the new government self-ruling stamped envelopes, mainly for the supply of Hotels, Educational Institutions, City Authorities, &c.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The steamer New York sailed for Liverpool at noon to-day with upwards of $100,000 in specie.

The steamer Borussia, sailed for Southampton with $160,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The President has recognized Willhelm Ludwig Kroen as Consul for the Kingdom of Wurtemburg, at Philadelphia.

The Boston Post says, that late affair at Paliio ought to serve as a caution to John Bull, how he again undertakes to go to pick-ie-in the private matters of John Chinaman.

WILMINGTON, (Del.) Oct. 3.—On Saturday evening the City Gas Works entertained a large party to witness the manufacture of gas from water. The demonstration was in every respect satisfactory; the light being very pure and brilliant. One twenty-seventh of the usual capacity of the works can supply the whole city with this gas at all elevations. The light in burners suited to the density of the gas was admirable. It is manufactured under Dr. Sanders of Cincinnati's patent, and is cheaper and clearer than that made from coal. The Directors of the Philadelphia City Gas Works, and many scientific gentlemen, were delighted with the success of the demonstration.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 2.—The Overland mail, with dates to the 9th ult., arrived to-night. Since the sailing of the steamer of the 5th, business has been a good deal interfered with by the State Election, and but a light demand for goods for the country has been experienced. A number of arrivals have occurred from Atlantic and foreign ports, from which few sales are reported. The market remains firm and quotations unchanged.

The British ship "Forest Monarch" was wrecked on the 24th, she was on her way from San Francisco to Puget Sound.

The State Election on the 7th resulted in the choice of Milton S. Latham, Lecompton Democrat for Governor, by a very large majority, perhaps 20,000 Scott and Burch are probably elected to Congress, although their opponents, Baker and McKibbin, who received united vote of the Republicans and Anti-Lecompton parties, have the benefit of a slight doubt in their favor. The Anti-Lecompton candidate for State printer who was also supported by the Republicans, has a slight chance of election. With these possible exceptions, the Democratic Lecompton State ticket is elected by an immense majority. Both branches of the Legislature is largely Democratic.

It will be about a week before the official returns are counted.

The Peoples' Reform ticket being the regular succession of that inaugurated in 1856 by the Vigilance Committee, has again triumphed for [illegible] in San Francisco by a handsome majority.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—A special Washington dispatch to the North American says it is well known in fillibustering circles here that another formidable expedition is preparing against Nicaragua. A portion of the expedition has already succeeded in leaving New York and Charleston, but the parties will make no suspicious demonstration until all the plans are matured and the full force is upon the spot ready for action. Col. Wheat now in New York will have an important position in the new crusade. The facts can be implicitly relied upon and our government should be awake to their importance.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—It is announced that the steamer St. Louis will depart from this port for San Juan Del Norte with the U. S. mail on Wednesday next. She is to connect with the steamer Pacific and it is stated that arrangements have been made for an extra steamer to call at San Juan Del Sur to transport the mails and passengers to San Francisco in case of the non-arrival of the Pacific.

A dispatch from Washington says Mr. Shannon, of Harrisburg, has been appointed private Secretary to President Buchanan.

ROME, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Prof. Coe, accompanied by Mr. Gorman of Rome, made a balloon ascension to-day. When at the height of two miles the balloon bursted, and turned up in the top of the netting, forming a parachute. The voyagers after a perilous descent landed safely in a swamp three miles from the starting point.

The Treasury receipts for the week ending Monday, amounted to $1,530,000; the drafts paid to $1,405,000; the drafts issued to $840,000; the amount subject to draft is $5,163,459; the increase over last week is more than $755,000, or a million dollars within the last two weeks.

Capt. H. S. Miller has been ordered to proceed to Fort Boncoste to assume the duties of Quartermaster General at that point, in place of Chapman, deceased.

The President has appointed Wm. G. Jones as Judge of the U. S. Court for the Northern and Southern districts of Alabama, vice Gayle, deceased.

Gen. Jessop, who was seriously sick in New York, has returned to Washington, being convalescent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The Herald's Washington dispatch says, Minister McLane had a long interview with the President and Secretary of State to-day in regard to Mexican affairs. Some additional intelligence has been received here since our minister left Vera Cruz, but matters there are unchanged.

A pamphlet will appear in a few days, written under the supervision of Senator Douglas, in reply to the recent able article of Judge Black which caused Mr. Douglas' sudden return to this city. His friends are much annoyed at his exhibition of ill temper in his private conversation.

The President contemplates in the course of a few days a brief visit to Whitland.

Should the Postmaster-General return to-morrow, he will probably leave here on Saturday.

The President will not live from the Soldiers' Home to this city on Saturday.

The fear of the failure of the contractor for carrying the mails to California, via Nicaragua, continues to give much uneasiness to Government officials. On Wednesday, Assistant Postmaster-Generals Ding and Dundas held a long consultation with the President upon the subject.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—The State Agricultural Fair was attended to-day by fifty thousand persons. The display in all departments is highly creditable. The trial of steam fire engines commenced yesterday, and will be concluded to-morrow. The [illegible] yet, was made by the steamer Baltimore from Baltimore, built by Poole & Hunt, having a pump invented by Geo. W. Fulton, of Steubenville, Ohio. The Washington engine of this city, similar in construction but more power, will be tried to-morrow.

The premium for hand engines, 1st class, was competed for this P. M., by the Citizen Fire Co. of Harrisburg and Assistance Fire Co. of this city—awarded to the latter. The Assistance threw 183 feet perpendicularly, and the Citizen 196 feet. Thirty feet were allowed to the Assistance, her chamber being only 8 inch, while the Citizen's is 12 inches.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—The new match between the six of the United all England with five Canadians against six of All england with five Canadians, was continued to-day. Nothing could persuade the Canadians to part with the English Cricketers until the match is played out. They, therefore, need not be expected to arrive at New York till Sunday morning.

Parr, Jackson, Hayward and Stephenson, bowled against the United Eleven. Stephenson or Diver were cricket keepers, with Howard or Diver as long stops. The score of the United All England in the first innings was as follows: Coffyn, 13; Grundy none; Carpenter 32; W. S. Smith, none; Sockiser, 8; J. Lillywhite, 33; Pickering, none; Wisden, 43; Fisher, 14; Morgan, 2; Bacon, 7; &c. 16; total 118 runs.

The All England Eleven were bowled against by Grundy and Coffyn; Lockyer acting as cricket-keeper, and Pickering as long stop. At sundown, the score stood as follows: Daily, 0; Hayard, 16; Caesar, 14; Hardinge, 0; Diver, (not out), 5; Swetenham, 3; Parr, 2; Lockyer and B. Coffyn, 0; Byes 5. Total, 43.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Times' Washington correspondent says: By dispatches received yesterday the State department is in possession of important information from the new government of Costa Rica, showing the revolution to be popular and the new order of things firmly established. The momentary government which assumed the seat of ejected Mora has given away to a more settled organization, of which Senor Montragena remains the Chief, with Vinente De Anguilar Julian Valle and Jesus Jimenez as his Cabinet officers. This administration is represented to be strong, not only in wealth, talent and personal popularity of the gentlemen comprising it, but in the esteem of a larger number of the people, the latter circumstance evinced by addresses forwarded to the President from nearly every quarter of the State, felicitating him and the public upon the fortunate change, and hailing the new order of things with enthusiasm. President Montragena had issued an inaugural proclamation upon assuming office. In this paper, the brevity of which is its conspicuous merit, he responds to the popular voice of congratulation, pointing the general gratitude to Senor Lalazar and Blanco, whose patriotic energy had saved the Republic. Several decrees had been issued as the basis of political reconstruction. Costa Ricans exiled by Mora are recalled.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The recent casting of the principal portion of the Equestrian statue of Washington by Clark Miles having proved a success, a rustic pedestal is to be constructed upon which the work of art is to be elevated at a height of forty feet. The place selected by the President is in a very remote part of the city, but Congress may see the policy of locating it at a more central one. The 22d February will probably be designated for the inauguration of the statue. Senator Hunter is spoken of as the orator on the occasion.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—At the meeting of the Episcopal Convention yesterday the question of the reinstallation of Bishop Onderdonk was brought up on a resolution requesting the House of Bishops to take action on the suspension of the bishop, or to modify the same so as to limit it to a certain time. A very exciting debate ensued, in which Bishop Potter, Drs. Hawks, Tyng, Anthon, and others took part. The Convention adjourned without action.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The steamship Glasgow, from Glasgow, has arrived; her dates are to the 14th ult., and have been anticipated.

[illegible], Sept. 30.—The St. Johns News of Wednesday says that the people of New foundland are looking anxiously for the report of the Commission appointed by the French and English governments in relation to the fisheries. They will resist any encroachments upon their old fishing ground, even if the home government made an arrangement with France.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—Another drenching rain this morning rendered the roads to the fair grounds worse than yesterday. Still the number of visitors was as great as any previous day. The proceedings in the arena began at an early hour.

The amphitheatre is densely thronged with anxious spectators to witness the competition for the thousand dollar prize of the best roadster stallion. This ring, which consisted of forty entries, was probably the best and most valuable collection of roadsters ever assembled together in the country. After a spirited contest of about an hour, during which the merits of the different horses were fully tested, the blue wreath hung gracefully on the neck of Stockbridge Chief, amidst the vociferous applause of the enthusiastic thousands.

Stockbridge Chief was sired by Hill's Black Hawk Vermont, owned by Cooper & Craig, of Hamilton county, Ohio.

The regular prize of $150 for the best roadster was awarded to Green Mountain, sired by Sherman Morgan, owned by Elias Dorsey, of Jefferson county, Ky. This horse was the most formidable competitor of Stockbridge Chief for the thousand dollar premium.

To morrow the thousand dollar premium for thoroughbred stallion will be awarded, when a large number of the finest horses in the Union, including the celebrated Lexington, will compete for the prize. In consequence of the inclement weather, the progress of the fair is much retarded, and awarding of sweepstake prizes will be postponed till Monday.

LEAVENWORTH, Sept. 30.—Hon. Anson Burlingame addressed the people here to-night, and will probably participate in the canvass for delegate.

The Utah mail arrived to-day, also the Denver city express with dates to the 23d, and $6,000 in dust.

The increase of crime in and about Denver and Auraria has become so alarming that it demanded prompt action for suppression.

The State organization was defeated by 3,000 majority. Some fraudulent voting was alleged.

The election for delegate to Congress comes off early in October. Gen. Larimer is a candidate.

A hunting party of Arrapahoes had returned, reporting a contagion among the buffaloes, killing them by thousands.

Prospecting had penetrated to the head waters of the Blue, a tributary of the Colorado, where rich leads were discovered.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.—The yellow fever is raging at Brownsville and for thirty miles above.

General Alvarez is preparing to march on the City of Mexico, with six thousand troops.

Maj. Neighbors, Indian agent at Fort Belknap, Texas, was killed on the 15th, by two residents—not arrested.

The defeat of the Liberals under Doblado at Leon, by Woll, is confirmed.

Miramon has re-established a decree of Santa Anna, forbidding foreigners from entering Mexico with arms, and inventing designs, under the penalty of death.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.—The steamship Philadelphia, with advices from Havana to the 27th inst., arrived here to-day. It was rumored at Havana that Gen. Concha would be relieved some time in November by General Sevens. The stock of sugar at Havana amounted to 170,000 boxes. Molasses generally dull. Sterling exchange dull at 114½@116½. Exchange on New York, 3@5 premium.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Prof. La Mountain's balloon has been seen at Harrisville, Lewis county, passing over the New York wilderness, going due east, at a great elevation. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the discovery of the bodies alive, and $500 if dead. A party will go to the woods to-morrow to institute a search.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—The Republicans of the Sixth Congressional District of Illinois have nominated John M. Palmer to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. T. L. Harris.

The National Democratic State Central Committee of Illinois have called a Convention at Springfield, on the 20th of January, to choose delegates to the Charleston Convention.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—The second match was decided to-day in favor of the United All England and five Canadians. All England's first innings were 90. The English cricketers will leave to-morrow morning for New York.

A boiler in the Girard House exploded this afternoon killing two men.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Protestant Episcopal Convention of the diocese of New York, yesterday, decided after an elaborate and to some extent unnecessary debate to ask of the House of Bishops at the next general Convention the remission of the sentence of suspension which fifteen years ago condemned Bishop Onderdonk to retirement. This remission, if granted, will restore the Bishop to his Episcopal functions, but if the wishes of this Convention are complied with, the whole administrative jurisdiction of the diocese will remain in the hands of the present provisional Bishop, the Right Rev. Dr. Potter. The measure met with ardent opposition, and was passed in the face of a remonstrance from Dr. Potter himself. The Convention adjourned finally at the close of its evening session.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Prof. L. Mountain has been traced but little farther. He was last seen over the town of Pitcairn, St. Lawrence county, fifty miles due northeast from here at a supposed altitude of five miles. He was going due east with great velocity. Mr. Morrison, of Troy, his agent, purposes instituting a thorough search for him.

—The population of Delaware, according to census just taken, is 3,714.

AN APOLOGY WHICH MAKES THE MATTER WORSE.—The New Orleans correspondent of the Charleston Courier makes the following remarks concerning the recent shooting of Le Graham:

"The Press here have commented severely on the fact that so many public officers—the Street Commissioner, an Alderman, and other conservatives of the public peace (among them a policeman, with whom Dr. Graham talked and drank the evening of his death; showed him his pistol; spoke of his determination to kill Toledano at sight), should have known that, crazed with liquor (and then known to be most dangerous), this unfortunate man had gone about the streets for two or three days, openly avowing his determination to kill a citizen at sight; and that he should not have been arrested, or got out of the way, until his fury was over. This is certainly a neglect of duty; but it must be remembered that if any leading public officer had had Graham arrested for carrying a concealed weapon, he would have drawn on himself, at some future day, the formidable ire of the man; furthermore, the police knew that their own chief was related to the deceased, who had besides many and influential friends belonging to and leaders in the party that holds the city government and that appoints these very policemen."

What is the use, asks the New York Times, of pretending to have a government at all, if the character here given of it is correctly drawn? Personal fear, private relationship, party influence and personal friendships, all combine to disarm the law and permit a drunken madman to hunt a citizen day after day through the streets, as he would hunt a wild beast? We may as well go back to the age of barbarism at once.

LOUIS NAPOLEON'S MARRIAGE.—On the subject of Louis Napoleon's marriage Mr. Lester says: "He had no home. Being an elected sovereign, chosen by the universal voice of his fellow countrymen to stand at the head of his nation, he, above all other men, could lay a fair claim to think for a while of himself, and in the battle of life for an empire, give a little while to what every man of feeling and heroism finds sooner or later pressed to his bosom—thoughts of a wife, a home, a child! Like himself, as he has always been, he again went to the people. He chose for his wife one of the noblest maidens of Spain, and one of the most gifted and beautiful beings in the world—Eugene Mlle. de Montijo, the Countess de Teba. The marriage was celebrated at the Tuileries, January 29. On the following day (Sunday) the religious ceremony was performed with imperial pomp, taste and splendor at the Cathedral of Notre Dame. The past, with all its classic and touching souvenirs, came back freighted with the glory, the chivalry, the love, the devotion of the Middle Ages. The bridegroom and the bride—both in the full possession of imperial power, and both freshly sprung from the bosom of the people—such a spectacle may well have thrilled the palpitating thousands in that vast Cathedral with intense emotion—melted the young Empress of the Napoleon dynasty to tears—illuminated all Paris that night, and beckoned old Italy to an approaching resurrection. Eugenie has been the good-angel of the hero of Solferino, as Josephine was of the hero of Marengo."

THE POWER OF MEMORY.—The following notice of a singular faculty possessed by the great New England rhetorician appears in a Northern journal:

As was his custom in delivering the "Washington Oration," Mr. Everett spoke the whole of his late eulogy on Webster without any notes whatsoever. It is a most wonderful exhibition of the power of memory, and one rarely, if ever, met with in conjunction with such great mental power as distinguishes Mr. Everett.

This extraordinary power of memory enables Mr. EVERETT to give to his greater addresses all the exquisite finish which the most sedulous care in composition can bestow, while by long practice he is enabled to impart quite an air of extemporaneous effusion to the delivery of lectures a week, a month, or perhaps several years old.

A MOTHER'S INFLUENCE.—How touching the tribute of the Hon. T. A. Benton to his mother's influence. [illegible]

My mother asked me never to use tobacco; I have never touched it from that to the present day; she asked me not to game, and I have never gambled, and I cannot tell who is winning and who is losing in games that can be played; she admonished me, too, against hard drinking, and whatever capacity for endurance I have at present, and whatever usefulness I may attain in life, I have attributed to having complied with her pious and correct wishes.—When I was seven years of age she asked me not to drink, and then I made a resolution of total abstinence, at a time when I was sole constituent member of my own body, and that I have adhered to it through all time, I owe it to my mother.

WHAT IS A G. R. J. A.?—It was recently advertised in a New York paper, that an equipage had been forwarded there for the G. R. J. A. of the Sons of Malta—whereupon numerous inquiries were instituted as to the meaning of the initials. A correspondent of the New York Post undertook to answer, as follows: "I have heard many inquiries relative to the meaning of the letters, I cannot speak with authority, but am informed that G. R. J. A. is an office of honor and profit in the order of the Sons of Malta—an extensive and rapidly growing association—and that no member can fill this responsible place who is not both a charitable and competent man, and in good standing."

A few evenings since, while the curtain was down between the acts of the play at Laura Keene's Theater, a woman rose in the dress circle and proceeded to address the house, exhorting them to repentance, and go in a way to lead the audience to believe that she was demented. She was quietly led from the Theater, and peace was restored. It now turns out that she was not crazy at all, but that she undertook the preaching feat on a wager of $25. The winner of the bet is said to be a Mr. John Hawkins.—N. Y. Tribune.

CINCINNATI HOG AND CATTLE MARKET.—CINCINNATI, Oct. 5.—Beef cattle were exceedingly dull in the forepart of the week, and prime sold as low as $3, the supply being large. Towards the close the feeling was rather better, and prices improved somewhat, and at the market, Monday, the range of prices was $3 25@3 35 gross, and in one or two instances $3 50 was obtained for small lots choice beeves.

Hogs dull and selling at $4 50@4 75 gross for good, and $5@5 25 do for extra large.

The supply of sheep has been light, and the quality inferior. Prices range from $1 25@2 each.

Wheat may be quoted in our market to-day at 90@95 cents. It has brought freely one dollar for good lots, but the tendency seems slightly downward.—Indianapolis Sentinel, Oct. 4.

—The Portsmouth Tribune says, the probabilities are that there will be a larger and better crop of corn harvested in that section of the country than was ever known before.

THE SCANDINAVIAN PILLS AND PURIFIER.—The following flattering notice is taken from the Portsmouth (Ohio) Scioto Valley Republican of April 8, 1858:

SCANDINAVIA.—A friend writes to us for our "real opinion" of Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies—where he can obtain them—and why they are called "Scandinavian," and we are frequently asked the same questions. Scandinavia is the ancient name of Sweden and Norway, and a Scandinavian, that is a Swede or Norwegian, affectionately calls his country "Scandinavia," in the same sense as we speak of "Columbia," or "The Union." By the way, there are over nine thousand Scandinavian families in Dane county, Wisconsin. Although a citizen of this country for many years, Dr. Roback is a Swede by birth; and compounds his Medicines of Swedish herbs. We think the name is very appropriate. We have the very highest opinion of the Medicines, and of Dr. Roback himself, who is not only a singularly skillful physician, but a gentleman of the Old School, as we know personally. Our advertisement columns will answer the rest of our friend's letter.—See advertisement.

☞ All, especially young men, should read the advertisement of the "[illegible] Dispensary" at Cincinnati, in another column.

CITY NOTICES.

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June 23, 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am satisfied, from knowing your abilities, that none can surpass any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the state. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

E. SHATTUCK.

Formerly teacher of chirography in Duff's College, Columbus, Ohio.

McCoy's College is removed to Carpenter's building, town street, near Fourth.

"If music be the food of love, play on;
Give me excess of it."

The charms of MUSIC have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakspeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repeated now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an able and agreeable gentleman.

☞ E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and Liquor-dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

☞ Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at REDMILLS's if you want a superior article.

☞ [illegible] establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made sure for the last two or three years.

☞ ROBBINS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "Jake" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound more, he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

☞ The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the cards fly.—MORGAN deserve the liberal custom he has.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our poetical friend J. M. DENIG on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage in copious jets, and so cool as few can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits in the Gwynne Block!

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. G. GRITTENDEN on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. ROBACK'S
SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills in the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, gives their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these wonderful Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who care to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the [illegible]

Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts.

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they [illegible]

Liver Complaint,

and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. That

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in helpless weakness and [illegible], are restored with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual disabilities are removed by their cordial and gently stimulating properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been trifled with and abused, that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly on the poison of disease in the blood, the

Cause soon to Heal,

and discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula, whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach and Bowels, the liver, the nervous system, the skin, the glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief, and (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a painless and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands of living witnesses, who, in letters, affidavits, medical works, and by word of mouth, proclaim them to be the best preparation of the kind ever offered to the broken down victims of ill health. They hunt disease through every avenue and organ of the system, and to expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—They are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notice, and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In all cases of complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER [illegible], 1859.

FAIR [illegible].—We were reminded the other day that there was considerable disappointment experienced in the awards at our county Fair, and there was some talk of partiality. We know that Emrich's colt was thought by a number to have been crowded out unnecessarily, and the [illegible] of Mr. [illegible] was considered by many to have been entitled to a premium, both for speed and action.—But the Judges threw her out because she had been swinied, but gave a premium afterwards to a horse that was hip-shotten! There cannot be too much care and caution manifested in these awards. Let the public mind once perceive that partiality governs, and there will be an end to Fairs.

PETER CORZILIUS & BRO.—In his line there is not a more competent or better business man than Peter. He furnishes the market with the most acceptable fish. He makes the best "[illegible]" in the world, is a green grocer who may be relied on for the finest vegetables, and as a dealer in groceries is fair, just, and responsible.—He is at the same old place, near the corner of High and Friend streets, where his pleasant countenance may be seen every day.

NEW SHAVING AND HAIR-DRESSING SALOON.—Our old friend GAY, the courteous and gentlemanly VICTOR GAY, has opened a fashionable shaving and hair-dressing saloon on the corner of High and State streets, just opposite the Gazette office, and immediately under the Clinton Bank. He handles the razor like a magician, and those who have had a trial of his skill in the barber-ous line, need not be told to call again. Success, friend GAY—long may you—shave.

The Lexington (Ky.) Association Races were to commence on Monday, and continue through the week. The meetings of the association are different from the most of racing. They are conducted for the benefit of stock, the association being composed of stock-raisers, and while the rules of racing are observed, the principal incitement is the test of fleetness, endurance and training. Under such auspices, it is a flourishing and lively [illegible].

WM. KENT, the popular auctioneer, has returned to this city, and permanently located himself in Columbus. His place of business is under the Old Exchange Bank, formerly occupied by Mr. Cashman. He is truly expert as an auctioneer, and never fails to give entire satisfaction.

The Richmond (Va.) Whig, a bitter enemy of Douglas, in a late issue, says that Douglas stock for the Presidency is rapidly rising in Virginia. It declares that it has convicting evidence of the fact. There is no doubt that the Whig is correct in its statement. The feeling is becoming universal in the South that if they would certainly defeat the Republicans in 1860 they must do it under the lead of the Illinois Senator.—Cin. Enq.

That must be the universal sentiment both North and South; for it must be apparent to all who would not close their eyes and ears, that no man in the nation has such hold upon the affections of the people as Mr. Douglas, and there is no man whom they would so delight to honor by placing him in the Presidency.

AN OBJECTION NOT SUSTAINED.—Some of the Opposition papers think they have discovered a "mare's nest," and convicted Senator Douglas of inconsistency, and also of misstating the facts of history, because he and the rest of the Democratic Senators voted down an amendment of Senator Chase to the Nebraska Bill in 1854, which, in express terms, gave the people of the territories the right to exclude slavery if they choose, by the action of their Territorial Legislatures. These papers affect to imagine that this refutes the idea that the Democrats intend that the people of the Territories should have that right under the Nebraska Bill. What nonsense! The Democrats voted down Chase's amendment because there was a section already in the bill which gave them that liberty. It was a superfluity. The only reason in the world why the Democrats repealed the Missouri Restriction was because it did not allow the people of the Territories to have their own way in regard to slavery. But for that it would have stood on the statute-book to this day. —Cin. Enq.

UPHOLD'S.—If you ever go to Mt. Vernon, drop in at Wm. Uphold's, near the Post Office. He will be found a genial gentleman, and a polite and accommodating host. Besides, he has a first class Restaurant, where the very genius of Plenty presides.

UNION FIRE COMPANY, NO. 2.
COLUMBUS, Sept. 20, '59.

At a meeting of this Company held at their Engine House this evening, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this Company are due to the officers and managers of the Central Ohio Railroad Company in general, and to Wm. Fell, Esq., also, Mr. John Brown, Esq., in particular, for their very liberal accommodations to this Company and to the Firemen of the State, on the occasion of the late State Parade.

Resolved, That in the Officers and Members of "Rescue Company, No. 5," of Zanesville, we recognize the genuine, the impulsive, the noble self-sacrificing spirit ever characterising true firemen; that in all our intercourse with the Zanesville Firemen, generally, we were received and welcomed in a manner worthy of their City, their State, and their reputation as Firemen.

Resolved, That the action of the State Executive Committee, in the classification of Engines of the first class, so as to work 44 against 70 hand power Engines, and thus secure an advantage to a member of said Executive Committee, who is foreman of the only 70 man Engine in the State, admitted to competition, was a mistake in the management of the Tournament, and a wrong to the Firemen of the State; and that we envy no man or company the possession of a prize secured by the exclusion of equal competition.

Resolved, That we stand ready, at any and all times, to compete with any Button Machine in the State, of any capacity man for man.

JOSEPH DOWDALL, Secretary.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The steamship Asia arrived at midnight; her dates are to Saturday, 17th inst., but have been anticipated by the [illegible], which arrived at St. Johns on Tuesday last.

The London Daily News states that the Government has decided on dispatching several additional steam frigates and corvettes, together with a sufficient number of sailing frigates to augment the squadron in China, and to send at once a military force from India. It is also expected that a force of 1,000 additional marines will be dispatched.

The London Times says there are about 3,000 rather wrong-headed soldiers in the vicinity of Calcutta, waiting a passage home, and the object should be to divert them from the west to the east, assuming however their re-engagement impracticable. There is still in India a force large enough to overcome the mighty Chinese power.

Conflicting accounts are published as to the state of the London builders' strike, but it is evident that great numbers of men are resuming work under the non-society terms proposed by the masters.

It is officially announced that the Great Eastern will leave Portland every month. Her next trial trip will be on the 8th October, and she will finally sail from Holyhead, for Portland, Maine, on 20th of October instead of 29th September. This delay is the time in which Mr. Scott Russell contracts to repair the damages occasioned by the explosion, and to put the vessel in the same condition that she was when she sailed from the Thames. The contract however does not include any repairs which the boilers may be found to require, and although they apparently sustained no damage, an investigation is said to have shown that the internal stays of the boiler most directly exposed to the force of the shock have either been displaced or greatly weakened, so that the boiler cannot be safely used in its present state.

Letters from Rome state that the health of the Pope was almost entirely restored.

The Austrian party is represented as triumphant in Naples, and no reforms are to be expected. A new anti reform ministry was spoken of.

The great land owners and others in Venetia had signed an address to the Emperor of Austria praying him to take off the additional war tax as the annual revenue from lands cannot support such heavy burdens.

FARTHER POINT, Oct. 1.—The steamship Hungarian, from Liverpool, with four dates days later news than that received by the Asia passed this point early this morning and will be due at Quebec to-morrow.

The steamships America, Indian, City of Washington and Etna have have arrived out.

A conspiracy has been detected at Constantinople, having for its object the assassination of the Sultan of Turkey.

Provisions were steady at the close of Liverpool market on Tuesday.

LONDON, Sept. 20.—Consols closed at 95¼.

The papers by the Hungarian furnish details of a battle for championship, which took place in Telchurst, Kent, between Tom Sayers and Brettle. The fight lasted only 13 minutes, when Sayers was declared the victor.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—Consols closed at 95¼@95⅜ for money, and 95⅜ for account.

The verdict of the coroner's jury in relation to the disaster to the Great Eastern attributed it to accident.

Many arrests had been made at Constantinople of parties implicated in the conspiracy to assassinate the Sultan.

Nothing later had been received from China. The political and general news is not important.

FARTHER POINT, Oct. 1.—The coroner's investigation into the cause of the explosion on board the Great Eastern had terminated.

The verdict is simple accidental death. It is considered likely that the accident may give rise to questions at law.

Sir James Stephens, professor of modern history at Cambridge, is dead.

The Manchester Guardian, in an editorial on Gen. Harney's occupation of the Island of San Juan, says the American General's exploit seems to have been nothing more than one of those acts of piracy, by which lawless representatives of the United States are accustomed to settle disputes with their weaker and more barbarous neighbors, but which it is time they should be taught, they cannot safely indulge in against powerful and civilized nations.

The article concludes as follows: we trust the government of the United States will speedily disavow the act of its officer. Otherwise, the English government will be forced to take immediate steps for the vindication of the honor of the country, and showing the licensed ruffians of the Federal army that they must not appropriate British territory as cooly as if they were merely cutting off another slice of Mexico.

The London Post characterizes Gen. Harney's conduct as totally opposed to the first principles of public law, and hopes the American government will disavow it.

The British government is said to have made a contract for a cable of 1,300 miles, to be laid from Falmouth to Gibraltar in June next. This is to be succeeded by a cable to Malta and Alexandria, thus giving England an independent line free from Continental difficulties.

The speedy completion of the Red Sea line, and its extension to China, is loudly called for, in view of the new Chinese difficulties.

The Independence Belge says Lord Cowley and Count Walewski have been commissioned to arrange a basis of co-operation between England and France, in the prosecution of the Chinese war.

Three ninety-one gun ships were under orders for foreign service at Portsmouth, and four gun-boats were being prepared with all haste for China. The utmost activity prevailed in getting of ammunition, &c.

Money continues abundant and in moderate demand. Gold continued to flow into the bank in large quantities, the arrivals from America and Australia having been heavy.

LATEST.

FRANCE.—There was quite a gathering of politicians at Boarritz. In addition to the King of Belgium, Lord Cowley, Count Reist, and Count Walewski had gone there, and Count Cavour and the Duke of Malakoff were expected. The camp at Chalons had been suddenly broken up. It was rumored in Paris that the Emperor had requested the King of Sardinia to refuse to the deputation from the Legations their request for annexation to Piedmont.

The Times' Paris correspondent, says if the reports of the day may be credited, there is a possibility of a settlement of the Italian question, which should satisfy all parties, and the general impression was, that the political horizon was likely soon to be clearer than for some time past.

The Constitution had given prominence to an editorial in which it calls on England to side with France on the Italian question, and the article was regarded as an appeal to England to assist diplomatically in extricating the Emperor from the difficulties engendered at Villa Franca.

A ship of the line to be called the Magenta, and the largest vessel in the French navy, had been commenced at Brest. The Moniteur contains the following announcement in regard to the rumors of the modification of the press law: Several new papers have alluded to a decree, which it was supposed would appear, to modify the laws of the press. This news is without foundation. In France the press is free to discuss all acts of the government, and by so doing to enlighten the public mind.

It was reported at Paris that France will co-operate with Spain in an expedition against the Moors.

Rumors prevailed of a ministerial crisis, including the retirement of the Duke of Padona from the ministry of the interior, and Chasseloup Laubert from that of Algeria and the colonies.

It is expected in France that the conclusion of harvest shows that the crops have been 25 per cent. less productive than last year.

Forts were being armed in the bays of St. Maloes at Cancale. A plan had been prepared for arming the coast from Antibes to Port Vendres. The French outposts on the frontiers of Morocco had been several times fiercely attacked by the native tribes, but they had been repulsed. The government of Morocco was not implicated in these attacks.

ITALY.—The government of Tuscany had notified the plenipotentiaries of the Grand Duke to evacuate the palace within three days. In case of their non-compliance the property of the Grand Duke was to be sequestered.

There has been reports from home that the Pope's health was so shattered that he would probably soon resign, but the latest account says he had perfectly recovered.

Garibaldi had issued a letter publicly acknowledging his indebtedness to the patriotic population of the Italian Tyrol for their heroism during the war.

SPAIN.—Some of the journals say, that Gen. Serano is to be Captain General of Cuba, vice Gen. Concha.

RUSSIA.—The Invalide Russe publishes a telegram confirming the reported capture of Schamyl, during a victorious assault by the Russians. General Daniel, Schamyl's sons, and many others were captured or killed. The Russians took five cannon, and their loss did not exceed 100 men.

TURKEY.—The Times publishes the following special telegram from its correspondent:

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 10.—A conspiracy to assassinate the Sultan has been discovered; 200 persons have been arrested here, among them the Pasha of Albrana, who was apparently chief. Some troops are suspected of participation. The affair originated with a political party.

INDIA.—The Calcutta mail of May 27 reached Aden Sept. 11th. The following news came by the Red Sea telegraph: At the legislative council to tax professions and trades in India, cultivators of land were excepted. The special disarming act passed during the mutiny had been made permanent. The House of Delphi had been deprived of all titular distinctions and privileges forever.

CHINA.—A special telegram from China states that there had been large sales of goods both at Hong Kong and Shanghai. It was therefore inferred that political matters had not experienced any new complication.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFF MARKET.—Wheat steady; Western red at 7s 4d@7s 6d. Corn quiet at an advance of 6d per quarter. Provisions—Beef quiet. Pork steady. Lard quiet. Bacon dull and quotations nominal. Tallow unchanged; sales unimportant. Produce—Sugar steady. Coffee quiet.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Tribune's Washington dispatch says Col. Drinkard, acting Secretary of War, has, at the instance of the President, telegraphed to Gov. Floyd to remain at Old Point as long as is advantageous to his health. He has improved rapidly since his arrival there and had proposed reaching this city to-day. In the absence of Post-master General Holt the President himself has given attention to the subject of the carriage of the California mails. The government has been strongly impressed with the necessity of getting that mail through to a certainty, and hence the decision giving it to the bidder next lowest to Johnson. Great complaint is made by the merchants of New Orleans of the state of things precipitated by the failure of transports of mails from that point, whereby a week is lost to them, so far as California correspondence is concerned.

CHARLESTON, Oct. 1.—The Courier's special New Orleans dispatch gives the following additional items of Mexican intelligence: It was reported that the Bishop of Mexico is willing to guarantee a loan of five millions to Miramon in pledge for church property. The Archbishop and clergy bitterly oppose the policy of their superior. It was reported that General Vidaurri had joined the Gueran party.

An arrival furnishes Rio Janeiro advices to August 16th. The receipts of coffee were trifling, the crop being deficient. The new crop was considered to be good. There was a stock of 80,000 bags in port. The stock of flour amounted to 55,000 barrels, and the market was firm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—A gasometer exploded last night at James Lightbody's machine shop in Jersey city, while Dr. J. S. Smith was engaged in testing a new invention. Thos. Carwell, foreman of the shop, was burned to death, and several others were badly injured.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—This afternoon a fire broke out in the hay press of Wm. F. Hughes, on the corner of Marriott's Lane and Jefferson Avenue. A quantity of new hay had been recently placed in the press, and the fire may have arisen from this cause. The press which has a front of about one hundred feet on Marriott's Lane, and about sixty or seventy feet on the Avenue, was totally destroyed with all its contents. The heat of the burning hay was intense, and when the flames broke through the roof the property in the vicinity became much endangered. Water was very scarce and for a while the conflagration looked as if it would sweep through all the narrow courts in the block. A number of dwellings were also destroyed. The loss will be heavy. A branch of the same property was destroyed on the 9th of June last, and at that time the water was very scarce.

LAFAYETTE, IA., Oct. 1.—Last evening a fire broke out in a row of frame buildings on South Columbia street, occupied as grocery and provision stores. The prompt arrival of the firemen prevented the destruction of the large brick adjoining. While this fire was in progress four other buildings in as many parts of the town were discovered to be on fire, but in time to prevent their entire destruction. It is supposed that the intention was to fire the city for the sake of plunder.

ROCHESTER, Oct. 2.—The Democrat says De Lave's attempt to carry a man across the Genesee River on his back on a tight rope was a decided failure. He lost his balance, but fortunately both adventurers caught one of the ropes. Their perilous situation blanched every cheek among the spectators.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The most intimate friends of Senator Douglas authoritatively deny the truth of the prevailing rumor that he contemplates replying to the late review of his Harper Magazine article, and further say that none is to be published with his sanction or supervision.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Herald's Washington dispatch says, bids for the transportation of supplies to the army in Utah and New Mexico were opened at the War Department last Saturday. The Secretary of War being absent the President deemed it of sufficient importance to go to the department and have the bids opened and registered before him. This unexpected step on the part of the President created some surprise. It appears the old contractors, Majors Russel & Co. will not obtain any one of the three contracts, other bids being lower. It is understood that the bid of A. C. Irving & Co., will take the Utah contract at one dollar and thirty-four cents per pound per hundred miles. The old contract was one dollar and eighty cents. It is said the bids of Childs & Scott will take the two contracts for New Mexico. The magnitude of these contracts may be judged from the fact that the amount of the Utah contract, the first year, was over twenty millions of dollars. Orders have been sent from the Navy Department for the return of the United States Steamer Wabash, the flag ship of the Mediterranean squadron. The flag officer will turn over the command of the squadron to Captian Levy, now in command of the Macedonia.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The money article of the Herald says, private advices from England state that the crops both in that country and throughout Europe, with the exception of Prussia, is not threshing out as was expected, and that the actual yield of wheat will be very much below an average. In Great Britain, France and Russia, under the circumstances, considering the reported spread of the potato disease, some British houses write as though they looked for a fair export from this side. At present, prices do not permit of grain, exporting to England at a profit. A small purchase was made on Friday for English account, and it is understood that some thousands of bushels have been bought for England at Baltimore, but a comparison of quotations shows, that either our prices must fall, or the English prices rise before wheat or flour can be shipped profitably. There are indications of an advance in Great Britain, but as usual it is being anticipated in the west, and the object may thus be defeated.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The [illegible] Lager beer brewery of Messrs. Spegers was entirely destroyed by fire last night. The loss is estimated at $250,000, upon which there is an insurance of $145,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—A conflagration occurred yesterday in Sing Sing prison, destroying the file and auger shop, and the dye house. The loss is $80,000.

CHARLESTON, Sept. 22.—The Charleston Courier contains the speech of Senator Clayton of Delaware, yesterday, at Camden. He favors southern unity, and the development of her resources; repudiates the agitation of the opening of the Slave Trade; and opposes the position of Senator Douglas about unfriendly territorial legislation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Postmaster Fowler to-day received an order for one million of the new government self-ruling stamped envelopes, mainly for the supply of Hotels, Educational Institutions, City Authorities, &c.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The steamer New York sailed for Liverpool at noon to day with upwards of $100,000 in specie.

The steamer Borrussia sailed for Southampton with $160,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The President has recognized Wilhelm Ludwig Kidern as Consul for the Kingdom of Wurtemburg, at Philadelphia.

The Boston Post says, that late affair at Palho ought to serve as a caution to John Bull, how he again undertakes to go to pick-in-to the private matters of John [illegible].

WILMINGTON, (Del.) Oct. 3.—On Saturday evening the City Gas Works entertained a large party to witness the manufacture of gas from water. The demonstration was in every respect satisfactory; the light being very pure and brilliant. One twenty-seventh of the usual capacity of the works can supply the whole city with this gas at all elevations. The light in burners suited to the density of the gas was admirable. It is manufactured under Dr. Sanders of Cincinnati's patent, and is cheaper and clearer than that made from coal. The Directors of the Philadelphia City Gas Works, and many scientific gentlemen, were delighted with the success of the demonstration.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—The Overland mail, with dates to the 9th ult., arrived to-night. Since the sailing of the steamer of the 5th, business has been a good deal interfered with by the [illegible] Election, and but a light demand for goods for the country has been experienced. A number of arrivals have occurred from Atlantic and foreign ports, from which few sales are reported. The market remains firm and quotations unchanged.

The British ship "Forest Monarch" was wrecked on the 24th, she was on her way from San Francisco to Puget Sound.

The State Election on the 7th resulted in the choice of Milton S. Latham, Lecompton Democrat for Governor, by a very large majority, perhaps 20,000 Scott and Burch are probably elected to Congress, although their opponents, Baker and McKibben, who received united vote of the Republicans and Anti-Lecompton parties, have the benefit of a slight doubt in their favor. The Anti-Lecompton candidate for State printer who was also supported by the Republicans, has a slight chance of election. With these possible exceptions, the Democratic Lecompton State ticket is elected by an immense majority. Both branches of the Legislature is largely Democratic.

It will be about a week before the official returns are counted.

The Peoples' Reform ticket being the regular succession of that inaugurated in 1856 by the Vigilance Committee, has again triumphed for [illegible] Governor of San Francisco by a handsome majority.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—A special Washington dispatch to the North American says it is well known in fillibustering circles here that another formidable expedition is preparing against Nicaragua. A portion of the expedition has already succeeded in leaving New York and Charleston, but the parties will make no suspicious demonstration until all the plans are matured and the full force is upon the spot ready for action. Col. Wheat [illegible] in New York will have an important position in the new crusade. The facts can be implicitly relied upon and our government should be awake to their importance.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—It is announced that the steamer St. Louis will depart from this port for San Juan Del Norte with the U. S. mail on Wednesday next. She is to connect with the steamer Pacific and it is stated that arrangements have been made for an extra steamer to call at San Juan Del Sur to transport the mails and passengers to San Francisco in case of the non-arrival of the Pacific.

A dispatch from Washington says Mr. Shannon, of Harrisburg, has been appointed private Secretary to President Buchanan.

ROME, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Prof. Coe, accompanied by Mr. [illegible], made a balloon ascension to-day. When at the height of two miles the balloon bursted, and turned up in the top of the netting, forming a parachute. The voyagers after a perilous descent landed safely in a swamp three miles from the starting point.

The Treasury receipts for the week ending Monday, amounted to $1,593,000; the drafts paid to $1,408,000; the drafts issued to $840,000; the amount subject to draft is $6,143,489; the increase over last week is more than $758,000, or a million dollars within the last two weeks.

Capt. M. S. Miller has been ordered to proceed to Fort Moncocto to assume the duties of Quartermaster General at that point, in place of Chapman, deceased.

The President has appointed Wm. G. Jones as Judge of the U. S. Court for the Northern and Southern districts of Alabama, vice Gayle, deceased.

Gen. Jessup, who was seriously sick in New York, has returned to Washington, being convalescent.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The Herald's Washington dispatch says, Minister McLane had a long interview with the President and Secretary of State to-day in regard to Mexican affairs. Some additional intelligence has been received here since our minister left Vera Cruz, but matters there are unchanged.

A pamphlet will appear in a few days, written under the supervision of Senator Douglas, in reply to the recent able article of Judge Black which caused Mr. Douglas' sudden return to this city. His friends are much annoyed at his exhibition of ill temper in his private conversation.

The President contemplates in the course of a few days a brief visit to Whitland.

Should the Postmaster General return to-morrow, he will probably leave here on Saturday.

The President will remove from the Soldiers' Home to this city on Saturday.

The fear of the failure of the contractor for carrying the mails to California, via Nicaragua, continues to give much uneasiness to Government officials. On Wednesday, Assistant Postmaster-Generals King and Dundas held a long consultation with the President upon the subject.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—The State Agricultural Fair was attended to-day by fifty thousand persons. The display in all departments is highly creditable. The trial of steam fire engines commenced yesterday, and will be concluded to-morrow. The tallest playing yet, was made by the steamer Baltimore from Baltimore, built by Poole & Hunt, having a pump invented by Geo. W. Fulton, of Steubenville, Ohio. The Washington engine of this city, similar in construction has more power, will be tried to-morrow.

The premium for hand engines, 1st class, was competed for this P. M., by the Citizen Fire Co. of Harrisburg and Assistance Fire Co. of this city—awarded to the latter. The Assistance threw 183 feet perpendicularly, and the Citizen 196 feet. Thirty feet were allowed to the Assistance, her chamber being only 9 inch, while the Citizen's is 12 inches.

MONTREAL, Sept. 29.—The new match between the six of the United all England with five Canadians against six of All England with five Canadians, was continued to-day. Nothing could persuade the Canadians to part with the English Cricketers until the match is played out. They, therefore, need not be expected to arrive at New York till Sunday morning.

Parr, Jackson, Hayward and Stephenson, bowled against the United Eleven. Stephenson or Diver were cricket keepers, with Howard or Diver as long stops. The score of the United All England in the first innings was as follows. Coffyn, 13; Grundy none; Carpenter 33; W. S. Smith, none; Sockiser, 8; J. Lillywhite, 28; Pickering, none; Wisden, 43; Fisher, 14; Morgan, 2; Bacon, 7; &c. 16; total 118 runs.

The All England Eleven were bowled against by Grundy and Coffyn; Lockyer acting as cricket-keeper, and Pickering as long stop. At sundown, the score stood as follows: Daffy, 6; Hayard, 18; Caesar, 14; Hardinge, 0; Diver, (not out), 5; Swetenham, 3; Parr, 6; Lockyer, and S. Coffyn, 6; Byes 3. Total, 43.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Times' Washington correspondent says: By dispatches received yesterday the State department is in possession of important information from the new government of Costa Rica, showing the revolution to be popular and the new order of things firmly established. The momentary government which assumed the seat of ejected Mora has given away to a more settled organization, of which Senor Montragena remains the Chief, with Vicinte De Aquilar Julian Valio and Jetsus Jimenez as his Cabinet officers. This administration is represented to be strong, not only in wealth, talent and personal popularity of the gentlemen comprising it, but in the esteem of a larger number of the people, the latter circumstance evinced by addresses forwarded to the President from nearly every quarter of the State, felicitating him and the public upon the fortunate change, and hailing the new order of things with enthusiasm. President Montragena had issued an inaugural proclamation upon assuming office. In this paper, the brevity of which is its conspicuous merit, he responds to the popular voice of congratulation, pointing the general gratitude to Senor Lahiser and Blanco, whose patriotic energy had saved the Republic. Several decrees had been issued to the basis of political reconstruction. Costa Ricans exiled by Mora are recalled.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The recent casting of the principal portion of the Equestrian statue of Washington by Clark Mills having proved a success, a rustic pedestal is to be constructed upon which the work of art is to be elevated at a height of forty feet. The place selected by the President is in a very remote part of the city, but Congress may see the policy of locating it at a more central one. The 22d February will probably be designated for the inauguration of the statue. Senator Hunter is spoken of as the orator on the occasion.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—At the meeting of the Episcopal Convention yesterday the question of the reinstallation of Bishop Onderdonk was brought up on a resolution requesting the House of Bishops to take action on the suspension of the bishop, as to modify the same so as to limit it to a certain time. A very exciting debate ensued, in which Bishop Potter, Drs. Hawks, Tyng, Anthon, and others took part. The Convention adjourned without action.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The steamship Glasgow, from Glasgow, has arrived; her dates are to the 14th ult., and have been anticipated.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—The St. Johns News of Wednesday says that the people of Newfoundland are looking anxiously for the report of the Commissioner appointed by the French and English governments in relation to the fisheries. They will resist any encroachments upon their soil or fishing ground, even if the home government made an arrangement with France.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—Another drenching rain this morning rendered the roads to the fair grounds worse than yesterday. Still the number of visitors was as great as any previous day. The proceedings in the arena began at an early hour.

The amphitheatre is densely thronged with anxious spectators to witness the competition for the thousand dollar prize of the best roadster stallion. This ring, which consisted of forty entries, was probably the best and most valuable collection of roadsters ever assembled together in the country. After a spirited contest of about an hour, during which the merits of the different horses were fully tested, the blue wreath hung gracefully on the neck of Stockbridge Chief, amidst the vociferous applause of the enthusiastic thousands.

Stockbridge Chief was sired by Hill's Black Hawk Vermont, owned by Cooper & Grain, of Hamilton county, Ohio.

The regular prize of $150 for the best roadster was awarded to Green Mountain, sired by Sherman Morgan, owned by Elias Dorsey, of Jefferson county, Ky. This horse was the most formidable competitor of Stockbridge Chief for the thousand dollar premium.

To morrow the thousand dollar premium for thoroughbred stallion will be awarded, when a large number of the finest horses in the Union, including the celebrated Lexington, will compete for the prize. In consequence of the inclement weather, the progress of the fair is much retarded, and awarding of sweepstake prizes will be postponed till Monday.

LEAVENWORTH, Sept. 30.—Hon. Anson Burlingame addressed the people here to-night, and will probably participate in the canvass for delegate.

The Utah mail arrived to-day, also the Denver city express with dates to the 23d, and $6,000 in dust.

The increase of crime in and about Denver and Auraria had become so alarming that it demanded prompt action for suppression.

The State organization was defeated by 3,000 majority. Some fraudulent voting was alleged.

The election for delegate to Congress comes off early in October. Gen. Larimer is a candidate.

A hunting party of Arrapahoes had returned, reporting a contagion among the buffaloes, killing them by thousands.

Prospecting had penetrated to the head waters of the Blue, a tributary of the Colorado, where rich leads were discovered.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.—The yellow fever is raging at Brownsville and for thirty miles above.

[illegible] is preparing to march on the City of Mexico, with six thousand troops.

Maj. Neighbors, Indian agent at Fort Belknap, Texas, was killed on the 15th, by two residents—not arrested.

The defeat of the Liberals under Doblado at Leon, by Woll, is confirmed.

Miramon has re-established a decree of Santa Anna, forbidding foreigners from entering Mexico with arms, and invading designs, under the penalty of death.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.—The steamship Philadelphia, with advices from Havana to the 27th inst., arrived here to-day. It was rumored at Havana that Gen. Concha would be relieved some time in November by General Serrano. The stock of sugar at Havana amounted to 170,000 boxes. Molasses generally dull. Sterling exchange dull at 11¼@11½. Exchange on New York, 3@5 premium.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Prof. La Mountain's balloon has been seen at Harrisville, Lewis county, passing over the New York wilderness, going due east, at a great elevation. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the discovery of the bodies alive, and $500 if dead. A party will go to the woods to-morrow to institute a search.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—The Republicans of the Sixth Congressional District of Illinois have nominated John M. Palmer to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Hon. T. L. Harris.

The National Democratic State Central Committee of Illinois have called a Convention at Springfield, on the 30th of January, to choose delegates to the Charleston Convention.

MONTREAL, Sept. 30.—The second match was decided to-day in favor of the United All England and five Canadians. All England's first innings were 96. The English cricketers will leave to-morrow morning for New York.

A boiler in the Girard Hotel exploded this afternoon killing two men.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—The Protestant Episcopal Convention of the diocese of New York, yesterday, decided after an elaborate and to some extent unnecessary debate to ask of the House of Bishops at the next general Convention, the remission of the sentence of suspension which fifteen years ago condemned Bishop Onderdonk to retirement. This remission, if granted, will restore the Bishop to his Episcopal functions, but if the wishes of this Convention are complied with, the whole administrative jurisdiction of the diocese will remain in the hands of the present provisional Bishop, the Right Rev. Dr. Potter. The measure met with ardent opposition, and was passed in the face of a remonstrance from Dr. Potter himself. The Convention adjourned finally at the close of its evening session.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Prof. La Mountain has been traced but little farther. He was last seen over the town of Pitcairn, St. Lawrence county, fifty miles due northeast from here at a supposed altitude of five miles. He was going due east with great velocity. Mr. Morrison, of Troy, his agent, purposes instituting a thorough search for him.

—The Pickaway County Fair at Circleville closed yesterday. The entries and receipts were much greater than at any previous Fair, and everything passed off well.

—The population of Delaware, according to census just taken, is 3,714.

AN APOLOGY WHICH MAKES THE MATTER WORSE.—The New Orleans correspondent of the Charleston Courier makes the following remarks concerning the recent shooting of Dr. GRAHAM:

"The Press here have commented severely on the fact that so many public officers—the Street Commissioner, an Alderman, and other conservatives of the public peace (among them a policeman, with whom Dr. Graham talked and drank the evening of his death; showed him his pistol; spoke of his determination to kill Toledano at sight), should have known that, crazed with liquor (and then known to be most dangerous), this unfortunate man had gone about the streets for two or three days, openly avowing his determination to kill a citizen at sight; and that he should not have been arrested, or got out of the way, until his fury was over. This is certainly a neglect of duty; but it must be remembered that if any leading public officer had had Graham arrested for carrying a concealed weapon, he would have drawn on himself, at some future day, the formidable ire of the man; furthermore, the police knew that their own chief was related to the deceased, who had besides many and influential friends belonging to and leaders in the party that holds the city government and that appoints these very policemen."

What is the use, asks the New York Times of pretending to have a government at all, if the character here given of it is correctly drawn? Personal fear, private relationship, party influence and personal friendships, all combine to disarm the law and permit a drunken madman to hunt a citizen day after day through the streets, as he would hunt a wild beast? We may as well go back to the age of barbarism at once.

LOUIS NAPOLEON'S MARRIAGE.—On the subject of Louis Napoleon's marriage Mr. Lester says: "He had no home. Being an elected sovereign, chosen by the universal voice of his fellow countrymen to stand at the head of his nation, he, above all other men, could lay a fair claim to think for a while of himself, and in the battle of life for an empire, give a little while to what every man of feeling and heroism finds sooner or later pressed to his bosom—thoughts of a wife, a home, a child! Like himself, as he has always been, he again went to the people. He chose for his wife one of the noblest maidens of Spain, and one of the most gifted and beautiful beings in the world—Eugenie Mlle. de Montijo, the Countess de Teba. The marriage was celebrated at the Tuileries, January 29. On the following day (Sunday) the religious ceremony was performed with imperial pomp, taste and splendor at the Cathedral of Notre Dame. The past, with all its classic and touching memories, came back freighted with the glory, the chivalry, the love, the devotion of the Middle Ages. The bridegroom and the bride—both in the full possession of imperial power, and both freshly sprung from the bosom of the people—such a spectacle may well have thrilled the palpitating thousands in that vast Cathedral with intense emotion—melted the young Empress of the Napoleon dynasty to tears—illuminated all Paris that night, and beckoned old Italy to an approaching resurrection. Eugenie has been the good angel of the hero of Solferino, as Josephine was of the hero of Marengo."

THE POWER OF MEMORY.—The following notice of a singular faculty possessed by the great New England rhetorician appears in a Northern journal:

As was his custom in delivering the "Washington Oration," Mr. Everett spoke the whole of his late eulogy on Webster without any notes whatsoever. It is a most wonderful exhibition of the power of memory, and one rarely, if ever, met with in conjunction with such great mental power as distinguishes Mr. Everett.

This extraordinary power of memory enables Mr. EVERETT to give to his greater addresses all the exquisite finish which the most sedulous care in composition can bestow, while by long practice he is enabled to impart quite an air of extemporaneous effusion to the delivery of terrors a week, a month, or perhaps several years old.

A MOTHER'S INFLUENCE.—How touching the tribute of the Hon. T. A. BENTON to his mother's influence:

My mother asked me never to use tobacco; I have never touched it from that to the present day; she asked me not to game, and I have never gambled, and I cannot tell who is winning and who is losing in games that can be played; she admonished me, too, against hard drinking, and whatever capacity for endurance I have at present, and whatever usefulness I may attain in life, I have attributed to having complied with her pious and correct wishes.—When I was seven years of age she asked me not to drink, and then I made a resolution of total abstinence, at a time when I was sole constituent member of my own body, and that I have adhered to it through all time, I owe it to my mother.

WHAT IS A G. R. J. A.?—It was recently advertised in a New York paper, that an equipage had been forwarded there for the G. R. J. A. of the Sons of Malta—whereupon numerous inquiries were instituted as to the meaning of the initials. A correspondent of the New York Post undertook to answer, as follows: "I have heard many inquiries relative to the meaning of the letters, I cannot speak with authority, but am informed that G. R. J. A. is an office of honor and profit in the order of the Sons of Malta—an extensive and rapidly growing association—and that no member can fill this responsible place who is not both a charitable and competent man, and in good standing."

A few evenings since, while the curtain was down between the acts of the play in Laura Keene's Theatre, a woman rose in the dress circle and proceeded to address the house, exhorting them to repentance, and go in a way to lead the audience to believe that she was demented. She was quietly led from the Theater, and peace was restored. It now turns out that she was not crazy at all, but that she undertook the preaching feat to win a wager of $25. The winner of the bet is said to be a Mr. John Hawkins.—N. Y. Tribune.

CINCINNATI HOG AND CATTLE MARKET.—CINCINNATI, Oct. 5.—Beef cattle were exceedingly dull in the forepart of the week, and prime sold as low as $3; the supply being large. Towards the close the feeling was rather better, and prices improved somewhat, and at the market, Monday, the range of prices was $2 25@2 25 gross, and in one or two instances $3 30 was obtained for small lots choice beeves.

Hogs dull and selling at $4 50@4 75 gross for good, and $5@5 25 do for extra large.

The supply of sheep has been light, and the quality inferior. Prices range from $1 25@2 each.

Wheat may be quoted in our market to-day at 90@93 cents. It has brought freely one dollar for good lots, but the tendency seems slightly downward.—Indianapolis Sentinel, Oct. 4.

THE SCANDINAVIAN PILLS AND PURIFIER.—The following flattering notice is taken from the Portsmouth (Ohio) Scioto Valley Republican of April 3, 1858:

SCANDINAVIA.—A friend writes to us for our "real opinion" of Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies—where he can obtain them—and why they are called "Scandinavian," and we are frequently asked the same questions. Scandinavia is the ancient name of Sweden and Norway, and a Scandinavian, that is a Swede or Norwegian, affectionately calls his country "Scandinavia," in the same sense as we speak of "Columbia," or "The Union." By the way, there are over nine thousand Scandinavian families in Dane county, Wisconsin. Although a citizen of this country for many years, Dr. Roback is a Swede by birth; and compounds his Medicines of Swedish herbs. We think the name is very appropriate. We have the very highest opinion of the Medicines, and of Dr. Roback himself, who is not only a singularly skillful physician, but a gentleman of the Old School, as we know personally. Our advertisement columns will answer the rest of our friend's letter. —See advertisement.

All, especially young men, should read the advertisement of the "Medical Dispensary" at Cincinnati, in another column.

CITY NOTICES.

MCCOY'S COMMERCIAL COLLEGE.—Among our advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel L. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education in the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated, and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid the baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of appreciation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution, of similar character, which speaks for itself:

DUFF'S MERCANTILE COLLEGE, [illegible]

PROF. SAMUEL L. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending [illegible], that your [illegible] any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the State. As to the penmanship department you have no rival at home, and but few equals in the country.

"If music be the food of love, play on; Give me excess of it."

The charms of MUSIC have been sung by every bard who "lisp'd in numbers" from Shakespeare to the humblest wight that ever weaved a couplet, and need not be repainted now. Apropos, Mr. Edward Cornelison, whose address is at the music store of Messrs Seltzer & Webster, is a thorough Piano-tuner, and is most cordially commended to those having instruments out of tune. He removes stains from ivory keys, is a master of his business, and will visit the neighboring towns and vicinity if needed. He has our endorsement as an affable and agreeable gentleman.

E. F. JENNINGS, Commission Merchant and liquor dealer, on Broad street, has a lot of very superior Bottled Crab Cider, which is an excellent substitute for champagne. It is delicious out of a cool cellar, in warm weather.

THE CAPITOL RESTAURANT is centrally located, and its Proprietor JOHN O'HARA is determined to furnish all the luxuries that can be found in market, for his customers. His larder is always bountifully supplied with every variety. His liquors cannot be surpassed in the city, and his cigars have been procured at an expense that ought to warrant them the best.

Hats are of various patterns and styles.—Some like one kind, while others admire a different variety. Call at RUDISILL'S if you want a superior article.

RUMSEY Shoe establishment on the corner of High and Town streets, is the place to procure capital boots and shoes. They have made cans for the last two or three years.

ROBERTS & DICKINSON continue to furnish their customers with delicious bread. "JOHN" says that he don't care if putty is three cents a pound [illegible] he will rise in the world to judge by his bread.

The Billiard Room on State street is one of the most agreeable lounging places in the city. The tables are superior, and every thing is as neat as a drawing-room, which it is, when the corks fly.—MORGAN deserves the liberal custom he has.

SODA.—That marble fountain of our poetical friend J. H. DENIG on Town street, is furnishing this sparkling beverage ad infinitum, and as cool as ice can make it. How convenient for the ladies to "take a glass" on their visits to the Gwynne Block!

CHEAP DRY GOODS.—Those who are in search of cheap and serviceable Dry Goods, as well as the most fashionable styles, would do well to call at the elegant stores of J. G. GUTTERSON on High and Broad streets. They will find accommodating and attentive clerks who will display some of the finest goods to be found in the city; and the prices such as will suit the times.

SHUPHER & WESTFIELD are the agents of Knabe & Co's. celebrated pianos, which really are becoming known all over the world, as unsurpassed, unequaled.

Blood Purifier and Blood Pills.

DR. ROBACK'S SCANDINAVIAN REMEDIES.

WHEN DR. ROBACK, the renowned Swedish Physician introduced his Blood Purifier and Blood Pills to the United States, he set forth in plain language their curative properties. This was years ago. The task of recommending them has since been taken out of his hands. Enlightened men, whose character for sound judgment and philosophy, give their opinions weight in the community, men who observe, reflect, and make "assurance doubly sure" before they decide—are everywhere approving and urging the use of these unequalled Preparations. All who confide in the wisdom and honesty of this class, or who choose to investigate for themselves, are now of one mind on this important subject.

Dr. Roback invites the attention of the sick to the Original Letters,

from members of the Medical Profession, Editors of public journals, well known Merchants and Farmers, and Ladies of the highest respectability, giving accounts of extraordinary cures wrought by the Remedies, of which cures they themselves were

Eye Witnesses.

These parties may be consulted personally or by letter by those who have any doubt upon the subject. The evidence in the possession of Dr. Roback, which is at all times accessible to the public, establishes the following

Facts:

That the BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS have been proved by analysis to

Contain no Mineral;

That they cure the almost universal complaint,

Dyspepsia,

with unerring certainty, and in a very short time. That after all other Medicines have proved useless, they relieve

Liver Complaint,

and restore the health and strength of the sufferer. To

Sick Females,

who have languished for years in helpless weakness and despondency, recuperate with almost miraculous rapidity under their invigorating operation. That all sexual disabilities are removed by their cordial and gently stimulating properties. That they recruit

Shattered Constitutions,

however they may have been injured with and also that their direct tendency is to

Lengthen Life,

and render it enjoyable. That, operating directly [illegible] the poison of disease on the blood, they

Cause soon to Heal,

[illegible] discharge from the system, every taint of Scrofula whether hereditary or otherwise. That they

Recruit the Debilitated,

and that there is no disease of the Stomach, and Bowels the liver, the nervous system, the skin, glands or muscles in which they do not give prompt relief, and (if administered before the very citadel of life has been invaded,) effect a positive and perfect cure.

Bear in mind that the SCANDINAVIAN VEGETABLE BLOOD PILLS are endorsed by the experience of thousands [illegible] every avenue and organ of the system, and to expel it thoroughly and permanently.

No one can doubt their superiority after one single trial—they are not only better but, in fact, cheaper than any other Pills, for it takes a less number of them to produce a better effect.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this paper from time to time.

Dr. Roback's Medical Almanac and Family Adviser, containing a great variety of interesting and valuable Medical information, can be had gratis of any of his Agents throughout the country.

In treating complicated cases, Dr. Roback may be consulted personally or by letter enclosing a stamp.

LETTER FROM O. L. CLARKE.

[illegible] Thursday, Aug. 4, 1859.

FRIEND WINCHESTER:—On leaving Marietta I am not sure that I did not promise to write to you. If I did so without a promise, it were better done at once, and then I shall be in condition to enjoy sleep and beefsteak, and be at rest with my own conscience. I have been troubled much of late with visions of unwritten letters and broken promises, and of the awful consequences hereafter. Sundry letters and epistles, for which I stand pledged as solemnly as our forefathers to the Declaration, have gathered nightly in my [illegible], and taking the form of witches like those in Macbeth, have danced war-dances in my dreams, and screamed in my ears those awful words, "letters! letters! letters!" Again they have combined in the form of a horrible night-mare, and [illegible] me through the regions of Pluto, where the little devils gathered along the road, looking very like our young Americans in Marietta, echoing in accents odorous of sulphur, the terrible words of the aforesaid witches. Those unwritten letters have been absolutely worse with me than was Hamlet's vision of the "unwept [illegible]."

In what I here say, I of course have no reference to you, but mean those many others who out of politeness asked me to write to them, not caring a straw to hear from me. I hereby give notice that I solemnly repudiate all such contracts. They are without consideration, and therefore void, according to the decision of our Supreme Court in the late Bank tax case.—(See Sebrath opinion of the Court as expressed by Chief Justice Bartley.)

Indeed, it gives me great pleasure to write to you, and to the world at large through the columns of the HOME NEWS, a paper which has long since passed its [illegible] at home, and in fact rivals the circulation of the Ledger. Go on, Winchester. You are expanding. It is a law of nature. You are only fulfilling your destiny! And let me here say by way of episode, that when the great Douglas becomes President (in 1860) and his policy develops till Yankee Doodle is expanded from ocean to ocean and from pole to pole, I hope every family from Greenland to Patagonia, will subscribe, pay for, and read the HOME NEWS, its advertisements, and even the foreign correspondence. From the [illegible] of the [illegible] you may infer that I have suffered some great wrong at the hands of the world, and am eager for revenge.—Not at all. I hold that mankind need [illegible] and trials and adversity in this world to fit them for the next. Matrimony, it is true, does the thing up pretty well, but yet it should be made more a [illegible]. Long obituaries, histories of travel and funeral sermons preached over great [illegible] should be more read by the gay world. You remember the case of Job. It is true, we have no authentic account of his ever reading foreign correspondence, but he had more afflictions, of a milder nature perhaps, that made him a [illegible]. I hope your readers will turn to the Good Book and contrast his situation with their own, and if they do not envy the man, let them read this letter to the end.

I arrived at New York Saturday morning, July 23 ultimo, and immediately proceeded to the foot of Chamber st., and secured passage on board the good steamer Vigo, which was to sail for Liverpool at twelve o'clock M. precisely. I was on board a few minutes before time, and busied myself in stowing away my luggage in one of the present little rooms imaginable, looking into the drawers, and wondering at the many conveniences such a little [illegible] could afford, and arrived on deck just in time to witness a scene, common I presume to such occasions, but one of the most impressible I ever beheld. The pier was crowded with the friends, brothers, sisters, lovers of those about to depart, and there were farewells spoken as if they were to be the last. Some of the latter were sobbing as if their dear hearts were breaking, while many a strong man wiped away an honest tear. And when the bell rang and our guns fired the signal of starting, there were kissings such as you will find described only in Tennyson's [illegible], shaking of hands and earnest God-speeding on.

Our vessel swung from her moorings and [illegible]. We glided down the Bay, giving a salute, which was responded to on shore as we passed the Battery. Then all was still, save the beating of the wheels. Passengers, including invalids, gathered on deck and gazed in silence, some with sorrow but all with admiration on the beautiful scenery, spread like pictures, on either shore. Taking in the whole landscape, the Empire City in her wealth and beauty sitting upon the shore, reflecting in one bright picture a type of the American Nation—Brooklyn, with her glistening spires pointing, like her great preacher, in a direction she seems careless to travel herself—Long Island with her green shores stretching down on the left—Staten, the Governor's and the lesser isles seeming more like the creations of art floating upon the ocean. These combine to form a scene of surpassing beauty.—Next to Niagara and Harper's Ferry, without the transcendant grandeur of either but with the splendor of nature and art combined, I think it the most beautiful picture I ever beheld.

At Sandy Hook our pilot was discharged, and returned to the city, in his boat, taking with him such letters as the passengers had entrusted to his care, to be mailed on the shore. I did not write any. I pity the man who could. But one wretch could be found on board mean enough to write letters as we passed down that beautiful bay, and I have avoided him ever since.

"We was as dark as Erebus,
Let [illegible] him be branded."

I remained on deck till the last dim outlines of my native land faded from view. It was gone—yet I lingered and strained my eyes for another view—may be my last,—but the waves mocked me with their dashings, and left nothing but the eternal blue of the sky and ocean before me and around. That night the sun set magnificently. His honest old face went to sleep in smiles, for a time lighting up the whole western sky and horizon and dyeing the sea with crimson far back as the eye could reach. The night was moonless, but the stars came forth and spread the heavens with a richer light than moonlight given. They seemed to speak to the wanderer of home and friends and loved ones far away. In them he read lessons of trust and confidence, and his pulses beat warmer at the thought of those whose truth had remainded unsullied through long years of trial. God bless them, and make the wanderer's heart to them, generous as the ocean, and constant as the stars.

We touched at Cork to-day, and will be in port, they say, to-morrow morning.—Hence I write you this that it may be mailed by the first steamer, which leaves soon after we get in. Our voyage has been very pleasant, except two days—last Saturday and Sunday, during which we were beat about in a most merciless manner. It was impossible to keep one's feet, or even in bed without being thrown madly against the walls or at full length on the floor. During the gale most of the passengers were very sea sick, but it did not effect me in the least. When it did not rain I staid on deck—the pleasantest place about the ship—and witnessed the grand old ocean in the sublime frenzy of storm, rolling her waves like mountains, and dashing the sea foam at the very stars. They beat our steamer about like a feather, and more than once swept over the upper deck, drenching two or three land lubbers who clung to the riging and refused to go below. You can form no adequate idea of the sublimity of such a scene without being witness to it. This alone was worth a trip across the Atlantic.

But while the elements were thus raging without, scenes were being enacted in the state rooms below, of a less romantic character. Any Mark Tapley in the world would have been "jolly" under such circumstances. The sublime comedy of the whale throwing Jonah upon terra firma was enacted in mimic in nearly every state room on board. Thank my blessed fortune, I escaped the horrors of nausea, and save a few bumps and bruises, those rough hours were to me the pleasantest of the voyage. Monday morning again the sea subsided to a calm, and the passengers, somewhat paler than before, gathered on deck to while away the hours—some with dancing, others reading, or engaged in conversation as they were disposed.

Many amusing incidents have occurred on board which I will not trouble you in this to recount. I will reserve to tell you viva voce what conversation was carried on in the next room, which is occupied by a young lady and her mother, (young lady's named first now-a-day's of course,)—how she wished she could be sea-sick—"it would be so 'funny'"—how the mother chided—how the young lady got her wish in spite of her mother—and how she sang a long song consisting chiefly of chorus, running somewhat in this style:—

"Oh dear! oh-o! oh-o-o! oh-o-w-o-o-ol Bless me, I shall die! oh-o! oo-o-ol oh-o-o-o-ol!"

It was an earnest song, in which she forgot to lisp, but I think I have heard sweeter songs at home. 'Pon my honor, I could not help hearing it, the walls are not detraned, as they should be, like Mr. Sparrowgrass' floors, and as the officers refused to furnish cotton to stuff in my ears, I was forced to listen, though you may be sure it was very much against my will. I will then tell you of a young gentleman who would remind you of Dr. Holmes' "young man they call John;" how he fell desperately in love with Miss Sally—a planter's daughter; how he saw her eating onions at dinner, and forthwith ceased his suit, swearing that onions were stronger than love, and she might go to H—ah-tax; how they compromised the onion question, and how John swears he will "go in for" her if they have to live on onions! But space and propriety forbid that I should dwell on such subjects.

I cannot close without saying a word of our trusty old ship. And here it occurs to me that there are two things in the world, at least, whose reputation should be above suspicion—a vessel and a woman. The faintest breath of slander, and both are tainted mortally. And there is reason in this. He who embarks on a long voyage, involving his life and his happiness, should know the vessel in which he places his trust to be strong enough to weather, at least, an ordinary storm.—Alas! how many go down to sea in beautiful ships, glistening with pink sails and veneered hulls that look splendidly in port, but no sooner leave their moorings and have to breast the waves, than they go to pieces almost in sight of land, leaving the poor fellows to cling to the wrecks the balance of their days! Better forever remain land-lubbers on shore. Our ship, fortunately, is not one of that kind, she has weathered many a storm, and yet her beauty is unimpaired and her virtue secure. She threads the water with her thundering wheels as if she scorned all below and bade defiance to the worst elements above.—I shall return on her, next trip, if I do not get the Great Eastern, which sails for Portland the first of October.

Chance has thrown me with very agreeable company, among whom is a live Buckeye—my room-mate, E. Gest, Esq., of Cincinnati, well known to the Railroad world as President and former Receiver of the Cincinnati, Wilmington & Zanesville Railroad. Also, Mr. Bakewell, of St. Louis, with whom I have had the pleasure of traveling all the way from Marietta, also, Dr. Patterson, of Georgia; a warm friend and admirer of Hon. Alex. A. Stephens, and by the way, a Douglas man for the next Presidency.

Our Cork newspapers give us the first reliable news of peace, and its terms as agreed upon at Villafranca. On hearing the news our enthusiastic French passengers swung their caps and shouted, "Vive! Vive Napoleon!" and struck up the Marseillaise hymn, in which they were joined by everybody who had a voice to sing.—The papers state that Louis Napoleon will visit London soon; also, which is of more interest to Americans, that Mr. Ten Broeck with his American horses, has been winning a succession of golden honors on the English turf. I suspect the loyalty of the American whose patriotism does not extend to the horses. Let them keep Tom Sayers the master of the ring; but give us the Chess champion and the Goodwood cups!

I shall remain in Liverpool for a day's rest and observation, then away to the great world of London.

Yours, always, O. L.

A FLYING GUESS.—An Irish bricklayer was one day brought to the Edinburgh infirmary, severely injured by a fall from a house top. The medical man in attendance asked the sufferer at what time the accident occurred.

"Two o'clock, your honor," was the brief reply.

On being asked how he came to fix the hour so accurately, he answered:

"Because I saw the people at dinner through an open window, as I was coming down!"

Blackberrying.

"Ah! Sam, she's gone dead."

"Is she dead, Bones?"

"Yes, Sam. She sent for me three days after she died."

"Oh, no, Bones, you mean three days previous to her decease."

"No. She had no niece; she was an orphan."

"I mean three days before she departed this earthly tenement."

"Sir."

"That is, three days before she died."

"Oh, yes! Well, I went down to see her; went up to de bedside wid de bed in my eyes."

"You mean with tears in your eyes."

"Yes, wid de pillows in my eyes. Ses she, Bones, I'm goin' to leave dis world ob care."

"What did you reply?"

"I said I didn't care much. Den she axed me if I would go to de pothecary shop for medicine. I said yes; so I went down to Dr. Night Bell—"

"No, not to Dr. Night Bell; that's the name of the bell on the door—the night bell."

"Well, I called him Dr. Night Bell, anyhow."

"I presume he was a very good physician?"

"No, he wasn't fishin'; he has at home."

"Oh, no; I mean he was a doctor of some note."

"Yes; he was counting out his notes when I went in."

"No, Bones! You do not understand. I mean he was a doctor of some standing."

"No; he wasn't standin', he was sittin' on a three-legged stool."

"Pshaw! I mean he was a doctor of some reputation."

"Yes; he was dar; he was a nice feller He was de clerk."

"Who was the clerk?"

"Rep-utation."

"Well, what did the doctor give you?"

"He gabe me a piece ob paper."

"A prescription."

"No, it was a paper."

"Of course it was on paper; nevertheless a prescription. What did it say on the paper?"

"It was full of chalk marks, made with a pencil. He sed I must get two dozen fish hooks—no, seven—an' put it a quart of molasses an' boil it down; den gib her de broth. So I went up to de bar—"

"No; you mean the counter."

"He didn't count dem; he weighed dem out."

"Well, was there any efficacy in the dose?"

"No; nuffin in but fish hooks."

"I mean was the medicine in any way efficacious?"

"Now, look here, Sam, be so kind as to 'dress me in the English language."

"Well, then, Bones, I mean did the medicine do her any good?"

"It would have cured her, but the poor gal in absence of mind, instead of takin' de brof, took de fish hooks, and dey killed her."

"Then that must have been her funeral I saw last Wednesday?"

"Noh wasn't." De doctor says I can't bury her until next summer!"

"Why not, Bones?"

"Kase dat's de best time to go out blackberryin."—Geo. Christy's Ethiopian Jokes.

AN AFFECTIONATE PARTING.—The Albany Express has some subscribers who don't pay for their papers. The Express bids them good bye in the following tender terms:

"This week we strike from our list only about fifty subscribers who will not pay their due to the printer. In doing so we take them by the hand, and with tears in our eyes bid them an affectionate farewell. Good bye, old subs! Take care of yourselves. Sometimes think of the Express, which you have read so long for nothing. Sponge upon some other printer now for a while. A change of diet will doubtless be good for you. Poor old fellows! We are a little sorry to turn you out on the dark night without a lamp, but it must be so. Strike for the nearest neighbor's light. He may let you in and feed you for a year or two, upon the strength of your honorable promises to pay at the end of that time. For ourselves, we have enough of these curious pledges to supply our cabinet for the present. We have labeled them carefully, and they are open to general inspection. With many thanks for your self-sacrificing indulgence of us, and for your honest appreciation of the obligation existing toward our office, we again, and finally, say farewell forever."

☞ An old joker, who never yielded the palm to any one in reeling a knotty yarn, was put to his trumps at hearing a traveler state that he once saw a brick house placed upon runners and drawn up a hill to a more favorable location, some half a mile distant. "What do you think of that, Uncle Ethel?" said a by-stander. "O, fudge!" said the old man, "I once saw a two-story stone house, down east, drawn by oxen three miles." A dead silence ensued; the old man evidently had the worst of it, and he saw it. Gathering all his energies, he bit off a huge bit of pig-tail by way of gathering time for thought. "They drew the stone house," said the old man, ejecting a quantity of tobacco juice towards the fire-place, "but that wasn't the worst of the job; after they'd done that, they went back and drawed the cellar." The stranger gave in.

☞ An ambitious young printer-tragedian, in Boston, seeing an extra-dressed young lady pass the window lately, exclaimed in quite theatrical style:

"Gents! by the ghosts of Mark Anthony and Hamlet! there goes the prettiest little girl—why—in fact—she is composed of rouge, chalk, and crinoline, with a patent lever movement. I shall run—speak to her—exchange cards—have leave to go and see her—take her out to walk—give her ice-cream, lose and strawberries—propose marriage—find a gentleman to officiate—get buckled and live happy for the remainder of my life!"

His companions in the office, thinking him somewhat rapid, advised him by all means to take a shower-bath in advance.

☞ THE TEN COMMANDMENTS, adopted by the "craft," and expected to be observed:

1. Enter softly.
2. Sit down quietly.
3. Subscribe for the paper.
4. Don't touch the poker.
5. Engage in no controversy.
6. Don't smoke.
7. Keep six feet from the table.
8. Don't talk to the printers.
9. Hands off the papers.
10. Eyes off the manuscript.

Gentlemen observing these rules when entering a printing office, will greatly oblige the printers and need not fear the devil.

The ladies who sometimes bless us with their presence for a few moments, are not expected to keep the rules very strictly, and indeed it will be agreeable to us, especially if they are handsome, to have them break the eighth as often as convenient.

Boys, unless accompanied by their fathers, are particularly requested to keep their hands in their pockets.

Sons of Malta.

"Jeems" was recently initiated into the order of the Sons of Malta, and graphically describes his introduction into the "Vale of Mystery" as follows:

"You are first grabbed and thrown into a tub of cold water, and forthwith several large men begin to stick pins into you.—Hauling you out of the tub of water, they rush you into another department, and now new men make a lunge after you, dressed in disguise, and immediately commence pouring hot molasses into your hair and boots. Meanwhile, a stream of cold water is flooded on to you, and a man dressed in black thrusts a snuff-box in front of your nose, and all at once you begin to sneeze vociferously, and the eager crowd begins to laugh and hurrah.—Shoving you further along, the chief men and bottle-washers grab you by the nose, and coat-tail, and in this way rip every bit of dry goods loose from your person, and again the crowd roars with tumultuous laughter at your nude state, with five or six men holding on to your hair and toes, forcing you up a soaped pole with pins and sharp sticks. You now begin to think you are forsaken by all of God's people, and the devil has certainly got possession of you, knocking you on the head so that you can see stars as numerous as they are in the milky-way. You are handled in this kind of tantalizing way for two hours, when the officers give you a large dose of liverwort and tar, and then let you go. Fun!"

You Will be Wanted.

Take courage, my lad. What if you are but an humble, obscure apprentice—a poor neglected orphan—a scoff, and a byeword for the thoughtless and gay, who despise virtue in rags, because of its tatters. Have you an intelligent mind, untutored though it be? Have you a virtuous aim, a pure desire, and an honest heart? Depend upon it, some of these days you will be wanted. The time may be long deferred—you may grow to manhood, and you may even reach your prime ere the call is made; but virtuous aims, pure desires and honest hearts are too few and sacred to not be appreciated—not to be wanted. Your virtue shall not always hide you as with a mantle—obscurity shall not always veil you from the multitude.—Be chivalric in your combat with circumstances. Be ever active, however small may be your sphere of action. It will surely enlarge with every movement, and your influence will have continued increase.

"In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,
Be not like dumb driven cattle,
Be a hero in the strife."

Work on, for surely you will be wanted, and then comes your reward. Lean upon the sacred verity, "I have never seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." Never despair, for the lives of great and good men abundantly testify that when clouds are the blackest, and the tempest is fiercest, the hope is faint, a "still small voice" will be heard saying, "come up higher," you are wanted, and all your powers will find employment.—Therefore take heart, young man, for ere long you will find that you will be wanted.

PUZZLED PIG.—One of our Western farmers being very much troubled by his sow breaking into the cornfield, search was instituted in vain for the hole in the rail fence. Failing to find one, an attempt was made to drive out the animal by the way she entered; but of course without success. The owner resolved to watch her proceedings, and posted at night to a fence corner, he saw her enter at one end of a hollow log, outside of the field, and emerge at the other end within the enclosure. "I have you now, old lady," cried he. According he proceeded, after turning her out once more, to so place the log (it being crooked) that both ends opened outside of the field.

The next day the animal entered her accustomed place, and shortly after emerged again. Her astonishment, says our informant, at finding herself in the position whence she started, is too ludicrous to be described. She looked this way and that, grunted her dissatisfaction, and finally returned to the orignal starting place, and after a deliberate survey of things to satisfy herself that all was right, again entered the log. On emerging once more on the wrong side, she evinced even more surprise than before, and turning out retraced the log in an opposite direction,—Finding this effort alike in vain, after looking long and attentively at the position of things, with a short, angry grunt, of disappointment, and perhaps fear, she turned around and started off at a brisk run, nor could coaxing or driving ever induce a visit to that part of the field. She seemed to have a "superstition concerning the spot."

GRAMMATICAL ACCURACY.—The local editor of the National Democrat, of Cleveland, tells the following:

Twenty or twenty-five years ago, old Phleg, down in Summit County, was telling his friend Jones concernin' of a fight. Phleg had very little education, but Jones was a man of right smart reading. So Phleg went on a tellin'; "and says he, "they fit and fit!"

"And," says Jones, "did they keep a fitten?"

Old Phleg drawing himself up, and looked as sour as buttermilk into Jones face, says he:

"You're cursed precise about langwige—fout, then, blast you!"

☞ A young lady at a ball was asked by a lover of serious poetry whether she had seen Crabbe's Tales?

"Why, no," she answered, "I did not know that crabs had tails."

"I beg your pardon, Miss," said he, "I mean have you read Crabbe's Tales?"

"And I assure you, sir, I did not know that red crabs, or any other crabs, had tails."

THE MISSING AERONAUTS.—Our telegraphic dispatches yesterday brought the intelligence that Mr. LA MOUNTAIN, the æronaut, and his companion, Mr. HADDOCK, who ascended in a balloon from Watertown, N. Y., on the 22nd, had not been heard from notwithstanding the dispatch from New York to the contrary of the previous day, that they had descended safely near Kingston, C. W. The Albany Atlas and Argus of Wednesday, alluding to the apprehensions felt for their safety, says:

"Fears are entertained for the safety of La Mountain, the balloonist. He ascended from Watertown, Jefferson county, on Thursday afternoon last, in company with John A. Haddock. The balloon struck the north-easterly current, and was last seen about an hour after its rise, evidently about two miles above the earth, and traveling in a direction which would have carried it into the St. Lawrence region of Canada. Since then nothing has been heard of either party. It was their intention, when they left Watertown, to make but a short voyage, and return the next day, as Mr. La Mountain had an ascension advertised at Kingston, C. W., on Thursday of this week. Mr. Haddock told his friends to expect him back to dinner on Friday.

"It is barely possible that they have descended in some part of the country from which it is impossible to communicate. Mr. La Mountain's home is in Lansinburgh, where his wife and child are now."

— Mr. W. P. Howard, aged 35 years, a resident of Delaware, and a clerk in the Auditor's office of Cuyahoga county, was found dead in his bed at Cleveland yesterday morning. The deceased was subject to vertigo, or rush of blood to the head, and it is supposed that he died from the effects of one of these attacks.

J. C. BAGNALL, on Hickory Alley, near North Fourth street, has invented a most effective and infallible
Hair Tonic,
For cleansing the hair and removing dandriff and dry scurf. It removes every particle of dirt with a gentle rubbing and leaves the surface cool and agreeable, with open pores and slightly but effectually stimulated. As a hair restorative, it possesses more virtue than high sounding cosmetics; and what is far better leaves the head cool, and the hair thoroughly cleansed and free to grow.
Also a mixture for cleansing silks and satins, and restoring their original lustre.
Also Impression or Transfer Paper of the best quality and of every color and of any size to suit the trade.

HOWARD ASSOCIATION,
PHILADELPHIA,
A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the Relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Virulent and Epidemic Diseases.
THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Sexual diseases, and the deceptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their name, to open a dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDICAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.,) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment.
The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the success which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Syphilis, the vice of Onanism or Self Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.
The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that their labors in this sphere of benevolent effort have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have resolved to devote themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause.
An admirable Report on Spermatorrhoea, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope), FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.
Address, for Report or treatment, DR. J. SKILLEN HOUGHTON, Acting Surgeon, Howard Association, No. 2 South Ninth Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
By order of the Directors.
EZRA D. HEARTWELL, President.
GEO. FAIRCHILD, Secretary.

DR. STEWART
WOULD INFORM HIS MANY FRIENDS that he may be found at his office, in the Goodale House, Columbus, where he can be consulted for affections of the LUNGS and THROAT also CHRONIC DISEASES of all kinds. His past success in curing many of them at hopeless cases, in the city and country, is a sufficient warrant of what he may be expected to do in the future. Dr. [illegible] refer to the best [illegible] not only of Ohio, but of the Eastern and Middle [illegible] and Canada, where he has practiced.
He is now PERMANENTLY LOCATED in Columbus, and patients can rely on having almost daily attention if required. Those who have been humbugged by traveling impostors, (who stay perhaps a day in a place, and are the next hundreds of miles away,) should note the above fact. Columbus is a central location, in one of the finest countries in the world, and can certainly sustain a physician, who devotes his attention to Chronic Diseases, and whose practice is far in advance of ordinary Practitioners. Dr. S. employs VEGETABLE MEDICINES, obtained from every part of the Globe, and many that were in use among the various Indian Tribes, when this continent was discovered.
Being naturally inclined to Consumption, Dr. S. spent many years in the investigation of a remedy, which under the old treatment, is always fatal, and at length DISCOVERED A REMEDY, which, in his hands, has produced the most surprising results. Combining with this the INHALATION of certain vegetable juices, it brings the treatment almost to perfection. Inhalation is an excellent method, which has been greatly injured by claiming too much for it.
Persons having Bronchitis, Laryngitis, and all predisposed to Pulmonary Disease should apply immediately, and be restored to health before another winter sets in. How many neglect a cough or throat affection, or what is worse, suffer themselves to be drugged by old school Doctors, till no human aid can save them from the grave!
Dr Stewart has the most complete instruments, and is prepared to decide the nature and extent of disease. Chronic Catarrh cured in every case by a new plan.
DISEASES OF FEMALES.—Dr. Stewart in this class of diseases can truly say, he has been more successful than any physician in the State. Particular attention given to Deafness, and Discharges from the Ear, and affections of the Eye.
CANCERS removed without the knife by a vegetable extract.
Cases cured are of common solicited. He will insure cases for any of the following he cannot cure:
Scrofula, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gravel, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Skin Affections, [illegible], Dyspepsia, Falling Fits, (in persons under 20,) [illegible] neck, St. Vitus Dance.
A candid opinion always given. In regard to qualifications, Dr. S. can refer to the best Physicians in New York and Philadelphia.
Office hours 9 a. m., to 6 p. m. All letters addressed to the Goodale House, enclosing a stamp, will receive prompt attention.
☞ Patients who may have received no benefit from his treatment, will be furnished Medicine gratis.

DR. HOOFLAND'S
GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
DR. HOOFLAND'S BALSAMIC CORDIAL,
The great standard medicines of the present age, have acquired their great popularity only through years of trial. Unbounded satisfaction is rendered by them in all cases; and the people have pronounced them worthy.
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Debility of the Nervous System, Diseases of the Kidneys,
and all diseases arising from a disordered liver or weakness of the stomach and digestive organs, are speedily and permanently cured by the GERMAN BITTERS.
The Balsamic Cordial has acquired a reputation surpassing that of any similar preparation extant. It will cure, WITHOUT FAIL, the most severe and long-standing
Cough, Cold, or Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Influenza, Croup, Pneumonia, Incipient Consumption, and has performed the most astonishing cures ever known of Confirmed Consumption.
A few doses will also at once check and cure the most severe Diarrhoea proceeding from COLD IN THE BOWELS.
These medicines are prepared by Dr. C. M. JACKSON & Co., No. 418 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., and are sold by druggists and dealers in medicines everywhere, at 75 cents per bottle. The signature of C. M. JACKSON will be on the outside wrapper of each bottle.
In the Almanac published annually by the proprietors, called EVERYBODY'S ALMANAC, you will find testimony and commendatory notices from all parts of the country. These Almanacs are given away by all our agents.

AYER'S
Ague Cure.
FOR THE SPEEDY CURE OF
Intermittent Fever or Fever and Ague, Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, and Bilious Fevers; indeed for the whole Class of Diseases originating in biliary derangement, caused by the Malaria of miasmatic countries.
No one remedy is louder called for by the necessities of the American people than a sure and safe cure for Fever and Ague. Such a remedy we are now enabled to offer, with a perfect certainty that it will eradicate the disease, and with assurance, founded on proof, that no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.
That which protects from or prevents this disorder must be of immense service in the communities where it prevails. Prevention is better than cure, for the patient escapes the risk which he must run in violent attacks of this baleful distemper. This "CURE" expels the miasmatic poison of FEVER AND AGUE from the system, and prevents the development of the disease, if taken on the first approach of its premonitory symptoms. It is not only the best remedy ever yet discovered for this class of complaints, but also the cheapest. The large quantity we supply for a dollar brings it within the reach of every body; and in bilious districts, where FEVER AND AGUE prevails, every body should have it, and use it freely, both for cure and protection. It is hoped this price will place it within the reach of all—the poor as well as the rich. A great superiority of this remedy over any other ever discovered for the speedy and certain cure of Intermittents is, that it contains no Quinine or mineral, consequently it produces no quinism or other injurious effects whatever upon the constitution. Those cured by it are left as healthy as if they had never had the disease.
Fever and Ague is not alone the consequence of the miasmatic poison. A great variety of disorders arise from its irritation, among which are Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Headache, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affection of the Spleen, Hysterics, Pain in the Bowels, Colic, Paralysis, and Derangement of the Stomach, all of which, when originating in this cause, put on the intermittent type, or become periodical. This "CURE" expels the poison from the blood, and consequently cures them all alike. It is an invaluable protection to immigrants, and persons travelling or temporarily residing in the malarious districts. If taken occasionally, or daily, while exposed to the infection, that will be excreted from the system, and cannot accumulate in sufficient quantity to ripen into disease. Hence it is even more valuable for protection than cure, and few will ever suffer from Intermittents, if they avail themselves of the protection this remedy affords.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,
are so composed that disease within the range of their action can rarely withstand or evade them. Their penetrating properties search, and cleanse, and invigorate every portion of the human organism, correcting its diseased action, and restoring its healthy vitalities. As a consequence of these properties, the invalid who is bowed down with pain or physical debility is astonished to find his health or energy restored by a remedy at once so simple and inviting.
Not only do they cure the every-day complaints of every body, but also many formidable and dangerous diseases. The agent below named is pleased to furnish gratis my American Almanac, containing certificates of their cures and directions for their use in the following complaints: Costiveness, Heartburn, Headache arising from disordered Stomach, Nausea, Indigestion, Pain in and Morbid Inaction of the Bowels, Flatulency, Loss of Appetite, Jaundice, and other kindred complaints, arising from a low state of the body or obstruction of its functions.
Do not be put off by unprincipled Dealers with some other pill they make more profit on. Ask for AYER'S PILLS, and take nothing else.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
FOR THE RAPID CURE OF
Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced stages of the Disease.
So wide is the field of its usefulness, and so numerous are the cases of its cures, that almost every section of country abounds in persons publicly known, who have been restored from alarming and even desperate diseases of the lungs by its use. When once tried, its superiority over every other medicine of its kind is too apparent to escape observation, and where its virtues are known, the public no longer hesitate what antidote to employ for the distressing and dangerous affections of the pulmonary organs that are incident to our climate. While many inferior remedies thrust upon the community have failed and been discarded, this has gained friends by every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

CINCINNATI PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the foundation of this union of States having been laid in and its prosperity, expansion, and pre-eminent example in free government, built upon entire freedom in matters of religious concernment, and no respect of person in regard to rank or place of birth; no party can justly be deemed national, constitutional or in accordance with American principles, which bases its exclusive organization upon religious opinions and accidental birth-place. And hence a political crusade in the nineteenth century, and in the United States of America, against Catholic and foreign born, is neither justified by the past history or future prospects of the country, or in unison with the spirit of toleration and enlarged freedom which distinguishes the American system of popular government.

Resolved, That we reiterate with renewed energy of purpose, the well-considered declarations of former Conventions upon the sectional issue of Domestic Slavery, and concerning the reserved rights of the States.

1. That Congress has no power under the Constitution to interfere with or control the domestic institutions of the several States, and that such States are the sole and proper judges of everything appertaining to their own affairs not prohibited by the Constitution; that all efforts of the abolitionists, or others, made to induce Congress to interfere with questions of slavery, or to take incipient steps in relation thereto, are calculated to lead to the most alarming and dangerous consequences; and that all such efforts have an inevitable tendency to diminish the happiness of the people, and endanger the stability and permanency of the Union, and ought not to be countenanced by any friend of our political institutions.

2. That the foregoing proposition covers, and was intended to embrace, the whole subject of slavery agitation in Congress; and therefore, the Democratic party of the Union, standing on this national platform, will abide by and adhere to a faithful execution of the acts known as the compromise measures, settled by the Congress of 1850, "the act for reclaiming fugitives from service or labor" included; which act being designed to carry out an express provision of the Constitution, cannot with fidelity thereto, be repealed, or so changed as to destroy or impair its efficiency.

3. That the Democratic party will resist all attempts at renewing in Congress or out of it, the agitation of the slavery question under whatever shape or color the attempt may be made.

4. That the Democratic party will faithfully abide by and uphold the principles laid down in the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions of 1798, and in the report of Mr. Madison to the Virginia Legislature, in 1799; that it adopts those principles as constituting one of the main foundations of its political creed, and is resolved to carry them out in their obvious meaning and import.

And that we may more distinctly meet the issue on which a sectional party, subsisting exclusively on slavery agitation, now relies to test the fidelity of the people, North and South, to the Constitution and the Union—

1. Resolved, That claiming fellowship with, and desiring the co-operation of all who regard the preservation of the Union under the Constitution as the paramount issue—and repudiating all sectional parties and platforms concerning domestic slavery, which seek to embroil the States, and incite to treason and armed resistance to law in the Territories; and whose avowed purposes, if consummated, must end in civil war and disunion. The American Democracy recognize and adopt the principles contained in the organic laws establishing the Territories of Kansas and Nebraska as embodying the only sound and safe solution of the "slavery question" upon which the great national idea of the people of this whole country can repose in its determined conservatism of the Union—NON-INTERFERENCE BY CONGRESS WITH SLAVERY IN STATE AND TERRITORY, OR IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

2. That this was the basis of the Compromises of 1850,—confirmed by both the Democratic and Whig parties in National Convention—ratified by the people in the election of 1852—and rightly applied to the organization of Territories in 1854.

3. That by the uniform application of this Democratic principle to the organization of Territories, and to the admission of new States, with or without domestic slavery, as they may elect—the equal rights of all the States will be preserved intact—the original compacts of the Constitution maintained inviolate—and the perpetuity and expansion of this Union insured to its utmost capacity of embracing, in peace and harmony, every future State that may be constituted or annexed, with a republican form of government.

Resolved, That we recognize the right of the people of all the Territories, including Kansas and Nebraska, acting through the legally and fairly expressed will of a majority of actual residents, and whenever the number of their inhabitants justifies it, to form a Constitution, with or without domestic slavery, and be admitted into the Union upon terms of perfect equality with other States.

Resolved, finally, That in view of the condition of popular institutions in the Old World and the dangerous tendencies of sectional agitation, combined with the attempt to enforce civil and religious disabilities against the rights of acquiring and enjoying citizenship in our own land—a high and sacred duty is devolved with increased responsibility upon the Democratic party of this country, as the party of the Union, to uphold and maintain the rights of every State, and thereby the Union of the States; and to sustain and advance among us constitutional liberty, by continuing to resist all monopolies and exclusive legislation for the benefit of the few, at the expense of the many, and by a vigilant and constant adherence to those principles and compromises of the Constitution, which are broad enough and strong enough to embrace and uphold the Union as it was, the Union as it should be, in the full expansion of the energies and capacity of this great and progressive people.

1. Resolved, That there are questions connected with the foreign policy of this country, which are inferior to no domestic question whatever. The time has come for the people of the United States to declare themselves in favor of free seas and progressive free trade throughout the world, and by solemn manifestations, to place their moral influence at the side of their successful example.

2. Resolved, That our geographical and political position in reference to the other States of this continent, no less than the interest of our commerce and the development of our growing power, requires that we should hold as sacred the principles involved in the Monroe Doctrine; their bearing and import admit of no misconstruction; they should be applied with unbending rigidity.

3. Resolved, That the great highway which nature as well as the assent most immediately interested in its maintenance, has marked out for a free communication between the Atlantic and the Pacific oceans, constitutes one of the most important achievements realized by the spirit of modern times and the unconquerable energy of our people. That result should be secured by a timely and efficient exertion of the control which we have the right to claim over it, and no power on earth should be suffered to impede or clog its progress by any interference with the relations it may suit our policy to establish between our Government and the Government of the States within whose dominion it lies. We can, under no circumstance, surrender our preponderance in the adjustment of all questions arising out of it.

4. Resolved, That in view of so commanding an interest, the people of the United States cannot but sympathize with the efforts which are being made by the people of Central America to regenerate that portion of the continent which covers the passage across the Isthmus.

5. Resolved, That the Democratic party will expect of the next Administration that every proper effort be made to insure our ascendency in the Gulf of Mexico, and to maintain a permanent protection to the great outlets through which are emptied into its waters the products raised out of the soil, and the commodities created by the industry of the people of our western valleys, and of the Union at large.

OHIO PLATFORM—1859.

The Democracy of Ohio, by their Delegates in Convention assembled, hereby affirm the platform of principles adopted by the General Convention of the Democratic party, at Cincinnati, on the 4th of June, 1856.

Resolved, That the organized Territories of the United States, although not endowed with all the attributes of sovereignty, are only held in the territorial condition until they attain a sufficient number of inhabitants to authorize their admission into the Union as States; and, therefore, are justly entitled to the right of self-government, and the undisturbed regulation of their domestic or local affairs, subject to the Constitution of the United States; and that any attempt by Congress, or any of the States, to establish or maintain, prohibit or abolish, the relation of master and slave in a Territory, would be a departure from the original doctrine of our American institutions; and that we adhere, immovably, to the principle of "non-intervention by Congress with Slavery in the States and Territories," as declared in the Kansas-Nebraska bill, and openly disclaim fellowship with those, whether at the South, or the North, or the West, who contend for abandonment, limitation, or avoidance of that principle.

Resolved, That the suppression of the African and foreign slave trade, by the Federal Government, after the year eighteen hundred and seven, is one of the compromises on the faith of which the Constitution was adopted, and our union of slaveholding and non-slaveholding States firmly established; that a revival of that trade would not only renew those atrocities which once provoked the indignation of the civilized world, but would expose the slaveholding States to a constant terror of servile insurrection, and the non-slaveholding States of the border, like Ohio, to all the mischiefs and annoyance of a free black population; for these reasons, with others, the Democracy of Ohio are opposed to any such revival, and to any measure tending in that direction.

Resolved, That the rendition of fugitive slaves, upon the demand of the persons entitled to their service or labor, is a duty imposed on every State of the Union by the terms of the Federal compact; that the laws passed by Congress to secure such rendition, in 1793 and 1850, ought to be promptly and faithfully executed; and that the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, in Ohio, by a persistent disregard of the Constitution of the United States in this particular, have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of well-disposed, patriotic and peaceable citizens.

Resolved, That the opposition of the Republican party in Congress to the admission of Oregon, exposes fully the utter hypocrisy of their pretentions to be the peculiar friends of free States.

Resolved, That we affirm the absolute sovereignty of the States of this Union in regard to their domestic institutions, and the perfect compatibility of the confederation of free and slave States to exist harmoniously together under the provisions of our Federal Constitution.

Resolved, That the acquisition of the Island of Cuba is, in our opinion, eminently desirable for the safety and prosperity of our Republic, and we shall hail with pleasure any measure consistent with justice that would accomplish this object. We can never consent to its appropriation by any of the powerful States of Europe, and would incur all the danger of war rather than acquiesce in such a result.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Ohio disapprove the lavish grants of the public domain heretofore made by Congress to Railroad Companies and other corporations; but are in favor of granting limited portions of the public lands to actual settlers on condition of a bona fide occupation and cultivation.

Resolved, That the Republican party have in Massachusetts, by allowing a fugitive slave from the South the right of suffrage and office in one year, and requiring for the same purpose of the naturalized citizen a residence of two years after naturalization, equivalent to an extension of the period for naturalization to seven years, attempted to degrade the foreign white man below the level of the negro and mulatto.

Resolved, That the vigor and efficiency of the Administration, manifested in the adjustment of our difficulties with Great Britain, in regard to the right of search; in the prompt and successful redress of wrongs inflicted upon us by the Government of Paraguay; the decisive suppression of the rebellion in Utah; in the enforcement of the neutrality laws; in the impartial execution of the Acts of Congress for the suppression of the African slave trade, and for the rendition of fugitive slaves, commands our cordial approbation, and we have full confidence in its ability and inclination to protect the rights of our citizens and uphold the honor of our flag.

Resolved, That we are opposed to conferring upon negroes, mulattoes, or other persons of visible admixture of African blood, the right of suffrage, or any other political right; desiring that the laws of Ohio shall be made, and her destinies controlled, by white men exclusively, and for the government and interests of the white race.

Resolved, That we approve of the principles of the Independent Treasury Law, passed by the Legislature of this State.

Resolved, That we, the delegates in this Convention, representing the Democratic party of Ohio, and proposing no departure from its ancient and well-tried principles, nevertheless appeal to the PEOPLE OF OHIO at large, as our fellow citizens, equally interested with us in the maintenance of the Federal Union according to the letter and spirit of the Constitution, and equally desirous of the blessings of peace and public order—to unite with us in rebuking the wanton, factious, revolutionary designs of the leaders of the self-styled Republican party, and thus avoid (what seems otherwise inevitable) a conflict of more violence between the authorities of the United States and those of our own State; a conflict of the most sorrowful character, disastrous and perhaps fatal to us, but certainly calculated, at all events, to bring the name of AMERICAN LIBERTY into contempt abroad.

The Battle of the Peiho.

The London Times ascribes to the rashness and bad management of Admiral Hope the fatal repulse of the English and French by the Chinese at the battle of the Peiho, by which the treaties have been annulled, and the war reopened.

There can be no question in any disinterested man's mind, that the attempt to force the passage of the river in defiance of the Chinese prohibition, and their positive assertion that there was another mouth at which the Ambassadors would be duly received, was rash and ill-advised.

But the responsibility of the act must rest on the Ambassadors, and not on the Admiral. A military force sent to conduct an Ambassador to his post, and cruise in its neighborhood, is always under his orders. Admiral Hope was simply the escort of Mr. Bruce, the English Ambassador. It appears that when this gentleman came to the conclusion that the Chinese were trifling with him, and that the mouth of the Peiho which he had found obstructed was really the road to Pekin, he informed the Admiral that he left it to him to take him to his post, which could not be done without removing the obstructions in the river. This could not be done, as the result proved, without fighting, and a great deal more fighting than actually took place.

Suppose the Admiral had declined to undertake to convey the Admiral to his post by the route pointed out to him, and retired as soon as the Chinese forts opened their fire, the London Times would have denounced him before the world for his pusillanimity and cowardice. The fighting men in the contest did their duty; the error consisted in the mistrust and irritation with which the negotiation was carried on.

It is stated that the northern entrance to the Peiho, where the Chinese said that the Ambassadors would be received, was only eight or ten miles distant from the place where the fight occurred, and that the masts of the junks lying there could be distinctly seen across the land. An hour's run with a light steamer would have confirmed the truth or falsehood of the Chinese story. It yet remains to be explained why this trouble was not taken rather than risk the infraction of treaties and disturb the amicable relationship which had been established with the Celestials.

☞ It is well known that the Queen of England is in the habit of taking precautions against the opening of her private letters by her own ministers.

Sons of Malta at London.

On the 4th inst., in accordance with previous arrangement, the Valletta Lodge of this city proceeded to London, Madison county, and instituted a lodge at that place, initiating a good working number, and leaving it in a sound and healthy condition. The train which took them down was considerably behind time, which was a mutual disappointment to "the Sons" and "mine host", DREISBACH, of the "Cowling House," who had made ample preparations for their accommodation.

After the ceremonies, which we are under obligations not to describe, which were very imposing, the company from Columbus were invited to partake of a magnificent "spread" at the Cowling House, prepared in the handsomest style. As trencher men they did their duty bravely. It was a festive scene to be remembered—one where happiness beamed on all around, in the proud consciousness of discharging a noble duty. From a number of sentiments offered on the occasion, we were enabled to preserve the following:

"Bro. Dreisbach—not exactly the tamer of lions, but the craving appetite of hungry men."

It is needless to say that this was duly appreciated and drunk standing.

The following resolutions were adopted, which speak for themselves:

Resolved, That the heartfelt thanks of the members of Valetta Lodge No. 3 of the city of Columbus are hereby tendered to our brother Sons of Malta, of London, for the cordial and hospitable reception given us upon this occasion.

To which the "Sons" of London responded.

Resolved, That we, as new-born Sons of Malta, are greatly obliged to the noble brethren of Valetta Lodge No. 3, for their labor with us, and will always hail their presence with welcome."

The entertainment being over, and the "brothers satisfied," everything being conducted in the handsomest and most satisfactory manner, "the Sons" repaired to their Hall, and soon, beneath the pale moon, were seen gliding from the entrance a long line of spectral forms (some good fat ones) preceded by a "military" and brass band of music, and after passing through the principal streets, anxiously gazed at by the uninitiated, the procession returned to the Hall and doffed their habiliments and insignia of station.

Taken altogether it was a delightful excursion, and will be long remembered. It brought many together who might otherwise have been always strangers. They are "brothers" now and meet at the common shrine, for they are engaged in the grand mission of the age—charity.

IMPORTANT CANADIAN MOVEMENT.—A meeting of the Upper Canada Parliamentary Opposition was held at Toronto on the 23d, the Hon. ADAM FERGUSON in the chair, at which it was resolved to hold a general Convention of delegates from the Liberal party throughout Upper Canada, on the 9th of November, to consider the subject of constitutional changes. We learn by the Globe that the result of the deliberations of the meeting was the unanimous determination that the evils which have arisen from the working of the existing legislative union of the Provinces are so great and alarming that the union ought no longer to be maintained in its present shape, and that constitutional changes framed to remedy the evils complained of are imperatively required.

ACCIDENT TO AN OLD MAN.—Yesterday afternoon while an old gentleman named GOTLEIB HINDERER, residing a short distance east of the Lunatic Asylum, was felling a tree in the woods near his house, a large limb fell upon him with a tremendous crash, breaking his right leg in three places and otherwise injuring him to a great extent, although it is hoped not fatally. A singular feature of the case is that three brothers of the unfortunate HINDERER have at different times and places within the past few years met with death by accident at a moment most unexpected, and two of these were brought about in the forest by the falling timber. The escape of GOTLEIB from an instant and horrible death was indeed miraculous. Drs. DAVEY and GAY are his surgeons, and report him to-day in a condition as favorable as could be expected.

COL. FREMONT NOT A CANDIDATE.—It is stated that Col. FREMONT has written a letter declaring that he is not, and will not be a Presidential candidate in 1860. He is represented as closing his letter in the following language: "I consented to hold that relation, in 1856, against my better judgment and will, but I was assured that those who would rally around me possessed the power essential to my election; and I confess that the 'bauble,' as it might have been called by OLIVER CROMWELL, possessed attractions which I could not well resist. But I would not again encounter all the vexation, mortification, and annoyance I then encountered, if the reward were to be ten thousand presidencies."

A DUEL THAT DIDN'T COME OFF.—On Saturday last the notorious BILL MULLIGAN, of New York, and Capt. DE RIVIERE, of BLOUNT notoriety, went to Hoboken to fight a duel. Both parties backed out. On Monday morning MULLIGAN posted the gallant Zouave, and the afternoon of the same day the fighting Captain published a card, in which he denounces MULLIGAN as a "cowardly ruffian, who can only insult a man when he is full of rum." BILLY was driven out of California by the Vigilance Committee, and has a fashion of biting off the noses of his antagonists. A correspondence between the parties and their friends is being continued in the New York papers.

THE VIGILANCE COMMITTEE IN LOUISIANA.—The Echo, a paper published at Lafayette, Louisiana, draws the following picture of the condition of society which led to the organization there of a Vigilance Committee:

"For several years, in that portion of our parish commonly known by the name of Cote Gelee, larceny, incendiarism and crime in all its most hideous forms stalked in mid-day defiance. Recourse to the tribunals of the country, though surrounded and aided by able officers, had become a farce, through the instrumentality of patented witnesses and jurors. Cattle were stolen and driven away in flocks from that section of the country, in open day and with impunity; cotton crops were stolen from the gins; gins were burnt; cribs full of corn were reduced to ashes, and the poor but honest laborer, who by the sweat of his day's labor had earned the morrow's bread for his family, could not leave his hoe, his plow or his harness in the field at night but that in the morning the same were missing; stores were burglariously plundered at unsuspecting hours of night, and the perpetrators of those deeds still traveled our highways and mixed in usual crowds with a bold front, whilst the victim of his depredations in vain had recourse to law to redress his wrongs."

A BALLOONIST INJURED BY FALLING FROM A TREE.—The Utica Observer of Saturday contains the following special telegraphic dispatch:—

ROME, Oct. 1.—Professor Coe fell from a tree this morning while getting his balloon from the trees in the swamp and is probably fatally injured.

We learn from the Rome Sentinel that Professor Coe was on Saturday evening conscious, and related the particulars of the accident. He fell seventy feet, striking upon his head and shoulders. The ground was soft, otherwise he must have been instantly killed.

☞ Thos Higgins, a laborer in the G. W. Railway freight depot, Windsor, Canada, on Saturday ate his dinner, and after a few angry words with his wife beat her to death with a stick of stove wood, in the presence of their children, 7 and 9 years old. Higgins was arrested, and will stretch hemp if he gets his deserts.

☞ About two weeks ago a cargo of slaves was landed near Trinidad de Cuba. One of the inspectors—a young creole—informed the government of the fact. That night he was assassinated in his bed.

☞ Gov. Henry Masters, of Dacotah Territory, died suddenly on his farm, in the vicinity of Sioux Falls, on Saturday, September 10th. Mr. Masters was somewhat advanced in years, and has been in quite feeble health for some time.

☞ A trotting match for $2,000, best three in five, in harness, between Brown Dick and Lancet, took place on the Union Course yesterday, and resulted in Brown Dick winning the race in three straight heats. Time: 2:32—2:31—2:31½.—New York Herald, Oct. 4.

☞ The New York Herald says, the activity of business generally in this city at the present time is almost without parallel. In every branch of commerce there is a wonderful revival, which leaves the religious excitement so called, completely behind.

☞ Archbishop Hughes administered the sacrament of confirmation on Sunday to four hundred Roman Catholic children, at St. Lawrence's Church, Yorkville Indiana, of which the Rev. Father Quarters is Pastor. Thirteen persons, who had before been Protestants, were admitted members of the Catholic Church.

☞ The Vermont State Journal says: "Every month has been marked by frosts, and a drought, severer than any known for many years, prevailed through the Summer. But under the influence of the rains of last week the grass has started vigorously, and strawberries are blooming the second time this season."

☞ The trial of Macdonald, for the murder of Virginia Stewart, in New York, has been postponed until the first Monday in December, in order to give time to the defense to send commissioners to Mobile, Ala., and other States, to examine witnesses.

☞ The divorce docket of the Supreme Court now in session in Providence, R. I., contains eighty-three petitions for release from matrimony. The Court appears to be determined to keep up with the business, and in a single hour removed the yokes from the necks of twelve discontented couples.

☞ In Weaverville, California, a tax-collector called upon a Chinaman for his taxes. Not having the "spelter" about him, the Celestial was shot dead by the collector, who said he "couldn't be bothered running after them Johns all the time."

☞ By the fire which destroyed Speyer's lager beer brewery at New York on Sunday morning there were a number of small tenements and stables consumed. In the latter there were thirty horses, among which were four splendid Normandy horses. A large number of the animals were suffocated.

☞ John O'Brien, one of the men employed in the Shovel Works of the Messrs. Lippincott, Pittsburg, accidently fell on Thursday among the cogwork by which the great grindstones of the establishment are revolved at a great velocity. He was instantly and litterly torn to pieces.

☞ The Alexandria Gazette states that the Bank of Manassa, located at Front Royal, Warren county, Virginia, has failed, having closed its doors on Friday last. The notes of the bank are, however, good, being secured by a deposit with the Treasurer of the State of an equal amount of State stock, besides the assets of the stockholders.

☞ The statue of the late Feargus O'Connor, which was placed a few weeks ago in the public Arboretum, Nottingham, England, was found lately besmeared with tar, and otherwise defaced. The corporation have offered a reward of £5, and the Chartist Committee £30, for the discovery of the offenders.

☞ One of the Polar bears in the Zoological Gardens at Brussels was found dead in the basin of their inclosure a few days since, having been hugged to death by his more powerful companion in revenge for his having ventured to swallow a cake which the other considered his property.

☞ The Rev. Mr. Miller, a Methodist Episcopal Minister, at Indianapolis, is in disgrace, having been adjudged guilty of gross immorality by a committee of five clergymen appointed to investigate certain charges against him. The case will be submitted to Conference; in the meantime Mr. Miller's ministerial labors are suspended.

☞ A fracas occurred in a house of ill fame at Pekin, Illinois, on the morning of the 29th ult., in which Henry Berry was stabbed by Jos. Boutaller and instantly killed. Berry was the principal witness to convict a pair of burglars; the murder was premeditated to prevent their conviction. Boutziler had not been arrested.

Celebration in New York by the Sons of Malta—Festival of the Seven Cardinals.

The Sons of Malta in New York city, Brooklyn and Jersey City, contemplate celebrating the ancient festival of the Seven Cardinals on the night of the 11th instant, full moon, by a public midnight procession. The rooms of Pro Patria Lodge, in Broadway, are to be the headquarters of the procession, where the brotherhood have been invited to assemble at seven o'clock. Invitations have been sent to the several lodges of Maryland, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois to be present.—The Grand Commander and Worthy Patriarch of St. George's Lodge, London, are now in New York, and have signified their intention to take part in the ancient festival of the brotherhood.

GREELEY'S CALIFORNIA DRESS.—The following memorandum of traveling costume is from the Mariposa Gazette: On one foot he wore a cotton sock, and on the other a woolen one. Boots, number 14, which, not many years ago cost as much as $2 50. Pepper and salt pants, with the old white coat and hat, completed his entire habiliments, the tout ensemble of which was very striking and antique. The old coat was much dilapidated, and pieces had been cut from it in sundry and divers places. The committee that met him at Placerville cut all the buttons off it but three, and the Yo-Semite delegation got the rest with most of its binding.

The "Old Soldiers" of Lake county have put the following question to the candidates for Senator and Representative, viz:

"1st. In your opinion, are the soldiers of the war of 1812 entitled to a pension from the Government of the United States?"

Colonel T. MOSES, candidate for Senator answers—yes.

MR. CLAPP, the candidate for Representative, in reply writes rather evasively; he has not given the matter consideration, and thinks that Uncle Sam has done the fair thing already. Mr. CLAPP concludes:

"In the meantime, I would simply say—if—and if—and if ——I should happen to be sent either to the State House or the Penitentiary—get up your petitions, I will do anything I can, under instructions from a majority of my constituents—if I have any!!"

RETIRED FROM THE TRIPOD.—Charles J. Foster, Esq., one of the Editors of the Ohio Statesman, has retired from that establishment. Rumor has it that Mr. F. could not consistently countenance the course of that paper, and, therefore, like an honest, independent man, dissolved his connection with the concern. Personally we entertain a high respect for Mr. FOSTER, and hope he may, ere long, find lucrative employment more congenial to his mind.

COUNTERFEIT "TWOS" ON THE BANK OF COMMERCE OF CLEVELAND.—In a heavy haul of counterfeit bank bills, made in New York on Monday, there was a large amount in twos on the Bank of Commerce at Cleveland, Ohio.—The vignettes on each are described as being the same as that used in "twos" on the Memphis Bank, the name of the bank, the State and City being altered to suit the desire of the counterfeiter.

The War With China.

An eye witness in a letter to the London Times thus speaks of the attitude of the Americans: "I cannot end without referring to one matter that in connection with this battle should be ever remembered. Were we children of the same mother, we could not have had more sympathy and kindness than we met with from Americans. Never were men more unwillingly—neutral. As we passed into the assault, Flag officer Tatnall was heard to say blood is thicker than water, and in a hundred different ways, he and all his people, to the very cabin boys, acted up to this declaration. When he heard that our Admiral was wounded at great risk, he went on board the Cormorant to see him. Many of our men slept in the American tender on the night of the fight. Segars, coffee, brandy and everything a man could want was placed before them. The American crew forgot themselves and thought only of the British.

—The Fairs in Montgomery, Licking, Ross and Muskingum counties commenced yesterday. The reports of increased entries and general success in each county is very flattering.

—A race between Flora Temple and Princess, over the Cincinnati course, mile heats, best three in five, to harness, for a purse of $1,000 is announced to take place to-morrow.

—We see it stated that Mr. T. D. Jones, the Ohio Sculptor, has gone to Lancaster, to make a bust of Hon. Thomas Ewing, who is said to be one of the best subjects for a bust of any man in the United States.

—The foundry establishment, engines, castings, &c., of David Dickerson, at McConnellsville, was destroyed by fire on Sunday evening, supposed to be the act of an incendiary. The loss is estimated at from $15,000 to $20,000. No insurance.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 3.—Although the fair has been prolonged two days beyond the allotted time, the interest is unabated, upwards of 30,000 being on the ground to-day. The proceedings in the amphitheatre opened with thoroughbred stallions over 4 years. The first premium of $100 was awarded to Waterloo, owned by J. C. Poindexter, of New Orleans; thoroughbred mares over 4 years, prize to Mary Weller, owned by G. W. Goode, of St. Louis county, Mo.; sweepstake premium of $300 for best stallion of any age or breed was awarded to Doubloon, by H. S. Moore, of Cooper county, Mo.; best mare, $200, Belle Sheridan, owned by R. S. Morrison, of Lexington, Ky.

During the afternoon a spirited contest for the $1,000 prize for the fastest trotter occurred between Flora Temple, Princess, Ike Cook, Green Mountain, and Hiram Woodruff, which was won by Flora.

The display of female equestrianism also occurred in the afternoon. Miss Crook, of Beloit, carrying off the prize.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—But little information has been received in official quarters in addition to what was stated yesterday relative to the fillibustering movements as to the reported departure of a party of fillibusters. The only authentic account in the possession of the government is that they left in a tug boat about ten miles below New Orleans, but which could not convey them to the place of their destination. They doubtless expected to be taken on board a larger and more suitable steamer.

In the meantime, Collector Hatch and his deputies, and other federal officers, are, according to their instructions, resorting to every legitimate means to intercept the fillibusters. In addition to other measures, vessels have been dispatched for that purpose. While these things are progressing in the neighborhood of New Orleans, information has been received that a number of fillibusters are in Mobile, some of which were prominent in the Susan fillibustering expedition, which vessel, it will be remembered, was wrecked at Glover's reef. The Federal officers there have been instructed to watch their movements and act accordingly. It is not yet considered necessary to send out any new instructions to our naval forces in the Gulf and Pacific, as the vessels now there are in possession of the orders heretofore issued in relation to the unlawful expeditions.

The success of this new fillibustering movement is not considered in the least degree promising, but should the adventurers invade Nicaragua and intercept the transit, there is reason to believe that our federal forces would promptly interpose. The power is found in the Lamar-Belladan treaty, and to its exercise Nicaragua would have no objection.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The Times' Washington correspondent says Lord Lyons, the British plenipotentiary, had a protracted interview with Secretary Cass to-day in regard to the departure of the Nicaragua expedition. He announced the determination of his government to protect Nicaragua by force against invasion. The right and propriety of this course is recognized by the government of the United States, and therefore a telegraphic dispatch was at once forwarded to the commander of the British squadron, directing him to lend such force as may be required for the expulsion of the fillibusters—should they succeed in effecting a landing.

The President has recognized Henry A. Pierce as consul for the kingdom of the Hawaii Islands for Boston, New Bedford, Portsmouth and Portland, to reside in Boston.

While it is authoritatively stated that it may be that the Minister of War did set out for Pekin and is there now, after having exchanged ratifications of the treaty, no official advices to that effect have been received at the State Department. It may be mentioned that Capt. Tatnall, in a letter dated the 4th of July, says that by invitation of the governor of the province Mr. Ward had designated the 8th of that month for a conference with him.

A second edition of Judge Black's pamphlet has been issued with an appendix in reply to Senator Douglas's Wooster speech and to the criticisms of different kinds which have appeared in other quarters.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 4.—Accounts represent the cotton crop of Louisiana as first rate. The sugar crop is inferior.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 5.—The annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for foreign missions commenced yesterday.—This is the oldest of the missionary organizations of the country, it was incorporated by the Legislature of Massachusetts in 1812 and the first missionaries were ordained at Salem on the 6th of February of the same year, and sailed early for the East Indies. It is stated that when the first missionaries set sail, the entire amount in treasury was but $1,300, now the income of the society is about $325,000.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon the meeting was called to order by the recording secretary, who read a letter from President Hopkins informing of his inability to be present and suggesting that Judge Jessup be selected in his stead.

In absence of Judge Jessup the Hon. Judge Strong, of this State, was called to the chair.

The Rev. D. Shepard then opened the meeting with prayer.

The Treasurer then read his report showing that the expenses of the year were $419,399. Receipts $50,815, leaving a debt of $66,374. The permanent funds is $66,715. The permanent fund for officers is $39,940.

A report was then received from the Prudential Committee, on the state of foreign missions, the most of which were represented to be in a flourishing condition. The number of missions is 26; stations, 137; out stations, 131; ordained missionaries, 60; physicians not ordained, 4; male assistants, 14; female do., 210; native preachers, 322; native helpers, 254; number of printing establishments, 5; number of pages printed last year, 41,520,940; churches, 150; church members, 23,515; added during the year, 1,279; number of seminaries, 7; free schools, 313; pupils in free schools, 7,791; do. in seminaries, 401; do. in boarding schools, 651; whole number in schools and seminaries, 8,840.

The opening sermon was preached last evening by Dr. Patterson of Chicago.

BOSTON, Oct. 5.—F. B. Blanmont, of Jamaica Plain, and now a resident of Hong Kong, China, in a letter dated 21st. July, says, rumor here, probably a Chinese story, is, that the Emperor has sent a communication to the Governor of Shanghai, saying that the firing from the Forts at the mouth of Peiho river upon the British and French embassy was not by his orders, but by those of Mandarins whose heads he had ordered to be struck off for the act. It is expected that the American Minister, Mr. Ward, has proceeded to Pekin. Mr. Bruce, the British Minister, has gone to Japan to remain there a while.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The steamship James Adger, from Charleston, was boarded by a boat from the bark White Wing, from Laguayra, and received on board a passenger with Venezuelan papers. The charge de affaires had been sent out of the country on two days' notice. His opposition to the existing government and participation in the late bloody revolution are the causes alleged for driving him away. Gen. Rubio, with the government forces, had taken the town of Marquetia, near Laguayra, but the rebel, Gen. Aguado, escaped. Barcelona had been retaken and the government forces were everywhere victorious. The revolutionists, or rather robbers, had committed the most outrageous excesses, murdering and plundering to a fearful extent. From present accounts, however, their triumph is at an end.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The Teutonia, from Southampton on the afternoon of the 21th, arrived at this port last evening, bringing London files to the date of her sailing. They contain Admiral Hope's report of the battle between the British and Chinese at Takua, in which no allusion whatever is made to the aid and comfort rendered the British commander by our forces on that occasion.

Cornelius Wood, who it was alleged had pushed down Striker at the instigation of Mozart Hall men, comes out in an affidavit declaring that he was in the interest of the Tammany Hall and the Regency, as represented by Cagger and Fowler, and that in knocking down Striker he knocked down the wrong man, and intended to lay low Mr. Alvord, the chairman of the regular and rival convention.

RICHMOND, Oct. 5.—The delegates to the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church assembled this morning, and after a sermon by Bishop Otey, of Tennessee, the House of Clerical and Lay delegates was organized by the selection of Rev. Dr. Creighton, of New York, President, and Rev. Dr. Hawe, Secretary. The House then adjourned till to-morrow.

The House of Bishops was also organized. The Right Rev. Bishop Meade presiding by seniority. The Rev. Dr. Balch of Maryland, was chosen Secretary.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 4.—A month ago information was received in this city of fillibustering movements against Nicaragua. Although the statements were not fully credited, it was deemed of sufficient importance to justify the issuance of instructions to the proper federal officers to exercise more than ordinary vigilance. The President himself superintended these precautionary measures. The recent advertisement in the New Orleans papers of a steamship to start from Mobile for Chiriqui on the 1st of October, added to the other accumulative suspicious circumstances, attending the alleged contemplated invasion of Nicaragua; but on inquiry of the collector at Mobile, nothing has been heard to confirm the truth of the report as far as that port is concerned.

Within the present week reliable information has been received here, as stated in the general newspaper dispatch yesterday, that a large number of strangers were in New Orleans, including many prominent persons known to have been heretofore connected with fillibustering enterprises, and this together with other circumstances, excited a suspicion in the mind of Collector Hatch that they meditated an unlawful expedition. Late last night one hundred, or one hundred and fifty of these left that city, the presumption being that they had gone to the balize to await the vessel. A clearance had been asked for the steamer Philadelphia, professedly for Chiriqui, but which Collector Hatch refused for the reasons above stated.

The agent of the steamer was persistent, and again applied for a clearance, but met with no better success than at first. Of these facts our Government is informed, and probably they are the only ones from authentic sources in its possession.

It is believed this subject was to-day a matter of Cabinet consideration. Orders have been dispatched by telegraph to the commanding officer at Baton Rouge for concentrating and holding the federal military in reserve to be used if necessary as a posse comitatus for the enforcement of the laws. It is believed here, and the fact which have just transpired seem to warrant the conclusion, that the fillibusters so arranged their plans as to avail themselves of the advantages afforded by the re-opening of the Nicaragua transit route for the accomplishment of their design.

The administration is determined, by all the means in its power, including the employment of land and naval forces, to compel respect to the neutrality laws. The instructions to Minister Dimitry, are particularly with reference to the re-opening of the transit, and as both governments have assented to the Damas-Zeledon treaty, it is supposed Nicaragua will offer no obstacle to the passage of the mails.

The presence of the Postmaster-General in New York, in connection with the last named subject, is expressive of the feeling the government has the fulfilment of the Johnson contract.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 4.—The overland mail of the 13th has reached Jefferson City. Sufficient returns received insure the election of the entire Lecompton Democratic State ticket, two members of Congress, Supreme Judge, and State Printer, and a very large majority in both branches of the Legislature. The People's Reform ticket in San Francisco was elected by a majority of from one to three thousand.

Just previous to the departure of the mail of the 13th, Judge Terry challenged Senator Broderick, which the latter seems to have accepted, as a meeting between the parties was prevented this morning by the police.

Business at San Francisco continued dull with lighty country demands; quotations nominally unchanged, but for the few goods selling buyers obtained better terms.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 4.—The results of the fourth Annual Fair, which closed yesterday, are eminently satisfactory. The display of animals was never, perhaps, equalled in this or any other country. The array of machines, agricultural implements, textile fabrics, and specimens of handicraft generally, was unusually comprehensive and varied. Fruits and flowers are credible to the Horticultural progress of the West. The attendance on the ground during the entire seven days was unprecedented. The receipts amount to nearly fifty thousand dollars. When it is remembered that no admission fee was charged for any article exhibited, that this sum proceeds from admission tickets alone, the success of the exhibition becomes apparent. It is already stated that the Directors contemplate the removal of the present amphitheatre, and the erection of one double its capacity.

OTTAWA, C. W., Oct. 3.—Professor La Mountain and Mr. Haddock came into Ottawa to-day, having landed 150 miles north of Ottawa, in the great Canada wilderness. They were brought out by Indian guides in bark canoes. They traveled in their balloon 300 miles, and were up in the air only from four to five hours. For over four days they have been in the wilderness without food, and with no means of striking a fire. They were arrested most providentially by a Mr. Cameron, who was cutting timber with Indian guides.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 4.—Walker and his men left last night and sailed from Berwick's Bay this morning in a steamer chartered for the purpose, without clearance. The attempted clearance of Philadelphia for Aspinwall was made to blind the authorities. Harry Maury commands the steamer. The Brownsville Flag says the fever is fast disappearing.

LEAVENWORTH, Oct 4—The election to-day, on the question of acceptance or rejection of the Wyandotte Constitution, passed off quietly. The adoption of the Constitution is generally conceded. Leavenworth city gives two hundred and thirty-one majority for the Constitution. Atchison city and township give one majority. The other precincts to hear from will increase the majority.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4th.—The play on the St. George's cricket grounds at Hoboken was resumed to-day at a quarter before 12 o'clock. Parr and Hayward at the bats, to the bowling of Gibbs and Hallis. The play was stopped at 5 o'clock this evening, when the 22 of the United States were 92 behind, with only seven wickets to go down. There were 10,000 spectators on the ground, including a large number of ladies, during the play.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—The new Commissioner of the Land Office, an ex-member of Congress from Tennessee, will enter upon his duties next week. The President will leave Washington on to-morrow or Wednesday for Wheatland for a brief sojourn.

M. Lisboa was to day formally received by the President as Minister from Brazil.

The Postmaster-General has returned and resumed his duties to-day.

Reports have reached this city from responsible sources of a contemplated fillibustering invasion of Central America. If it shall appear that an expedition for this purpose is in progress, means will be taken to intercept it. The orders heretofore issued by this Government on that subject are in full force.

TROY, Oct. 5.—A dispatch was received this evening from Prof. La Mountain, dated Ottawa C. W., Oct 3d, as follows: Last [illegible]—landed three hundred miles north of Watertown, in the Canada wilderness. We were four days without food—were brought out by Indian guides in their canoes, &c. Please inform my wife. (Signed) JOHN LA MOUNTAIN.

ALBANY, Oct. 3.—The State Fair opened finely to-day. The accommodations on the grounds for the exhibition are very superior, and the display of horses and cattle promises to be very brilliant.

ST. LOUIS, Oct 5.—The Republican received a note last night from the Postmaster of Santa Clara, California, saying that Broderick and Terry had fought a duel on the morning of the 13th ult. Terry was shot in the throat, and the wound was supposed to be mortal.

Mr. Jarvis, treasurer of the Sonora Mining Co., Edward Woodman, E. E. Cross, late editor of the Arizonian, arrived last night, direct from Arizona. Capt. Smith, Superintendent 3d Division Overland Mail Line, also arrived from Elpaso, having in charge 300 pounds of silver bullion, consigned to the Philadelphia mint.

Upwards of a ton of silver bullion was at Elpaso awaiting shipment to the States.

The silver mines in Arizona were doing well, although the miners were greatly annoyed by the depredations of the Apaches Indians.

The news that Col. Fauntleroy was superseded at Bonneville as Commander of the Department in New Mexico gave great satisfaction in Arizona.

Capt. Simon's surveying party were encamped near the Patagonia mines, awaiting intelligence as to further movements.

Rich veins of gold quartz were discovered at Santa Cruz river, in the vicinity of Fort Buchanan.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The death sentence passed on James Stephens, the wife poisoner, was affirmed to-day by the Court of Appeals, while the same Court reversed the sentence of James Shephard, condemned to death for murder and arson.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The cricket match between the eleven of "All England" and "Twenty Two of the United States" commenced this morning, at Hoboken. The United States players at the wickets. The weather was fine, and the ground in capital order. It was estimated that from 5,000 to 7,000 persons were on the ground. The following is the score:—The Twenty Two of the United States, first innings, J. Lang, bowled Parr, [illegible]

At about [illegible] [illegible] were drawn at [illegible].

The score stood at [illegible]

We understand that on Thursday a match will be commenced between six of the English players with five Americans, and the other six also with five Americans.

AUGUSTA, [illegible], Oct. [illegible]—[illegible]

NEW YORK, Oct. [illegible]—[illegible] for Aspinwall, [illegible]

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. [illegible]—Collector Hatch to-day refused a clearance to the steamer Philadelphia, [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Oct. [illegible]—[illegible] commerce with that country.

A private letter from Arizona dated the 11th ult., says the Apaches are getting bolder and we have almost the usual number of murders and fights. The vote at the recent election for delegate to Congress exceeds 2,000, only about one-sixth of the voters participating in the New Mexican election.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Stocks are down this morning; New York Central [illegible] Money very active and firmer. Sterling exchange is quiet. [illegible]

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 5.—The Third Congressional District is conceded to the [illegible]; the balance of the districts [illegible] as Democratic, though the vote in the [illegible] and Eighth is close.

BALTIMORE, Oct. [illegible]—[illegible]

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Only two of the three steamers advertised to sail for California yesterday left this port, the Baltic and Northern Light.

Mr. D. E. Johnson, the contractor to carry the California mails, [illegible] owing to [illegible] could not fulfil his contract.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 5.—The fillibusters did not leave Berwick's Bay but went down the river in the tow boat Panther without a sufficient supply of provisions and were unable to obtain better accommodations. [illegible] landed at South-West Pass.

Collector Hatch still refuses a clearance to the steamer Philadelphia. [illegible]

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Charles H. Leach, a wealthy leather dealer, committed suicide by shooting himself this morning.

LEXINGTON, KY., Oct. 5.—The Covington and Lexington Railroad was sold at auction to-day for two millions one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. The bid was made by W. H. Gedge, of Covington, for what is known as the Bowler Company. The sale of the road was made to satisfy a judgment obtained by the second mortgage bondholders.

LEAVENWORTH, Oct. 5.—[illegible] The vote was very light. A large majority is for the Constitution.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—The International Cricket play at Hoboken was resumed this morning. The play on the part of the Americans was very good, while that of All England Eleven was splendid. The All England Eleven won the match in one inning, [illegible]

PEOPLE'S PRESS.

[illegible] MARSHALL - - Editor

TERMS - $1 A YEAR, IN ADVANCE.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13, 1859.

FOR PRESIDENT,

STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS,

OF ILLINOIS.

The Statesman in a Quandary.

The miserable pretext of the Statesman [illegible] prestige with the President and curry favor with Mr. Douglas and his friends, have been regarded with contempt by this community. While it permitted itself to be claimed by some of its little [illegible], to be the best friend of Mr. Douglas [illegible] Mungenny and Miller [illegible] (privately) it permitted himself to be abused without stint, and [illegible] a word in his defense. It [illegible] the Ohio Democratic press in the [illegible] that it would be impolitic to bring forward the Presidential controversy [illegible] canvass, or present the claims of any of the aspirants. It argued that such a course might lead to divisions [illegible] party [illegible] union was [illegible] consideration and of the first importance. The [illegible] upon Mr. Douglas, the repeated efforts to place him in a false position by grossly misrepresenting him and his intentions, in which the New York Herald was particularly conspicuous, (and then the telegraph was found a very [illegible]) [illegible] without reply. And yet when this paper (the PEOPLE'S PRESS) was started to repel and expose these [illegible] schemes of political knavery, the Statesman [illegible] the heresy that it had been commenced with no good [illegible] upon Mr. Douglas's best friends!"

The State canvass is over now, and the Presidential canvass is on the tapis. Is it yet too early yet to express a preference for a Presidential candidate, or must we close our [illegible] until they are [illegible] by the Charleston Convention? The Statesman evidently thinks it is too early, especially if there be any inclining to Mr. Douglas, as within a week it has [illegible] its principal writer, at the State Journal [illegible] to make a scapegoat of him, on whose [illegible] shoulders the sins shall be [illegible] which arises the [illegible] so grateful to the Sense of Power.

[illegible] friend at Cleveland, the [illegible] of the Administration in this State (the National Democrat) the Statesman has received a friendly nudge, reminding the editor of his valuable services to the Democratic Party, and telling him if such [illegible] in his absence for God's sake to stay at home till after the election, when if he [illegible] may go to [illegible] the deserts of Arabia or somewhere else!

It was a [illegible] of the Journal to say that the Statesman sought to run with the Douglas hare and hold with the Administration hounds. The figure would be [illegible] if on the Douglas [illegible] "Pussy" would be [illegible]. But Mr. Douglas is so [illegible] so [illegible] or [illegible] so full of courage, and [illegible] that "the hare" is not properly emblematic, for its timidity [illegible] to double, to conceal itself in burrows, while his course is straight-forward, [illegible] pursued [illegible] by his [illegible] energy to seek any covert than [illegible] safety.

When "Occasional" wrote that there was a probability that the Douglas war would be renewed (and woe to any office holder who had given his [illegible] countenance) and that the first head to fall would be the Cincinnati P. M., the dangerous ground on which it stood, at once struck the Statesman. A Post-Office and certain "beneficiaries," [illegible] of Sam Cox's vote for the Lecompton Bill, were not to be [illegible] in that way. Better let an [illegible] and [illegible] him with past offenses, that [illegible] might be propitiated.

It must be very apparent by this time that the time-serving Statesman is not suitable as an indicator of the Democratic [illegible] of Ohio. Any weather-cock might do as well, provided the wind would blow [illegible].

Loyal to the Union.

The Democrats held a ratification meeting at Albany, N. Y., last week, to endorse the State nominations. The grounds were illuminated with Drummond [illegible], and the [illegible] of the scene [illegible] by bonfires, transparencies, and music from several bands.

John McKnight called the meeting to order, and nominated John R. Porter as chairman. The vice presidents and secretaries were then appointed, and the chairman introduced John A. Dix as the first speaker. After Mr. Dix's address, John V. L. Pruyn reported resolutions, of which the following is the most important:

Resolved, That as patriots, proud of our country and its institutions, and looking forward to the preservation of the glorious and [illegible] compact which holds the brotherhood of States in bonds of union, we regard as traitors unworthy to be American citizens, the political leaders and their partisans who seek to array one section of the country against the other, and threaten to invade the domain of sovereign States for the purpose of subverting their domestic institutions; and that in this view we regard the recent proclamation of William H. Seward as an irrepressible conflict between the North and South, which must end in the conquest or subjection of the one or the other, as the demonstration of a spirit which should be instantly and [illegible] rebuked, and that in the [illegible] of the loyalty and of the good name of the State, the great and conservative State of New York should take the lead; that it is the approaching contest and at the ballot box that this great lesson must be administered.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously.

Hon. John A. Dix and Daniel S. Dickinson then addressed the meeting.

[illegible] The [illegible] Democrat, published at Corinth, Miss., hoists the names of Hon. Stephen A. Douglas for the Presidency, and [illegible] for the Vice Presidency.

After the Battle.

In this county the vote is large—in this city, unprecedented. The Democratic ticket has a large majority, with the exception of the candidate for Clerk, who has been defeated by the grossest treachery on the part of those who were expected to sustain the ticket. In the first ward the most flagrant abuse of the privilege of voting was made; and the same may be said of others, especially the second.—Within a day or two of the election, a number were literally bought. Some affected to be persuaded or rather convinced, that Mr. Martin had succumbed to and enlisted in the Miller clique, and numerous stories were set afloat to his disadvantage, when it is notorious that Miller and Hines, for whom Sam Cox procured a paper contract, with all the hands of their paper mill, voted for Mr. Smith and against Mr. Martin. Did this look like the latter was one of the Miller clique?

We ask, shall the Democratic party in Franklin county be broken down, scattered disintegrated, demoralized, by the Post Office and Statesman? What an example has been set? Who has confidence in his neighbor? The ethics of Tom Miller are fast becoming the guiding rules for our politicians. Deceit and treachery are the fashionable divinities, most worshipped; and party organization is whistled to the winds, when a defeated candidate for nomination chooses to fancy himself ill-used and can make terms with the opposition.

Would it not be a proper retaliation to see on some fair day, ere long, the superscription of a commission, wending its way through the Post Office,

MATT. MARTIN, P. M., COLUMBUS?

As strange things have happened, and Mr. Martin, who has been true and honest to the Administration, through good and ill report, would be a meritorious recipient of the President's favor in that behalf.

To the faux pas of the Statesman, and the perfidy of the Miller faction, we owe all our troubles here; on which, without some radical change, will be based much more trouble hereafter.

We have heard much indignation expressed. There was not a Miller who did not vote against Sparrow, Phillips and Martin. The popularity of the former prevented any formidable combination against them; while a concocted arrangement, by which the Republicans withdrew their candidate, enabled the coalition to secure the defeat of Mr. Martin by a meager majority. The means resorted to may be imagined when we declare that we were assured by a man claiming to be a Democrat, that the evening before the election, he had marked the name of Martin off of every ticket in Grove City, thinking it a very clever trick!

We shall have more to say on this subject hereafter. The whole Democratic County Ticket with the exception we have noticed, has been elected. We might have desired others had been nominated, but we gave the ticket our support, and congratulate our friends that the disaster was not more serious, as it might have been, and at one time, looked very much like being. We hope the Democratic party of the county may come together with an unbroken front, and act harmoniously. This can only be done by crushing out the influence which has been a blight upon the party for the last five or six years.

[illegible] The Statesman apologizes to its readers for publishing a short article from the Louisville Democrat, in which was an attack upon Attorney General Black.—That would hardly have occurred had the Statesman been on the same footing with the Democrat we are: we get the weekly, and never read it.—Dayton Empire.

It might have been better for you if you had read it, and profited by its sound, unswerving Democratic doctrines, logically and systematically taught. The Democrat has steadfastly and unwaveringly stood by the principles embodied in the Cincinnati Platform,—it has not been led astray by new-fangled and dangerous heresies, sought to be interpolated in the Democratic Platform and madly advocated by the fanatics of the South, who, by the aid of Executive patronage and influence, find a few echoes in the North. The Empire pays itself a poor compliment and satirizes the Statesman severely; for the apology of the Statesman was worse than the mistake. The following paragraph from one of "Occasional's" letters to the Philadelphia Press may have pinched the toes of the Statesman slightly, and caused it to dispense with the services of Mr. Charles J. Foster, its principal writer, who is supposed to have Douglas proclivities:

"The Administration has determined to renew the war upon Judge Douglas in its most offensive form. Every office-holder suspected of the slightest leaning towards the Illinois statesman is to be instantly decapitated. The first victim will undoubtedly be Hon. James J. Faran, present Postmaster of Cincinnati, and one of the proprietors of the Cincinnati Enquirer—the leading Democratic paper in Ohio, and one of the most influential journals in the Northwest. You will recollect Mr. Faran at Cincinnati in 1856, as an enthusiastic friend of Mr. Buchanan. He was at that time the Mayor of the city of Cincinnati, having served in Congress as a Democratic Representative from the same State, and sustained then as now the highest character. He is not the editor of the Enquirer, and is, therefore, hardly responsible for the opinions of that paper, but the fact that he is connected with it has sealed his doom."

The Postmaster of Columbus, although not the editor of the Statesman, though one of its proprietors, is expected to follow suit, when the Statesman will throw off all disguise and come out for Douglas, which it dare not do now.

NEW YORK ELECTION—HOW THE AMERICANS WILL VOTE.—The N. Y. correspondent of the Mobile (Alabama) Register, writing under date of September 23d, says, in speaking of the union ticket nominated by the Americans:

"The general impression seems to be that the ticket so nominated will not be acceptable to the great body of the Americans. A few thousands may vote it, but the great body of Americans, some 60,000 or 70,000, will go over to the Democracy and vote the entire State ticket.—Register the fact in advance that the Democratic party will elect their State ticket by 12,000 to 20,000 majority."

Franklin County.

The returns have all been received, although the official amount may vary them a little. The Democracy of Franklin have done nobly. They have elected their whole ticket, with one exception, and left their adversaries the empty satisfaction of electing the candidate for Clerk, who, disregarding the popular nomination, and independent of his party, and with a faction of the Democracy, and the most strenuous efforts, secured the support of the Opposition.

In the Counties of Packaway and Franklin Augustus L. Perrill has been elected Senator by a large majority.

In the same counties, Adin G. Hibbs has been elected member of the Board of Equalization.

Not having the facilities of the daily press, we are not able to give the figures this week; but shall endeavor to furnish a full statement in our next issue.

Messrs. Benj. L. Rees, and George L. Converse, have been elected Representatives from Franklin.

Auditor—John Phillips.

Treasurer—Jno. G. Thompson.

Commissioners—Thos. Sparrow, (full term) John Snyder, (vacancy.)

Infirmary Director—James Legg.

Coroner—Elias Gaver.

Clerk Common Pleas—Jas. H. Smith, (Independent.)

The Prospect.

The returns that have reached us from the rest of the State indicate a triumph for the Opposition.

Hamilton County elects the Democratic ticket, but there are losses in several counties, which convince us that the Legislature will be Republican. The gain in some thirty counties for the Republican State ticket is said to be 6000.

We hear that Denny, Rep., has been elected to the House from Pickaway; and that the late Speaker Woods and Mr. Parr have been defeated in Licking. The Senator from Delaware and Licking, Hon. W. Reid, is probably defeated.

It is idle to speculate, with the meager returns before us. There can be no doubt of a Republican Legislature, and the election of the Republican State Ticket.

The extreme caution with which the name of Mr. Douglas was sought to be kept out of the canvass, we regarded as promising disaster, and our fears are realized. A union of the Democracy under his banner could alone have given them Ohio. As it is they must trust to the tender mercies of the Republicans for the next two years in the management of our State affairs, and gird on their armor for the battle next fall, we hope with undaunted courage and undiminished energy.

Sartor Resartus.

The cobbler has been pretty effectually cobbled—the reviewer has been reviewed to some purpose—the examiner has been himself examined.

In our columns to-day will be found an article from "A Citizen of Kentucky," which came to us through the States, which briefly, succinctly, and thoroughly sifts the sophistries of Judge Black's "observations" on Mr. Douglas's article in Harper. If any thing were wanting after the ex tempore reply of Mr. Douglas at Wooster, this completely strips the review of the masterly production in Harper, of its pretended frankness and candor, and exposes its casuistries and misrepresentations. We ask for it the calm and unbiased consideration of the reader, who will find the argument clear, concise and irrefragable. It leaves the full and plump and pretentious proportions of Judge Black's article a mere grinning skeleton, powerless for harm, with its ovenomed dagger in its bony grasp.

[illegible] Ex-Senator John A. Winston, of Alabama, one of the extremist Southern men, comes out in a letter, under the date of the 10th of September, in which he makes the following explicit declaration, from which it will be seen that he is for adhering to the bargain of 1850–51, and against the scandalous position of the General Administration in trying to break down the Democratic party:

"Just now we seem to be carried away by zeal without discretion; reckless of consequences, settled questions are disturbed, and demands made not at all likely to be acceded to. You are aware of the position I took and the part I acted in 1850–51. I then insisted that, as it was contended by some that the Constitution did not carry or protect slavery in the Territories, and that the lex loci and municipal regulations excluded slavery, we had a right to insist on a recognition by Congress of our rights. But the people of the whole South decided against those who assumed that position. The doctrine of non-intervention was presented and accepted by Southern men connected with Federal affairs; and notwithstanding our public men do not appear now to have understood the question alike, it seemed to me that they did settle it, 'that Congress was to let the question alone.' 'Hands off' was the conclusion and the demand of Southern statesmen. It does appear to me now too late to repeat that issue; right or wrong, we cannot now correct the errors and blunders of the past."

[illegible] Why, sir, who has got to elect the next President? Where are your one hundred and twenty electoral votes that we expect to have thrown for the Presidential candidate of the Charleston Convention? They are in the Southern States.—Speech of B. F. Hallet to the Democratic State Convention in Massachusetts.

The above is very true, but it does not change the aspect of the fact that the next Presidential contest is to be decided in the Northern and Western States. There will be the brunt and heat of the combat. The Southern Democrats will have no difficulty in giving all their electoral votes to the candidate opposed to the Republicans. In the North, however, where the sectional fires are kindled, the strife will be hot and desperate. The Southern States cannot elect a President alone.—We must have about thirty-five electoral votes at least from the North. The Charleston Convention must nominate some candidate for President who can carry enough of the North, which, together with the South, will secure his election. The man who has got the most strength at the North it will be wise policy to select. The South can be carried for any Democrat against a Republican. We must, therefore, in our nomination, look mainly to the popularity of our candidate at the North.—Cin. Reg.

AN ANSWER TO Observations on Senator Douglas' Views of Popular Sovereignty, as Expressed in Harper's Magazine for September.

As the authorship of the anonymous pamphlet, which was recently published at Washington under the foregoing title, is generally attributed to Attorney General Black, and as it seems to be regarded by Mr. Douglas' opponents as the ablest exposition of their views that has been published, we propose to give it a somewhat careful, and, as we trust, entirely candid examination. The author is, perhaps, too profuse in his compliments to Mr. Douglas to gain much credit for sincerity. Beyond a doubt, Cæsar would have detected the plot against his life in time to prostrate it, had his enemies been half so elaborate in their show of regard.

We do not claim, however, that the motives of the writer, whatever they may be, should at all diminish the weight of his facts; let them be weighed fairly and impartially. Here is a specimen of them:—

"He (Douglas) shows that Jefferson once introduced into the old Congress of the Confederation a plan for the Government of the Territories, calling them by the name of "new States," but not making them anything like sovereign or independent States; and though this was a mere experimental projet, which was rejected by Congress, and never afterwards referred to by Jefferson himself, yet Mr. Douglas argues upon it as if it had somehow become a part of our fundamental law.

We must say that if this writer knows that Mr. Jefferson's plan "was never afterwards referred to by Jefferson himself," he is the only living individual who knows that fact. Whether Mr. Jefferson's plan was ever afterwards referred to by him or not, he certainly continued to cherish the principles upon which it was formed.—Those principles were thus stated in a letter concerning some local affairs in Virginia:

"Let the national government be intrusted with the defence of the nation, and its foreign and federal relations; the State governments with the civil rights, laws, police, and administration of what concerns the State generally; the counties with the local concerns of the counties; and each ward direct the interests within itself."

In asserting that Mr. Jefferson's plan "was a mere experimental projet, which was rejected by Congress," the writer is entirely mistaken. Mr. Jefferson's plan was adopted by Congress on the 23d of April, 1784, and continued in force until it was repealed by the "ordinance of 1787," which, as Mr. Douglas observes, was passed by a remnant of the Congress of the Confederation, whilst its abler members were engaged in forming the federal Constitution. As Mr. Douglas, in his essay, states the fact that the Jeffersonian plan was adopted by Congress, it seems to me that this writer should have taken the trouble to inform himself before venturing upon even an anonymous contradiction. If, however, the Attorney General is the author of the pamphlet, perhaps it would be unreasonable to say that he ought to have neglected the duties of his high office, in order to obtain accurate information upon a subject not immediately connected therewith.

Neither do we claim that the writer's motive should at all impair the force of his logic; let that stand upon its merits.—Here is a specimen of it:

"He (Douglas) says that the States gave to the federal government the same powers which, as colonies, they had been willing to concede to the British Government, and kept those which, as colonies, they had claimed for themselves. If he will read a common school history of the Revolution, and then look at article 1, section 8, of the Constitution, he will find the two following facts fully established: 1. That the federal government has "power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises;" and 2d. That the Colonies, before the Revolution, utterly refused to be taxed by Great Britain; and so far from conceding the power, fought against it for seven long years."

Now, if this writer will reflect a moment, he will admit—1st. That the people of the colonies refused to be taxed by Parliament, because they were not represented in Parliament; and 2d. That the people of the States permit Congress to tax them, because they are represented in Congress; they adopted the colonial principle by placing the power in the hands of their own representatives.

We will refer here to another specimen of his logic. At one place he contends that the Territorial Legislatures are restricted by the federal Constitution from legislating at all with reference to property, whilst, at another place, he contends that the Territorial Legislatures, being the mere creatures of Congress, should be prohibited by Congress from legislating at all with reference to property, because, being wholly unrestricted by the federal Constitution, they might, by law, set slaves free, or take any other property from a citizen without compensation.

Nor do we claim that the writer's motives should at all weaken the force of his accusations against Mr. Douglas. Let them be considered as they deserve. Here is a specimen of them: The writer complains of Mr. Douglas for asserting that "a portion of the Democratic party" have held that the Constitution establishes slavery in the Territories, and adds:

"The Constitution certainly does not establish slavery in the Territories, or any where else. Nobody in this country ever thought or said so."

The writer's language is quite as guarded in this as in several other passages.—He does not pretend to know what may have been thought or said on the subject in Europe, Asia, Africa, or any other foreign parts; but his acquaintance with all these United States and Territories enables him to assert, positively, that "nobody in this country" ever thought or said that the Constitution establishes slavery in the Territories. Now, without going out of Kentucky, we would point to several editors who have been asserting for months, in so many words, that "the Constitution establishes slavery in the Territories." Other Southern editors have taken the same position; and the President of the United States has said substantially the same thing. In a message to Congress he said:

"It has been solemnly adjudged by the highest judicial tribunal known to our laws that slavery exists in Kansas by virtue of the Constitution of the United States."

We protest against having the President ignored by this anonymous writer, especially if he is one of the President's Cabinet.

Without more words, we submit to the candid reader whether Mr. Douglas had not a right to assert that "a portion of the Democratic party" had undertaken to hold the untenable position that the Constitution establishes slavery in the Territories.

Those who have read Mr. Douglas' essay will be surprised to find him charged by this writer with having assailed the Supreme Court of the United States.—Not only is this accusation unwarranted—wholly unwarranted—by anything that Mr. Douglas has said, but it is positively, clearly, and unmistakably disproved by what he said. Mr. Douglas, instead of assailing the Court, relied on its decision in the Dred Scott case, in support of his position; and, at great length, and with rare clearness and ability, vindicated the decision against the assaults of the Republican party, by showing that it was based upon the principles for which our forefathers fought the Revolutionary war, and which they sought to establish perpetually by the federal Constitution.

Mr. Douglas is also charged with unfairness, because, instead of quoting the whole passage above cited from the President's message, he quoted only a part of it, so as to make the President say: "That slavery exists in Kansas by virtue of the Constitution of the United States." This does not, apparently, furnish matter for very grave complaint. According to Mr. Douglas, the President misunderstood the Constitution; according to the author of the pamphlet, the President misunderstood the decision of the court, beside misunderstanding the Constitution.

Mr. Douglas is charged with taking a different position in his essay from that taken last year in his speech at New Orleans, in which he said that "he accepted the Dred Scott decision; regarded slaves as property, and fully admitted the right of any Southern man to go into any federal Territory with his slave, and to hold him there as any other property is held."—The following extract from his essay shows that he now holds exactly that position:—

"Inasmuch as the Constitution has delegated no power to the federal government in respect to any kind of property belonging to the citizen—neither introducing, establishing, prohibiting, nor excluding it, anywhere within the dominion of the United States, but leaves the owner thereof perfectly free to remove into any State or Territory, and to carry his property with him and hold the same subject to the local law, and relying upon the local authorities for protection, it follows, according to the decision of the court, that slave property stands on the same footing, and is entitled to the same rights and immunities, and in like manner is dependent upon the local authorities and laws for protection."

Mr. Douglas is also charged with maintaining the doctrine, that "unlimited control over private rights may be exercised by a Territorial Legislature, as soon as the earliest settlements are made."

Now, in the first place, Mr. Douglas does not contend that any control, whatever, can be exercised by a Territorial Legislature, "as soon as the earliest settlements are made." He does not contend that five hundred, or five thousand, or any other number of people, can establish a Territorial government without the consent of Congress. He claims the right of local self-government for organized political communities only; and holds that the people of the Territories are dependent on Congress for the right to organize Territorial governments, just as the people of the Colonies were dependent on the Crown. Congress should provide for Territorial governments whenever the requisite population exists—a fact necessarily dependent on the discretion of Congress to decide; and the Territorial governments, when created with the consent of Congress, should have the right to regulate slavery and all other domestic concerns as they please, subject only to the Constitution, as construed by the courts. Such is the position of Mr. Douglas, and it is too plainly stated to be misunderstood by any careful reader.

In the second place, Mr. Douglas did not contend that "unlimited control over private rights can be exercised by a Territorial Legislature." This is an inference of the writer, wholly unwarranted by anything Mr. Douglas has said. The writer admits the truth of this position of Mr. Douglas, viz: that the restraints imposed by the Federal Constitution upon the States are equally applicable to the Territories, but he contends that this amounts to nothing, because the Federal Constitution does not prohibit the States, and, consequently, does not prohibit the Territories from taking private property at all, "they have it without any limitation whatever, and in all the fullness of absolute despotism." If, as he says, the people of every State in the Union have forbidden their Legislature from violating rights of property, may we not reasonably expect these same people to be animated by the same sense of justice after moving to the Territories? But, in this respect, we are not forced to rely, as we think we might safely do, upon the good faith of the people of the Territories. According to Mr. Douglas' theory, the Territorial Legislatures are restrained: 1st. By the veto power of the Governor, who is appointed by the President as the Colonial Governors were by the Crown. 2d. By the power of Congress to repeal the act organizing the Territory; a power which Mr. Douglas has announced himself in favor of exercising whenever a Territorial Legislature proves disloyal to the Constitution and the Union. 3d. By that clause of the Federal Constitution which declares that "no State shall pass any law impairing the obligation of contracts." Mr. Douglas contends, and proves beyond question, that this and all other provisions of the Constitution imposing restrictions upon the States apply equally to the Territories. It has been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, that the foregoing clause embraces executed as well as executory contracts, and protects the citizen in his right to hold property which he possesses under contracts of purchase previously made by him or his ancestor, as well as his right to obtain possession of property for which he has contracted.

Although the above-mentioned restraints might not give protection against attempts of a Territorial Legislature to prohibit or exclude slavery by unfriendly legislation, they will certainly give ample protection against any attempts to abolish slavery—that is, to set slaves free and deprive the owners of their value.

So far was Mr. Douglas from contending in his essay that a Territorial Legislature can confiscate property, that he did not hold there—he has never held anywhere—that the people of a Territory can confiscate property even when they form a State constitution. We are confident that we do not misrepresent him when we say that, as a Senator of the United States, he would oppose the admission into the Union of any new State with a constitution confiscating slaves or any other property of citizens. Beyond a doubt, he would pronounce such a constitution anti-republican, and such a people unfit for admission into the Union upon terms of equality with other States. This writer is wholly mistaken in representing it as being acknowledged by all Democrats that "the people of a new State, either in their constitution or in an act of their Legislature, can make the negroes within it free, or hold them in servitude." We believe that the mass of the Democracy will feel surprised to find this writer, who denies to the people of the Territories any right to legislate concerning their domestic affairs up to the moment of forming a State constitution, claiming for them, at that moment, such unlimited, uncontrollable despotic power; and that they will at least concur with Mr. Douglas in the declaration made by him a few days ago at Wooster, Ohio:

"I deny this heresy, that you can confiscate property when a Territory becomes a State, any more than you can when it is a Territory, or that you can do it in either."

It is contended that Mr. Douglas' present position is inconsistent with the course which he pursued in opposing the admission of Kansas with the Lecompton constitution. We do not mean to discuss that question. The Lecompton constitution being dead and buried, we need not even say "let the dead bury the dead." We will only say that this accusation of inconsistency comes ungracefully from a person, who, though he now denies the people of the Territories any attribute of sovereignty whatever, even with reference to their local affairs, strenuously contended, eighteen months ago, that the people of Kansas, which then only contained about half the population of a Congressional district—assembling under an act of their Territorial Legislature, without any authority from Congress—possessed the inherent, indefeasible, unquestionable right not only to regulate the local affairs of Kansas by fundamental laws, but also to send three Congressmen to Washington to aid in regulating the rest of the nation.

Mr. Douglas is also gravely accused of inconsistency, because, last year, he announced himself in favor of rebuking the disloyalty of the people of Utah, by repealing the act of Congress giving them a territorial government, so as to place the Territory under the sole and exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, like a fort or arsenal—an accusation which needs no refutation here; and because, ten years ago—in view of the doctrine which then prevailed concerning the power of Congress over the Territories, and in view of the peculiar circumstances then existing with reference to California and New Mexico—he voted for placing those recently-conquered Territories under the control of the President. In the first place, Mr. Douglas' doctrine of popular sovereignty, as we understand it, applies in behalf of citizens of the United States, moving to the Territories. It does not necessarily apply in behalf of Mexican half-breeds, nor in behalf of the negroes of Jamaica, if they should be conquered, as they will be some day, by the United States. In the second place, previous to the decision of the Dred Scott case, the unlimited sovereignty of Congress over the Territories was generally conceded.—It was conceded by the Supreme Court in a decision rendered in 1828; it was conceded by the South in 1820—a majority of her representatives in both houses of Congress voting for the act by which slavery was prohibited in the Louisiana Territory north of 30 degrees 30 minutes; it was again conceded by the South in 1848—all of her representatives in both houses of Congress, save one, voting to extend the Missouri compromise line to the Pacific, permitting slavery South and prohibiting it north of the line; and it was conceded by Mr. Douglas and other Northern Democrats, who voted with the South, but voted in vain, to extend the line to the Pacific. In 1850, the South, having failed, and finding it impossible to get a division of the newly acquired Territory upon the principle of the Missouri compromise, took ground in favor of non-intervention by Congress with slavery in the Territories. Mr. Douglas at once adopted that position, and has maintained it ever since. But in discussing the compromise measures of 1850, and the Kansas-Nebraska bill of 1854, he did not deny the unlimited sovereignty of Congress over the Territories; but he contended that the prohibition of slavery by Congress would be unjust to the South, and that the intervention of Congress in any way would be unjust to the people of the Territories, and would destroy the peace and harmony, if not the existence of the Union.

Now, however,—the Supreme Court having decided that Congress does not possess unlimited sovereignty over the Territories, but that, with reference to the Territories as well as the States, Congress is restricted to the limited powers granted by the Federal Constitution, and consequently has no power to prohibit slavery in the Territories. Mr. Douglas accepts the decision, vindicates and defends it, and, in view of the principles upon which it is based, contends with irresistible force that Congress has no power to legislate, either one way or another, concerning slavery in the Territories. Yet this writer whilst in one breath he charges Mr. Douglas with having assailed the Court, in another breath accuses him of inconsistency, because, conforming to the decision of the Court, he now resists the doctrine of Congressional sovereignty, which he and the country generally held in 1849.

There is a striking compliment to Mr. Douglas' consistency in the accusations of inconsistency which this ingenious writer so gravely urges upon such slender grounds.

Let us now examine the theory which this writer asks us to adopt instead of that of Mr. Douglas. He (the author of the pamphlet) bases the right to take slaves to the Territories, not upon any provision of the Constitution, but upon the principle of international law. He says:

"It is an axiomatic principle of public law that a right of property, a private relation, condition, or status, lawfully existing in one State or country, is not changed by the mere removal of parties to another country, unless the law of the other country be in direct conflict with it. * * * * It is precisely so with the status of a negro carried from one part of the United States to another. The question of his freedom or servitude depends on the law of the place where he came from, and depends on that alone, if there be no conflicting law at the place to which he goes or is taken."

To this extent the writer and Mr. Douglas agree; but they differ widely concerning the power of the Territorial governments to make laws conflicting with the rights of persons moving to the Territories. The author of the pamphlet, while he concedes that the right to a slave, like the right to any other property, depends upon local law, and not upon the Constitution, nor upon any general law, contends that the Territorial governments, being merely temporary and provisional, can have no attribute of sovereignty, even with reference to their local affairs, and can pass no law concerning slavery in the Territories; that the local law governing the right to a slave in a Territory, is the law of the State from which the master moves; and that the master's rights must remain, as fixed by the laws of his previous domicil, until the Territory becomes a State. Thus he says:

"It (the Constitution) neither frees the slave nor enslaves the freeman. It requires both to remain in statu quo until the status already impressed upon them by the law of their previous domicil shall be changed by some competent local authority. * * * * A slave, being property in Virginia, remains property; and his master has all the rights of a Virginia master wherever he may go, so that he go not to any place where the local law comes in conflict with his right.

And then he denies the power of a Territorial government to enact any such conflicting law, or in any manner to change the status of the slave as fixed by the law of the master's previous domicil."

In order to illustrate the relative position, of the writer and Mr. Douglas, let us suppose that a citizen of Texas, by the law of that State, may compel his slave to work every day in the week, and that he should take his slave to a Territory.—According to Mr. Douglas, the Territorial government could lawfully forbid him from compelling his slave to work on Sunday; according to this writer, it could not do so, because the status of the slave and the master's rights are fixed by the Texas law, and can't be changed until the Territory becomes a State. The public law, to which the writer appeals, sustains Mr. Douglas' position. Here is a principle of that law, as well established as the one cited in this pamphlet:

"Whatever force and obligation the laws of one country have in another, depends solely upon the laws and municipal regulations of the latter, that is to say, upon its own proper jurisprudence and polity, and upon its own express or tacit consent."

Observe, the author of the pamphlet concedes that the Constitution does not give us the right to carry slaves into the Territories; he even complains of Mr. Douglas for asserting that anybody ever said that it does; he bases the right solely on the principle of international law.—Now, if, as he asserts and insists, the law governs the relations and intercourse between the States and Territories of the Union, with reference to slavery, then it is clear that we cannot introduce slavery into a Territory except with the express or tacit consent of the Territorial government; and that we must depend for protection upon its laws and regulations, and not, as this writer contends, upon the laws of our previous domicil. Thus, it is seen, that Mr. Douglas' theory of popular sovereignty is sustained by the law which governs the intercourse of civilized nations, as well as by those principles which our forefathers insisted upon as governing the relations between Great Britain and her Colonies.

Let us glance at the consequences of the novel theory advanced by the author of the pamphlet. He is not in favor of Congressional intervention. According to his theory, there should be no legislation either by Congress or the Territorial Legislatures, either protecting or conflicting with the right to slaves or other property. Then by what law are the people of the Territories to be governed and protected? By the common law? If by the common law, is it the common law, as understood in England, or in Massachusetts, or in Kentucky? We must do this writer the justice to say, that there is one absurdity which he has contrived to avoid, viz: the doctrine that the common law extends itself, proprio vigore, to the Territories, or is carried there by the Federal Constitution. He probably knows that it has been held by the Supreme Court that the United States, as a federal government, have no common law; and that Congress, under its limited powers, cannot make the common law the law of the United States. But even if the common law was the law of the federal government, it would not thereby become applicable to the local communities in the Territories. The common law was the law of England, but did not extend itself to her colonies.—Had it done so, it would have prohibited slavery in the colonies, as it does in England. The common law is a local institution—as much so as the statutory law of England or of any other country—and exists nowhere except by the adoption of local communities. One of the colonies (South Carolina) adopted the customs of London. Each of the others adopted so much of the common law of England.—All, perhaps, rejected its anti-slavery doctrines. Other portions of it, which were adopted by some, were rejected by others. Thus the common law differed in the various colonies just as it does now in the States. Such of the English statutes as suited the colonies took effect therein, in the same manner as the common law, viz: by the adoption of the colonies.

The author of the pamphlet, as we have intimated, does not contend that the common law or the statutes of England, or the common law or statutes of either of the States, go to the Territories of their own accord; nor that they are carried there by the Federal Constitution; nor that they should be carried there by act of Congress. But he contends that each citizen moving from a State to a Territory carries with him the laws of his State, and is protected thereby; and that those laws cannot be repealed nor changed until the Territory becomes a State. Each citizen will thus be protected and governed by the laws of his previous domicil, and will be wholly independent of the community in which he lives until the Territory becomes a State. This comes nearer to our idea of "Squatter Sovereignty" than any theory we have seen.

The rights of a Virginia slaveholder depend on the common law and statutes of Virginia; those of the slaveholders in other States depend on the laws of their respective States. The laws, and consequently the rights of slaveholders, differ in all the States. In some, the master's rights are greater and more strongly guarded than others. In some, the attempt to steal a slave is a felony; in others, it is not. In some, the stealing of a slave is punished by death; in others, by confinement in the penitentiary. In some, slaves are treated as real estate; in others, as personal estate, with different rules as to descents, devises, and conveyances.

According to this writer, the Virginian goes to a Territory with all his rights under the common law and statutes of Virginia; the South Carolinian goes with all his rights under the customs of London and the statutes of South Carolina; the Louisianian goes with all his rights under the civil law and statutes of Louisiana; and others go from other slaveholding States carrying the laws of their respective States; and all their rights, as held and secured by the laws of their respective States must remain in statu quo until the Territory shall become a State. They cannot, even by common consent, modify the various and conflicting laws governing their rights, so as to form a harmonious system suitable to their new condition.—The rights of every man adhere to him, like the shirt of Nessus, and can't be thrown off, let him do what he will, until the Territory becomes a State.

Let us glance at the writer's position from another stand point. It is not only a logical consequence of his reasoning, but he distinctly states the doctrine, that the status of a free negro in a Territory depends on the law of the State from which he moves, just as the status of a slave depends on the law of the State from which he is carried; and that the right of a man to his wife in a Territory cannot be affected by Territorial legislation any more than the right of a man to his slave. Hence, a free negro having lawfully married a white woman in Massachusetts, could, by virtue of the laws of that State, lawfully remain in a Territory with his white wife, notwithstanding Territorial laws to the contrary.

Such a social condition would present anomalies never witnessed in a civilized community, and certainly never contemplated by the framers of the Federal Constitution. They designed that the Territories should be admitted as States upon acquiring the requisite population. To deny to the people of the Territories the right to regulate their domestic concerns, and to keep them floundering in the sea of confusion, into which this writer would plunge them, up to the moment of forming a State constitution, would certainly be a very indifferent method of preparing them for that act of supreme sovereignty; and in the meantime, the administration of such various and conflicting laws would be wholly impracticable. It is clear that there can be no adequate protection either to the rights of person or of property in the Territories, without exercising legislation, to be made either by Congress or the Territorial Legislatures,—by Congress carrying out the British doctrine of federal intervention; or by the Territorial Legislatures carrying out the colonial principle of Popular Sovereignty.

A CITIZEN OF KENTUCKY.

Death of Senator Broderick.

The particulars of the duel between Senator Broderick and Judge Terry are given in the last California advices. We [illegible] from the Bulletin of September 14.

As the seconds stepped back, and Mr. Coulton gave the word, the principals raised their pistols, which they had held pointed to the ground. On the [illegible], Mr. Broderick's weapon went off, the ball striking the ground a few feet short of his opponent. The next instant, Judge Terry, who had fully raised his weapon, discharged it, and exclaimed, "The shot is not mortal. I have struck two inches to the right." Mr. Broderick gradually turned a few inches, and braced himself for a moment; then gradually lowered himself down to a reclining position on the ground, and then fell over at full length. He did not speak a word during this time. While Broderick thus fell, still clasping his pistol, Judge Terry stood with his arms folded till his seconds advanced, and with them he left the field unharmed. It is supposed that he has gone to some unknown place, to await the news of the result of the shot.

The intelligence was received here [illegible] of all parties with profound regret. Senator Broderick had inspired everyone by his bold and manly course, and there is a general feeling of sympathy that he should have so fallen, in the meridian of life, the victim, as it were of reckless pursuit and of accident. His weapon going off harmless, he was a safe target for his remorseless adversary, whose practiced aim was but too sure. It has been [illegible] already to connect the causes of [illegible] the deceased, in the late canvass, to the [illegible] of his friend, Mr. Broderick, who, it is well known, while he has consistently stood by the principles of his party, has been so [illegible] to the Lecompton organization. Mr. Broderick's death is a lamentable affair. While he was impetuous, and perhaps, rash, he was brave and generous. Though in his untimely fate, those whose hatred he had incurred may feel [illegible], the [illegible] has [illegible] a gallant, chivalrous son, snatched from the field of [illegible] labor, at a period when such men are most wanted.

[illegible] Mr. Douglas [illegible] Carolina organ, The Edgefield Advertiser, which has hitherto advocated his nomination, says his article in Harper's Magazine renders it impossible for the South to support him.—Washington Constitution.

The Douglas organs [illegible] turbance when the Edgefield paper declared for Douglas. They said it was one of the most influential Democratic organs in the South. Now what have they to say?—Louisville Courier.

Say? Why, that he can spare even the Edgefield Advertiser, without missing it. If that paper could have supported Mr. Douglas before the appearance of "Harper for September," and could not, after the true definition and history of Popular Sovereignty, it might very well be spared. The stupid idea [illegible] that the sovereignty is in Congress or some other branch of government, and not in the people—a heresy that needs little reflection to expose it.

[illegible] A telegraph dispatch to the New York Times says:

"The statement that a reply to Judge Black is in course of preparation under the supervision of Judge Douglas, has no foundation whatever. I am assured that Judge Douglas has not authorised, supervised, or sanctioned any reply to the review of his article in Harper. He is content to let the people form their impartial judgment on the essay and review.—Should he reply, it will be over his own signature; therefore, any anonymous publication will be the individual act of the writer, without the authority of Judge Douglas. I have reason to believe that the pamphlet referred to as in course of publication was for the most part written during the absence of Judge Douglas from this city, and without his authority or suggestion. Should Judge Black's position be endorsed in the United States Senate, Mr. Douglas, I understand, will be ready and able to reply in a manner satisfactory to his friends."

[illegible] The Hon. Wm. C. Smedes, an Opposition member of the Mississippi Legislature, has undertaken to settle the question. In a printed letter upon the subject, Mr. Smedes, resting his case upon the Dred Scott decision, takes the ground that there is nothing in that decision, nor in any opinion of the Supreme Court, "which in the remotest degree suggests either the power or the duty in Congress to protect slavery in the Territories;" but as Judge Taney has proved the right of the slaveholder to settle with his slave property in any Territory of the Union, "all that slavery wants in the Territories is to be let alone." He admits, however, that the Territorial authorities, by taxation, &c., may practically exclude slavery, but to guard against this difficulty, he proposes that "the Territories be organized on the basis that they shall neither legislate for nor against slavery."

[illegible] Col. Wm. H. Young, who is well known here in connection with the Spirit of the South, is now associated with the management of Porter's Spirit of the Times.—Louisville Courier.

His friends in this meridian will be pleased to know that he is still connected with some "Spirit," which they had feared had died out, or dried up.

HAIR.—Our friend Collier, who has [illegible] premiums at State and County Fairs, and at Mechanical Exhibitions at the East, is engaged in the construction of wigs, toupees, braids, &c., which he dresses most elegantly. We are glad to learn that his business is increasing, and that orders are crowding in upon him. His hair [illegible] cannot be surpassed, and ladies and gentlemen who are indebted to artificial means of preserving a youthful appearance, should by all means [illegible].

KNOEDLER'S INTERNATIONAL.—This new and elegant saloon was thrown open to visitors on Sunday of last week. It is on Broadway, near the Exchange Bank. [illegible] and Reichert is determined to tempt the appetite with "choice viands." We wont say much of his liquors, because that might be construed into telling tales out of school; but he keeps "[illegible]" and the very best [illegible] establishment [illegible] with a plenty [illegible].

THE NEIL HOUSE.—This immense pile, which is superbly kept by Messrs. Fuller and Wheeler, has just undergone a fresh [illegible] painting, dressing, at the hands of Messrs. [illegible] Bates and Pinkerton, house and decorative painters. It is one of the best provided and most comfortable hotels in the Union.

PORTNER'S ST. CHARLES.—We dropped in at Louis' and had a glass of delicious lager and a plate of capital soup.—He sets out an excellent lunch for his "boarders," who are not required to pay for eating his choice viands. We commend his establishment to those who have [illegible].

NEW MEAT STORE.—We learn that Mr. J. E. Rusk intends opening a Meat Store at No. 200 High street, near Friend, which will be supplied with the best of fresh and salted meats. He is one of the most popular among the dealers in market, and has never been known to furnish his customers with an inferior article.

☞ Seltzer and Webster continue to receive orders for Knabe's unapproachable pianos. They find it difficult to supply the demand. Those who would have a fine instrument—well, never mind, those who will put up with an inferior kind will not call on Messrs. S. & W.

HEAD QUARTERS.—This is the name of a new House, in Newark, to be opened opposite the North Front of the Court House [illegible] by our young friends Arthur and Sullivan, who are commended to public patronage by [illegible].

☞ Lasher's opening supper on the night of the 1st was a superb affair. It [illegible] attended by [illegible].

☞ Charley Wagner is delighting the [illegible].

☞ John [illegible] will have [illegible].

☞ See Joe Swain's advertisement [illegible].

IS HE IN EARNEST?—The Washington correspondent of the New York Commercial Advertiser says that the President openly declares that he will arrest WALKER, even in the interior of Nicaragua and bring him back to the United States, if he could be impeached for the act the next day." The New York Times [illegible] that this is precisely the [illegible] thing of the sort.

[illegible] The Boston, Mass., [illegible] (Calvinistic) of last week has the following announcement about the "distinguished" preaching of Beecher: "What we have [illegible] long expected is now realized in Mr. Beecher's open [illegible] of the doctrine of the inevitable and eternal perdition of ungodly men. The secret of his fraternizing with Chapin and Parker is now fully explained in his open avowal of the main principle of Universalism, which is, that all the Scriptural assertions of the eternal punishment of the wicked fail to make us know that they will thus be punished."

ARREST FOR MURDER COMMITTED THIRTY-FOUR YEARS AGO.—The Cumberland, Md., Civilian stated that on Friday last a man named George H. Drake was committed to the Allegheny county jail, on the charge of murder committed thirty-four years ago. This man, Drake, was indicted at the October term of the Allegheny county Circuit Court in 1825, for killing a man named Benedict H. Athey. He broke jail soon after his incarceration, and was at liberty until his recent arrest. Presuming, perhaps, that a lapse of thirty-four years had obliterated all memory of the crime, he ventured back to this city a few days ago, but his presence awakened the recollection of his crime. At the time of his escape the Governor (Joseph Kent) and Council offered a reward of $300 for his arrest, but for thirty-four years his whereabouts remained unknown. Only three of the twenty-three members of the Grand Jury by whom he was indicted survive. All the lawyers then practising are dead, as well as the officers of the Court.

EXPERIMENT OF CAMELS IN THE UNITED STATES SERVICE.—A letter has recently been received by the Secretary of War from Superintendent Beale, dated Fort Tejon, California, in which the writer speaks in the strongest terms of the great advantage to be derived from the employment of camels in the public service in the West. He states that he lately tried effectually the comparative value of mules and camels as pack animals, and the experiment proved beyond all question the great superiority of the camel, both as regards rate of speed and amount of burden. From what he had read, he dreaded the difficulties which seemed to present themselves in breeding them; but his experience had satisfied him that they were as easily bred as cows and calves. He prefers them, for all such purposes that he has engaged them as, to three times the same number of horses and mules.—Washington Star.

WHERE IS THE BENICIA BOY.—Morrissey was [illegible] Kelly and Price prize fight. [illegible] We understand that Morrissey recently offered to bet $10,000 [illegible] his muscle for another encounter with [illegible]. The money was exhibited as proof [illegible]. The friends of [illegible] however, [illegible] that he would not fight [illegible] to do so, so that he could [illegible] honorably retired.—Troy Times, Oct. 7.

Telegraphic Dispatches.

NORFOLK, VA., Oct. 9.—Nearly one hundred passengers that left New York on board the Quaker City, bound to Havana, have arrived here. On the 7th inst., when 50 miles south of Cape Hatteras, the engine was broken, causing great excitement on board. Her boats were manned and provisioned, and equipped in readiness to abandon the steamer, if found to be necessary. On the first alarm it was supposed the vessel was leaking badly, as five inches of water were found in the hold. Pumps were manned and it was discovered there was no serious leak. The flag however was displayed union down a signal of distress, which brought the bark [illegible], of Boston, to the relief of the passengers. The passengers were mainly transferred to the bark with a supply of provisions, and arrived safely in Hampton Roads last night, under charge of J. J. [illegible] and Dr. [illegible], surgeon of the ship. Twenty of the passengers, and all of the officers of the steamer, preferred remaining on board. She was last seen 40 miles south of Cape Hatteras, near the Gulf stream. The wind was light, but the sea very heavy.—There was no loss of life attending the accident, and no further danger to the steamer is apprehended.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The mails by the Canada reached here last night from Boston, and will leave here this evening, reaching Philadelphia this evening.

The Liverpool circular of Richardson and Spence reports that the whole stock of cotton has been pressed on the market, and the tendency of prices is still downward. Lower qualities [illegible] lower; middling Orleans is quoted at 6 15-16. Mr. Stolterfoht's circular reduced the price of [illegible] grades slightly. A lot of [illegible] cotton, though not the lowest [illegible] has been taken for export at 4d., middling grades are quoted at 6d. [illegible] & Co's circular says that the trade, in the face of a large growing crop, see no reason to purchase beyond sufficient to meet the present demand. The decline is stated at [illegible], and lower qualities are unsaleable. Hewitt's circular quotes a decline of [illegible], and the larger portion of the stock [illegible]. The imports of the week have been 37,000 bales. The quantity at sea is 27,000 bales, against 35,000 at the same time last year.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—The Overland Mail arrived last night. Some San Francisco papers evince a disposition to make it appear that Broderick was the victim of a conspiracy, but most of the prominent ones assert that the duel was conducted in strict accordance with the code of duels. Broderick's pistol went off before it was raised, on a line with his antagonist. Terry's shot took effect two inches from the right nipple, carrying away part of the breast-bone. Broderick suffered intense agony from the time he was shot till he died, when the mail left. Two hours after his death was announced, all the flags of the city were lowered at half mast, and emblems of mourning were beginning to appear in all parts of the city.

At the election in Nevada territory on the 7th ultimo, the constitution framed in July last [illegible] for Governor.

Victoria dates to the 7th ultimo are received. The Colonist says the United States troops on San Juan were throwing up fortifications on the summit of the hill below the Hudson Bay Co.'s station.

Portland (Oregon) papers of the 10th ult. publish a reply by Gen. Harney to Douglas' letter of August 13th, in which he accepts Douglas' explanation and apology for his past conduct, but evidently reposes no faith in the Governor's professions, and declines to withdraw the troops from San Juan until the pleasure of President Buchanan is known on the subject.

Little business was doing at San Francisco. The market was steadily better.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 8.—The steamer Star, from California, with dates to the 20th, has arrived. Business was dull. Arrivals were numerous. The market was easier, and a decline noticeable.

A conspiracy has been found in Miramon's army, the object of which was the overthrow of Miramon, and recognize the Liberals. The leaders of the conspiracy were executed.

[illegible] division was entirely routed on the 15th by the Liberals, who took a large number of prisoners.

Mr. Conner, consul at Mazatlan, is aboard the Star. He has secured concessions of great advantage to our commerce on the western coast.

The British ship [illegible] had been detected smuggling in a port near [illegible].

The brig [illegible] of New York was burned on the third, near Galveston. The passengers and crew took to the boats—they were out two days and landed at Matagorda.

The yellow fever was very fatal in Houston. Ten deaths per day occurred.

Judge Terry had been arrested. The public feeling was very strong against him. Mr. Broderick's funeral was the most imposing ever witnessed in California.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 9.—The filibusters have arrived here in custody of the United States Marshal. Captains Maury, Fassaux and Scott, and Col. Anderson, have been held to bail $3,000 to answer. The rest of the men who were left at the barracks below the city, have since decamped, there being no guard. The filibusters made the soldiers leave the steamer while coming up the river. They state that they were on a fishing party.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 8.—[illegible], editor of the Whig, and [illegible], late candidate for State Representative, had a hostile meeting at DeSoto City. Amicably adjusted. No shots.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—The Santa Fe mail of the 15th ult., reached Independence this morning. Messrs. Otero, [illegible] have arrived, and confirm the attack on the mail by a party of Indians, who took all the mules, provisions and clothing, but did not molest the mail, which was taken forward by the next out-going party. The incoming party found the dead bodies of four men, supposed to be Pike's Peakers. Two days subsequent they attacked the outward bound mail. There was a detention of the in-coming party, owing to waiting for the ox train behind them, and having been apprised of the difficulties ahead by Mexicans, combined the strength of two trains, and probably prevented another attack. A company of cavalry was ordered to march immediately from Fort Riley to chastise the Indians.

AUGUSTA, (Geo.) Oct. 10.—Returns of the Florida election have been received, but they are incomplete. Judge Dupont appears most certain of election to the chief justiceship. The popular vote shows a decided opposition to the annexation of West Florida to Alabama.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—The overland mail of the 16th has reached Jefferson City. The duel between Senator Broderick and Chief Justice Terry took place near San Francisco, on Monday, 13th. Broderick fell at the first fire, pierced through the lungs. He lingered till half-past nine on the morning of the 16th, when he died. The community is profoundly agitated by this melancholy event. Terry was unhurt.

NEW ALBANY, Oct. 8.—Rev. Dr. W. M. Daily, now on trial at Bloomington before the Indiana Conference, has been convicted by that body of drunkenness and lewdness, and expelled from Conference, by a vote of 63 to 15. An appeal has been taken to the General Conference.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The steamer City of Manchester has arrived from Liverpool via Queenstown. Her dates from the latter port are to the 23d ult., but have been anticipated by the Canada at Boston.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—The Utah mail brings intelligence of the trial and sentence to two years to the Penitentiary of McKenzie, the forger of government checks, &c.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 10.—Brownsville, Texas, was attacked on the 28th ult., the jail was broken open and the prisoners freed. Intense excitement. The Mexicans sent aid from Matamoras. The guerillas, headed by Cortinas, who shot the Sheriff of Brownsville last July, in attempting to arrest him, with a party of 100 strong, on horseback, rode into the city and posted sentinels. Gen. Carvajal and others of Matamoras, arrived, and [illegible] the outlaws, ordered them to leave. Fort Brown was garrisoned with [illegible] troops from Matamoras.

The citizens formed a patrol. The outlaws are encamped near the city, 3,000 strong. The Mexican general visited the camp and obtained a promise they would not molest Brownsville any more. The citizens still expect an attack, as the outlaws boasted there were more on the list to kill. An express was sent to San Antonio for troops. The Brownsville Flag [illegible] the military and civil authorities of Matamoras, and blames the Government for leaving them defenceless. The Sheriff and his posse came down to Point Isabel with the Arizona mails. The cause of the difficulty is Cortinas' revenge for alleged injuries. The citizens have mostly fled to Matamoras.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Stephenson's side, second innings: [illegible] by Wisden, [illegible]; [illegible] by Wisden, 28; Diver not out, 18; [illegible] Lockyer's side 208; Stephenson's side 175. Lockyer's majority 33.

NORFOLK, VA., Oct. 10.—The following is a list of the passengers remaining on board the steamship Quaker City when left by the bark: Juo F. Polls, Manuel Berard, C O Monsalve, Edmund O Crabbe, John Chateland, Madame F. Calihan, F Joseph Diaz, G W Saunders, wife and child, Henry Jones, S Ross, C Chassaud and friend, Mrs. E. L. Crabbe and two children, J O Debonday, F E Diaz, N G Diaz, M Gatellie, lady and son, and [illegible]. The number in all is 23 passengers.

[illegible].—The San Francisco Times, of the 14th, says: In accordance with anticipation, the expected duel between Broderick and Terry took place yesterday morning, in a small valley, ten miles from Merced Lake. The parties went out from the night previous, and passed the night in separate localities.

At quarter past six Broderick and Terry arrived on the ground, attended by seconds and physicians—Hon. J. C. McKibben and Mr. Coulter for Broderick, Calhoun Benham and [illegible] for Terry. [illegible] carriages the parties seemed to be in the best spirits, neither appearing anxious or nervous as to the result. About half an hour was occupied [illegible] arrangements. The pistols were [illegible] and the principals took their positions. The seconds divested them of their outside coats [illegible] watches and coin in their pockets.

One of the seconds then read aloud the code of duel, which occupied a short time. Mr. Coulter then addressed the two gentlemen, saying he wished it to be understood, that he should count one, two, after the word fire, after which, he would say stop, no shot to be fired after that.—During this time the principals maintained positions and listened with composure to these details. Judge Terry stood with his head thrown slightly back, looking towards his antagonist.—Each held his pistol in his hand pointed to the ground. Each were dressed in black clothes, and wore slouched hats. Broderick stood erect, but his head rather down. The position of the two were somewhat different. Judge Terry maintained that of a practical duelist, presenting only the edge of his person, keeping his left hand and shoulder behind him.

Broderick, on the contrary, though at first assuming a position somewhat similar to that of Terry, seemed to prefer a careless and less constrained one, and gradually presented more of his body to the fire of his opponent. He held his pistol rather awkwardly, and seemed to feel this himself. He once or twice turned the wrist of his pistol arm to right with his left hand, as though endeavoring to comply with some prescribed directions previously given him. From that time he did not raise his eyes until the word was given to fire. Once his right foot got a fraction beyond the line, when McKibben replaced it.

The bearing of Terry, though he assumed more of a practised and motionless attitude, was not one jot more than that of an iron nerved man, than was that of Broderick. At a quarter before seven, Mr. Coulter pronounced the words, "Are you Ready?" "Ready," responded Terry, and "Ready" was uttered by Broderick. Immediately after, fire—one, two, was pronounced in moderately quick time. Broderick raised his pistol and had scarcely brought it to an angle of forty five degrees from its downward position, when, owing to the delicacy of the hair trigger, it was discharged, the ball entering the ground four paces in advance of him.

Terry fired a few instances later, taking deliberate aim. There was no perceptible interval between the two reports. At that instant Broderick was observed to clap his left hand to his right breast, when it was seen that he was wounded. He reeled slowly to the left and before his seconds could reach him, fell to the ground, his right leg doubled under him, still grasping his weapon. Terry upon discharging his pistol, folded his arms, holding his pistol, still smoking, in his hand, but did not move from his position. Broderick's seconds ran to his aid, and Dr. Loehr commenced to staunch the wound with lint. The bullet entered just forward of the nipple and lodged as was supposed under the left arm. He was soon after borne into town in his carriage. Previous to this, Terry and his friends left the field, driving rapidly into town, and started at once from North Beach, where a boat was waiting, and proceeded to Oakland, where they took private conveyance to Benecia.

On their arrival at Benecia they took the overland conveyance to Sacramento. Broderick was taken to the house of Leonidas Haskell, at Black Point, where he was visited during the day by hundreds of his friends. He was able to speak during the afternoon, but owing to the wounding of his lungs, his articulation was generally indistinct and unintelligible.

The correspondent of the Cincinnati Times says: At fifteen minutes past nine this morning, Mr. Broderick breathed his last. Gloom and sorrow pervade the whole community.—Flags are at half-mast, union down, the stores are closing, and all the public buildings, and even private houses, are being dressed in mourning.

BUFFALO, Oct. 6.—The prize fight this morning at Point Abino, Canada, resulted in Price whipping Kelly in twelve rounds, occupying forty minutes.

Kelly was seconded by Harry Gilbert and Johnny Massey, and Price by Heenan and Mackey. At 1:40 P. M. the men shook hands and stripped for the fight. Kelly appeared one bunch of muscle, and the more powerful of the two, while Price was clean limbed, lighter and more active. Price held two hundred dollars in his hand, offering to bet it that Kelly could not whip him in one hour, but nobody took it.

First round—Considerable sparring, Price smiling and good natured, Kelly seeming cool and resolute. After one or two light passes they clinched, Price throwing Kelly, but getting a black eye in the tussel.

Second round—The men went briskly to work. After some counter-hitting, Price struck Kelly on the left eye, drawing the first blood. Some brisk fighting was done. Kelly struck Price below the belt, which Heenan claimed foul, saying he would claim the fight if it was done again. The referee decided not foul. Price carried his corner by second round draws.

Third round—Some wide sparring and one or two body blows exchanged, clinched, Price throwing Kelly.

Fourth round—Without much ado, Kelly struck full for Price's breast, but missed the blow, Price dodging quickly and completely; interchanged some hard blows. Price backed to the corner, clinched, and Kelly knocked Price down.

Fifth round—Kelly came up more confident, Price looking not quite so fresh, though smiling; both guarded and cautious, closed in briskly and a dozen or two blows exchanged, Kelly down. Two to one offered on Price, with no takers.

Sixth round—Both came to the scratch after merely washing their mouths with water. Kelly led off with a "stinger" under Price's ear, receiving one full on the eye in return, clinched Kelly thrown heavily.

Seventh round—Both came up smiling and spirited. Kelly backed by Price into corner, Kelly's eye bleeding profusely. Price bleeding on the neck, 5 to 2 offered on Price, heavy blows interchanged, Kelly dropped.

Eighth round—Very short, after sparring less than a quarter of a minute, Price knocked Kelly down.

Ninth round—Price improving and backed Kelly to corner, after some sparring clinched, Price throwing Kelly.

Tenth round—Price again backed Kelly in corner, they clinched, Price giving Kelly some severe body blows—Kelly fell. This round lasted one minute.

Eleventh round—Price still backing Kelly to corner; a few passes exchanged, Price knocked Kelly down. This round lasted half a minute.

Twelfth round—Price very confident, Kelly more so than before. After some light sparring, some hard done, Price getting Kelly "in chancery" and "punching" him severely; upon time being called for 13th round, Kelly's seconds came out and threw up his cap, the signal of defeat. The fight lasted forty minutes.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6.—At the session of the American Board of Foreign Missions, Rev. Dr. [illegible] submitted a memorial to be forwarded to the Senate and House of Representatives, asking that more rigorous measures be resorted to by our government to cause the law of the land against the foreign slave trade to be rigorously enforced [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Late last night an official dispatch was received from New Orleans, stating that the steamer Philadelphia had been seized by the U. S. Marshal. An answer was immediately transmitted, directing the detention of the captain and crew, in view of judicial proceedings, and hold the vessel, which, if it shall be found she was employed in a filibustering expedition, will be subject to forfeiting. The dispatch further stated that the artillery company from Baton Rouge was on the way to the point where it was said the filibusters have congregated, ready to be used by the Marshal as occasion may require in the effort to arrest them.

Never has more earnestness been exhibited with regard to any similar expedition than in relation to this one, for the frustration of which vigorous measures have been adopted. So far the efforts of the federal officers have been successful; and it is asserted that their proceedings are satisfactory to the government.

RICHMOND, VA., Oct. 8.—The house of clerical and lay delegates was chiefly engaged to-day in referring various propositions to the Committee on Canons. A motion to hold the next triennial Convention at Chicago occasioned a long debate. A motion to substitute New York was lost. No action was had on the subject.

Dr. Binney, Bishop of Nova Scotia, was introduced to the Convention. The Committee of New Diocese reported recommending the admission of the Diocese of Minnesota. Adjourned.

The House [illegible] doors.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6.—The planing mill of Higginbotom & Co., at Leavenworth, Kansas, was burned Sunday. The loss is $20,000. Insurance $7,000.

FOREIGN NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Oct. 6.—The steamship Canada arrived at Halifax yesterday noon with dates to the 24th ult.

The horse express with dispatches for the Associated press reached here this morning but the telegraph lines having been disarranged by the storm of yesterday no communication could be dispatched until noon to-day.

The following is an abstract of the commercial intelligence furnished.

SECOND DISPATCH.

SACKVILLE, Oct. 7.—The express rider reports the roads between Halifax and this point as badly damaged by the recent storms. Eight bridges on the route have been swept away.

The steamship Ariel from New York bound to Havre touched at Southampton on the 23d ult.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 23.—The Sales of cotton for one week were 46,000 bales.

BREADSTUFFS.—The Quotations of new American flour are 25s@26s per bbl.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.—The market shows an average business without any quotable change.

The telegraph lines between Sackville and Boston are working badly and no general news has come to hand.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 23.—Breadstuffs of all qualities show a declining tendency. Provisions closed steady.

LONDON MONEY MARKET, Sept. 23.—Money is decidedly more stringent. Consols closed at [illegible].

FARTHER POINT, 8 o'clock, A. M. Oct. 10.—The steamship Indian, due here with Liverpool dates to the 28th ult., has not yet been signalled below.

FARTHER POINT, Oct. 10.—The steamship Indian has arrived, with Liverpool dates to the 28th ult.

It was rumored that a definitive treaty of peace between France and Austria would be signed in a few days at Zurich.

The overland mail had furnished advices from China to the 10th of August. The whereabouts of Mr. Ward, the American Minister, was not known.

The impression prevails that the Great Eastern would be still further delayed, and that her departure for the United States would not take place on the 20th of October.

LIVERPOOL BREADSTUFFS MARKET, Sept. 27.—The market closed dull; flour steady; wheat quiet; corn has a declining tendency, there being little inquiry and prices weak.

LIVERPOOL PROVISION MARKET, Sept. 27.—The market closed dull. Beef firm. Pork dull and quotations nominal. Bacon quiet. Lard dull at 58s.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE MARKET, Sept. 27.—Coffee steady. Sugar closes dull.

LONDON MARKET, Sept. 27.—Breadstuffs dull. Sugar heavy at a decline of [illegible].

LONDON MONEY MARKET, Sept. 27.—The money market is generally unchanged. Consols are quoted at [illegible].

The repairs to the Great Eastern are going rapidly forward. It is thought probable she would in a few days proceed to Southampton to finish repairs.

The telegraph cable between Lycely and Malta was successfully laid.

The London Times has another leader on the San Juan difficulty, and laments that the former difficulty should have left any pretext for the question which has arisen, and says 'tis a case for the earliest possible settlement.

The Earl of Derby has carried out [illegible] estates in Ireland, so far as to serve every tenant with formal notice to quit. It is rumored that Sir Hope Grant has been [illegible] of an expeditionary force to China, and that ten thousand men will proceed from India, but none from England.

The American ship Geo. Buck, nearly loaded, for Liverpool, was burned at Bombay.

The Paris correspondent says the amended Zurich programme is stated as follows: A definitive treaty of peace will be signed by the three powers. Austria cedes Lombardy to France, who will [illegible] to Sardinia. The most difficult point in doubt is the debt, and on this head it is believed Austria will moderate her demands on the other documents.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Oct. 10.—The [illegible] steamer Fox had returned with interesting records and relics of the Franklin expedition; from which it appears that Franklin died in 1847, and the ship was abandoned in 1848.

The King of Belgium's proposition to settle the Italian question was reported to have been accepted by Napoleon. They include a European Congress to assemble at Brussels. The statements regarding the other provisions were conflicting. The London Herald says it has reason to believe that a definite treaty of peace will soon be concluded at Zurich, leaving, however, to the signatures of France and Austria. The preliminaries of Villa Franca will be strictly maintained.

A telegram from Berne says, couriers from Vienna had reached Zurich with instructions to draw up a treaty of peace and documents for the cession of Lombardy to Sardinia.

The Arctic expedition found at Point William a record, dated April 25th, 1848, signed by Capt's. Crozier and Fitz James, saying the Erebus and Terror were abandoned three days previously in the ice, and that one hundred and five survivors were proceeding to Great Fish River.

Sir John Franklin had died June 11th the previous year, and that the total deaths to date were nine officers and fifteen men. Many interesting relics were found on the western shore of King William's Island. Others were obtained from the Esquimaux, who stated that after the abandonment of the ships, one was crushed by the ice, the other forced ashore. Several skeletons of Franklin's men, quantities of clothing and a duplicate record of reports to the abandonment of the ships were discovered.

The English journals continue to discuss the San Juan question, generally in conciliatory language.

Large reinforcements for China were to leave England shortly. Part of the squadron had already sailed.

FRANCE.—It is asserted that the result of the visit of the King of Belgium to Napoleon at Biarritz was fully successful, and various rumors are afloat with regard to the arrangements entered into. The London Times' Paris correspondent says that one report was that the question of the Duchies had been settled, and that Tuscany was to be reigned over by the King of Belgium's second son, and report says that Count Flanders is to have the three Italian Duchies, and the Archduke Maximilian Venetia, with separate constitutions. These reports however are not authenticated.

Another Paris rumor was that there was to be no Chinese expedition—that the head of the Mandarins offending at Peiho had been proffered in atonement, coupled with promises to make all the satisfaction that can be required, and that the ambassadors will be received at Pekin.

It is expected that the King of the Belgians, Prince Metternich and Count Walewski, will remain at Biarritz.

The Paris correspondent of the London Herald regards the scheme of placing a Belgian Prince on the Tuscan throne as a ridiculous canard.

Numerous political exiles had arrived at Marseilles.

LATER.

The Paris correspondent of [illegible] Spectator asserts that Napoleon accepts the plan of the King of Belgium, which gives the fortresses of Peschiera and Mantua and the duchies of Parma and Modena to Sardinia, and reinstates the house of Lorraine in Tuscany, and restores the legations to the Pope, [illegible] introducing a variety of reforms, and an army of its own under Archduke Ferdinando Maximilian, under the title of Grand Duke of Venetia.

These stipulation have the concurrence of Austria. A European Congress is also to be held at Brussels, presided over by the King. The Paris Patrie particularly confirms the above.

ITALY.—The Sardinian government has issued a circular denying the reported cession of Savoy to France. The Sardinian government is also said to have protested to the great powers against the assistance offered by Austria in recruiting soldiers for the Pope.

The King of Sardinia was enthusiastically received on his visit to Parma, Lodi, &c.

The Pope is in a very alarming state. Cardinal Antonelli has declared his intent to attend to public affairs.

SWITZERLAND.—The Lausanne Gazette says the Minister of the United States, Mr. Fay, has presented a long report to the Federal Council, praying it to intervene with the Cantons which [illegible] intolerant measures against the United States with a view of obtaining a modification of the same.

SPAIN.—The report that [illegible] has been appointed Captain General of Cuba was fully confirmed. It is reported that England had offered to mediate in the case with Morocco.

TURKEY.—Amicable relations had been established between Turkey and Persia. Matters at Candia were of a serious character, and numerous troops had been sent thither. [illegible] was delivered up for a bribe of six million roubles. The Circassians continue at war against Russia.

THE LATEST.

PARIS, Saturday.—The King of Belgium was to leave Biarritz last night for Calais, where, it is said, he is to confer with several distinguished personages. It is supposed that his journey is connected with the proposed Congress at Brussels.

The report of the foundation of the Kingdom of Central Italy, under Count Flanders, is positively denied.

LONDON, Saturday, P. M.—In the treaty with the Cochin Chinese, the French Admiral obtained four important concessions, viz: the exercise of the Christian religion, a treaty of commerce, the cession of the town of Saigon and adjoining territory, and the recognition of the rights of the French to the bay of Turan.

The health of the King of Prussia is worse. The harvest in Belgium will be only two-thirds of an average.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says Cherbourg is about to be armed completely on a war footing, with rifle cannon for all the batteries.

MASONIC.—The grand encampment of Knights Templar of the State of Ohio, and the Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters of the State, will commence their annual session at Armory Hall, in this city, on Thursday, the 13th inst. In the former of these bodies, John B. Acker, Esq., of Dayton, will preside, and in the latter J. M. Parks, Esq., will officiate as chairman. On Friday, Oct. 14th, the Grand Royal Arch Chapter convenes in the same Hall the Hon. Geo. [illegible], of Wooster, presiding, and these three bodies will probably be occupied at intervals until Monday afternoon. During the session of the Grand Chapter, the order of High Priesthood will hold an annual meeting—the Grand High Priest of the Grand Chapter being ex-officio the presiding officer of this society for the time being.

PRODUCTION OF GOLD IN CALIFORNIA.—A correspondent of the Courier and Enquirer states that the quartz-crushing machines now in California cost upward of $3,300,000, and makes the following statements as to the present rate of gold production in that State:

The richest quartz vein in the State is that of Allison's Ranch, which is believed here to be the richest gold mine in the world. The first 63 tons of quartz from this vein produced $32,000. The vein or lode called lead by the miners, was opened in October, 1856. The yield during the ensuing two years was estimated at $1,500,000. Eight thousand tons of rock have been crushed, which has yielded $200 per ton.

Street & Spinola's claim, in Tolumne county, is supposed to contain gold rock worth $1,000,000.

Col. Fremont's Mariposa Estate mines are yielding him, it is estimated, $3,000 per week.

The authorities, adopted by the Register, state the production to have been very uniform since 1854, at about $70,000,000 per annum, and from various facts brought to my knowledge, I believe the estimate to be nearly correct. The total yield of the California mines from the discovery up to December, 1858, is stated to have been $580,432,887.

EFFECT OF EXCITABILITY.—The other day, a Cincinnati mechanic, who had been suffering from a nervous attack, took an overdose of laudanum to quiet his disordered mind. It so excited his brain, that, during the night he opened the window of his bed-chamber and leaped out, breaking an arm, spraining an ankle and badly bruising his body in other respects. He says he was under the impression that he was at a hotel, and was opening the door to walk out.

THANKSGIVING.—An effort is now making to procure from the Governors of the different States of the Union the appointment of one and the same day, to be observed as a day of general Thanksgiving and Prayer. A good idea, and a plan which we hope may be fully carried out.

We notice that the Governors of New York, New Hampshire and one or two other States have fixed on the 24th of November as the day.

BANK FAILURE.—A dispatch from Steubenville of the 5th says the Citizen's Bank, of this city, of which DANIEL MOODY, an old and well-known financier, is cashier, has closed its doors. It is supposed that the Bank, which is but two or three years old, has sunk its capital; but as it issues no notes, the loss will not be large to the community. Some persons here believe its indebtedness will be fully met by the stock holders.

FROM HAYTI.—Haytien advices of the 13th ult., state that the shooting of the daughter of President Geffrard, on the 10th of September, was a signal of a general rising of a party of conspirators against the government, but as prompt measures were taken, and about forty-five of them arrested, quietness soon prevailed. They are having their trial, and will no doubt be shot, as the President has resolved to use no clemency towards them hereafter.

Gen. Prophets, one of Soulouque's ministers, has been banished.

☞ John Pettit, a hard working warehouse man of New Orleans, was entrusted with $700 to deposit in a bank. He took a drink on the way—a second, and a third. While intoxicated he lost $400 gambling. His widowed mother took the remainder, sought his employers, and obtained their forgiveness for her son. He, meanwhile, was in prison; but it was intended to release him after severe admonition. Remorse and shame, however, were too much for him. The frenzied man battered his head against the walls of his cell with such violence that the skull was fractured, and he was found dead by the jailor.

☞ A. De Rossvalley, who assisted in the post mortem examination of Dr. Graham, who was lately shot by Toledano at New Orleans, called upon the widow on the day fixed for the burial, and desired to re-open the deceased, on the pretext that he had dropped within the body a valuable ring, while conducting the examination. The distressed lady referred him to her brother, who to get rid of the application gave Rossvalley $21, the value which he placed upon the ring. Subsequently however Rossvalley was arrested on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences, there being good reason to believe that the pretended loss was a pure fiction.

☞ The New York Independent is reliably informed that a large business firm in New York have now connected with their establishment in full blast a well-furnished eating, drinking, and smoking saloon, where the customers of the house are regularly introduced at certain hours, and, if occasion requires, several times between.

☞ A most daring robbery was committed at Louisville, Ky., at an early [illegible] on Wednesday morning. Messrs. Vogt and Klink had on exhibition at the Mechanics' Institute a case of jewelry which was carried off. Among the property taken was a diamond necklace valued at $350, a diamond ring at $200, chains, bracelets, breastpins, &c., all amounting to nearly $2,000 [illegible]

ALBANY, Oct. 7.—A large robbery was committed in this city last night, Hood & Tobey's jewelry store having been completely stripped of its contents. The jewelry stolen consisted mainly of watch chains and [illegible]. Most of the watches have Hood's name on them. The loss is estimated at from $20,000 to $30,000.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7.—News from Leavenworth say the adoption of the Wyandotte Constitution is rendered certain by the returns from the most important counties. The majority will probably reach 4,000.

A dispatch from Independence to the Republican says Mr. Otero, delegate to Congress from New Mexico, and wife, Judge Watts, wife, and son, Judge Porter, and Mr. Crenshaw are presumed to be with the incoming Santa Fe mail party, for whose safety much anxiety is felt. The attack on the outgoing mail was made by the Kiowa Indians on the 24th ult. The dispatch also announces [illegible] military escort [illegible].

Another dispatch to the Republican from Atchison announces the arrival of the Salt Lake mail of the 17th. A party of emigrants from Greene county, Iowa, and Linn county, Missouri, were attacked by the Shoshone Indians, near Goose Creek Valley. [illegible] Root was killed, [illegible] were wounded. The Indians took all the cattle, and burned the wagons. Another party from Burlington was attacked in the same vicinity and one killed and one wounded.

[illegible] to California, and China.

Col. Chapman's command has arrived and relieved Col. [illegible], who left on the 8th for Fort Leavenworth.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Information has been received here that as soon as Col. Sumner heard of the attack on the Santa Fe mail, with its fatal results, he dispatched a company of dragoons to the Pawnee Fork to punish the offending Indians. Hopes are entertained that this prompt action on the part of Col. Sumner will result in the capture of the murderers, and the rescue of the passengers by the [illegible] mail. It will probably be found necessary to station troops at the Pawnee Fork to escort the mail thence to Cold Spring, and thus obviate the occurrence of such outrages.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—Judge Ludlow this morning rendered his decision in the famous case of Wm. H. Jeandell, who was arrested in July last, on a charge of a breach of the peace, in stopping a passenger railway car on the Sabbath. The court ordered the discharge of the defendant, the arrest having been premature for the complaint.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—There is here little additional intelligence to-day relative to the filibusters. One official dispatch from New Orleans states that the tow boat Panther has been seized, together with the captain and crew, and arrangements have been made to arrest the party who went down the river in the South Pass in that vessel. The opinion here prevails that the whole scheme has been frustrated, [illegible].

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—The Michigan Agricultural Fair closed to-day, having been the most successful ever held in the State. Every department was completed, and the crowd in attendance unprecedented. The annual address was delivered yesterday P. M., by Gov. Banks, who was, with Gov. Wisner, Senators Bingham and Chandler, escorted to the grounds by the military and fire companies.

☞ All, especially young men, should read the advertisement of the "National Dispensary," of Cincinnati, in another column.

ADVANCE IN ALMANAC LITERATURE.—We observe that the astronomical department of Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Almanac, for 1860, was prepared by one of the first astronomers of this or any other country—Professor O. M. Mitchell, of the Cincinnati Observatory. Scattered through it are items on rural affairs, from the pen of Mr. Hamilton, President of the Cincinnati Horticultural Society. This would seem to be a decided advance on the old humdrum style, in the indispensable article of almanacs, with which the community have been wearied for the last dozen years. We presume that most of our enterprising druggists have Dr. Roback's medicines and almanacs. Dr. Roback's office is at No. 6 East Fourth street.—Cin. Times.

PALUDA MIASM.—The Chemists have long been laboring to detect this subtle poison, and determine what it is. Dr. Ayer, of Lowell, has at length succeeded. He finds it to be an etherial exhalation of vegetable decay, which is evolved only in the presence and by the influence of water. Its absorption through the lungs into the blood is the sole cause of the bilious derangements which result in the Intermittent Fevers, so afflicting and so prevalent in our climate. An antidote to this insidious poison, is one of the great desiderata in medicine, and the Doctor feels sure that he has found one which not only neutralizes but expels it completely from the system. It is put up in a convenient form, called "Ague Cure," and furnished cheaper than other remedies for this complaint, which last fact is by no means an unimportant one in these times.—Democrat, Woodstock, Ill.

THE SCANDINAVIAN PILLS AND PURIFIER.—The following flattering notice is taken from the Portsmouth (Ohio) Scioto Valley Republican of April 9, 1859:

SCANDINAVIA.—A friend writes to us for our "real opinion" of Dr. Roback's Scandinavian Remedies—where he can obtain them—and why they are called "Scandinavian," and we are frequently asked the same questions. Scandinavia is the ancient name of Sweden and Norway, and a Scandinavian, that is a Swede or Norwegian, affectionately calls this country "Scandinavia," in the same sense as we speak of "Columbia," or "The Union." By the way, there are over nine thousand Scandinavian families in Dane county, Wisconsin. Although a citizen of this country for many years, Dr. Roback is a Swede by birth, and compounds his Medicines of Swedish herbs. We think the name is very appropriate. We have the very highest opinion of the Medicines, and of Dr. Roback himself, who is not only a singularly skillful physician, but a gentleman of the Old School, as we know personally. Our advertisement columns will answer the rest of our friend's letter.—See advertisement.

CITY NOTICES.

McCoy's Commercial College.—Among the advertisements this week will be found that of the institution under Samuel I. McCoy, which deservedly stands high in public estimation. The course of instruction is broad and ample. The student is thoroughly taught in those branches of education of the more practical sort, which, while they improve the mind, fit him for almost any useful station in life. He is there made an accomplished accountant. The elements of commercial law are inculcated; and he is fitted to embark upon the sea of trade and commerce, qualified to bend his sails to meet its vicissitudes and avoid its baffling and contrary winds. Among other evidences of approbation is the following voluntary and merited tribute from a teacher in another institution of similar character, which speaks for itself:

BIRMINGHAM COMMERCIAL COLLEGE, June [illegible], 1859.

PROF. SAMUEL I. MCCOY—

SIR: I take great pleasure in recommending young men to your far-famed College, as I am persuaded, from knowing your abilities, that your's surpasses any similar institution in your city, and I think has no superior in the States. As to the penmanship department you have [illegible] and but few equals in the country.

MY FIRST LOVE.

[illegible]

...my last [illegible] wrapped up in my [illegible] I was tall; I was [illegible] I was terrible ugly-looking at that moment.

What possessed me I cannot tell, but from an old chest I had taken a blue broad-cloth swallow-tail coat that belonged to my grandfather in the time of the wars, and in the pride of my youth had got into it. The tails came nearly to my heels, while the waist was nearly to my arm pits. The sleeves reached to my fingers, hiding entirely from view the luxuriant white silk sleeve which I had allowed myself for the occasion. Above this uncouth pile of blue cloth was perched a hat. Oh, ye stars and moon that looked upon it, testify with me that it was a hat!—a hat and not a stove pipe, a hat and not a boot leg!—That hat!—looking back at it through the mist of twenty-five years, it seems to have risen to the stature of two full feet while its brim appears little wider than my thumb nail. My eyesight isn't quite so perfect as it used to be, and so I may not see quite rightly. Make all due allowance, dear reader.

I say that I must have looked ugly at that moment. Be that as it may, I thought I was looking splendidly, and that the figure I cut was an honor to the name of Brown, and I was proud of it; proud as I walked up to Janet's window, and placed carefully there the ladder that was to bear her to my side. Everything was silent about the house. Fate was surely with us. Fanny had been bribed into our service. As I stood there I could see her little figure flit noiselessly to and fro by the window, and how I blessed her—blessed her from the very bottom of my heart for her sisterly kindness.

At last Janet commenced descending the ladder, and as she did so the moon crowded in out of sight under a huge black cloud. The heavens favored us; our success might be looked upon as fixed.—Three steps more upon the ladder's rounds and Janet's dainty little feet would stand upon terra firma with my own. The steps were taken, and she held for a moment fondly the sleeves of my blue broadcloth, before we looked up to the window, both with up raised hands to catch a small bundle of clothing that Fanny was to throw down to us and which we had no other means to carry with us.

"Be quiet, Fan," whispered Janet, as she appeared at the window and poised the bundle above our heads. "Be quiet, now, for heaven's sake, and drop it quickly."

But Fanny still stood there, swinging backward and forward the huge bundle, without heeding Janet's earnest entreaty.

"Do, do throw it, Fanny dear! Do have mercy on us! What if father should know of this? What if he should be awakened!"

"La, give it to her, Fan—don't plague her, she is in a hurry," called a voice at that moment from the closed blinds at the window point which belonged to none other than Dr. Stoddard.

"Give her the things, and tell the boys to carry out a bag of corn, a cheese and some wheat and butter. Janet must have a setting out—only be still about it, Fan."

For a moment we were petrified to the spot. I thought I should fall to the ground. What should we do—run, faint, die, evaporate, or go mad? While we stood undecided, two huge mattresses fell at our feet from the window, followed at once by sheets, pillow cases, table cloths, and sundry articles necessary to the setting up of a respectable house keeping establishment.

"Mother, mother, don't one of these feather beds belong to Janet?" called Charlie Stoddard from another part of the house.

"Yes, one, and a bolster, and a pair of pillows, too. Carry 'em right out of the front door," was the answer.

"Whose horse have you, Jason?" asked the doctor, pushing up the blind, "your father's?"

"Y-e-s," I stammered.

"Humph, didn't you know better than this? That old grey isn't worth a button to go. Why didn't you come up to my barn and get my black mare? Sam, Sam, hurry right away straight to the barn and harness black Molly for Jason. If you'll believe it, he was going to start off with his father's old horse! Be quick, Sam—work lively—they're in a hurry; it's time they were off."

"Have you anything with you, Janet, to eat on the road?" put in Mrs. Stoddard, poking her head out of the window.

"No, ma'am," faltered Janet, moving a step or two from me.

"Well, that's good forethought. And as I live, there isn't a bit of cake cooked in the house, either. Can you make some white bread and bacon, and some brown bread and cheese do, Jason? It's all we have."

"Yes, ma'am," I said meekly, stepping as easily as I could a little further from Janet.

"Look, father and mother, quick, now the moon's out, and see Jason's new coat and hat!" called Fan, from the window, her merry voice trembling with suppressed laughter, "isn't that a splendid one, father?—just look at the length of its tails."

"Just give me my glasses, wife," said the doctor. "Is it new, Jason?"

"Yes, sir, rather new," I said, giving an eager look in the direction of the lane.

"Well," drawled the doctor, eyeing me [illegible], "that coat is handsome."

"And his hat, father?" called the wicked little Fan.

"I declare," exclaimed the doctor.—"Wife, wife, look here, and see Jason's coat and hat!"

What should I do—stand here until morning before that incessant fire of words? Should I run? Should I sneak off slowly, as Janet was doing? Oh, what should I do?"

"Don't they look nice, mother?" asked the doctor, putting one broad brown hand over his mouth, doubling his grey head almost down to his knees. "He-haw, ha-a-haw, hi-he-haw, mother—he-ha—don't they look nice?" roared the doctor.

I couldn't stand it any longer. The doctor's laugh was a signal; it was echoed from all parts of the house. Fan cackled from the chamber window, Sam shouted from the barn, Mrs. Stoddard "he-he-he," from the kitchen; while Charlie threw himself in the door-way and screamed like a wild Indian. I turned around and gave a leap to the garden. Every Stoddard called after me; I am wrong, every Stoddard but Janet, she remained silent.—One told me to come back for the bread and cheese; another that I had forgotten my bundle and bride; another bade me wait on black Molly and the new buggy; Fan bade me to hold up my blue coat tails, or I should get them dragged. I didn't heed any of these requests. I went directly for home. I reached home feeling sheepish—no, sheepish is a weak word for it—I can't express how I felt. I had a great idea of hanging myself; I thought I had better be dead than alive—that I had made an idiot of myself it was plain—Fan had betrayed us. I vowed vengeance upon her until daylight, then I sneaked out to the barn and hid in the haystack. I staid in until Charlie Stoddard brought my father's horse.

The old gentleman was frightened—[illegible] and I made a clean breast of it; I didn't promise him to repeat the offence, there was no need of it; but I did not look at a girl for seven years. When the eighth year came around I remembered my vow against Fanny Stoddard. Well, to make a long story short I married Fanny. Janet became a parson's wife.

And here let me tell you in confidence, reader, that I really think little Fanny Stoddard had a very deep motive when she betrayed Janet and me, although she was but a child. She liked me, even then, I believe. Well, at any rate, she declares every time the affair is mentioned, that I have had my revenge upon her. Bless her faithful heart, it has indeed been a sweet one.

How Portsmouth was Bombarded.

The town of Portsmouth, in the stony State of New Hampshire, is a place of quiet habits and commendable decorum, even in this fast age. Thirty years ago it was no less staid, serene and well behaved. Still, there was young and frolicsome blood in Portsmouth then, as there is now, one evidence of which will be found in this veracious narrative. Some thirty odd years ago, in some way to me unknown, a secret association of youngsters existed in Portsmouth, designed to do a little occasional "waking up" of the people and region there and thereabouts. It was a "strictly confidential" institution. Their treasury was first filled by assessments upon members, and afterwards aided by manufacturing and trafficking in torpedoes and other noisy explosives. The main capital, however, was invested in gunpowder.

A favorite "waking up" agent used by those worthy young men was made by winding "tarred ratlin" around say a pound of powder, until the diameter of the tough case was about equal to a good-sized bombshell—a slow match being connected with the powder. On some dark, solemn, cloudy night, one of these "reporters" would be laid upon a board, the slow match lighted, and the impromptu bomb-boat pushed out upon the rapid, ebbing tide. When opposite the Navy Yard there would come up a terrific explosion, with a sharp flash of light and sudden illumination, to the consternation, surprise, wonder, &c., of the forces at the Navy Yard, and everybody else. Much speculation arose, and many wise opinions and explanations were given about this remarkable phenomenon—the general conclusion being that the cause was subterranean, and belonged to the earthquake family. It occasioned no little alarm among the peaceable citizens of Portsmouth.

Upon one occasion, while the Methodists were converting sinners at a Kittery camp-meeting, a monopoly of the cooking and feeding business having been granted exclusively to one of the deacons, it was adjudged unfair and a nuisance. The difficulty was removed at night by securing one end of a stout rope around the legs of the cooking stove, (in, on and about which boiling, broiling, roasting, frying, &c., were going fiercely on,) and the other end to one of the "ratlin" bombs, secreted behind a near stone wall. When the tremendous explosion came, that same instant the hissing, spitting, sputtering stove and contents disappeared from the tent, as did the crowd of customers. A liberal reward was offered for the person or persons of the guilty, but nothing more came of it.

But the richest of all their pranks was bombarding Portsmouth. In the course of examining into the state of the town, one of the members discovered a dozen old cannons "laying around loose" upon a wharf close to what was called Liberty Bridge, a solitary, unfrequented place at night, though busy enough by day.—Those guns had been left upon that wharf by a privateer at the close of the "last war," as grave scholars still persist in saying, and although they had made some noise in the world in their day, yet they were but "dumb dogs" at that time. Inwardly, they might be termed constipated, by an accumulation of dirt and rust, and unfit to "vomit forth" or "belch" anything, or indeed to make any effort in that direction. It was decided, however, that these "barkers" had been silent long enough, and that their throats should be cleaned and allowed to speak once more. In truth the duty, or the prize, seemed so unusually tempting that there was great alacrity shown by all the members in the new and important work. After many weeks of hard night-toil, the whole dozen guns were reported in good, clean, nice, reliable condition for public service.

In pursuance of the charitable character of the society, and the great rule not to let the left hand bother the duties of the right, the society waited until a very dark, dismal, dreary night, for the grand display. 'Twas on such a night as that, about the owlish hour of midnight, that those twelve guns were loaded with a full three pounds or more of powder each—that the same was "wadded down" quite up to the muzzle with green grass—that twelve slow matches of proportioned lengths were set in well primed touch-holes—and that, at a signal, each slow match was fired at the same instant by those twelve dutiful servants of the public, who fled for their homes and refuge the instant the daring deed was done.—The reader must imagine the innocent character and habits of the good people of Portsmouth—the darkness and lateness of the hour—the startling nature of the interruption to their dreams, to have any sort of conception of the scene of confusion and positive terror that ensued.

Each guilty, quaking disturber of that placid scene had about reached his house, when the first gun thundered upon the sleeping town—actually making the earth and houses tremble. This waked about every soul in Portsmouth. After some ten minutes, the second gun boomed its warning of danger at hand, and half the night-caps in town were dotting the opened windows. The third gun put every soul into clothing and a cold sweat; the fourth filled the streets with excited citizens; the fifth proved the truth of the report that the British were bombarding Fort Constitution and the town; the sixth sent the selectmen into most solemn conclave and deliberation; the seventh found rusty old Queen's arms and shot guns in the hands of volunteers; and so on, until the firing ceased, about three of the clock, A. M. Of course, there was no more going to bed in Portsmouth that night, and no end to the reasons for the awful event that had occurred.

Daylight revealed the whole story.—Every "son of a gun" had recovered more than pristine vigor, under the peculiar stimulants applied to them. Three had whisked themselves well up into the air, and were found quiet and satisfied in the mud, one of them half through the venerable bridge; two had reared up and plunged bodily through an old building upon the wharf; while another, no less frisky, had skipped about six feet and gone "spang" through an innocent oyster boat which sank under the affliction. Three of the excited pieces had cast themselves into the dock, and the rest were scattered in various attitudes about the wharf.—This explained the mystery. The people were terribly indignant at first, but became more good humored at last. The "selectmen" offered a large reward for the discovery of the wicked disturbers of the public peace and destroyers of property, and every member of the society quaked and "trembilated" many a day afterwards, but nothing more came of it. And that is the way Portsmouth was bombarded.—N. Y. Atlas.

The War in China—Threatened Invasion by England.

The London Post (Government organ) of September 21 says:

The events of last June have, however, dispelled all our premature dreams, and shown us that we have a very arduous, long, and costly work to do before the diplomatic relations which were agreed to can be acted upon, and before the advantages that were expected to ensue can be realized. That work is neither more nor less than a war of invasion. We have to insist that the treaty shall be carried out in all its integrity, and material guarantees surrendered for its perpetual observance. To do this we must assemble a large army and a powerful fleet at the mouth of the Peiho and at other parts of the Chinese coast. We must assail the whole empire this time. We must push our forces into the interior and storm the capital. And we must do all this, terrible as it is, without flinching or halting, on any morbid pretence of mercy towards simple-hearted and unoffending natives. The lesson we are going to teach must be a lesson to all—to the Emperor, to his subjects, to the people of the coast, to those of the interior, to soldiers and to sailors, to old and to young. That lesson must be sharp, but it need not be cruel, and its significance should be, not that England is powerful only, but that she is just and reasonable. That she will insist on treaties being fulfilled; but that, if fulfilled, the Chinese have much to gain and nothing to lose by their intercourse with her. This is not a consoling prospect for our Chancellor of the Exchequer. The war, from its distance and extent, must be costly; but the chief burden must fall upon those who provoked it, and when the time for new conditions of peace shall have come, the wealth of China must pay the piper. Even then the cost to England must be great, but not more, we may well trust, than will be compensated by the advantages of opening China once for all to the commerce of the world.

For, let it always be remembered, that the advantages we all hoped for are not lost; they are only in abeyance till a second struggle shall have shown the Chinese the folly of their resistance. It will be a point of honor with England not to surrender them; she must preserve now till she has re-captured them beyond all danger of fresh treachery. The time has come for western civilization to teach the Celestials that their day of exclusiveness has gone by, and that when they make terms with European nations they must abide by them.—They have agreed to admit our people, and it is now for our people to force admittance.—For the present the struggle will be severe, but it is not in Englishmen to doubt that in the end we shall carry our point. It is true, we have to cope with a population of two hundred and fifty millions; but only a fraction of that population is available for the purposes of war, and even that faction is not concentrated, but scattered over a vast extent of empire, and not capable of being brought together without great cost of time, and life, and money. We have nothing, then, to fear from the density of the Chinese population. Only let us go to work with spirit and liberality. Let us have no peace-society theories in our way, no morbid outcry against a vigorous prosecution of the invasion, no absurd clamor for cessation of hostilities before we have thoroughly done the work. Let the expedition be on a scale commensurate with the solemn international principle that has to be vindicated, as well as with the dignity of the insulted countries, the great advantages at stake, and the probable difficulties to be encountered. It remains for England to give a loyal support to the Ministers charged with these affairs, and to strengthen their hands by a calm and common-sense estimate of the circumstances that have to be dealt with. In that case the Chinese will be taught to respect the representatives of the Western Powers, to rue the deceit of which they have been guilty, and to break down forever the barriers they have hitherto opposed to the advances of the more civilized portion of mankind.

Fire at Sing Sing Prison, New York.

The telegraph of yesterday reports a fire at Sing Sing Prison, New York, on Saturday morning. The following particulars are given by a correspondent to the New York Times:

About two o'clock this morning a fire broke out in the auger shop of the prison at this place, and before the flames were subdued the file shop, the auger shop and the dye house were destroyed. The loss is very heavy.

The file shop, occupied by James Homer & Co., employed 90 men per day. All the machinery, stock on hand, raw materials, &c., were destroyed or damaged—nothing being taken from the burning buildings. Mr. Homer's loss is estimated at $65,000, on which it is understood there is an insurance of about $35,000.

The dye house was occupied by Benjamin Underwood for the purpose of dying yarns used in the manufacture of Brussels carpets. He employed in this branch of his business about 30 men. He estimates his loss in stock and machinery at about $10,000, on which there is an insurance of $7,500.

The auger shop was also worked by James Homer & Co., and employed eighty men. The loss in this shop is included in the loss of the file shop.

The State will lose in buildings about $7,000, and an additional loss by the men being thrown out of employment until the buildings can be reconstructed.

Mr. Homer was paying the State about $1,000 a month for the service of convicts. Mr. Underwood was paying about [illegible] for the men employed by him.

It will take at least six weeks to repair the shops.

A fire was discovered in some old houses in the rear of the main street of the village, near the Aqueduct. There was not three minutes difference between the breaking out of the two fires. This circumstance leads to the supposition that both fires were the work of incendiaries—that the fire in the village was started to keep the fire-engines away from the prison.

Two convicts have been arrested this morning upon suspicion that they were implicated. They are in the lock-up, and will be examined to-morrow morning. They are supposed to be discharged convicts.

A Scene at the St. Louis Fair.—A St. Louis correspondent of the Chicago Press furnishes the following:

The most exciting incident of the Fair was the grand run away, turn-over, and smash-up among the fast men who were showing off their horses and sulkies in the ring on Thursday afternoon. About twenty-five horses and sulkies were flying round the ring in the presence of ten or twelve thousand persons, when one driver ran into the gig of another one, which frightened his horse. The horse bounded off at full speed, striking several other horses and sulkies, and starting them off likewise. Within a minute the panic and run away feeling were communicated to almost every horse in the ring. Gigs were smashed to splinters; drivers were hurled headlong from their seats to the ground and run over; some of them held their reins, and were dragged along; one or two got caught with their feet in the wheels and were hurled about in a frightful manner. Some of the horses attempted to jump over the railing among the frightened spectators. Others plunged madly for the entrance and exit places, and dashed their vehicles to pieces against the sides of the passage way.

Just picture to your mind a score of high mettled horses attached to carriages, all running away promiscuously on the space of an acre—crashing against each other, rolling over and springing up, plunging, kicking and squealing, around and across the area, in pell-mell terror and confusion, with pieces of broken gigs following their heels, with their drivers rolling or dragging in the dirt among the debris of sulkies and hoofs of the frightened horses; add to this the rush of a hundred hardy men into the ring, trying to stop the horses, many of whom getting instantly knocked down and run over, and the shouts of ten thousand men and screams of five thousand women, and you can form some idea of how the scene looked to the spectator. In five minutes it was all over, and horses, men and gigs had cleared the ring. Strange to tell no one was killed, though several received severe contusions, and few escaped without bloody faces or soiled and torn garments.

A Dangerous Affray in Nebraska.—We learned yesterday, from good authority, that a dreadful affray took place near Salem, Nebraska Territory, a few days ago, which resulted in the death of Mr. Daniel Hudgins. A dispute arose between the above-named gentleman and another man, name unknown, about a claim. Hard words ensued; and Hudgins struck the unknown man with a cane over the head a pretty severe lick. He then thought to make his escape, but was pursued, and turning his head to see if he was followed, had his throat cut from ear to ear. He fell dead upon the spot. Mr. Hudgins was a brother of F. L. Hudgins, of Andrew county, and was a man of family.—St. Joseph Gazette, Sept. 12.

Fever and Ague,
from which mankind suffer over a large part of the globe, is the consequence of a diseased action in the system, induced by the poisonous miasm of vegetable decay. This exhalation is evolved by the action of solar heat on wet soil, and rises with the watery vapor from it. While the sun is below the horizon this vapor lingers near the earth's surface, and the virus is taken with it through the lungs into the blood. There it acts as an irritating poison on the internal viscera and excreting organs of the body. The liver becomes torpid and fails to secrete not only this virus, but also the bile from the blood. Both the virus and the bile accumulate in the circulation, and produce violent constitutional disorder. The spleen, the kidneys, and the stomach sympathize with the liver, and become disordered also. Finally, the instinct of our organism, as if in an attempt to expel the noxious infusion, concentrates the whole blood of the body in the internal excretories to force them to cast it out. The blood leaves the surface, and rushes to the central organs with congestive violence. This is the CHILL. But in this effort it fails. Then the FEVER follows, in which the blood leaves the central organs and rushes to the surface, as if in another effort to expel the irritating poison through the other great excretory—the skin. In this also it fails, and the system abandons the attempt exhausted, and waits for the recovery of strength to repeat the hopeless effort another day. These are the fits or paroxysms of FEVER AND AGUE. Such constitutional disorder will of course undermine the health if it is not removed.
We have labored to find, and have found, an antidote,

which neutralizes this malarious poison in the blood, and stimulates the liver to expel it from the body. As it should, so it does cure this afflicting disorder with perfect certainty. And it does more, or rather does what is of more service to those subject to this infection. If taken in season it expels it from the system as it is absorbed, and thus keeps those who use it free from its attacks; keeps the system in health although exposed to the disease. Consequently it not only cures, but protects from, the great variety of affections which are induced by this malignant influence, such as Remittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb, or Masked Ague, Periodical Headache, or Bilious Headache, Bilious Fevers, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Blindness, Toothache, Earache, Catarrh, Asthma, Palpitation, Painful Affections of the Spleen, Hysterics, Colic, Paralysis, and Painful Affections of the Stomach and Bowels, all of which, when arising from this cause, will be found to assume more or less the intermittent type. This "AGUE CURE" removes the cause of these derangements, and cures the disease.
This it accomplishes by stimulating the excretories to expel the virus from the system; and these organs by degrees become habituated to do this their office of their own accord. Hence arises what we term acclimation. Time may accomplish the same end, but often life is not long enough, or is sacrificed in the attempt, while this "AGUE CURE" does it at once, and with safety. We have great reason to believe this is a surer as well as safer remedy for the whole class of diseases which are caused by the miasmatic infection, than any other which has been discovered; and it has still another important advantage to the public, which is, that it is cheap as well as good.

Great numbers of Clergymen, Physicians, Statesmen, and eminent personages, have lent their names to certify the unparalleled usefulness of these remedies, but our space here will not permit the insertion of them. The agents below named furnish gratis our AMERICAN ALMANAC in which they are given; with also full descriptions of the above complaints, and the treatment that should be followed for their cure.
Do not be put off by unprincipled dealers with other preparations they make more profit on. Demand AYER'S, and take no others. The sick want the best aid there is for them, and they should have it.
All our Remedies are for sale by Roberts & Samuel, No. 34 North High street, Columbus, O.; [illegible] and by all Druggists [illegible]
